

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH RAILROAD CASES.

A complete collection of all the railroad law as decided by the American, English and Canadian courts of last resort.

Elaborate notes to the more important cases. As a means of giving the working lawyer a full collection of all the cases on the subjects treated, together with able and judicious criticism upon the points presented, they are simply invaluable.

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH CORPORATION CASES.

This series presents a full collection of the cases in all the courts of last resort, both in America and England, on the law of private and municipal corporations other than railroad companies.

1.—SCOPE. Among the topics treated of will be the following:

PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.—Agency, Assessments, Building Associations, Dissolution of Corporations, Dividends and Earnings, Ecclesiastical and Religious Corporations, Elections, Mandamus, Officers, Organization, Powers, Stock and Stockholders, Taxation.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.—Assessments, Bonds, Powers, Ordinances, Poor Laws, Streets, Taxes, Intoxicating Liquors, Injuries to Person and Property, etc., etc.

2.—NOTES. The annotations are a special feature, being very full and exhaustive.

These works are issued in monthly Parts, each Part containing not less than 224 pages. Three Parts make a complete volume. When Part 3 is published, the Parts are returned to the publisher by the subscriber, and are bound in best law sheep and returned by mail WITHOUT CHARGE FOR BINDING. The subscription price is $4.50 per volume, including NOTES OF CASES.

EDWARD THOMPSON CO., Publishers
Northport, Long Island, N. Y.

THE
AMERICAN AND ENGLISH
ENCYCLOPÆDIA
OF
LAW.

COMPILED UNDER THE EDITORIAL SUPERVISION OF

JOHN HOUSTON MERRILL,

Late Editor of the American and English Railroad Cases and the American and English Corporation Cases.

VOLUME XVI.

NORTHPORT, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.:
EDWARD THOMPSON COMPANY, LAW PUBLISHERS.
1891.

PARTIAL LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS, VOL. XVI.

Mutual Insurance,	L. K. MIHILLS, of the Akron (Ohio) Bar.
Name,	M. L. COUNTRYMAN, of the St. Paul (Minn.) Bar.
National Banks,	NATHAN NEWMARK, of the San Francisco Bar.
National Corporations,	HENRY T. DECHERT, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Navigable Waters,	CHARLES S. LOBINGIER, of the Lincoln (Neb.) Bar.
Navigation,	D. M. MICKEY, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Ne Exeat,	THOMAS J. MICHIE, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Negligence,	WILLIAM H. RUSSELL, of the Chattanooga Bar, and H. DENT MINOR, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
New Trial,	ISAAC N. PAYNE, of the Detroit (Mich.) Bar.
Next of Kin,	ALBERT B. WEIMER, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Nolle Prosequi,	HENRY F. STITZELL, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Nonsuit,	THOMAS P. HOWELL, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
Notary Public,	E. W. METCALFE, of the Lincoln (Neb.) Bar.
Notice,	ELMER G. SAMMIS, of the New York Bar.
Notice to Produce Papers,
Novation,	EDMUND A. WHITMAN, of the Boston Bar.
Nuisance,	M. L. COUNTRYMAN, of the St. Paul Bar.
Nuncupative Wills,	HAMILTON DOUGLAS, of the Atlanta (Ga.) Bar.
Oath,	H. DENT MINOR, of the Editorial Staff Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

TABLE OF TITLES AND DEFINITIONS.

See index for numerous sub-titles and definitions contained in the notes.

- MURDER. See Homicide, 1
 Must, 1
 Mute, 2
 Mutilate, 2
 Mutilation, 2
 Mutinous, 3
 Mutiny, 3
 Mutual, 3
MUTUAL ACCOUNTS, 4
 Mutual Assent, 15
 Mutual Combat, 15
 Mutual Consent, 15
 Mutual Credits, 15
 Mutual Dealings, 16
 Mutual Debts, 16
 Mutual Demands, 16
MUTUAL INSURANCE, 16
 Mutuality of Contract, 108
 Mutual Mistake, 108
 Mutuant, 108
 Mutuary, 108
 Mutuum, 108
 My, 108
 My Son, 111
 My Wife, 111
 Mystery, 111
 Mystic Will, 111
 Naked, 112
 Naked Deposit, 112
 Naked Power, 112
NAME, 112
 Named, 142
 Narcotics, 143
 Narr, 143
 Nation, 143
NATIONAL BANKS, 143
NATIONAL CORPORATIONS, 216
NATIONAL GOVERNMENT, 219
NATIONS, LAW OF, 219
 Nature, 219
 Natural, 219
 Natural Allegiance, 220
 Natural and Artificial Person, 220
 Natural Children, 220
NATURAL GAS, 220
NATURAL GAS COMPANIES, 222
 Natural Heirs, 223
NATURALIZATION, 223
 Natural Law, 233
 Natural Love and Affection, 234
 Naturally, 235
 Naughty, 235
NAVIGABLE WATERS, 236
NAVIGATION, 270
 Navy Yard, 365
 Neap Tides, 365
 Near, 365
 Nearest, 365
 Neat Cattle, 367
 Necessaries, 367
 Necessarily, 368
NECESSARY, 368
 Necessity, 373
 Need, 373
NE EXEAT, 373
 Necklaces, 384
 Negative, 384
 Negative Easement, 384
 Neglect, 385
NEGLIGENCE, 386
 Negotiable, 478
 Negotiating, 478
 Negotiation, 478
NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS, 479
 Negro, 484
 Neighborhood, 485
 Nephew, 485
 Niece, 485
 Nett, 487
 Ne Unques Executor, 489
 Neutral, 489
 Neutrality, 489
 Ne Varietur, 489
 New, 489
 New Promise, 490
NEWSPAPERS, 490
NEW TRIAL, 500
 Next, 700
 Next Friend, 702
NEXT OF KIN, 703

TABLE OF TITLES AND DEFINITIONS.

Night, 707
Night Walker, 708
Nihil Est, 708
Nisi, 709
No, 709
NOLLE PROSEQUI, 709
Nolo Contendere, 715
Nominal, 715
Nominate, 716
Nominated, 716
Nominee, 716
Non-Access, 716
Non-Arrival, 716
Non-Claim, Statutes of, 716
Non Est Inventus, 717
Non-Prosequitur, 717
NON-RESIDENT, 717
NONSUIT, 720
NON SUM INFORMATUS, 750
Nonuser, 750
North, 750
Northern, 750
Northward, 750
Noscitur a Sociis, 751

Not, 751
NOTARY PUBLIC, 752
Notes, 785
NOTICE, 787
NOTICE TO PRODUCE PAPERS, 843
NOTICE TO QUIT, 860
Notify, 861
Notorious, 861
Notwithstanding, 861
Noxious, 861
Nourishing, 861
NOVATION, 862
Now, 920
Now Due, 921
NUISANCES, 922
Nul Disseisin, 1004
Null, 1004
Nulla Bona, 1004
Nullity, 1004
Nullum Tempus Occurrit Regi, 1005
Number, 1005
Nunc Pro Tunc, 1005
NUNCUPATIVE WILLS, 1006
OATH, 1017

THE AMERICAN AND ENGLISH ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF LAW.

MURDER.—See HOMICIDE.

MUST.—The Saxon word “must” is used in statute to place beyond doubt or cavil what is intended. It is more imperative than “shall” and has not yet been twisted by judicial construction like the words “may” and “shall” into meaning something else.¹ But the word “must” has not always been construed so as to make it absolutely imperative.²

1. Eaton v. Alger, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 179-190.

2. Sections 870 and 872 of the New York Civ. Code of Procedure provide that the examination of a party to an action may be taken at the instance of an adverse party at any time before trial, and specify what the affidavit to obtain an order for such an examination must contain. Held, that it is discretionary with the judge whether he grants the order to examine, although section 873 provides that the party to whom such an order is granted must grant an order for the examination if the action is pending, etc., and that while it is said in section 873 that the judge “must” grant the order where an affidavit conforming to the previous section is presented to him, yet we do not think that the language is absolutely mandatory, and that it was intended to deprive the judge of all discretion, and that the affidavit is required to disclose the nature of the action and to set forth that the testimony of the party is material and necessary, and the judge must be able to see, from the facts stated, that the testimony is material and necessary; that if, from the nature of the action and the other facts disclosed, he can see that the examination is not necessary for the party seeking it, then it cannot be supposed that it was the legislative intent that he should be obliged, nevertheless, to make the order. Jenkins v. Putnam, 12 N. E. Rep. 613.

Section 544 N. Y. Civ. Code of Proc. provides that “the court . . . in a proper case ‘must,’ upon such terms as are just,” permit a supplemental answer. Held, that the court has a discretion to permit or to refuse a supplemental pleading, but that discretion must be exercised reasonably, and not capriciously or wilfully. Spears v. Mayor etc. of New York, 72 N. Y. 442.

Section 1678, which is designed to provide for judicial sales, declares that if the property consists of two or more distinct buildings, farms or lots, they shall be sold separately, unless otherwise ordered by the court. Wallace v. Feeley, 61 How. (N. Y.) 225; affirmed 88 N. Y. 646. It has been held that this section was directory; but subsequently, and by chapter 682 of the laws of 1881, that section was amended by substituting the word “shall” for “must,” and this would seem to be an indication on the part of the legislature to obviate the construction which has been placed on the word “must” by pro-

MUTE.¹—See also WITNESS.

MUTILATE—MUTILATION.—Mutilate means something less than total destruction. Mere mutilation of a will would not of itself take from a will all legal force. A mutilation, however, which takes from the instrument an element essential to its validity nouncing it to be directory merely in its effect.

Section 2393, and which is one of the sections relating to foreclosure by advertisement, declares that "if the property consists of two or more distinct farms, tracts or lots, they must be sold separately," but has the further provision, "and as many only of the distinct farms, tracts or lots shall be sold as it is necessary to sell in order to satisfy the amount due at the time of the sale and the costs and expenses allowed by law." Although the word "must" is used in this section, and if its effect were to be construed in view of the decision to which reference has been made, it would be necessary to declare it directory, such a conclusion would not be justified, taking the whole context of the section into consideration, and from which it is manifest that it was intended to be absolute and mandatory, as evidenced by the prohibition of the sale of any more of the farms, tracts or lots than necessary to satisfy the amount due at the time of the sale. The section may be said, with great propriety, to be not only mandatory but prohibitory, its whole context considered together. Hemmer v. Hustace, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 457.

In construing section 41, Rev. Stat. of Minn., p. 334, which provides that certain actions "must be tried in the county in which the parties, or one of them, resides at the commencement of the action . . . subject, however, to the power of the court to change the place of trial as provided in section forty-three" of the same statute, and that section provides, among other things, that "the court may change the place of trial on the application of all the defendants who answer," the court said: "The principal difficulty in construing these provisions of the statute arises out of the positive terms used in section 41, 'the action must be tried,' etc. In construing statutes, all the provisions relating to the same subject must be considered together and with reference to each other, and also with reference to the effect which each provision was designed to secure. . . .

The primary and controlling object to be secured by the provisions of the statute regulating the place of trial in transitory actions was, manifestly, to protect defendants against the oppressions which plaintiffs might otherwise maliciously or capriciously practice upon them through the general jurisdiction of the district courts. . . . Such being the design and purpose of the statute, Ought the word 'must' in section 41 to be construed as an absolute and inflexible mandate upon the court and the parties, so as to put the case, situated as this is, beyond the power of the court or the parties to proceed any further therein? I cannot consent to such construction. It irretrievably destroys the power of the court to try a cause of which it has a full and unquestionable jurisdiction. No acts or agreement of the parties, however solemn or explicit, could, under such construction, confer upon the court the power to try a cause out of the proper county." Merrill v. Shaw, 5 Minn. 148.

1. Under the old system if, the prisoner stood mute it was deemed that no trial could be had. If a plea could not be extorted from him, and it was ascertained that he was not dumb ex visitatione Dei, he was sentenced as on conviction. But as the legal system developed, methods of procedure yielded in importance to substantial rights, and the courts were authorized to enter a plea of not guilty for the prisoner who declined to plead, and to investigate the question of his guilt upon this enforced plea. State v. Ward, 48 Arkansas 36-39.

Where a defendant stood mute it was contended for him that the court had no jurisdiction to try him, and had no power to enter a plea of not guilty for him, or to proceed to trial as if he had pleaded not guilty. Held, that the court has power to try a person who refuses to plead to an information or who wilfully stands mute when arraigned on it, without entering for him a plea of not guilty, and has a right to proceed in such trial as if there were a plea of not guilty, even though no statute of the United States specific-would have the effect to revoke it. Courts often speak of "records mutilated by erasures" and "records mutilated by corrupt interlineations."¹

MUTINOUS—(See also MUTINY).—Mutinous is defined as "tending toward mutiny; as mutinous conduct or words."²

MUTINY—(See also REVOLT).—Mutiny is "insurrection against authority; revolt against discipline; resistance of officers, by sailors, soldiers or marines."³

MUTUAL.—The adjective "mutual" is defined as reciprocally acting or related; reciprocally receiving; reciprocally given and received; reciprocal; interchanged, as mutual love, assistance, advantage, aversion.⁴

ally prescribed such mode of procedure in the case of an information. United States v. Borger, 19 Blatchf. 429.

1. Woodfill v. Patton, 76 Ind. 575; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 269, construing a statute which provides that no will shall be revoked unless the testator shall destroy or "mutilate" the same. In this case the testator drew pencil lines across his signature to the will. Held, that the will was revoked, and that it was a mutilation of it under the statute.

Mutilation and Spoliation.—See ALTERATION OF INSTRUMENTS, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 497.

2. And. L. Dict. 1 Bl. Com. 415.

3. And. L. Dict. 694.

4. The California Civ. Code provides that "consent alone will not constitute a marriage; it must be followed by a solemnization or by a 'mutual' assumption of marital, rights, duties or obligations." Where two persons made and signed a written contract of marriage and the wife also signed a written agreement not to make known the contents of the marriage contract for two years, unless the husband saw fit to do so; it also appeared that the parties to this contract cohabited together as husband and wife for more than a year, after which there was a disagreement between them, and the wife brought an action to obtain a divorce, etc. In this action it was urged that, under the code, there can be no "mutual assumption" of marital rights and duties which is unknown to the community at large, or to the acquaintance of the parties; and that the word "mutual" requires "an open and respectful" recognition before the community in all their social intercourse, that they stand to each other in the relation of husband and wife. On this question the court said: "Where the holding out to the world the relation is evidence of a prior contract such evidence does not necessarily depend for its effect upon amenity of manners or upon the degree to which the parties extend to each other the affectionate respect which should attend the intercourse of husband and wife in well-ordered households. The statute does not make the validity of a marriage by consent depend upon the full performance of their mutual duties; the failure to perform certain important obligations is made ground for divorce. It may be conceded that the code requires the mutual assumption of such duties. The assumption of rights and duties must be 'mutual,' and the code is given effect if they are assumed between and towards each other. . . . When parties agree to a present marriage they mutually agree to take on themselves the obligations appertaining to the marriage state, but the code requires that, to justify a finding of marriage, there shall be additional evidence that they have assumed marital rights or obligations. If a case be supposed where, immediately after consent to present marriage, the parties have permanently separated, there would perhaps be no marriage, not because they would have not mutually agreed to assume marital obligations, but because the section of the code requires evidence of other and subsequent facts showing the actual assumption of marital obligations. In considering the evidence of such facts subsequently occurring, however, the direct evidence of previous consent is not to be rejected—all the evidence is to be taken together. As we have seen, cohabitation alone

MUTUAL ACCOUNTS—(See also ACCOUNT, vol. 1, p. 108; ACCOUNT RENDERED, vol. 1, p. 128; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, p. 764; MERCHANTS' ACCOUNTS, p. 311, supra).—Mutual accounts are such as contain mutual credits between the parties, or an existing credit on one side which constitutes a ground for credit on the other; or where there is an understanding that mutual debts shall be a set-off pro tanto between the parties.¹ They are made up of matters of set-off. There must be a mutual credit founded on a subsisting debt on the other side, or an express or an implied agreement for a set-off of mutual debts.² does not prove marriage, because the relation between man and woman cohabiting may not be that of husband and wife. But cohabitation, with evidence of a reputation that they were married, created by the conduct of the parties, proves a previous consent and marriage. So, under the code, cohabitation with direct evidence of previous consent, proves a marriage; because when viewed with the previous consent, cohabitation is evidence of a 'mutual assumption' of marital rights, duties or obligations." Sharon v. Sharon, 16 Pac. Rep. 345.

1. 2 Bouv. L. Dict. 265.

2. Green v. Disbrow, 79 N. Y. 1; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 496; Angel on Limitations, 136; Norton v. Larco, 30 Cal. 127; s. c., 89 Am. Dec. 70; Lockwood v. Hanson, 16 Oreg. 102; Adams v. Carroll, 85 Pa. St. 209; Abbott v. Keith, 11 Vt. 525; Hutchinson v. Pratt, 2 Vt. 149; Wood v. Barney, 2 Vt. 369; Becker v. Jones, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 35; Trueman v. Fenton, 1 Smith's Lead. Cas., H. & W's Notes 966; Hutchinson v. Pratt, 2 Vt. 149; Wood v. Barney, 2 Vt. 369; Becker v. Jones, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 35; Warren v. Sweeney, 4 Nev. 101; Peck v. New York etc. U. S. Mail S. S. Co., 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 226; Abbott v. Keith, 11 Vt. 525; Hodge v. Manley, 25 Vt. 210; Schall v. Elsner, 58 Ga. 190; Seitzinger v. Alspach (Pa.), 4 Atl. Rep. 203; Beaty v. Bordwell, 91 Pa. St. 438; Mattern v. McDivitt, 113 Pa. St. 402; Penniman v. Rotch, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 216; Green v. Caldcleugh, 1 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) L. 321; s. c., 28 Am. Dec. 567; Higgs v. Warner, 14 Ark. 192; Loeffel v. Hoss, 11 Mo App. 133; Huebner v. Roosevelt, 6 Daly (N. Y.) 337; Kimball v. Kimball, 16 Mich. 211; Thompson v. Reed, 48 Ill. 118; Cuck v. Quackenbush, 13 Hun (N. Y.) 107; Sawyer v. Lufkin, 58 Me. 429; Parker v. Schwartz, 136 Mass. 30; Safford v. Barny, 121 Mass. 300; Gordon v. Lewis, 2 Sumn. 143; Greene v. Darling, 5 Mar. 201; Fox v. Fisk, 6 How. (Miss.) 328, 346; Talcott v. Smith, 142 Mass. 542; Chamber v. Marks, 25 Pa. St. 296; Campbell v. White, 22 Mich. 178; Madden v. Blain, 66 Ga. 49; Sanders v. Sanders, 48 Ind. 84, 86; Davis v. Smith, 4 Me. 337; Cogswell v. Dolliver, 2 Mass. 217; s. c., 3 Am. Dec. 49; Smith v. Ruecastle, 7 N. J. L. 357; Coster v. Murray, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 522; Tucker v. Ives, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 193; Kimball v. Brown, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 322, 325; Chamberlain v. Cuyler, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 126; Sickles v. Mather, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 72; s. c., 32 Am. Dec. 521; Chambers v. Marks, 25 Pa. St. 296; Fitch v. Hilleary, 1 Hill (S. Car.) 292; Wood v. Barney, 2 Vt. 369; Abbott v. Keith, 11 Vt. 525; Hodge v. Manley, 25 Vt. 210.

When men deal with an express or implied agreement that what each sells or delivers shall, instead of giving rise to a demand payable at once, stand as a payment or set-off for what has been or may be received from the other, their liability will be limited to, and depend upon, the balance, as finally disclosed, and the statute will not begin to run until the date of the last item." Green v. Disbrow, 79 N. Y. 1; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 496.

In ordinary cases of mutual dealings no obligation is created in regard to each particular item, but only for the balance, and it is the constantly varying balance which is the debt. It has uniformly been held that distinct and different items of charge in an open and mutual account do not constitute separate claims; but that the claim or debt is found in the balance of the account, and that it is the balance only that constitutes the claim of the party to whom it is due. Abbott v. Keith, 11 Vt. 525; Hodge v. Manley, 25 Vt. 210.

It appears that it is unimportant as to the particular mode of keeping such an account whether on books or loose scraps of paper, or without any written charges, or whether it is all kept in one shape or in different forms. Abbott v. Keith, 11 Vt. 525.

Upon the trial of an action brought to recover for goods sold and delivered, it appeared that all the goods except one item, costing one dollar, had been delivered more than six years prior to the commencement of the action. It also appeared that more than six years prior to the commencement of the action the defendant had charged the plaintiff with one dollar and eighty cents, and within that period with two dollars for use of a wagon, and seventy cents for repairs on the same. Held, that the evidence was sufficient to authorize the jury to find that a mutual account existed between the parties, and that the trial court erred in refusing to submit that question to them. And it was that because the action was brought for goods sold and delivered, it was not improperly brought that the plaintiff could properly allege their claim upon one side of the account as for goods sold, etc., and if the defendant failed to allege or prove his claim, the plaintiffs could protest theirs against the bar of the statute by proving one or more items of the account existing on the part of the defendant, and the action will be deemed to have been brought for the balance within the meaning of the statute. Becker v. Jones, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 35.

There are cases in which the practical effect of their decisions are, that there can be no mutual accounts only between merchant and merchant concerning the trade of merchandise; or, in other words, that the statute of limitations does not admit of any exception being extended to any class of accounts excepting accounts concerning merchandise between merchant and merchant. Landsdale v. Brashear, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 330, 333; Dyott v. Letcher, 6 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 541, 545; Smith v. Dawson, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 112, 114; Sprogle v. Allen, 38 Md. 331; Blair v. Drew, 6 N. H. 235; Livermore v. Rand, 26 N. H. 85; Craighead v. Bank of Tennessee, 7 Yerg. (Tenn.) 399; Lowe v. Dowborn, 26 Tex. 507.

South Carolina seems to follow a different rule from the rest of the States.

There the rule is that where the demand of one party arises subsequent to the demands of the other it does not constitute a mutual account—that is, it is essential that the demands of the respective parties should arise together. Cunningham v. Guigner, Dud. (S. Car.) 351.

In New Hampshire a different rule is followed. In that State, items in mutual accounts, within six years next before action brought, constitute of themselves no admission of an unsettled account extending beyond six years, nor any evidence of a promise to pay a balance so as to take a case out of the statute of limitations. Gage v. Dudley, 64 N. H. 271; Russell v. Copp, 5 N. H. 154; Blair v. Drew, 6 N. H. 235.

It seems that in New Hampshire, the only exception made in regard to accounts by the statute of limitations, is the excepting of accounts “concerning the trade of merchandise between merchant and merchant, their factors and servants.” Gage v. Dudley, 64 N. H. 271.

So that there is practically no distinction in New Hampshire in regard to mutual accounts. They are put on to the same footing as any other account, except as to accounts between merchant and merchant. And the doctrine, in regard to all accounts, except as to accounts between merchant and merchant, concerning merchandise, is that an acknowledgment, in order to take a case out of the statute, must contain an unqualified admission of a previous subsisting debt which the party is liable and willing to pay. Gage v. Dudley, 64 N. H. 271; Ventris v. Shaw, 14 N. H. 422; Douglass v. Elkins, 28 N. H. 26; Manning v. Wheeler, 13 N. H. 487; Holt v. Gage, 60 N. H. 536; Blair v. Drew, 6 N. H. 235. For a further discussion of this question, see the article on LIMITATION OF ACTIONS.

In Iowa, the statute of limitations commences to run from the date of the last item, whether debit or credit, on a continuous open current account. Thorn v. Moore, 21 Iowa 285; Mills v. Davies, 42 Iowa 91; Keller v. Jackson, 58 Iowa 629; Sec. 2531, Iowa Code. Hence the question of mutual accounts does not arise in the courts as a distinct feature from other accounts, for the reason that the rule applicable to the running of the statute as to mutual accounts is applied to all open current

It is not necessary that each party must have a cause of action against the other for his side of the account.¹

An account of items upon one side and payments merely upon the other, is not a mutual account. The payments do not in such case enter into the account. They are at once applied and reduce the account.²

accounts so that the distinction made in other States in regard to mutual dealings and reciprocal demands does not arise under the Iowa statute.

Reciprocal demand is synonymous with mutual account. Green v. Disbrow, 79 N. Y. 1; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 496, 500.

1. Green v. Disbrow, 79 N. Y. 1; 35 Am. Rep. 496.

But there are decisions that hold that "to constitute mutual accounts there must be mutual demands, each party must have a demand or right of action against the other." Adams v. Carroll, 85 Pa. St. 209; Ingram v. Sherard, 17 S. & R. Pa. 347; Lowber v. Smith, 7 Pa. St. 381; Warren v. Sweeney, 4 Nev. 101; Peck v. New York etc. U. S. Mail S. S. Co., 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 226.

In Green v. Disbrow, EARL, J., in sustaining his point that the set-off need not necessarily be such a demand as would constitute a cause of action, criticises some of the cases holding adversely to him substantially as follows: "That in Lowber v. Smith, the precise point then decided was, that an account is not rendered mutual by credits therein—payments, either in money or property. But the judge, in deciding this case, used language not sanctioned by authority, and that the case had been criticised in 1 Smith Lead. Cas., H. & W's notes 967; and in his opinion the reasoning of the judge who wrote the opinion is there shown to be clearly unsound. That the case of Adams v. Carroll was one when where all the items of the account were upon one side and the credits for money on the other side; and that it was properly held not to be a mutual account, but that the improper language was here again used that, "to constitute mutual accounts, there must be mutual demands, each party must have a demand or right of action against the other." He then states that: "These Pennsylvania decisions were made under a statute, the language of which was like that in the statute of James I, and the dicta which I have quoted are not sanctioned by any English or American authority construing that statute. Similar language is used by HOFFMAN, J., in Peck v. New York etc. U. S. Mail S. S. Co., a case where all the items are upon one side, and simply money payments on the other." The learned judge, in further discussing this question, in speaking in relation to the items of the account in the case he was deciding, says: "It is true that the defendant could not have sued the plaintiff for these items, but that was so simply because the plaintiff did not owe him anything. But suppose the defendant had in the same way delivered goods to the plaintiff until the balance was in his favor, would it then be denied that he could not have sued and recovered against the plaintiff? It has never been decided that, in order to make an account of mutual or reciprocal demands, each party must have, as claimed by the learned counsel for the appellant, a cause of action against the other for his side of the account. There is but one cause of action in such case, and that is for the balance; but were it not for the account on the opposite side, each party would have a cause of action for the items of his account."

Where the set-off on one side was a valid account for work and labor and on the other side it was one for board furnished in the mean time, held, to be a mutual account. Schall v. Eisner, 58 Ga. 190.

But one item of credit alone is sufficient to make the account mutual and to take it out of the statutes. Green v. Disbrow, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 381, 391; Penniman v. Rotch, 3 Met. (Mass.) 216; Kimball v. Brown, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 322; Norton v. Larco, 30 Cal. 127; s. c., 89 Am. Dec. 70.

2. Green v. Disbrow, 79 N. Y. 1; 35 Am. Rep. 496; Peck v. N. Y. & Liverpool U. S. Mail S. S. Co., 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 226; Abbott v. Keith, 11 Vt. 525; Hodge v. Edmond, 25 Vt. 210; Mattern v. McDivit, 113 Pa. St. 402; Weatherwax v. Cosumes, 17 Cal. 344; Adams v. Patterson, 35 Cal. 122; Prenatt v. Runyan, 12 Ind. 174; Dyer v. Walker, 51 Me. 104; Parker v. Schwartz, 136 Mass. 30; Webster v. Byrnes, 32 Md. 86; Abbey v. Owens, 57 Miss. 810; Warren v. Sweeney, 4 Nev. 101; Peck v. New York etc. Co., 5 Bosw. 226; Bodell v. Gibson, 23 Hun 40; Green v. Disbrow, 79 N. Y. 1; 35 Am. Rep. 496; Green v. Caldcleugh, 1 Dev. & B. 320; Ingram v. Sheward, 17 Serg. & R. 347; Hay v. Kramer, 2 Watts & S. 137; Lowber v. Smith, 7 Pa. St. 381; Adams v. Carroll, 85 Pa. St. 209; Guichard v. Sapervede, 11 Tex. 522; Judd v. Sampson, 13 Tex. 19. This is especially true when the payments are not general ones, but are intended on specific items of the account. Penniman v. Rotch, 3 Met. (Mass.) 223; Peck v. New York etc. Co., 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 226.

Yet there is no doubt but what money may form a proper charge or credit in a mutual account so as to save it from the operation of the statute. Parker v. Schwartz, 136 Mass. 30; Knipe v. Knipe, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 340; Plimpton v. Gleason, 57 Vt. 604.

But where there is a due bill or negotiable note that represents a loan of money on one side and the sale of goods on the other side of an account, the account is not within the exception of the statute in relation to mutual accounts. Clark v. Maguire, 35 Pa. St. 259.

A payment, whether it be of money or of any article of personal property of a stipulated value made on account, and intended by the parties to be applied as a payment and not as a set-off pro tanto, will not make an account a mutual one. Norton v. Larco, 30 Cal. 127; s. c., 89 Am. Dec. 70.

But where articles of personal property are delivered by a debtor to his creditor who has an account against him, it will not be presumed that they were delivered in payment, but they are considered as matters of set-off, although the party making the entry as a credit affixes a value thereto. Green v. Disbrow, 79 N. Y. 1; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 496; Norton v. Larco, 30 Cal. 127; s. c., 89 Am. Dec. 70.

But in a case where an action was brought for work that the plaintiff had performed for the defendant, for which a charge was made of $2,300, and it was sought to bring in this claim within the saving of the statute by proof of the delivery by defendant to the plaintiff of a wagon within the prescribed statutory limit, for which the defendant received a credit of $100, the plaintiff, in his testimony in regard to this item, said: "On this account the defendant has paid, and is to be credited with the following sums of money," and then mentioned, among other items, "one wagon, $100." The court held that there was no alternative but to treat this item as a payment of so much money paid on account, and that this payment did not make the account a mutual one, and that the plaintiff could not recover. This was so held upon the doctrine that there must be such a reciprocal demand that each party would have a right of action against the other. Warren v. Sweeney, 4 Nev. 100.

Note.—The statute of limitations of the State of Nevada, under which the case of Warren v. Sweeney, 4 Nev. 100, was decided, is so worded that the court in the case of Wilcox v. Williams, 5 Nev. 206, held that part payment is not sufficient as a new promise to take a case out of the operation of the statute. That is, the courts under that statute will not imply a new promise to pay a debt from the mere fact of payment, and this forces a debtor, in order to save his debt from the operation of the statute, to prove an actual new promise made by the creditor to pay the debt. This explains the decision of the court in the case of Warner v. Sweeney, in which they hold that the wagon was delivered as a payment on account, and at the same time the effect of their decision was that the account or debt was not renewed by such payment, although the statute had not run as to this item. But the case of Warren v. Sweeney, 4 Nev. 100, and the case of Green v. Disbrow, 79 N. Y. 1, are in direct opposition to each other on the question as to whether the delivery of goods from a debtor to his creditor is to be considered as a payment, or whether it is to be considered as a credit, or, in other words, a demand against the final creditor to which the final debtor is entitled to have it set off against the demand of his creditor. In both of these cases the creditor had, besides making some money payments, delivered articles of merchandise, or, in other words, personal property to the debtor to be applied upon the account. In Green v. Disbrow, the court held that the delivery of the butter and eggs was not payment, but that they were to be considered as matters of set-off. This view of the case made mutual demands between the parties, and hence a mutual account, and saved it from the operation of the statute as well as from the line of decisions that hold that charges on one side and merely payments on the other do not constitute mutual demands, and hence they are not mutual accounts. In Warren v. Sweeney the court held that the delivery of the wagon was to be considered as a payment on account. This view of the case made it an account with the charges all on one side and merely payments on the other, hence it was not a mutual account, and, according to the Nevada statute, the debit side of the account was barred by lapse of time, and the creditor had no claim against the debtor because it was held to be a payment and not a demand or set-off. On this point it seems that these cases cannot be harmonized. It is a direct difference of opinion between these courts. It must be understood that the discussion of the question in relation to mutual accounts as to whether the delivery of an article by a creditor to a debtor to be applied on the account, is to be applied as a set-off or as a payment, does not affect the question that a payment (excepting in Nevada) will usually renew an account, provided that the statute has not run against it. This principle of law applies to mutual accounts as well as any other class of accounts, and it makes no difference whether such a delivery of goods is considered as a payment or a credit only (except in Nevada). Unless the creditor delivers it expressly for the purpose of having it applied on some particular item of the account it will have the effect, from the operation of the statute, of renewing the whole account as the law would imply, from either a new promise to pay the whole. (For a full treatment of this question see the article on NEW PROMISE.) Where this is the case the question as to whether an account is a mutual or some other kind of an account, as a rule, is not material, and is usually of no importance whatever. But it is of great importance as to whether the delivery of goods is considered as a payment on an account or whether they are considered as a set-off, making a demand only in favor of the final creditor against the final debtor, as it was in the case of Green v. Dishrow, where the statute had run against all of the credit items of the account (as kept by the plaintiff), and also against the debit side of the account excepting one item. There was no claim made that the items of butter and eggs delivered by the defendant renewed the account, for they were barred by the statute if considered alone. The importance attached to these items was as to whether they made the account a mutual one. If so, it was saved from the operation of the statute, and if not, it was all barred by it except the last charge. And as to whether it was a mutual account or not depended how these items were applied on the account. If they were held to be a payment on account, then the account was not a mutual one, because there would be only charges on one side and payments on the other. But if they were held (as the case was decided) to be only credits in the nature of a set-off, then there were mutual demands or reciprocal demands on both sides of the account, and it was a mutual one. Had the Nevada case (Warren v. Sweeney) arisen under the New York statute the question as to whether the wagon was applied on the account as a payment or as a set-off would have been of no importance, for in either case it would have taken the account out of the operation of the statute. It has been formerly stated in this note that when the delivery of goods by a creditor to the debtor was such that the law would imply from it a new promise to pay the whole that "the question as to whether an account is a mutual or some other kind of an account is, as a rule, not material, and is usually of no importance whatever." Technically this might be stated in more positive terms, viz, "that it is always the rule and of no importance whatever," as it is always the rule where there is an account—that is, when there is no dispute but that there is an account between the parties. But there is a class of cases where this is disputed, among which the following cases appear: Eldridge v. Smith, 144 Mass. 35; Helms v. Otis, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 137; Talbott v. Todd, 5 Dana (Ky.) 190; Loeffel v. Hoss, 11 Mo. App. 133; Belles v. Belles, 12 N. J. L. 339; Huebner v. Roosevelt, 6 Daly (N. Y.) 337; Leltzinger v. Alspach (Pa.), 4 Atl. Rep. 203; Gilmore v. Reed, 76 Pa. St. 462. In these cases, when the parties first began their deal, it was entirely a one-sided affair; that is, the items were all or nearly all, upon one side of the account, and if there was a few on the other side they were all cash items. But this state of affairs, after a time, seems to be entirely reversed, and for a long time the items appear upon the other side of the account, so that the statute has run against all of the items of the first part of the account and some of the latter part. Now, if the person who has furnished the goods for the latter part of the account brings suit against the person who furnished the goods that formed the items of the former part of the account, then the defendant in this case would set up his side of the account as a set-off, claiming that their dealing formed a mutual account, while the plaintiff would plead the statute as a bar to the set-off, and would claim that their dealings were not mutual but two separate sets of transactions; and if the one in whose favor the first part of the account was the one that brought the action, relying on the account as a mutual one, then the defendant would plead the statute of limitations as a bar to the plaintiff's part of the account, and claim on the part of the account not barred as a balance in his favor. In this class of cases it will be seen that the question as to whether the account is or is not a mutual one is quite important, but the main question is whether it is an account at all. That is, whether these two periods of dealings between the parties are to be kept entirely separate, and are entirely distinct transactions, or whether they are to be put together so as to form one account. If so, they are mutual; and whether they are to be treated as forming one account, or are to be kept separate, is a question in each and every case for the courts to determine from all the evidence and circumstances in the case, and from all the conditions and relations that the parties have borne to each other. From these facts it must be determined whether or not the parties expressly or by implication treated the dealings between them as one whole transaction or as several separate and distinct transactions.

Definition.MUTUAL ACCOUNTS.*Definition.

An action was brought by a merchant against a farmer to recover a balance due the merchant on account. It appeared from the evidence that the account had reached back over a great many years, and that the farmer had obtained goods and groceries from the merchant, and that among a number of cash credits the farmer had furnished the merchant with butter and eggs, amounting in all to about $12. And it also appeared that more than six years had elapsed since the last item of credit had been made on the account, but that a small debit item for goods appeared on the account that had been purchased by the farmer, and this item was within the statutory limit of six years from the time the action was brought. The farmer, in his answer, plead the statute of limitations to the most of the account, claiming that the butter and eggs were applied as payment on the account, and hence it was not a mutual account within the meaning of the statute, and that this last debit item would not draw the rest of the account out from the operation of the statute. While the merchant claimed that the butter and eggs were merely credited upon the account as an off-set, and were not received as a payment, the evidence did not show that there was any special agreement between the parties as to the application of these articles on the account, but that they were usually sent by his son and his wife under the farmer's direction, that they be applied on the account. Held, that it could not be presumed that the butter and eggs were delivered in payment; and that before they can be held to have been so delivered there must be proof that it was so intended, and that both parties so understood it; that they were taken to the plaintiff by the defendant's direction, and that the plaintiff received them without any particular direction or agreement with the defendant and credited them on his account; that in legal effect they were sold to the plaintiff, the price of them to be credited on the account. And EARL, J., in delivering the opinion of the court in this case, further says: "Suppose none of the plaintiff's accounts had been barred by the statute, and he had sued the defendant to recover the whole of it, ignoring the credits, can it be doubted that upon the facts disclosed in the evidence he could not have interposed his account for the butter and eggs as a set-off? To hold otherwise and sustain the contention of the defendant would be to substantially nullify the statute of limitations in actions brought to recover upon accounts, as such accounts generally arise and exist under circumstances similar to those which appear here. That is, goods are delivered upon the one side to off-set, or to be credited upon goods delivered upon the other side, the account being permitted to run for mutual convenience, and the balance to be paid by the party against whom, upon final adjustment, it shall be found to exist. Green v. Disbrow, 79 N. Y. 1; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 496.

It appeared in an action that for years one Down was entitled to rent from one Jenkinson upon a leasing of certain premises owned by Down to Jenkinson, in which he kept a hotel, and that during the whole period Down was contracting debts with Jenkinson, among which were charges for the board of Down and his family, and to the payment of which the rent was applicable. There never was any settlement between the parties, Down having died and a receiver was appointed to take charge of his estate pending the admitting of his will to probate. Soon after his death Jenkinson made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, and shortly thereafter died. The action was brought by the assignee of Jenkinson against the receiver of Down to recover a balance on the account, and the question for the court was whether there was an account between the parties. The defendants plead the statute of limitations, and claimed a balance due them from Jenkinson's estate for rent. As to the question of the statute of limitations the court held that the demands were not subject to the operation of the statute, and in the opinion in the case the court says: "The credit of the rent by Jenkinson from year to year was evidently in pursuance of an agreement between him and Down that the rent should be an off-set against Jenkinson's claims against Down, and Down appears to have acquiesced in such credit. The crediting of it, therefore, must be regarded as an annual payment on account, to be applied if, and so far as necessary, to the payment of Jenkinson's demands. Here were mutual accounts, mutual credits founded on subsisting debts on the other side, and an implied agreement at least for a set-off of such mutual debts. Woolley v. Osborne, 39 N. J. Eq. 55.

In Gold v. Whitcomb, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 188, the court held that a shopkeeper's account containing charges for articles sold to the defendant in which it appeared that some of them were sold within six years before the action was brought, and also containing credits given more than six years before the action was brought; that this was not a mutual account so as that the charges within six years would draw the previous charges out of the operations of the statute of limitations. This is the statement of the decision in the head note, and there is no opinion of the court reported. And in Green v. Disbrow, 79 N. Y. 1; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 496, EARL, J., in referring to this case, says: "The case is but briefly reported without any opinion of the court. It does not appear what the items of credits were. They must have been payments of money. If not, the case is opposed to the undoubted law." This case is also criticised by SHAW, C. J., in Peniman v. Rotch, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 217, as follows: "We are aware this decision is apparently opposed to Gould v. Whitcomb, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 188. In that case the plaintiff relied on a book account, of which part of the charges were over and part within six years; there were credits, but none within six years; and it was held that all the items which had stood more than six years before action brought were barred by the statute of limitations. But this decision proceeded on the old statute in which there was no provision similar to the revised statutes on which this depends. It was an implied exception to the words of the statute, and was founded on this principle, that when the plaintiff sues on account which is, in whole or in part, of more than six years' standing, if he can show that the defendant has made payments of money or advanced goods, labor or other value 'on that account,' it is an acknowledgment of the existence of the account, and raises an implied promise to pay the balance; or, in the language commonly applied to it, draws after it the whole account. But, of course, regarding such payment as an acknowledgment, it must be deemed an acknowledgment, an implied promise made at the time of such payment or advanced by the defendant; and, therefore, if that payment had been more than six years before action brought, it was no evidence of a promise within six years, and, of course, would avoid the operation of the statute. In the case cited, there being no credit within six years, there was no new promise to avoid the statute upon the principle of an open and mutual account, and therefore the statute was held to be a good bar to all debts of more than six years' standing when the action was brought. But we think the revised statutes have introduced a new rule upon this subject somewhat more plain, exact and practical than the former statute; and by it the whole of an open and mutual account is taken out of the operation of the statute, if any transaction on either side can be proved to have been within six years next before the action brought. It follows, of course, that if there be no item upon either side within six years, the action is barred by the general limitation.

Mutual indebtedness does not work an extinguishment of the respective debts without an application of them to each other by the concurrent act of the parties.¹

Where the items in the account are all charges against one party and in favor of the other, it is not a mutual account. It lacks the very essential element to make it such—mutuality. Such an account does not show a system of mutual dealings and of reciprocal demands between the parties. Such a case does not come within the rule that items within the prescribed statutory limit draw after them other items beyond that period. Fitzpatrick v. Phelan, 58 Wis. 250; Butler v. Kirby, 53 Wis. 188; Cuck v. Quackenbush, 13 Hun (N. Y.) 107.

A mutual account may include charges for goods sold, services rendered, money advanced, as in way of trade or business, for these all enter into the accounts of business men as parts of their business, trade or merchandising. But they will not include matters out of the trade or profession of either party, as money lent on bond or mortgage or due on the purchase of real estate, unless the debtor by some act of his adopted them as a part of such an account. Green v. Ames, 14 N. Y. 225.

But if there is any hiatus in a mutual account that exceeds the statutory period, the items beyond it are not saved, because the account is not considered an open account after that. Chamberlin v. Cuyler, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 126; Abbey v. Owens, 57 Miss. 810; Hibler v. Johnson, 18 N. J. L. 266; Booth v. Stockton, 1 Harr. (Del.) 51.

Where the defendant advanced money for the purchase of stock, kept it in his possession, was to charge interest on the money advanced, and, when finally disposed of, he was to account to the plaintiff for half of the profits, or charge him with like proportion of the loss—held, not to be a mutual account; that it was an account on one side only, growing out of a special contract. Atwater v. Fowler, 1 Edw. (N. Y.) Ch. 417.

Where the defendants, in an action, had accepted drafts for the plaintiffs' accommodation only, and which the plaintiffs' were bound to pay, and these acceptances had been entered to the plaintiffs debit, so that the counter charge was necessary to balance the account; it also appearing that this was done for convenience merely, and that the accommodation drafts had no connection with defendant's other dealings with the plaintiffs, and that these two last items were the only items within the statutory period, the rest of the entries being all barred by lapse of time—held, that the payment of these drafts by the plaintiffs was merely a payment of their own debt and did not create any debt from the defendants, and that these charges on either side were a mere memorandum and not an item of legal debt or credit, and did not result in the creation of an obligation on either party to pay anything to the other. Hence it was not such a transaction as would bring the case within the exception of mutual accounts. Stickney v. Eaton, 4 Allen (Mass.) 108.

Where the parties to a mutual account stipulate for a time of closing it, either expressly or by implication, the statutes of limitation will run on the balance from that time. But in the absence of any such agreement, the cause of action accrues from the date of the last item. Higgs v. Warner, 14 Ark. 192.

1. Carmalt v. Post, 8 Watts (Pa.) 406; Beaty v. Bordwell, 91 Pa. St. 438. This expression is again used by the court in Mattern v. McDivitt, 113 Pa. St. 402, viz: "Mutual demands or debts do not extinguish each other; nor does either prevent the statute running against the other, unless both are such accounts as to bring the case within the exception." In the former case the plaintiff below brought suit to recover $461.70 from the testator of the defendant below for work done and material furnished defendant's testator.

The defendant pleaded setoff, and sought to charge the plaintiff for the use and occupation of certain real estate of his testator. It appeared that, from the time that a right of action accrued upon this item for use and occupation until it was pleaded as a setoff, the statute of limitations had become a bar to its recovery, unless the furnishing of materials and labor by the plaintiff, which was of a more recent date, made a mutual account between the parties. The court held that there was nothing in the facts of the case to prevent the running of the statute as against this claim for use and occupation, and, in rendering the opinion, used the expression referred to. In the latter case the plaintiff below brought an action to recover for goods sold and delivered to the defendant by his testator. The defendant below pleaded the statute of limitations to the larger portion of the account, and to the balance claimed a setoff for professional services rendered (he being an attorney at law) to this amount, and also claimed a balance in his favor. The plaintiff below claimed that this was a mutual account, and that the statute had not run as to any portion of his testator's account. Upon these facts the court held that this was not a mutual account, and after giving several definitions of a mutual account draws the following conclusion, viz: "As defined the account (mutual account) on each side relates to trades in merchandise. This may include labor or any thing that is provable by book of original entry. Such account on one side is not enough. A demand on the other side founded on anything else than such accounts as concern the trade of merchandise is not sufficient to bring the account of the other within the exception;" and then, in further discussion of this question, uses the expression referred to above. The only meaning that can be taken from these expressions is, that mutual indebtedness is not sufficient of itself, without any agreement or understanding between the parties to apply them to each other, to bring a case within the exception of the statute, unless it is a mutual account per se. For the court, in the case of Seitzinger v. Alspach, says: "It is true, the mutual accounts need not necessarily be between merchants. Other persons may so deal together if there be reciprocal accounts between them as in like manner to take them out of the statute." And in Mattern v.

McDivitt, the court says: "Nor does either (mutual demands or debts) prevent the running of the statute against the other, unless both are such accounts as bring the case within the exception."

This question as to when mutual debts between two parties constitute a mutual account, is more clearly stated by the court in the case of Eldridge v. Smith, 144 Mass. 35, in which the facts appear as follows: The plaintiff sued as the surviving partner of a late firm, on an account most of which was for the hire and keeping of horses. The first item charged being in November, 1854, and the last one, in December, 1872. The defendant in his answer set up the statute of limitations to this account, and also filed an account in setoff for medical services and medicines furnished the plaintiff from February, 1874, to May, 1883. The plaintiff's partner died in 1872; the suit was brought December 28th, 1884. It will be seen that, unless the plaintiff could bring his case within the exception of the statute in regard to mutual accounts, that his whole claim was entirely barred by the statute before he brought suit. The court held that this was not a mutual account, and in deciding this question referred to Penniman v. Rotch, 3 Met. (Mass.) 216, and Sofford v. Barney, 121 Mass. 300, as enunciating the correct rule as to this class of cases, and then says: "Both of these cases make one of the elements of a mutual and open account to be that there must be a mutual agreement, express or implied; that the items of the account on the one side and the other are to be set against each other. In other words, there must be one account upon which the items on either side belong, and upon which they operate to extinguish each other pro tanto so that the balance on either side is the debt between the parties. It is quite clear that the right to set off independent debts under our statute is not sufficient to create a mutual open account. For instance, in this suit upon the plaintiff's account, the defendant might have a right to set off a promissory note of the plaintiff's, which the defendant holds as endorsee from the payee. But it cannot for a moment be contended that this would make the plaintiff's a mutual and open account. It is not enough that there should be mutual debts, but they must, by agreement of the parties, be parts of one account, upon which they would apply to and satisfy each other pro tanto."

Definition.MUTUAL ACCOUNTS.*Definition.

On this question in the case of Green v. Caldcleugh, 1 Der. & B. (N. Car.) L. 321; 28 Am. Dec. 567, DANIEL, J., after stating the rule as to the statute of limitations concerning mutual accounts, and citing some authorities on that point, says: "But it seems to us that the true principle to be extracted from these decisions, applies only in those cases where these items are clearly parts of one continuing mutual account, which by the assent of the parties are to be charged therein, whenever the same shall be adjusted. This assent may be shown by direct evidence of an agreement to that effect. It may be inferred also when each party keeps a running account of the debits and credits of the account; or where one only, with the knowledge and concurrence of the other, is confided to keep the account of all the mutual dealings. In these cases the new items are evidence affirming the continuance of an unsettled account at that time and warranting the fair presumption of a promise to settle it, and to pay the balance which may be ascertained on settlement. The whole of the reciprocal demands comprehended in such running accounts are thereby taken out of the statute; the account is not to be split; but what shall be found upon all the items to be the balance is the true debit between the parties. That the mere fact of the existence of disconnected and opposing demands between two parties, one of which demands is of recent date, shall take the case out of the operation of the statute, shall be evidence of a promise to pay that other, or to allow it in a settlement, is, in our opinion, not an inference of law or of reason, although some adjudications and several loose dicta appear to sanction it." S. P. Higgs v. Warner, 14 Ark. 192; Loefel v. Hoss, 11 Mo. App. 133; Huebner v. Roosevelt, 6 Daly (N. Y.) 337; Kimball v. Kimball, 16 Mich. 211; Thompson v. Reed, 48 Ill. 118; Cuck v. Quackenbush, 13 Hun (N. Y.) 107; Sawyer v. Lufkin, 58 Me. 429; Parker v. Schwartz, 136 Mass. 30; Safford v. Barney, 121 Mass. 300; Gordon v. Lewis, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 143; Greene v. Darling, 5 Mass. (U. S.) 201; Fox v. Fisk, 6 How. (Miss.) 328, 346; Talcott v. Smith, 142 Mass. 542; Chamber v. Marks, 25 Pa. St. 296.

Where the only credit items on an account that was sought to be brought within the exceptions of mutual accounts were items of money and other articles of merchandise, marked, "returned," held that these items were not sufficient to bring the case within the exception in relation to mutual accounts. Campbell v. White, 22 Mich. 178; 25 Mich. 462.

Where the transactions are remote and there is nothing in their own nature or the evidence in a case to connect them, there can be no propriety in extending the exception of the statute to embrace them. Belles v. Belles, 12 N. J. L. 339.

Where money is paid as a loan with an understanding between the parties that they are to be a part of their mutual dealing, and are to affect the general balance due thereon, it is sufficient to operate as a removal of the statute bar. Plimpton v. Gleason, 57 Vt. 604.

The mutuality of the reciprocal demands must be established to bring an account within the statute. Reciprocal demands which are not the proper subject of an unliquidated account will not answer the purpose. Becker v. Jones, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 35; Cuck v. Quackenbush, 13 Hun (N. Y.) 107; Edmonstone v. Thomson, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 554; Coster v. Murray, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 522; Hallock v. Losee, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 220; Green v. Ames, 14 N. Y. 225; Huebner v. Roosevelt, 6 Daly (N. Y.) 337; Campbell v. White, 22 Mich. 178; 25 Mich. 462; Thompson v. Reed, 48 Ill. 118.

Mutuality of Parties.—The mutual accounts and dealings which will save a balance on either side from the bar of the statute of limitations must be those between the accounting parties, and the whole transaction must be of such a character as to raise a legal presumption that the accounts are intended to apply to the payment or extinguishment of each other, and thus, like payments on a note, operate as an acknowledgment of the precedent indebtedness. But running accounts with a partner, though he be a surviving partner, and as such has the collection of the partnership assets, certainly cannot be called an account with the firm, and can therefore be of no avail to stop the running of the statute against a partnership claim. Stewart's Appeal, 105 Pa. St. 307.

A person having an open, mutual and current account, purchased an open book account which a third person had against that other, and without notifying him of the purchase, entered it into his account, and thus attempted to save it from the effect of the statute. The account thus assigned was not barred when it was assigned, but was barred by the statute at the time suit was brought, unless it formed a part of the mutual account that already existed between them, which was not barred at this time. Held, that the item thus assigned to the plaintiff was barred by the statute; that, although it had been contended that, in reciprocal accounts the intention of the law was to compensate or immediately set off one account against the other, and that it was just that the law should provide as it does, that the limitation should run only from the last item of the account; yet, in order to do this and to retain the justice contended for, it must be confined to cases where the items are between the same parties, known to both, and originating between them, or adopted by them as part of their mutual account. Green v. Ames, 14 N. Y. 225.

As to Manner of Keeping a Mutual Account.—It has been held that, in order to create a mutual account, it is necessary that each party should keep a book account and have charges upon it against the other, or, at least, have written charges against each other. Theobald v. Stinson, 38 Me. 149; Dyer v. Walker, 51 Me. 104, 106; Edmonstone v. Thomson, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 554, 555. But as to the main cases, it seems by the case Lancey v. Maine Central R. Co., 72 Me. 34, 37, that they have been abrogated on amendment to the statute, which provides that "it shall be deemed a mutual and open account current, where there have been mutual dealings between the parties, the items of which are unsettled, whether kept or proved by one party or both. Stat. 1867, ch. 117. And the case of Green v. Disbrow, 79 N. Y. 1; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 406, is considered as settling the law as to mutual accounts in New York—held that an account was a mutual one, although the account was kept by one party only. In Kimball v. Kimball, 16 Mich. 211, the court, in discussing this question where a butcher presented an account to the legal representatives of a deceased person for meats furnished the deceased, which would be barred by the statute unless it was a mutual account, COOLEY, J., said: "It is not enough for the claimant to prove that, as a meat market man, he supplied and charged the deceased with meats. Here would be a credit on but one side—it would not be mutual. There must have been a credit upon the other side; that is, on the part of the deceased, either expressly given or impliedly; that is, a mutual or alternate course of deal; in other words, there must have been a credit given by the deceased, either expressly or impliedly by his consent of some items of deal. It is not necessary that it should be put on a book by deceased, or be brought forward by his representatives here as a claim, if the claimant and the deceased, at the time, understood that the items credited by the defendant were so intended to go on the credit of the deceased upon the account; if not, then the items of credit will not operate to make a mutual account current." And in the case of Abbott v. Kelth, 11 Vt. 525, REDFIELD, J., in discussing this question, says: "It is apprehended, therefore, that the particular mode of keeping the account, whether on books or loose scraps of paper, or without any written charges, or whether it is all kept in one shape or in different forms, as in the present case, is unimportant. If all the items in the expectation of the parties have reference to and are to be adjusted in one accounting, it may be considered as one transaction as far as the statute of limitations is concerned.

It makes no difference that the account is kept by one of the parties only. Chambers v. Marks, 25 Pa. St. 296.

A party bringing an action on a mutual account may declare on the debit side of his account only when his only object is to obtain a balance, leaving the other party to file an account in offset, or to prove the items of his side of the account, in payment, if he can do so. If the defendant does neither, he can only avail himself of the statute of limitations by pleading it. Then the plaintiff may avoid it, and bring himself within the statutory exception, by proving affirmatively as he would any other fact, which is material in his case, and is traversed that there was such a mutual and open account current, and items of debit and credit on both sides, and then by proving items on either side within the statutory period, the exception would apply and show that the course of action accrued, by the terms of the statutory period, before the action brought. When this is done, the action will be deemed brought for the balance within the meaning of the stat-

MUTUAL ASSENT—MUTUAL CREDITS.

MUTUAL ASSENT.—Until each party has assented to all the terms of a contract it is incomplete, and either party may withdraw his offer, unless a given time is agreed upon in which the other party may assent,¹ and where the offer is made by letter, the acceptance by written reply takes effect from the time it is sent and not from the time it is received; hence the offer cannot be withdrawn in the meantime.² If the letter contains alternative propositions, the offer may elect.³

MUTUAL COMBAT.—(See also ASSAULT; HOMICIDE).—When two persons meet not intending to quarrel, and angry words suddenly arise, and a conflict springs up in which blows are given on both sides without much regard to whom is the assailant it is a mutual combat.⁴ But it is not necessary that there should be mutual blows to constitute a mutual combat although one of the parties was killed by the first blow, if an intention to fight existed, it was a mutual combat.⁵

MUTUAL CONSENT.—See note 6.

MUTUAL CREDITS.—(See also BANKRUPTCY; MUTUAL ACCOUNT; RECEIVERS; SET-OFF).—It seems that a mutual credit is a knowledge on both sides of an existing debt due to one party and credit by the other party founded on and trusting to that debt, as a means of discharging it.⁷

ute. Penniman v. Rotch, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 216; James v. Clapp, 116 Mass. 358; Green v. Disbrow, 79 N. Y. 1; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 496; Becker v. Jones, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 35; Cogswell v. Dolliwer, 2 Mass. 217; s. c., 3 Am. Dec. 45; Norton v. Larco, 30 Cal. 127; s. c., 89 Am. Dec. 70.

Application of the Statutes to Other Accounts.—The statute of limitations commences to run against the items of all accounts that are not mutual accounts (excepting accounts concerning the trade of merchandise between merchant and merchant in States where such a statute may be in force) from the date of each item, and unless there is a new promise to pay, or evidence from which the law will imply a new promise to pay the whole, items which are not within the statutory period will not be saved by items that are within it. Weatherwax v. Cosumnes Valley Mill Co., 17 Cal. 344; Fralor v. Sonora, 17 Cal. 595; Cotes v. Harris, Bull U. P. 150; Todd v. Todd, 15 Ala. 743; Wilson v. Calvert, 18 Ala. 274; Harris v. Jackson Co. Agr. Board, 9 Ill. App. 271, 274; Reeves v. Hurr, 59 Ill. 81; Buntin v. Lagow, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 372, 373; Looney v. Levy, 35 La. An. 1012; Harrison v. Hall, 8 Mo. App. 167; Bennett v. Davis, 1 N. H.

19; Miller v. Colwell, 5 N. J. L. 510; Kimball v. Brown, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 322; Edmonstone v. Thomson, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 554; Hallock v. Losee, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 220; Palmer v. New York, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 318; Waldo v. Jolly, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 173; Hussey v. Burgwyn, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 385; Hay v. Kramer, 2 Watts & S. (Pa.) 137; Turnbull v. Strohecker, 4 McCord (S. Car.) 210; Hutchinson v. Pratt, 2 Vt. 149; Fitzpatrick v. Phelan, 58 Wis. 250; Leonard v. United States, 18 Ct. of Cl. 382.

1. Sec. 2727 Ga. Code.

2. Sec. 2728 Ga. Code.

3. Sec. 2729 Ga. Code.

4. Com. v. Webster, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 295.

5. Tate v. State, 46 Ga. 148. See also 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 807.

6. The California statute provides that in criminal cases the judge's charge to the jury must be reduced to writing, and that an oral charge can only be given "by the mutual consent of the parties." In this case it appeared from the minutes of the trial that an oral charge was expressly waived. Held, that this could not be construed otherwise than by a mutual consent. People v. Kearney, 43 Cal. 383.

7. Munger v. Albany City Nat.

MUTUAL DEALINGS—MUTUAL INSURANCE.

MUTUAL DEALINGS.—See note 1.

MUTUAL DEBTS.²—See also BANKRUPTCY; MUTUAL ACCOUNT; RECEIVERS; SET-OFF.

MUTUAL DEMANDS.³—See also MUTUAL ACCOUNT; RECEIVERS; SET-OFF.

MUTUAL INSURANCE—(See also BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATION; FIRE INSURANCE; INSURANCE; LIFE INSURANCE SOCIETIES; OFFICERS OF PRIVATE CORPORATIONS; STOCK AND STOCKHOLDERS).

- I. Definition and Distinctions, 17.
- II. Kinds of Mutual Insurances, 18.
 - 1. Premium Note Assessment, 18.
 - 2. Benefit Assessment, 19.
 - (a) Recent Development of Law on the Subject, 19.
 - (b) Forms of Organization of Benefit Societies, 21.

- (c) Legal Status, 24.
- (d) Internal Management and Powers, 26.
- III. Certificates of Membership, 28.
 - 1. Essentials and General Features, 28.
 - 2. Whole Term Life Certificates, 33.
 - 3. Endowment, 33.
 - 4. Fire Policies, 34.

Bank, 85 N. Y. 590; King v. King, 9 N. J. Eq. 44-49.

1. The precise legal definition of the words "mutual dealings" does not seem to have been settled. In Young v. Little, 15 N. J. L. 1, the court said: "A defendant can only plead payment and give notice of set-off where there have been mutual dealings between him and the plaintiff, and where, if there is a balance due the defendant, he can have judgment for it against the plaintiff, and the same general language is used in the case of Cumberland Bank v. Hann, 18 N. J. L. 222." Receivers v. Paterson G. L. Co., 23 N. J. L. 283.

Where the plaintiff company had deposited cigars with the defendants to secure a debt, an order for winding up the company was afterwards made, and, the secured debt having been paid off, the liquidator of the company claimed a return of the cigars, but the defendants refused to give them up. The liquidator brought an action of detinue for the cigars. Their value having been assessed, the defendants claimed, by way of counter-claim to set off, another debt due from the company to them against such value by virtue of the conjoint effect of section thirty-eight of the Bankruptcy act 1883 (the mutual dealings sections), and section ten of the Judicature act 1875, which applies to the rules of bankruptcy law to cases of winding up. Held, that they were not entitled to do so on the ground that section thirty-eight is only applicable where the claims on each rule are such as result in pecuniary liabilities, whereas the right of the plaintiffs was to a return of the goods. Eberle's Hotels & Restaurant Co. v. Jonas, 18 Q. B. D. 465.

2. Where a person has given a town a bond in a criminal cause and he has a claim against the town, such a claim cannot be set off against the bond; they are not mutual debts. Town of Wallingford v. Hall, 45 Conn. 350.

In a suit brought by partners upon a partnership debt the defendant cannot set off a debt against one of the partners under statutes that provide for the selling off of mutual debts between parties to an action. Meeker v. Thompson, 43 Conn. 77-80.

3. An action was brought against the city of Boston to recover money due the plaintiff for his services as a teacher in the public schools in the city. The real party in interest was one Odin, to whom this claim had been assigned, and the city sought to set off certain taxes assessed to said Odin, and another as assignees of John Odin, which were unpaid. Held, that taxes assessed upon a citizen are neither demands founded on a judgment nor contract between the parties, and therefore these taxes and the said claim did not constitute mutual demands. There was a want of mutuality in the parties. Pierce v. Boston, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 520.

5. Extent and Nature of Liability, 34.
6. Premium Notes, 37.
7. Effect Upon Contract of Constitutions and By-laws, 40.
- IV. Beneficiaries, 46.
 1. Designation, 46.
 2. Limitations and Their Constructions, 50.
 3. Change of Beneficiary, 52.
- V. Separation of Funds, 57.
 1. Duties of Directors, with Respect to, 57.
 2. Guaranty and Reserve Funds, 58.
 - (a) Character and Purpose, 58.
 - (b) Procurement, 58.
 - (c) Preservation, 60.
 - (d) Disposition, 60.
 3. Relief and Disability Fund, 60.
 4. Mortuary Fund, 60.
 5. Endowment Fund, 61.
 6. Expense Fund, 61.
- VI. Title to Proceeds of Contract, 61.
- VII. Assessments, 65.
 1. Power and Duty of Officers in Making, 65.
 2. In Collecting, 70.
 3. Action on, 74.
- VIII. Forfeiture and Suspension of Contract, 77.
 1. Distinguished from Expulsion, 77.
 2. Essentials, 78.
 3. Waiver, 83.
 4. Payment of Arrearages and Reinstatement, 87.
- IX. Remedies and Defences on Certificates, 88.
- X. Matters of Practice, 98.
 1. Parties, 98.
 2. Pleading, 99.
 3. Evidence, 102.
- XI. Contribution and Distribution Upon Winding Up, 105.
 1. By Insolvency Proceedings, 105.
 2. By Dissolution or Abandonment, 106.

I. DEFINITION AND DISTINCTIONS.—The general definition of life insurance is applicable to contracts of mutual insurance, with but slight modification. The definition given in the statutes of Massachusetts relating to insurance on the assessment plan is applicable to all mutual insurance, since, whether the liability to assessments be fixed by the giving of premium notes or be left indefinite, the method of providing the fund for the payment of losses is the same. It is there defined as "any contract whereby a benefit is to accrue to a party or parties named therein, upon the death of a person, which benefit is in any manner conditioned upon persons holding similar contracts."¹

The only distinction between contracts of mutual insurance and other insurance contracts consists in the fact that the liquidation of those of the former class is made from a fund obtained by periodical tax upon the members at stated intervals or as required, while in other cases the amount stipulated to be paid to the beneficiary is absolute and dependent only upon the success

¹ Statutes of Massachusetts, 1885, ch. 183, § 7; Harding v. Littlehale (Mass.), 22 N. E. Rep. 738. See INSURANCE, 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 280.

Among the features distinguishing such companies from those who insure upon a capital paid up or secured are, that each insurer becomes a member of the association. The capital is composed of premiums earned in the business and deposit notes. The deposit notes constitute the reserved fund, to be used as the necessities of expenses and losses require. The insurers become the mutual indemnifiers of each other against damage and loss from the elements insured against. Planters' Ins. Co. v. Comfort, 50 Miss. 662.

of the business and the ability of the insurer to pay the stipulated indemnity. Mutual insurance is largely done by what are called benefit assessment associations. In some of these the frequency as well as the amount of assessments is left wholly discretionary with the managing agents of the association; in other cases, premium notes are given for definite amounts, which amounts constitute the limit beyond which no assessment may be levied. But the manner in which the fund is to be raised to pay benefits and losses is unimportant, as, in a definition of mutual insurance, it is only an incident and a means of performing such contracts. Benefit associations often combine with business objects social and fraternal features; but whether organized as clubs, lodges and secret societies, or for the sole purpose of conferring upon their members the benefits of mutual insurance, the principles of insurance law equally apply to their contracts of insurance. When they combine business and social objects they have a dual nature, and in determining the rights and responsibilities of the members with respect to these contracts, this fact must be kept constantly in view. Different conclusions will be reached as we consider the one characteristic or the other.¹

The general principles applicable to insurance contracts will, in this connection, be treated incidentally only, it not being within the purview of this article to consider other matters than those peculiar to, or specially pertaining to contracts of membership in mutual insurance and benefit assessment companies. The predominant feature of both benefit associations and other insurance companies is the payment of a specific sum on the death of the person who is a member of the organization, or whose life is insured. Both companies and societies may have, and usually do have, some careful medical examination, and certificates and the contracts of both are void by the violation of certain agreed conditions, or voidable by reason of misrepresentations prior to entering into the contract.²

Regular proprietary and stock insurance companies may assimilate the practice of collecting assessments after the manner of benefit societies without the insured becoming in any respect members of such companies and without entitling them to be called mutual insurance companies. In respect to the terms in the general insurance law applicable to contracts of membership in benefit societies, the "insurer" designates the society itself, while the power to designate recipients of the benefits is in the members. These recipients are the beneficiaries. The consideration for the contract is made up of assessments and dues, and the instrument evidencing the contract is the certificate of membership.

II. KINDS OF MUTUAL INSURANCES—1. Premium Note Assessment.—With respect to the nature of risks assumed mutual insurance may be divided into life, accident, fire, marine, and other classes usually engaged in by insurers. With respect to the manner of securing the consideration and performing their contracts, mutual insurance companies are not susceptible of subdivision, although the methods of raising funds to meet losses and pay benefits are of almost infinite variety. Where a premium note is taken as a measure of liability to assessments, part of the note is regularly paid to meet assessments.

1. Mulroy v. Knights of Honor, 28 Mo. App. 463.

2. Bacon Benefit Societies and Life Ins., § 23.

The only marked difference between contracts of membership in different societies is that, in some, premium notes are given and, in others, the limit to the power of assessment is either fixed in the charter and by-laws or not at all.

2. Benefit Assessment—(a) Recent Development of Law on the Subject.—Societies formed for the purpose of giving mutual relief to their members are of very ancient origin. They were numerous during the best days of Rome, when most of them were trade corporations, devoted to the interests of their crafts, though some of them were formed for good fellowship, to promote religion and other benevolent objects. As they are now known they are the legitimate successors of the clubs and guilds that have existed from ancient times in all countries. Through the centuries we can trace the co-operative idea from the sodalities and secret societies of remote periods to the formation of social and industrial associations of the present century, in which may be classed co-operative life insurance and fraternal bodies. In the Middle Ages social guilds sprang up all over Europe, chiefly in England and Germany, and one or more was found in every village. One of their principal objects was mutual assistance of the members in every exigency, especially in old age, in sickness, and in cases of impoverishment, if not brought on by their own folly; of wrongful imprisonment; of relief from losses by fire, water or shipwreck; by loans, provision of work, and the burial of the dead.¹

Notwithstanding their ancient origin, the idea of co-operative insurance had not become a matter of considerable and general importance until within the last twenty-five years, and as a subject of litigation in the courts, such contracts had attracted but little attention until within ten years.²

¹ Brentano's History and Development of Guilds.

² The earliest case in the United States involving questions of benefit society life insurance was that raised in 1871, in Wetmore v. Mutual Aid Ben. L. Ins. Assoc., 23 La. An. 770. The next case was decided in 1875. Maryland Mut. Ben. Assoc. etc. v. Clendinen, 44 Md. 429; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 521. Since these cases there has been a constant increase year by year relating to contracts between benefit societies and their members. Like many other institutions established for worthy objects, the law allowing their creation and exemption from burdens imposed upon regular insurance companies has been taken advantage of by the cunning and unscrupulous for the purposes of private gain.

The legislatures of California, of New York and of several other States early realized the magnitude of the trust necessarily reposed by the people in certain corporations, such as banking and insurance companies; and, in order to prevent gross abuses of trust and confidence by them, enacted stringent laws for their restriction and regulation. The evident intendment of these enactments, taken as a whole, is the protection of the people from imposition and loss at the hands of dishonest and irresponsible insurers, and incidently the protection of legitimate, solvent and responsible companies which have complied with those restrictions and submitted to the burdens imposed by law, from unfair and unequal competition on the part of those of a different character which have not. It may, therefore, be stated as a fundamental principle that whatever has the effect of defeating either directly or indirectly this manifest purpose of the law is usurpation and a violation of its spirit. The usual modus operandi of "benevolent" insurers is for five or more individuals to sign, acknowledge and file in the office of the county clerk articles of incorporation, reciting that they do incorporate, not for profit, but for benevolent objects—that is, "to guard its members against the ills of pecuniary want during life, and especially during the period of infirm old age, and, at death, to make provision for their families and friends." How do they proceed to accomplish those benevolent objects? It is by visiting the sick and by relieving distress! Do they provide hospitals and alms houses as provisions against the disabilities and necessities of infirm old age? In case of a husband's death, do they hunt up the widow and orphans and present them with a fund collected equally and without charge from all surviving members, as authorized by the California Act of 1874, concerning mutual beneficial and relief associations? If they did all or any of these things and nothing more, no question could ever be raised as to the authority for the acts done under the acts of incorporation. Benevolent practices for which it is not only legal but commendable to incorporate and exercise a franchise under that act, would, in that case, be a public as well as a private blessing.

Many of the secret fraternal orders in the United States have adopted the mutual benefit insurance system for relieving distress and providing against accident and misfortune among their members. Prominent in this respect are the Free Masons and Odd Fellows. Sometimes the insurance department is controlled and conducted directly by the organization, at others it is a separate auxiliary association.

From a candid consideration of the character of business done by this class of associations it is easy to see that their business is not purely benevolent nor their motives entirely disinterested, whatever the character they give themselves in their articles and constitutions. There are only two classes of motives which actuate human beings—selfish and unselfish. The individuals who conduct the business under consideration are prompted by motives belonging to one or the other of these classes—that is, they are pushed forward by philanthropic zeal, or else the business yields them a profit. In the latter case the business does not come within any of the exceptions of benevolent associations from the restrictions of the insurance laws, howmuchsoever it ostensibly partakes of their nature in the high-sounding titles assumed by them. The section in the California Civil Code (451) reads as follows: "All associations or secret orders, and other benevolent or fraternal co-operative societies, incorporated or organized for the purpose of mutual protection and relief of its members, and for the payment of stipulated sums of money to its members or to the families of deceased members, and not for profit, are declared not to be insurance companies in the sense and meaning of the insurance laws of this State, and are exempt from the provisions of all existing insurance laws of this State."

While the contracts made by most associations of this class are in form and substance life insurance policies, it borders on the libellous to designate the business done by them as life insurance. It is classing with a legitimate and honorable calling that which often turns out to be grand larceny on a petty scale and petty larceny on a grand scale. But as it takes the place of life insurance and is believed and accepted as such by many, and prevents insurance in regular companies, it practically defeats the salutary provisions of the insurance laws and must be dealt with, to all practical intents

The English mutual benefit organizations possess the general feature of benefit associations in the United States, and those of both countries may well be called "the mutual assurance societies of the poorer classes, by which they seek to aid each other in the emergencies arising from sickness and death and other causes of distress."¹

(b) Forms of Organization of Benefit Societies.—Benefit societies, like other associations, of persons for agreed and lawful purposes may be simply voluntary associations, or they may become incorporated by special act or under general laws. Whether incorporated or not is important only as to determining their relations to third parties and the rights of the latter with respect to obligations growing out of the dealings with such associations. With reference to the contracts of the members with the association and their relative rights with each other, the fact of incorporation is unimportant. If incorporated, the special act or general incorporation law, together with such rules and regulations as they may adopt, enter into and affect the contracts of membership. If unincorporated, such by-laws alone, in connection with their contract of associa-

and purposes, as life insurance, legal or illegal. The articles of incorporation, standing alone, are without objection. It is in the conception and execution of benevolent designs that these benefactors of the race cause trouble.

But, granting that their contracts are honestly and impartially carried out, let us ask, as a legal proposition, what privilege is exercised, what advantage enjoyed and what opportunity for profit furnished companies which have complied with the laws by providing the guarantee fund and making annual statements to the State insurance commissioner that are not equally possessed, enjoyed and exercised by the class under consideration? And as the business of life, accident and health insurance is a franchise, a quo warranto proceeding will lie to forfeit the franchise usurped by this class of companies.

1. In England the law which now regulates friendly societies is that of 38 and 39 Vict., ch. 60, amended in 39 and 40 Vict., ch. 32. By it they are defined as "Societies established to provide by voluntary subscriptions of the members thereof, with or without the aid of donations, for the relief or maintenance of the members, their husbands, wives, children, fathers, mothers, brothers or sisters, nephews or nieces, or wards being orphans, during sickness or other infirmity, whether bodily or mental, in old age, or in widowhood, or for the relief or maintenance of the orphan children of members during minority; for insuring money to be paid on the birth of a member's child, or on the death of a member; or, for the funeral expenses of the husband, wife or child of a member, or of the widow of a deceased member; or, as respects persons of the Jewish parish, for the payment of a sum of money during the period of confined mourning; for the relief or maintenance of the members when on travel in search of employment, or when in distressed circumstances, or in case of shipwreck, or loss or damage of or to boats or nets; for the endowment of members or nominees of members at any age; for the insurance against fire, to any amount not exceeding £15, of the tools or implements of the trade or calling of the members."

Mr. Bacon, in his treatise on benefit societies and life insurance, gives comprehensive and valuable information on the subject of benefit insurance by secret societies, and furnishes a list of leading beneficiary orders in the United States, together with their aggregate membership, p. 16. On p. 17, he says: "Closely allied to the beneficiary, or mutual aid life insurance organizations, are the secret ritualistic societies and charitable fraternities, whose characteristic features are good fellowship, social enjoyment and benevolence. The Freemasons, Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias are examples. These numer-tion, govern their rights and limit their liabilities. A contract of assurance effected with a friendly society unincorporated is generally not less beneficial than a policy effected with an incorporated company.¹

While a majority of benefit societies are fraternal and social in their organization and have secret meetings and rituals, many are organized and conducted for the sole purpose of enjoying the benefits of co-operative insurance. Again, societies organized for fraternal and social objects, and having secret meetings and rituals, are composed of several distinct but not entirely disconnected judicatories or assemblies. The constitution and organization of such orders and societies into superior and subordinate lodges and assemblies, according to States and districts, and the enactment of numerous rules and regulations governing their relations to each other, give rise to many complex and difficult questions, for the settlement of which no known rules have been established by the courts, as much depends in each case upon its peculiar facts. However, where the element of property rights of members is the principal matter in dispute, the law makes no distinction between societies which are incorporated and those that are merely voluntary, but it does between questions involving the property rights of members and those concerning discipline only or policy of government.²

ous societies are secret in their organization and work, use a ritual and have initiatory ceremonies, and their members are pledged to secrecy. They are organized on the plan of local assemblies or lodges under the government and control of grand or supreme lodges. Some, like the Masons, make no promise of financial aid to members, but are charitable only, donating when necessity requires. Others, such as the Odd Fellows, expressly agree to pay stated amounts to their members in sickness or disability, and at death a certain sum for funeral expenses, and also to look after the widow and orphan. These societies have no life insurance feature."

1. Courtenay v. Courtenay, 3 Jones & La. T. 519.

Legal incorporation implies conformity with the terms of the charter or general law, as in the case of other corporations. Morawetz on Corp., §§ 27, 28, 641-45, 939.

A society may acquire any rights conferred in the law under which it seeks to become incorporated. Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters v. Callaghan, 146 Mass. 391.

They have no implied powers other than those necessary for the purpose of carrying into effect the powers expressly granted. Ang. & Ames on Corp. 111.

Articles of association are to be considered in the light of an agreement between the members, extending or limiting any general obligation which binds them to each other as members. Protchett v. Schaefer, 11 Phila. 116. See Tyrrell v. Washburn, 6 Allen 466; Hyde v. Woods, 2 Sawyer 655; affirmed 94 U. S. 523; Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. 571.

A voluntary association may do any legal act within the scope of its constitution and by-laws. The members are governed by the principles and rules of partnership and agency as respects third parties. Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571; Ridgley v. Dobson, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 118; Bullard v. Kinney, 10 Cal. 60; White v. Brownell, 3 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 318; Gorman v. Russell, 14 Cal. 537; Wells v. Gates, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 554; Fleming v. Hector, 2 M. & W. 171; Dow v. Moore, 47 N. H. 419; Robinson v. Robinson, 10 Me. 240; Protchett v. Schaefer, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 166.

2. In Bauer v. Samson Lodge etc., 102 Ind. 262, the court said: "Claims for money due by virtue of an agreement are unlike mere matters of disci-

The result of all the decisions in this country and in England is that, with respect to property rights and contracts affecting property, the courts will apply the same principles to voluntary as to incorporated companies.

But while questions of discipline and government are constantly distinguished from those affecting pecuniary rights growing out of a contractual relation between the members and the organization, the right of property is often dependent on the question of doctrine, discipline, ecclesiastical law, rule, custom, or church government, and, in so far as the provisions of any of these are reasonable and not in conflict with law and the plain principles of justice, they will be allowed to control. A civil court will accept the decision which the members of a corporation or their duly authorized and appointed agents have made as conclusive, and be governed by it in its legitimate application in the case before it, whether involving an insurance or other contract.¹

Since a corporation no less than a voluntary association is a mere association of persons for an agreed and lawful purpose, and since the real nature of the corporation depends upon the charter under which it is formed and must be determined by reference pline, questions of doctrine or of policy, and are not governed by the same rules. . . . One who asserts a claim to money due on a contract occupies an essentially different position from one who presents a question of discipline, of policy or of doctrine of the order or fraternity to which he belongs."

All questions of policy, discipline and internal government and custom, when settled by judicatories of churches, fraternal associations and societies are generally accepted by the courts as final; but the rule is different when property rights are involved. Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 679.

In the case of Smith v. Smith, 3 Desaus. 557, involving the right to a certain fund belonging to the incorporated Grand Lodge of Ancient York Masons, the action was brought in behalf of a voluntary association, claiming to be a successor of the corporation under the name of Grand Lodge of South Carolina. Incidentally, the distinction between certain masonic bodies and doctrines was discussed. The court laid down the rule that the Grand Lodge of Freemasons cannot make new regulations subversive of fundamental principles and landmarks without the clear consent of the subordinate lodges, and that the officers of the corporation composed of several integral parts could not dissolve the corporation without the full consent of the great body of the society. See also Goodman v. Jedediah Lodge etc., 67 Md. 117; Court Mount Royal v. Boulton, Q. B. (Quebec) 1881; District Grand Lodge v. Jedediah Lodge, 65 Md. 236. But see Altmann v. Benz, 27 N. J. Eq. 331.

Austin v. Searing, 16 N. Y. 112; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 675, is a leading case upon the rights growing out of the complex organization of the Odd Fellows' fraternity, where all the constituent bodies were incorporated.

1. Wilson v. John's Island Church, 2 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 192; Gibson v. Armstrong, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 481; Ferraria v. Vasconcelles, 23 Ill. 403; Watson v. Avery, 2 Bush (Ky.) 332; Harmon v. Dreher, 1 Speer's Eq. (S. Car.) 87; Smith v. Nelson, 18 Vt. 511; Shannon v. Frost, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 253; Miller v. Gable, 2 Denio (N. Y.) 492; Chase v. Cheney, 58 Ill. 509; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 95; Watson v. Farris, 45 Mo. 183; German Reformed Church v. Seibert, 3 Pa. St. 291; McGinnis v. Watson, 41 Pa. St. 21. See, as to jurisdiction, Watson v. Avery, 2 Bush (Ky.) 332; Watson v. Avery, 3 Bush (Ky.) 635; Altman v. Benz, 27 N. J. Eq. 331; Hendrickson v. Shotwell, 1 N. J. Eq. 577; Lloyd v. Loring, 6 Vesey 773; Cullen v. Duke of Queensborough, 1 Bro. C. C. 101.

thereto,¹ it follows that voluntary associations have many characteristics and rules in common, and all rights of the members and their powers, as well as of the association, are derived from the original compact between them contained in the constitution and by-laws.

Such constitution and by-laws, no less than a charter, regulate the admission of members and define their qualifications. The same rules of construction apply to the one as to the other, and a member may be expelled in accordance with the by-laws and constitution of a voluntary association with like effect as by compliance with those of a corporation.²

(c) Legal Status.—It is both unnecessary and foreign to the present purpose to consider the statutory enactments found in most, if not quite all, the States governing the business of insurance, and seeking to exempt from their provisions societies organized for benevolent and charitable purposes, having mutual benefit insurance as an adjunct, from the requirements and restrictions of such laws. The principal requirements of regular insurance companies are the deposit of a guaranty fund with a State officer, usually an insurance commissioner, and the making of periodical reports of the volume of business and financial condition to such officer.³

The courts have often been called upon to determine whether benevolent societies and benefit associations were really such, or came within the requirements intended for insurance companies. It is generally held, where the contract provides for the payment of a specified sum at death, or of benefits periodically, or upon certain contingencies, that it is one of insurance, and that the corporation or voluntary association is amenable to all the provisions and regulations concerning insurance companies.⁴

1. Morawetz Priv. Corp., §§ 6, 7, 316, 580; Com. v. St. Patrick's Soc., 2 Binn. (Pa.) 441; 4 Am. Dec. 453; Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571.

2. In Diligent Fire Co. v. Com., 75 Pa. St. 291, the court said: "It is true the power of admitting new members being incidental to a corporation aggregate, it is not necessary that such power be expressly conferred by the statute. Yet when the statute does limit and restrict the power, it erects a barrier beyond which no by-laws can pass."

3. Pub. Stat. Mass. 1880, ch. 115, §§ 8-10; Amended Stat. 1882, ch. 195, § 2; Rev. Stat. Mo. 1879, §§ 972, 973; Rev. Stat. Ohio 1880, § 3630; Ill. Stat. 1885, ch. 32, § 31.

4. State v. Critchett, 37 Minn. 13, following Foster v. Pray, 35 Minn. 458; State v. Trubey, 37 Minn. 97; Com. v. Wetherbee, 105 Mass. 149; Golden Rule v. People, 118 Ill. 492; State v. Citizens' Ben. Assoc., 6 Mo. App. 163; State v. Vigilant Ins. Co., 30 Kan. 585; State v. Merchants' Exchange Ben. etc. Soc., 72 Mo. 146; State v. Farmers' etc. Ben. Assoc., 18 Neb. 276; State v. Bankers' & Merchants' Mut. Ben. Assoc., 28 Kan. 499; Bolton v. Bolton, 73 Me. 299; State v. Standard L. Assoc., 38 Ohio St. 281; Farmer v. State, 67 Tex. 561; State v. Miller, 66 Iowa 26.

In State v. Whitmore, 75 Wis. 332, a construction was given to Laws Wis. 1879, ch. 204, § 1, which provides that "the secret, beneficiary, charitable and benevolent orders of Free Masons, Odd Fellows, and Knights of Pythias (naming several), are hereby declared not to be life insurance companies in the sense and meaning of the general laws of this State relating to life insurance and life insurance companies; and such societies, orders and associations are,

The decisive test applied by the courts is the object for which they are organized and the consideration upon which the contracts of membership are based.

It may be important, as a guide for determining whether the object of the company be benevolence or mutual profit of its members, to enquire whether any provision has been made for carrying out the benevolent purposes specified in the charter or articles.¹

and shall hereafter be, exempt from the provisions of said general laws." By various amendments the provisions of the act were extended to other societies. Laws 1883, ch. 94, added to the section: "and no other societies are hereby declared to be exempt." It was held that an Odd Fellows' association, duly incorporated under the laws of another State for the purpose of fraternal benevolent insurance upon the co-operative or assessment plan, among the members of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, was exempt under this statute and amendments thereto, though it was not named in that act or any amendment thereto.

By Rev. Stat. Ill. 1874, ch. 32, relating to corporations not for pecuniary profit, it is provided (section 31), that "associations and societies which are intended to benefit the widow, orphans, heirs and devisees of the deceased members thereof, and where no annual dues or premiums are required, and where the members shall receive no money as profit or otherwise, shall not be deemed insurance companies." Defendant organized under this chapter, and by the certificate filed with the secretary of State declared its purpose to be "to give financial aid and benefit to the widows, orphans and heirs or devisees of deceased members." Held, that a clause in a certificate issued to a member agreeing to pay him, on his arriving at a certain age, a sum equal to the number of members in his division, was ultra vires, but that it did not invalidate the certificate as one to pay the benefits to his widow, etc. Rockhold v. Canton Masonic Mut. Ben. Assoc. (Ill.), 19 N. E. 710. See also Golden Rule v. People, 118 Ill. 492.

A scheme of a so-called benevolent association, which depends for its success upon the lapsing of a very large proportion of its membership, was considered to be clearly not within the meaning of the New Jersey statute authorizing the formation of benevolent and charitable institutions. And it was held that the court would appoint a receiver to take charge of and distribute the assets among the members. Peltz v. Supreme Chamber of the Order of Financial Union (N. J.), 19 Atl. Rep. 668.

In Pennsylvania, a beneficial association whose design was not to indemnify against loss, but to accumulate a fund from the contributions of its members to be used in their own aid or relief in case of sickness, injury or death, was held not an insurance company, but within the provisions of Act Pa., April 29th, 1874, ch. 9, allowing the organization of societies for beneficial or protective purposes. Com. v. Equitable Ben. Assoc., 25 W. N. C. (Pa.) 34; s. c., 18 Atl. Rep. 1112.

But a different view was taken by the Supreme Court of Iowa upon a similar state of facts, the statutes of the two States on the subject being substantially the same. State v. Nichols (Iowa), 41 N. W. Rep. 4.

1. In State v. Bankers' & Merchants' Mut. Ben. Assoc., 23 Kan. 499, the court said: "Elaborate and stringent provisions are made in relation to the beneficiary fund payable on the death of a member, and for collecting and enforcing the payment of such amounts as are assessed on each member; but we have been unable to discover any provision for enforcing any of the other declared objects of the association stated in the preamble to the constitution of the supreme lodge, including 'sick benefits.' If the provisions of a fraternal character be eliminated from the association, its primary and only purpose is that of a life insurance organization." See Bolton v. Bolton, 73 Me. 299; Folmer's Appeal, 87 Pa. St. 133; Illinois Masons' Ben. Soc. v. Winthrop, 85 Ill. 537; Illinois Masons' Ben. Soc. v. Baldwin, 86 Ill. 479; State v. Citizens' Ben. Assoc., 6 Mo. App. 163.

"So far as corporations, carrying on a life insurance business, either on the plan of annual, semi-annual or quarterly premiums and the accumulation of a reserve fund, or upon the new assessment plan, where calls are made, as necessity requires, monthly or less or more frequently, are concerned, it may be said that it is hard to conceive of any reason why such organizations should be governed by any rules different from those regulating other corporations."¹

The same rule has been applied to incorporated lodges, superior and subordinate, and to other secret, social and benevolent organizations.²

(d) Internal Management and Powers.—An incorporated benefit assessment association has the powers derived from its charter or the general law under which it is incorporated, as other corporations. No more can such a corporation than any other change the purpose for which it was organized, as specified in its articles, without the consent of all its members.³

1. Bacon on Ben. Socs. & Life Ins., § 78.

A "mutual reliance society," constituted for pecuniary gain, cannot be formed under the act for the incorporation of benevolent, charitable, scientific and missionary societies. People v. Nelson, 46 N. Y. 477.

2. Erdman v. Mutual Ins. Co. etc., 44 Wis. 376; Bolton v. Bolton, 73 Me. 299.

3. For application of principle to business corporations, see Zabriskie v. Hackensack etc. R. Co., 18 N. J. Eq. 178; Morton v. Smith, 5 Bush (Ky.) 467; Marston v. Durgin, 54 N. H. 347; Torrey v. Baker, 1 Allen (Mass.) 120; Hochreiter's Appeal, 93 Pa. St. 479; Ray v. Powers, 134 Mass. 22; Abels v. McKeen, 16 N. J. Eq. 462; Kean v. Johnson, 9 N. J. Eq. 401.

A mutual fire company, organized under Laws Wis., 1885, ch. 421, § 2, which enacts that "no such corporation shall insure any property other than detached dwellings and their contents, farm buildings and their contents, livestock in possession and running at large, farm products on premises and farming implements," has no power to insure an incubator building. O'Neil v. Pleasant Prairie Mut. F. Ins. Co., 71 Wis. 621.

When the statutes under which mutual fire insurance companies are organized confine their business to certain territory, as to three counties, policies issued outside the three counties mentioned in a company's charter are ultra vires and void. Eddy v. Merchants' etc. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 72 Mich. 651.

Under Rev. Stat. Mo. 1879, § 5988, a mutual company does not expose itself to the charge of doing business upon the joint stock plan by receiving all cash premiums on all policies running less than six years; nor is there any objection to its issuing policies for less than six years, except policies issued on account of notes given to the organization of companies organized without a guarantee fund, which are expressly required to run for not less than six years. State v. Manufacturers' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 90 Mo. 311.

The Massachusetts statute provides that certain benevolent associations may, "for the purpose of assisting the widows, orphans or other persons dependent upon deceased members, provide in its by-laws for the payment by each member of a fixed sum to be held by such association until the death of a member occurs, and then to be forthwith paid to the person or persons entitled thereto." The supreme court of that State construed this statute to mean that associations organized under this provision have no power to create a fund for other persons than of the classes named. Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters v. Callahan, 146 Mass. 391; Commercial League Assoc. v. People, 90 Ill. 166; Elsev v. Odd Fellows' Mut. Relief Assoc., 142 Mass. 224; Benefit Soc. v. Dugre, 11 Revue Légale (Queb.) 344.

Members of a mutual fire and marine

They have no power to provide for, or to make contracts of insurance for the benefit of others than those limited in the charter or general laws.¹

And the same rule applies with respect to the powers of the majority and the rights of the minority as in other private corporations.²

The relative rights of members as such are governed by the terms of the contracts of membership, and are regulated by the articles of association or constitution and by-laws.³

If the association be voluntary—that is, unincorporated—the members are governed by such by-laws, rules and regulations as they may agree upon. In all cases of dispute as to rights or duties of such bodies, the original compact is the measure by which a decision is to be reached.⁴

company were held estopped from questioning its powers after having had full notice of an arrangement in which they had acquiesced and which had been advertised for more than twenty years. Doane v. Millville Mut. M. & F. Ins. Co., 43 N. J. Eq. 522.

1. State v. Moore, 38 Ohio St. 7.

In Rockholder v. Canton Masonic Mut. Ben. Assoc. (Ill.), 19 N. E. Rep. 710, it was held that the defendant was not estopped to evoke the doctrine of ultra vires, because plaintiff had, from time to time after receiving his certificate, paid assessments, which were turned over by defendant to the persons entitled thereto under beneficiary certificates.

To same effect is Bloomington Mut. L. Ben. Assoc. v. Blue, 23 Ill. App. 518.

2. Sizer v. Daniels, 66 Barb. (N. Y.) 426; Richmond v. Judy, 6 Mo. App. 465; State v. Central Ohio Mut. Relief Assoc. etc., 29 Ohio St. 399; State v. Mutual Protection Assoc., 26 Ohio St. 19; State v. People's Ben. Assoc., 42 Ohio St. 579; State v. Standard L. Assoc., 38 Ohio St. 281; National Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Gonser, 43 Ohio St. 1.

3. One who becomes a member of a mutual insurance company after it has practically adopted the provisions of a statute authorizing the property insured to be divided into classes, and acted thereon for several years, cannot object, in an action to recover an assessment upon his deposit note, that the same were not formally adopted at a meeting regularly called for that purpose. Citizens' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Sortwell, 8 Allen (Mass.) 217.

4. Austin v. Searing, 16 N. Y. 112;

s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 665; Chamberlain v. Lincoln, 129 Mass. 70; Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 587; White v. Brownell, 3 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 318; Lowry v. Stotzer, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 397.

The construction of all such constat- ing instruments is the duty of the court, and neither the opinions of the officers of the society nor of its custom and usage in respect to their interpretation are admissible evidence in actions growing out of their contractual relation, if the language used be not ambiguous. Wiggin v. Knights of Pythias, 31 Fed. Rep. 122; Davidson v. Knights of Pythias, 22 Mo. App. 263; Manson v. Grand Lodge A. O. U. W., 30 Minn. 509.

But, in cases involving property rights, a member may at once resort to the courts. He is not bound to leave the determination of such rights to the tribunals of the order or association; but if he consent to an adjudication by the society, he is bound as by an arbitration, in the absence of oppression, fraud, or the violation of the principles of natural justice. It is not within the power of any organization, by the provision of its constitution and by-laws, or by the conduct of its internal affairs, to deprive a member or class of members of any substantial property right. Forfeiture of the conventional charter of a society incorporated by the State will not divest its property, nor can the property be affected by a secession of part of its members. Even if unincorporated, the majority of a society have generally the right to cut loose from a superior governing body, and the minority have no redress if the property is used for the general purposes for which it was acquired. See Bacon on Ben. Soc. & Life Ins., § 116.

III. CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP—1. Essential and General Features.—Certificates of membership, while differing in many respects, usually contain certain similar predominant features. These are, the provisions whereby the party becomes a member; the agreement to pay dues, assessments, and such other contributions as may be provided for in the contract and to abide by the constitution and by-laws of the association. On the part of the society, to pay benefits and death losses, as authorized by the charter or articles of association, either to the member or to such other person as is designated in the contract; or the member may be authorized in the certificate to designate some other person, or to change from the one designated in the contract to any other he may afterwards prefer. In all cases the document issuing to the members of a benefit society must be such as its laws prescribe. Certificates of membership are set out in full in the following cases:¹

Such certificates are, in legal contemplation, policies of insurance, and are in many respects governed by the general rules of law which apply to insurance contracts.²

The authority of subordinate lodges to waive the requirements of the laws of the order of which they are constituent parts, in regard to assessments, has been questioned. Borgraefe v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 22 Mo. App. 127.

But where the constitution of the grand lodge of a fraternal order provided that, in case of failure by a subordinate lodge to do certain things, it "shall be deemed an extinct lodge, and its charter shall be forfeited," it was held that, as the subordinate lodge was incorporated under the State laws, its suspension by the grand lodge had no effect on its legal existence, and gave to the representatives of the grand lodge no right to the possession of property of which the former was the owner, and in which the grand lodge had no right, title or interest. Merrill Lodge No. 299, I. O. G. T. v. Ellsworth, 78 Cal. 166.

Where the minority members of a lodge had seceded from the lodge, and refused to pay dues, it was held that they had thereby forfeited their certificates. The court considered that as long as the member paid his dues, and remained in good standing, his certificate could not be forfeited by a forfeiture of the charter of the lodge declared by the general order, but might be for his failure or refusal to pay such dues. Goodman v. Jedidjah Lodge, 67 Md. 117.

1. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor v. Johnson, 78 Ind. 110; Richmond v. Johnson, 28 Minn. 447; Wendt v. Iowa Legion of Honor, 72 Iowa 682; Grand Lodge A. O. U. W. v. Child, 70 Mich. 163; Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias v. Schmidt, 98 Ind. 374; Supreme Council of Royal Templars of Temperance v. Curd, 111 Ill. 286; Supreme Commandery Knights of the Golden Rule v. Ainsworth, 71 Ala. 437; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 332; Holland v. Taylor, 111 Ind. 121.

The charter provided that "every person who shall become a member of this company by effecting an insurance therein, shall, before he receives his policy, deposit with the treasurer the sum of twenty-five cents for every $1,000 worth of property he shall have insured." Plaintiff had a policy on his barn, and subsequently applied for an insurance on the contents of the barn. Held, that at the time of the latter application he was a member. Farmers' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Mylin (Pa.), 15 Atl. Rep. 710.

A new benefit certificate issued to change the beneficiary, upon application made in accordance with the by-laws of the union, and signed by the supreme president and secretary of the union, and sealed with the seal of the supreme union, is not invalid because not signed and sealed by the officers of the subordinate union. Fiske v. Equitable Aid Union (Pa.), 11 Atl. Rep. 84.

2. Elkhart Mut. Aid etc. Assoc. v.

Such contracts are none the less contracts of mutual insurance, because the amount to be paid by the corporation is not a gross sum, but a sum graduated by the number of members holding similar contracts; nor because a portion of the premiums is to be paid upon the uncertain periods of the deaths of such members; nor because in case of nonpayment of assessments by any member, the contract provides no means of enforcing payment thereof, but merely declares the contract to be at an end, and all moneys previously paid by the assured, and all dividends and credits accrued to him, forfeited to the company.¹

Houghton, 98 Ind. 149; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 514; Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias v. Schmidt, 98 Ind. 374; Bauer v. Samson Lodge, 102 Ind. 262; Supreme Commandery Knights of the Golden Rule v. Ainsworth, 71 Ala. 443; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 332.

1. In Com. v. Wetherbee, supra, a contract had been made between the Connecticut Mutual Benefit Company and each of its members, and certificates of membership issued according to its charter, the consideration being assessments to be paid from time to time as levied by the managing agents. The court held that the contract did not differ in any essential particular of form or substance from an ordinary policy of mutual life insurance, and said: "The contract made between the Connecticut Mutual Benefit Company and each of its members, by the certificates of membership issued according to its charter, does not differ in any essential particular of form or substance from an ordinary policy of mutual life insurance. The subject insured is the life of the member. The risk insured is death from any cause not excepted in the terms of the contract. The assured pays a sum fixed by the directors and not exceeding $10 at the inception of the contract, and assessments of two dollars each annually, and of one dollar each upon the death of any member of the division to which he belongs during the continuance of the risk. In case of the death of the assured by a peril insured against, the company absolutely promises to pay to his representatives, in sixty days after receiving satisfactory notice and proof of his death, 'as many dollars as there are members in the same division, the number of which is limited to five thousand. The payment of this sum is subject to no contingency but the insolvency of the corporation. The means of paying it are derived from the assessments collected upon his death from other members; from the money received upon issuing other certificates of membership, which the by-laws declare may, after payment of expenses, be 'used to cover losses caused by the delinquencies of members;' and from the guarantee fund of one thousand dollars, established by the corporation under its charter."

A leading case on this subject is that of Farmer v. The State, 67 Tex. 561. A corporation had been organized under the name of the Masonic Mutual Benevolent Association of Texas, to provide for its members during life and their families after death, and provided in its constitution and by-laws to pay to members at death a certain sum in consideration of membership fee and future assessments. An examination as to health and physical condition by a physician was required before admission. It was held that the objects of the association were not benevolent, but that the consideration for the contracts between the members and the corporation was mutual profit; that it was an insurance company and amenable to all the provisions of Rev. St. Tex., tit. 20, relating to such companies. The appellants contended that a subsequent act of the legislature recognized the association as benevolent, and that it had made reports as required by the statute concerning such associations. The court said: "The evil the statute intended to remedy was the conducting of an insurance company for the profit of its officers, under the guise of benevolence and in evasion of the insurance laws. The statute recognizes the existence of mutual benefit societies claiming to be benevolent. It proposes to test whether they are really so, or carried on for the profit of their officers. It gives them an opportunity of establishing their benevolent nature by reporting certain named facts from which

The authorities are not uniformly clear as to where the terms of such contracts are to be found. Some of the courts say in the contract of membership itself; others, that it is in the constitution, by-laws, etc., of the organization. It is probably correct to say that it is in both and all.¹

As contracts, they present no extraordinary features, nor do they call upon the courts for a difficult task of construction in and of themselves, however much the question may be complicated by the necessity of examining and interpreting provisions this question can be determined. If they fail to make the report, the presumption is conclusive that it would disclose their object and effect to be the emolument of their officers by means of a life insurance business. If the report showed this to be their true character, they were not to be exempted from the burdens imposed on other insurance companies. There was not such virtue in the report itself as would shield the society from the consequences of an act against which the statute was attempting to provide. If the report upon its face showed that the purpose of the organization was benevolent, no conclusive presumption to that effect was established. The society could not protect itself by incorrect statements. The State had the best means it could suggest to call to account such corporations as were flying the flag of benevolence and yet doing business for the benefit of its officers. If this failed to disclose their true character, it did not intend to deprive itself of all power to ascertain that character by other appropriate evidence to allow violators of the law to escape upon their own statement of their innocence."

In Bolton v. Bolton, 73 Me. 299, the subject underwent thorough investigation, and an institution with purposes similar to the above was held to be a mutual life insurance company. In State v. Critchett, 37 Minn. 13, the Supreme Court of Minnesota held that a company, formed by married men with the purpose of endowing the wife of each member upon marriage with a sum of money equal to the then number of members, was not a benevolent association. The court said: "The members paid a quid pro quo, and did not receive their money as an act of benevolence on the part of their fellow members." See also State v. Farmers' etc. Benevolent Assoc., 18 Neb. 281; Com. v. Wetherbee, 105 Mass. 149; May Ins. 550; State v. Citizens' Ben.

Assoc., 6 Mo. App. 163; State v. Merchants' Exchange etc. Soc., 72 Mo. 146; People v. Nelson, 46 N. Y. 477; State v. Standard L. Assoc., 38 Ohio St. 281.

The attempts of individuals to associate themselves together, either in a corporate capacity or otherwise and obtain the benefits of insurance, and at the same time escape the burdens and duties imposed upon insurance companies, have led to the prosecution of actions quo warranto as a result of which they have been in several instances declared to be mutual insurance companies and their charters held forfeited to the State, for noncompliance with conditions imposed by statute upon insurance companies organized and conducted for profit.

The expositions given in the cases just cited, furnish a safe guide to the distinction between benevolent associations proper and those which are so in name only but really mutual insurance companies.

1. In Hellenberg v. District No. 1 of I. O. O. B., 94 N. Y. 580, the court said: "The charter and by-laws of the corporation constitute the terms of an executory contract, to which the testator assented when he accepted admission into the order." In a similar case in Wisconsin the court said: "The constitution and by-laws certainly contain the contract which was entered into by the parties."

"The contract is contained in the certificates." Schunck v. Gegenseitiger etc. Fund, 44 Wis. 375.

The correct principle is thus stated, "The charter, by-laws and certificates of membership taken together show what was the understanding of the parties." Worley v. Northwestern Masonic Aid Assoc., 10 Fed. Rep. 228; Presbyterial Mut. Assurance Fund v. Allen, 106 Ind. 593. For other declarations on this point, see Masonic Mut. Ben. Soc. v. Burkhardt, 110 Ind. 192; of the charter and by-laws which, as has been stated, enter into and form a part of such contracts. The primary rule is that the intent of the legislature and of the parties to the contract or designation must be first ascertained and then given effect.¹

The consideration of the contracts of benevolent associations consists in the assessments and dues paid, which answer the same purpose as premiums paid by the insured to other companies. The same conditions and provisions with respect to forfeiture of rights for nonpayment are usually provided for in these contracts as in ordinary policies of insurance.² The provisions of the certificate with respect to the payment of the sum therein stipulated for must be substantially complied with. Such a contract is not one of insurance for a single year with the privilege of renewal from year to year by paying the periodical dues and assessments, but it is an entire contract of assurance for life, subject to discontinuance and forfeiture for nonpayment.³

In a mutual insurance company membership dates from the consummation of a contract and not before.⁴ During negotia-

Dolan v. Court of Good Samaritan, 128 Mass. 437; Van Bibber v. Van Bibber, 82 Ky. 350; Splawn v. Chew, 60 Tex. 535; Eastman v. Provident Mut. Relief Assoc. (N. H. 1883), 20 Cent. L. J. 266.

1. Bishop on Con., § 380; 2 Pars. on Con., p. *494; 1 Redf. on Wills, p. *433 and vol. 2, p. *20.

The whole of the statute, law, contract or designatory writing must be looked at and considered. The courts are uniform in holding that the rules and regulations of benefit societies are to be construed liberally when resorted to for the purpose of effecting benevolent objects. Supreme Council American Legion of Honor v. Perry, 140 Mass. 580, 589; Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor v. Martin (Pa.), 12 Ins. L. J. 628; 13 W. N. C. (Pa.) 160; Maneely v. Knights of Birmingham, 115 Pa. St. 306; Erdmann v. Mutual Ins. Co., 44 Wis. 376; Ballou v. Gile, 50 Wis. 614; Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias v. Schmidt, 98 Ind. 381; Gundlach v. Germania Mechanics' Assoc., 4 Hun (N. Y.) 339; Expressman's Aid Assoc. v. Lewis, 9 Mo. App. 412; Whitehurst v. Whitehurst, 83 Va. 153; Masonic Mut. Relief Assoc. v. McAuley, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 70; Duvall v. Goodson, 79 Ky. 224; Van Bibber v. Van Bibber, 82 Ky. 347; Massey v. Mutual Relief Assoc., 102 N. Y. 523; Dietrich v. Madison Relief Assoc., 45 Wis. 79.

2. The payment of the premium in one case and of assessments in the other, operates merely to continue the old contract. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Robertson, 59 Ill. 123; s. c., 14 Am. Rep. 8. But the nonpayment of assessments will not forfeit the rights of the member under the certificate unless so provided. American Ins. Co. v. Klink, 65 Mo. 78; Woodfin v. Asheville Mut. Ins. Co., 6 Jones L. (N. Car.) 558.

3. Worthington v. Charter Oak Life Ins. Co., 41 Conn. 399; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Statham, 93 U. S. 24.

Acts 18th Gen. Assem. Iowa, ch. 211, § 2, providing that an omission to attach to insurance policies the applications and representations upon which they are issued shall not invalidate the policy, but merely preclude the company from pleading or proving the falsity of such representations, is applicable to the policies of mutual benefit associations. McConnell v. Iowa Mut. Aid Assoc. (Iowa), 43 N. W. 188.

A condition in a policy of a mutual insurance company, that "when a note is taken for the cash premium, if it is not paid within sixty days after due, all obligations of the company to the insured, until such note is paid, are suspended," held valid. Joliffe v. The Madison Mut. Ins. Co., 39 Wis. 111; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 35.

4. Eilenberger v. Protective Mut. F. Ins. Co., 89 Pa. St. 464.

A person who had presented to and was accepted by a mutual life insurance company his application for membership, and premium note properly signed, tions for insurance, a mutual company occupies no other or better position than one organized on the stock plan, and cannot profit by the fraud of its agent; for the membership arises from but does not precede the contract.¹ As to all preliminary negotiations, the agent acts only on behalf of the company.

Where the insured surrenders his policy, and it is agreed by the company that it shall be cancelled, the insured, from that time, ceases to be a member, and, although liable to assessments, which accrued while he was a member, is not liable for debts contracted after the surrender of his policy.²

It is often necessary to keep in view the fact that, though the contract of membership embodies the contract of insurance, the latter is in effect a distinct and independent matter.

When mutual contracts are independent, the neglect of one party to perform will not absolve the other party from performance. A contract, made by a mutual insurance company with one of its members, is equally binding as if made with a stranger.³

In the absence of statutory restrictions, minors are not ineligible to membership in mutual benefit societies. The objection is a member, notwithstanding the directors have not formally and officially accepted such application. Van Slyke v. Trempealeau etc. Ins. Co., 48 Wis. 683; Susquehanna Ins. Co. v. Perrine, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 348; Eilenberger v. Protective Mut. F. Ins. Co., 89 Pa. St. 464; Cumberland Valley Mut. Protective Co. v. Schell, 29 Pa. St. 31; Noyes v. Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co., 1 Mo. App. 584.

A person who has neither taken a policy in a mutual fire insurance company, nor signed an application, nor paid a premium, is not a member, and in case of the insolvency of the company is not liable to assessment. Com. v. Massachusetts Mut. F. Ins. Co., 112 Mass. 116.

Where the execution and delivery of a deposit note for premiums was made a condition precedent to membership, and it was further provided in the charter that no one could be insured by the company except members, it was held that to constitute one a member for purposes of insurance he must place himself in such a position that only the fault of the company prevents his becoming a member. Belleville Mut. Ins. Co. v. Van Winkle, 12 N. J. Eq. 333.

1. As to fraud inducing the execution of the policy or certificate of membership, see Salmon v. Richardson, 30 Conn. 360; s. c., 79 Am. Dec. 255; Jones v. Dana, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 395; Deven-dorf v. Beardsley, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 656;

Brown v. Donnell, 49 Me. 421; s. c., 77 Am. Dec. 266; Fogg v. Griffin, 2 Allen (Mass.) 1; Sterling v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 32 Pa. St. 75; s. c., 72 Am. Dec. 773.

2. Akers v. Hite, 94 Pa. St. 394; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 792.

Notwithstanding a clause in the charter of a mutual insurance company declaring that all persons who shall insure with the company, and their heirs, etc., "so long as they shall be insured in said company, shall be and continue members thereof, and no longer," persons are still members of the company, and liable to contribute for the losses sustained, although they have alienated the property without the written consent of the company. Hyatt v. Wait, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 29.

3. New England Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Butler, 34 Me. 451. In Hays v. Lycoming F. Ins. Co., 98 Pa. St. 184, in reversing the judgment of the inferior tribunal, the court said: "The mistake made in the court below was in treating the case as though the plaintiff was a member of the company, whereas it had nothing more to do with the company than has one who is insured in a joint stock association to do with the affairs of such association. He is therein interested to the amount of his insurance and no further. If he meets with a loss he requires payment, but he can require nothing more, and it is none of his concern how the money that an infant can avoid his contract is not important, as adult members may do the like without incurring liability.¹

2. Whole Term Life Certificates.—In mutual, as in other companies, the contracts of insurance are made to cover either the whole period of life or a shorter term. In life, or, as they are called, whole term policies, the agreement may be to pay a sum certain or a given sum for each solvent member holding unforfeited contracts at the date of death of the insured. Sometimes dividends are provided for to be applied in reduction of assessments, but this provision is seldom made in the contracts of strictly mutual benefit societies, where there are no stockholders. The practice of allowing dividends as a rebate is confined to certain companies, which combine the features of mutual benefit with capital stock.

3. Endowment.—Many benefit associations, especially those organized for the sole or main purpose of paying benefits and death losses, issue endowment as well as whole term certificates, thus further imitating the methods of regular or "old style" insurance. In endowment certificates the stipulated sum is payable to the insured if he should survive a certain period, or attain a specified age, and if he die before the expiration of the specified period, the payment to be made to his representatives or to a person designated.² There are two kinds of endowment certificates. First, where the sum specified becomes payable only if death should occur during the time specified in the policy. The insurance may be upon one or more lives, payable at the termination of one or of both; or, if one should terminate before the other, to the survivor. Second, where the sum is payable at the death of the insured, if that should occur before the death of another person named in the certificate, but not otherwise. Should such other person die before the insured, the transaction fails. Endowment certificates are contracts of life insurance as much as if they covered the whole terms.³ is raised by which he is paid. If payment is refused he must pursue his ordinary legal remedies, and to him attaches none of either the rights or disabilities of membership."

1. Chicago Mut. L. etc. Assoc. v. Hunt, 127 Ill. 257.

In the same case it was held not to be a valid objection to minors as members that they could not act as trustees, because of their immaturity of judgment. The same objection would hold against many adult members, yet their lack of intelligence or business experience would be no reason for excluding them from membership. Id.

2. According to article 11, section 1, of the constitution of the endowment rank of the Knights of Pythias, a benefit certificate of life insurance is not forfeited for the nonpayment of the local lodge dues until the member is more than six months "in arrears" for the dues. Wiggin v. Knights of Pythias, 31 Fed. Rep. 122.

3. Briggs v. McCullough, 36 Cal. 550; Carter v. John Hancock Mut. Fishing Ins. Co., 127 Mass. 153; Endowment & Ben. Assoc. v. State, 35 Kan. 262; Goodman v. Jedidjah Lodge, 67 Md. 117.

Where a lodge had issued endowment certificates to each member, which entitled his wife and children, or other beneficiary whom he might name, to $1,000 upon his death, it was held that such certificates are in all essentials insurance policies, and the courts will adjudicate the rights of the members, in reference

4. Fire Policies.—The charter, the policy issued by the company, and the conditions annexed thereto govern the rights and duties of the parties in a mutual fire insurance company, and must be read together. The main distinguishing feature of a fire policy is in the matter of assignability and the effect upon the contract of insurance of an alienation of the property covered. In this respect the result of all the authorities may be thus stated: 1. That a sale of the property covered cannot take place without the consent of the company.¹ 2. That the purchaser must be one whose purchase has been made with the consent of the company, or has been ratified and approved by it. 3. That the purchaser must be a different person from the parties insured, or either of them. In other words, the same must be to a third person, and not to one of the assured. The entire interest must be transferred to some one who was not interested in it previously. 4. That the assured cannot terminate his membership in the company, nor be released from the obligations of the premium note, without paying up all arrears of assessments for losses previously incurred.²

Interest in the property insured is an essential link in the relation of insurance, and the fact that a premium note has been executed as a means of securing the payment of losses during his membership, does not alter the case so as to make the vendor liable to assessments with which to pay the loss by fire of the property sold.³

5. Extent and Nature of Liability.—The liability assumed by the parties to a certificate of membership and insurance in a benefit assessment association may be of such extent and nature as they choose to make it, provided it be within the chartered powers of to such certificates, upon the same principles as apply to insurance companies. Goodman v. Jedidjah Lodge, 67 Md. 117.

1. Hyatt v. Wait, 37 Barb. (N.Y.) 29.

The contract of insurance is a personal contract with the assured, and the policy does not pass so as to continue the liability of the company to an assignee or purchaser of the property insured, unless by the consent of the underwriters, or the properly authorized officer or board of the association. Simeral v. Dubuque Mut. F. Ins. Co., 18 Iowa 319.

If the by-laws, charter or rules and regulations of the company printed on the policy require a specified method of making assignments, those not made in substantial compliance therewith are not binding on the company. Cumings v. Sawyer, 117 Mass. 30.

An assignee of a policy in a mutual fire insurance company, who is entitled to the benefit of the insurance, is liable to assessment in case of the company's insolvency. Com. v. Massachusetts Mut. F. Ins. Co., 112 Mass. 116.

2. Hyatt v. Wait, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 29. The maker of a premium note given to a mutual insurance company for the nominal premium upon an open policy executed to cover such risks as may be afterwards endorsed thereon, is liable to the company on such note only to the amount of the actual premiums upon risks assumed by the company and endorsed thereon. Maine Mut. M. Ins. Co. v. Stockwell, 67 Me. 382; Elwell v. Crocker, 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 22; Lawrence v. McCready, 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 329; Brower v. Hill, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 629.

3. Wilson v. Trumbull Mut. F. Ins. Co., 19 Pa. St., 372; Indiana Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Conner, 5 Ind. 170; Tuckerman v. Bigler, 46 Barb. (N. Y.) 375; Smith v. Saratoga Co. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 3 Hill (N. Y.) 500.

the association, or law under which the articles are filed, and not prohibited by law. The amount to be paid upon the happening of the event insured against may be definitely fixed in the contract, or it may be left exclusively to the provisions of the by-laws, as already adopted or to be thereafter enacted, or it may be specified in the certificate, with a reference to existing by-laws. Again, instead of a specified sum, the association may, and often does assume an indefinite liability as to the payment of the proceeds of an assessment of a certain amount upon each member.¹ On the other hand, the obligations of the certificate holder may be equally indefinite. Sometimes it is stipulated that the assessments shall not exceed a certain sum, which may either be evidenced by a written obligation, called a premium note, or mentioned in the certificate.²

In other cases the agreement by the member in his application may be simply to pay such assessments as the association or the directors see fit to make from time to time. Inasmuch as this power is conferred by the by-laws, which are subject to change at the will of the majority of the board of directors, there cannot in such case be said to be any contract of insurance outside the contract of membership, since the liability of the member upon the latter is unlimited during its continuance.³ It is im-

1. In the absence of any by-laws to the contrary, the liability of a mutual company is for the total loss, not to exceed the amount of the policy, and is not limited to the amount derived from an assessment. Id. Harl v. Pottawatomie Co. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 74 Iowa 39; La Manna v. National Security L. & Acc. Co., 10 N. Y. Supp. 221.

An association was bound by its constitution and by-laws to pay an amount equal to $1.50 for each certificate in force at the time payment became due, not to exceed $4,000. It was also required to pay the full amount of its certificates at maturity, provided there were sufficient moneys in the fund from which they should become payable; and provided, further, that such money should be applied proportionately to all certificates becoming payable the same quarter. The $4,000 was termed an endowment, and the period in which it became due, an endowment period. Assessments were both regular and special, and it was provided that they should be made by the directors. The association was also required to maintain two funds; one an endowment fund, out of which the endowments were payable; the other, an assessment fund, out of which beneficiaries were paid in case members died within the endowment period. It was held that in the event of the death of a member, the association was liable to pay a sum equal to $1.50 for each certificate in force and no more, where there were no moneys in the assessment fund applicable to such claims. Kerr v. Minnesota Mut. Ben. Assoc., 39 Minn. 174.

2. See PREMIUM NOTES, III, 6, infra.

3. Mulroy v. Knights of Honor, 28 Mo. App. 463; Maryland Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Clendinen, 44 Md. 429; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 52; Miner v. Michigan Mut. Ben. Assoc., 63 Mich. 338; Burbank v. Rockingham Ins. Co., 24 N. H. 550; 57 Am. Dec. 300; Susquehanna etc. Ins. Co. v. Perrine, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 348; Grand Lodge v. Elsner, 26 Mo. App. 109; McMurry v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 20 Fed. Rep. 107; Mitchell v. Lycoming Mut. Ins. Co., 51 Pa. St. 402; Simeral v. Dubuque Mut. F. Ins. Co., 18 Iowa 319; National Ben. Assoc. v. Bowman, 110 Ind. 355; Masonic Mut. Relief Assoc. v. McAuley, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 70.

In Fugure v. Mutual Soc. of St. Joseph, 46 Vt. 362, a husband had become a member in 1862. At that time the by-laws of defendant society provided that each member paying the regular assessment, should "be entitled to twenty-five cents per day during material whether the by-laws, or the right to change them, be mentioned in the certificate or not.

Where the terms of the certificate are in conflict with the provisions of the by-laws, with respect to the member's liability, the former will prevail if not opposed to the organic law under which the association is created.¹

It has been held that, without an assessment, members are liable for sick and funeral benefits due by a voluntary association.²

But the better and prevailing view is that under the constitution and by-laws, the credit is given, not to the members, but to a their sickness;" and "to the widow of each member deceased, so long as she shall remain a widow, and shall enjoy a good reputation, twenty-five cents per day." It was further provided that, "so long as there shall be twenty dollars in the treasury the society cannot reduce its aid to the sick." There was also a special provision for the manner of altering or changing the by-laws; and there is also a provision in the charter that the society may alter or change its by-laws. In August, 1869, the defendant corporation adopted a set of by-laws which provided that such widows shall receive twenty-five cents per day "until she had received $200." The plaintiff has received $200, in accordance with the latter by-law of the society. The court said: "It is insisted that a right had become vested in the plaintiff (her husband died Jan. 5th, 1869) to have and receive of the defendant twenty-five cents per day during her widowhood, and that it was not competent for the defendant to diminish it. The means of making these contributions to the sick and the widows of deceased members were derived solely from voluntary assessments upon the members of the society and must be graduated by such assessments. And experience might prove that, without assessments greater than the members could bear, there must be a limitation to the stipend to widows. Prevailing sickness among the members may have so exhausted the means of the society that the provision for widows must necessarily be modified, or it could not discharge the duties for which it was formed. It must be incident to the very nature and purpose of such an association, that it should have power to modify and change its by-laws so as to graduate its charities as experience and necessity may require. It cannot, indeed, pervert its contributions to subserve other ends and purposes; but the society may regulate the manner in which they shall carry out the purposes for which they associated." See also Supreme Commandery Knights of the Golden Rule v. Ainsworth, 71 Ala. 449; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 332; Bigelow v. Berkshire L. Ins. Co., 93 U. S. 284; Korn v. Mutual Assoc. Soc., 6 Cranch 396. Compare Poultney v. Bachman, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 466; Gundlach v. Germania Merchants' Assoc., 4 Hun (N. Y.) 341; Pellazzino v. German etc. Soc., 16 Cin. L. Bul. 27.

1. Thus it was held that a provision in a certificate of membership, in a mutual life association, evidently contemplating a mortuary assessment to meet each death loss, would prevail over a clause of the by-laws of the association tending to limit the number and amount of assessments to be levied, inconsistent therewith, though the application stipulates that the by-laws should be part of the contract. Fitzgerald v. Equitable Reserve Fund Life Assoc., 3 N. Y. St. Rep. 214; Davidson v. Old People's etc. Soc., 39 Minn. 303; 25 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 601.

Where the act incorporating a mutual insurance company, provided that all persons who should insure with the corporation "should thereby become members thereof during the period they should remain so insured and no longer," it was held that, under this provision, membership continued during the entire term of the policy, though the property insured was destroyed before that term expired, and that, during the life of the policy, the insured was liable to assessment on his premium note, notwithstanding the destruction. Bangs v. Skidmore, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 29; aff'd 21 N. Y. 134. See contra.

2. Pritchett v. Shaefer, 2 W. N. C. (Pa.) 317.

and sometimes are, employed by strictly mutual life and fire companies—principally by the latter.¹

The premium note and policy, together, constitute the contract between the insurance company and the insured, and from them both the conditions of the agreement are to be ascertained.²

It is often provided in such cases, and policies of insurance executed in connection therewith, that the time of payment of instalments, or even of interest, shall be of the very essence of the contract, and that the policy shall become void upon failure to make payment at the specified time. Such provisions are usually held valid even in courts of equity.³

Upon a breach of such conditions the company may recover the full amount of the note, and not merely such part as would bear the same proportion to the full amount as that portion of the period of the risk, prior to the notice of default; bears to the entire period covered by the policy.⁴

Such failure does not absolutely avoid the policy, but suspends it, so that the company is not liable for a loss occurring during the were members of the class subject thereto at the time the resolution was adopted. Miller v. Georgia Masonic Mut. L. Ins. Co., 67 Ga. 221.

1. Whether the company has power to divide such notes into classes and separately assess them seems to be unsettled upon authority. Allen v. Winne, 15 Wis. 113.

2. Shultz v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 43 Iowa, 239. The parties usually have the same power to rescind it by mutual agreement as they had to make it. Akers v. Hitte, 94 Pa. St. 394; s. c., 39 Am. Dec. 792. Compare New England Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Butler, 34 Me. 451. And see American Ins. Co. v. Schmidt, 19 Iowa, 502, where it was held that with respect to a premium note, a member stands on a different footing to that assumed in his contract of membership; accordingly, he is not chargeable with notice of the acts and proceedings of the directors of the company in a suit on a premium note, so as to deprive him of the benefit of any defence.

The issuing of a policy of insurance by an insolvent insurance company is a good consideration for a promissory note given for the premium, if the insolvency of the company was not known by its officers or agents at the time. Lester v. Webb, 5 Allen (Mass.) 562.

A mutual fire insurance company cannot maintain an action for the premium and deposit note against a person on whose application they have made out a policy, at a rate of premium agreed upon, but who refuses, on request, to take the policy or sign the deposit note. Real Estate Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Roessle, 1 Gray (Mass.) 336.

3. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. v. Dietz, 52 Md. 16; Patch v. Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co., 44 Vt. 487; Anderson v. St. Louis Mut. L. Ins. Co., 1 Flip. (U. S.) 559; Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. v. Harlan, 56 Miss. 512.

It is competent for a mutual fire insurance company, organized under the laws of this State, to provide in its articles of association, or by its by-laws, that all premium notes shall be paid in instalments as ordered by the directors, after notice, and that if not so paid, the entire notes shall become due and collectible. German Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Franck, 22 Ind. 364.

Upon payment of the full amount the insured becomes the owner of a paid-up policy for the remainder of the original term. American Ins. Co. v. Klink, 65 Mo. 78.

4. American Ins. Co. v. Klink, 65 Mo. 78.

A provision in the charter of a mutual fire insurance company, that, in case of default, to pay an assessment upon a deposit note, "the directors may sue for and recover the full amount of said deposit note," does not prevent the bringing of such an action in the name of the treasurer of the company, when the note is made payable "to said company continuance of such default, but, upon the payment of the note (whether voluntary or enforced), the policy revives and reattaches.¹

An assessment, regularly made by the proper authority, is generally a prerequisite to a right of action by the company on a premium note.²

The maker is liable to pay an assessment made upon his note to meet a deficiency in funds, caused by the inability of other members to pay the proportion of losses assessed upon their notes,³ which may be made on the whole amount of the note, although the promissor has an insurable interest in a part only of the property covered by the policy.⁴

But the mere assessment of a premium note, after knowledge by the company of a breach of a condition, whereby the policy has become void, does not revive it, but is consistent with the right or their treasurer for the time being." Jones v. Sisson, 6 Gray (Mass.) 288.

1. American Ins. Co. v. Klink, 65 Mo. 78.

A policy of insurance stipulated that if the premium note was not paid within sixty days after maturity, and suit for its collection should be commenced, this would operate as an absolute cancellation of the policy, which would not be waived by the collection of the premium. It was held, that it was competent for the parties to stipulate for a termination of the company's liability upon a default in payment of the premium, and that, accordingly, it was not liable for a loss suffered by a policy holder after collection of the premium note by action at law. Shultz v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 42 Iowa 239.

A member of a mutual fire insurance company is not discharged from his liability on his deposit note for losses already accrued, by the cancellation of his policy by a general corresponding agent of the company, accompanied by a promise to surrender the note, without proving the authority of such agent to surrender the note. Marblehead Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Underwood, 3 Gray (Mass.) 210.

2. A premium note payable "in such portions and at such times as the directors of said company require," is no evidence of liability when not accompanied by proof that the directors had made any assessment. Hagan v. Merchants' etc. Ins. Co. (Iowa), 46 N. W. Rep. 1114.

Where the charter provides that all assessments shall be determined by the directors, and lays down the rules by which the amount to be raised, and the manner it is to be apportioned are fixed, all that is necessary is, that the directors determine by vote that an assessment be made; and such vote is a sufficient requirement of a payment to be made on the premium note. Atlantic Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Sanders, 36 N. H. 252.

But where a note was given to an insurance company, payable in such portions, and at such time or times as the directors may require, and a resolution of the directors assigned all the assets of the company, this note included, to the plaintiff in trust, that he should collect them to pay the debts of the company, it was held that this was a sufficient requirement. Hill v. Reed, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 280.

3. Bangs v. Gray, 12 N. Y. 477, reversing Matter of Bangs, 15 Barb. 264; Osgood v. Strauss, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 383.

A maker of a premium note may be assessed for losses suffered by members who paid their premiums in cash in advance. Jackson v. Roberts, 31 N. Y. 304.

The insured is entitled, however, to set-off for loss under the policy, where it is stipulated that the "loss shall be paid, the amount of the premium note being first deducted." Columbian Ins. Co. v. Bean, 113 Mass. 541.

Nor can the liability of the members upon their deposit notes be increased by the fact that the company has become insolvent, and its effects are transferred to a receiver. Shaughnessy v. Rensselaer Ins. Co., 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 605.

4. New England Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Belknap, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 140.

of the company to treat it as void, since the maker of such note is liable, at all events, for his proportion of losses occurring during his membership to the full amount of the note.¹

In case of alienation of the property covered by the policy, the insured will remain liable upon his deposit note, as well for losses occurring after as before the alienation, until all assessments are paid.²

Premium notes are assignable in like manner and effect as other absolute written promises.³

7. Effect Upon Contract of Constitutions and By-laws.—All the contracts of an incorporated benefit society are made with reference

Upon a recovery on a premium note for the nonpayment of assessments, the plaintiff is entitled to interest from the time when the assessments were payable. Hyatt v. Wait, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 29.

1. Huntley v. Beecher, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 580; Neely v. Onondaga Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 7 Hill (N. Y.) 49; Hyatt v. Wait, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 29; Smith v. Saratoga Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 3 Hill (N. Y.) 508; Atlantic Ins. Co. v. Goodall, 35 N. H. 328; Allen v. Vermont Mut. F. Ins. Co., 12 Vt. 366; Finley v. Lycoming Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 30 Pa. St. 311; s. c., 72 Am. Dec. 705; Lyons v. Globe etc. Ins. Co. 28 U. C. C. P. 62. But see Millurd v. Supreme Council American Legion of Honor, 81 Cal. 340.

2. Hyatt v. Wait, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 29.

Where Policy Is Assigned.—A by-law of a town mutual insurance company, providing that "policies of insurance may be assigned with the consent of the president and secretary, the parties paying fifty cents recording fees, at the same time giving his undertaking to the company, and the company will not hold itself responsible for loss on property so transferred until such assignment so made and undertaking given," does not apply to a case where property covered by its policy is transferred, and the policyholder retains an insurable interest therein. Jerdee v. Cottage Grove F. Ins. Co. (Wis.), 44 N. W. Rep. 636.

But it is otherwise and the company is bound if it has received notice of the transfer, and made entry of the same on its books. Cummings v. Hildreth, 117 Mass. 309.

3. Howland v. Myer, 3 N. Y. 290; Furniss v. Gilchrist, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 53; Brouwer v. Appleby, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 158; Brouwer v. Hill 1 Sandf. (N.

Y.) 629; Holbrook v. Basset, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 147; Brookman v. Metcalf, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 429; Marine Bank v. Clements, 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 166; Hope Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 2 Rob. (N. Y.) 278; Brookman v. Metcalf, 32 N. Y. 591; Sands v. Campbell, 31 N. Y. 345; Crooke v. Mall, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 205; Hone v. Folger, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 177; Hone v. Bullin, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 181; Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Rey, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 184; Aspinwall v. Meyer, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 180; Lawrence v. McCready, 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 329; Chesbrough v. Wright, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 28.

A mutual insurance company took up a subscription, by which the subscribers agreed to give their notes for premiums in advance of insurance to be effected by them, the subscription not to be binding until the sum of $300,000 was subscribed. That sum was in form subscribed, the defendants being subscribers, and the defendants voluntarily gave their notes for the amount of their subscription. All parties acted in good faith, and without any fraud, misrepresentation or concealment. Held, that such notes were, in the hands of the company, valid binding notes, which the company had a right to negotiate for the purpose of paying claims or otherwise, in the course of its business, notwithstanding it ultimately appeared that some of the subscriptions were not valid binding subscriptions, and notwithstanding, if the notes had not been given, the defendants might have legally refused to give them on the ground that the condition of the subscription had not been in fact satisfied. Holbrook v. Basset, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 147.

Statute of Limitations.—Where an insurance note given prior to 1853 was regularly assessed to its full amount, the time of payment fixed, to all the laws of the organization. These are deemed part of each contract of membership, whether mentioned or not, and are as binding upon all the members as provisions contained in the charter.¹

Each member is conclusively presumed to know them, and will not be heard to plead ignorance of their provisions in any case.²

But this has no reference to mere regulations adopted by the officers of the company in regard to the transaction of business, directions to agents and the like, but rather to such rules as enter into the charter or by-laws of the company, whereby the liability and rights of its members are fixed.³

All the essentials of valid by-laws in corporations generally must characterize those of incorporated benefit societies.⁴

and notice of the assessment duly published, as required by the charter and the by-laws of the company, an action upon it is barred by the statute of limitations in six years from its maturity. Sands v. Lilienthal, 46 N. Y. 541.

1. Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias v. Knight, 117 Ind. 489; Slater Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Barstow, 8 R. I. 343; Commonwealth v. Massachusetts Mut. F. Ins. Co., 112 Mass. 116; Com. v. Dorchester Mut. Fire Ins. Co. 112 Mass. 142; Susquehanna Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Gackenbach, 115 Pa. St. 492; Pennsylvania Training School v. Independent Mut. F. Ins. Co. (Pa.), 18 Atl. Rep. 392; Shay v. National Ben. Soc., 7 N. Y. S. Nat. Rep. 287; Sands v. Shoemaker, 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 149; Planters' Ins. Co. v. Comfort, 50 Miss. 62; Bersch v. Sinnissippi Ins. Co., 28 Ind. 64. See Koehler v. Beeber, 122 Pa. St. 291; Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Stouffer, 125 Pa. St. 416; Bogards v. Farmers' Mut. Ins. Co., 79 Mich. 440; Mor. Priv. Corp., § 491.

The construction placed upon the by-laws of a friendly order by its officers and agents will not be heard in evidence to affect its construction by the court. Wiggin v. Knights of Pythias, 31 Fed. Rep. 122.

2. Pfister v. Gerwig, 122 Ind. 567; Bauer v. Samson Lodge, 102 Ind. 262; Mitchell v. Lycoming Mut. F. Ins. Co., 51 Pa. St. 402; Coleman v. Knights of Honor, 18 Mo. App. 189; Coles v. Iowa State Mut. Ins. Co., 18 Iowa 425; Simeral v. Dubuque Mut. F. Ins. Co., 18 Iowa 319; Fugure v. Mutual Soc. St. Joseph, 46 Vt. 368; People v. St. George Soc. 28 Mich. 261; Sperry's Appeal, 116 Pa. St. 391; Osceola Tribe v. Schmidt, 57 Md. 98; Coles v. Iowa State Mut. Ins. Co., 18 Iowa 425; Bellville Mut. Ins. Co. v. Van Winkle, 12 N. J. Eq. 335; Diehl v. Adams Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 58 Pa. St. 443; s. c., 98 Am. Dec. 302; Hanf v. Northwestern Masonic Aid Assoc. (Wis.), 45 N. W. Rep. 315; Turnbull v. Woolfe, 9 Jur., N. S. 57; 11 W. R. 55; 7 L. T., N. S. 483; Fuller v. Madison Mut. Ins. Co., 36 Wis. 599; Treadway v. Hamilton Mut. Ins. Co., 29 Conn. 68; Oceanic etc. Assoc. v. Leslie, 22 Q. B. D. 722; United Kingdom etc. v. Nevill, 19 Q. B. D. 110; Great Britain etc. Assoc. v. Wyllie, C. A. 710.

The rule that members are bound to take notice of by-laws applies, although it be required by statute that all conditions of the policy shall be printed upon its face. Com. v. Massachusetts Mut. F. Ins. Co., 112 Mass., 116.

This presumption held applicable to an assignee of a policy who held the policy over eighteen months, during which time he had opportunity to know his rights and liabilities and the conditions upon which his rights could be made secure. Miller v. Hillsborough Mut. etc. Assoc., 42 N. J. Eq. 459. It was also held in this case that a mutual insurance company will not be deprived of the benefit of a defence to an action on a policy afforded by a condition contained in a by-law, the by-laws being made part of the policy by the terms of the latter, because of the fraud of its officers in leading plaintiff to suppose that there was no such condition.

3. Walsh v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 30 Iowa 133; s. c., 6 Am. Rep. 664.

4. A provision of the constitution of a railroad relief association that, before the association will pay the beneficiary of the member killed, the amount of benefits due, the person legally entitled to damages for the death shall release

But while by-laws, duly enacted by a majority, are binding upon the members, they must conform to certain general requirements in respect to personal and property rights of members. There are many terms allowable and enforceable when found in a contract, which, if inserted in a by-law, would render it so far invalid. "A man may part with a common right voluntarily, of which it would be impolitic and unjust to deprive him by a by-law, passed without his assent, or, perhaps, knowledge, by those who would not consult his individual interests."¹

The same objections will lie to by-laws of a voluntary association, which affect property or pecuniary interests, as to those of a corporation. The same general rules of law and equity, so far as regards the control of them, and the adjudication of their reserved and inherent powers to regulate the conduct and to expel their members, apply to them as to corporations and joint stock companies.²

But a distinction exists, with respect to by-laws, on the subject the railroad company from all claims for damages, was held not so unreasonable as to be void. Fuller v. Baltimore etc. Relief Assoc. (Md.), 10 Atl. Rep. 237. And the same conclusion was reached in the case of a constitution providing that "all claims against the association shall be referred to the board of directors, whose decision shall be final," and that "assessments shall not be made except on its authority." Rood v. Railway Passenger & Freight Conductors' Mut. Ben. Assoc., 31 F. 62.

See BY-LAWS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, 706.

1. Ang. & Ames on Corp., § 342; Goddard v. Merchants' Exchange, 78 Mo. 609; 9 Mo. App. 290; Austin v. Searing, 16 N. Y. 112; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 665.

It has been held that, as between the members of a mutual insurance company and the company itself, the terms of a premium note may be altered by a by-law made after the execution of the note. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Jarvis, 22 Conn. 133.

Plaintiff agreed, in his application for fire insurance in a mutual insurance company, to be governed by all the conditions in the charter and by-laws, as they then existed, and any changes that might thereafter be made. And a change was afterwards made, the effect of which was to limit the risk on plaintiff's property. Plaintiff received a copy of the new by-law, and made no objection, and continued his membership. It was held that he was bound by the new by-law. Borgards v. Farmers' Mut. Ins. Co., 79 Mich. 440.

Where a certificate issued under said by-laws uses the words "act or occupation classed as more hazardous" instead of the language of the by-law, but the classification made by the association is based on occupations and not on acts, the rights of the member are the same under the certificate as under the by-laws. Union Mut. Acc. Assoc. v. Frohard (Ill.), 25 N. E. Rep. 642.

On the same principle where the terms of a policy are in conflict with a by-law of the society, it having power under its charter to issue such a policy, the society must be deemed to have waived the provisions of the by-law in favor of the assured. Davidson v. Old People's Mut. Ben. Soc., 39 Minn. 303.

Though a by-law of an insurance company may provide that any of its policies upon property previously insured, shall be void, unless such previous insurance be endorsed on the policy at the time of its being issued, still such by-law is inoperative, if, in the policy itself, such previous insurance be recognized and approved. Philbrook v. New England Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 37 Me. 137; New Hampshire F. Ins. Co. v. Rand, 24 N. H. 428; Shaughnessy v. Rensselaer Ins. Co., 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 605; Great Falls Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Harvey, 45 N. H. 292; American Ins. Co. v. Woodruff, 34 Mich. 6; Planters' Ins. Co. v. Comfort, 50 Miss. 662.

2. Lecch v. Harris, 2 Brewst. 571; of expulsion of members. By-laws of corporations, having as their object the expulsion of members, must be reasonable, whether property rights are involved or not, while those of voluntary associations not affecting property are binding, without regard to the question of reasonableness, if not otherwise objectionable. Courts will only enquire whether, in their adoption, the methods and formalities prescribed and agreed upon by the members themselves have been observed.¹

The payment of sick benefits is a common feature of benefit societies, and they are oftener provided for in the by-laws than in the certificates of membership. Especially does the last remark apply to the great fraternal bodies, including grand and subordinate lodges. In all cases which have arisen involving these benefits, it has been held that the laws of the society are to be considered in determining the right, and they are to govern, unless contrary to municipal law.²

But a right to sick benefits may become vested, so that it may not be defeated by a change in the by-law, under the provisions of which it was acquired. After the sickness of a member has begun, the contingency provided for in the contract entitling him

Beaumont v. Meredith, 3 Ves. & B. 180; Otto v. Journeymen Tailor's etc. Union, 75 Cal. 308; Babb v. Reed, 5 Rawle 158; 28 Am. Dec. 650; Loubat v. Leroy, 15 Abb. N. C. 1; Gorman v. Russell, 14 Cal. 531; Lindley on Par. 56.

1. Kehlenbeck v. Logeman, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 447; McDonald v. Ross-Lewin, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 87; Manning v. San Antonio Club, 63 Tex. 166; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 639; Elsas v. Alford, 1 City Ct. Rep. 123; Fritz v. Muck, 66 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 74; Innes v. Wylie, 1 Car. & K. 262; Hyde v. Woods, 2 Sawyer (U. S.) 655; White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 329. Compare Heath v. President of N. Y. Gold Exchange, 7 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 251; 38 How. Pr. 168; Savannah Cotton Exchange v. State, 54 Ga. 668; Gray v. Christian Soc., 137 Mass. 329; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 310; District Grand Lodge v. Jededah Lodge, 65 Md. 236; Mulroy v. Knights of Honor, 28 Mo. App. 463; Austin v. Searing, 16 N. Y. 112; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 665; Supreme Council of the Order of Chosen Friends v. Garrigus, 104 Ind. 133; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 298; Bauer v. Samson Lodge, 102 Ind. 262.

2. Bacon Ben. Soc. & Ins., § 92. See also St. Patrick's Ben. Soc. v. McVey, 92 Pa. St. 510; McCabe v. Father Matthew etc. Soc., 24 Hun (N. Y.) 149.

In the latter case it was held that a member of a beneficial society does not stand in the relation of a creditor to it, and can only claim such benefits as are prescribed by the by-laws existing at the time he applies for relief; that it is wrong to treat the by-law in existence when the plaintiff became a member as part of a contract unalterable except with his consent. In the first case the court said: "The plaintiff was bound by these changes. The charter gave no right of action. The constitution and by-laws were liable to change. The changes were made in the way pointed out by the constitution and laws. . . . No notice was required to be given to plaintiff. The by-laws provide for none, and they do provide for a change by resolution proposed one week before it could be passed. It was doubtless designed that this delay would operate to give notice to all persons interested. A notice to all the members would be a great burden."

A member is bound by a by-law which vests in a committee authority to determine whether a member, claiming to be sick, is entitled to the benefit provided for in the by-law, and the decision of such committee upon the application of a member for aid is final. Van Poucke v. Netherland St. Vincent De Paul Soc., 63 Mich. 378.

to benefits has happened, and he cannot be by the act of the insurer deprived of them.¹

The effect of the violation of a by-law upon the rights of the parties is often an important question, the result sometimes being to render the contract voidable by the company. In contracts concerning fire insurance, the violation of provisions of the by-laws, in relation to subsequent insurance, encumbrances and classification of risks, is generally involved.

Here, again, the rule that the members of mutual companies are presumed to know the by-laws, constitutes a marked distinction between their contracts and those of regular stock companies. It is held in many cases that the officers, being special agents with powers limited and defined by the by-laws, cannot suspend them when matters touching the substance or essence of the contract are involved.²

But if this view may be considered as at all settled upon the authorities, it is subject to many exceptions. The first important exception rises out of the distinction that is taken by the courts between mandatory and merely directory requirements.³

1. Poultney v. Bachman, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 466.

In this case the court said: "The contract is to be interpreted like any other contract of insurance, in which, as a rule, is incorporated a clause giving the insured or insurer the right to end the risk. It would certainly be a somewhat novel construction of the clause conferring such power of termination, to hold that, after a loss has occurred to the insured, against which the agreement was to protect, the payment of the sum stipulated for could be either reduced or repudiated by the insurer. Yet this, as it seems to me, is the precise position assumed by the defendant. Upon his becoming sick, as has been before stated, the plaintiff's right to four dollars per week during his illness became a vested one, and it would be most unreasonable and unconscientious so to construe the by-law giving the power of amendment, as to confer upon the members of the lodge the authority to deprive him of that to which he had thus become clearly entitled." See Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 159; Bauer v. Samson Lodge, 102 Ind. 262; Gundlach v. Germania Mechanics' Assoc., 4 Hun (N. Y.) 339; Pellazzino v. German Catholic Soc., 16 Cin. L. Bul. 27. But see Torrey v. Baker, 1 Allen 120; Fugure v. Society St. Joseph, 46 Vt. 362.

A contrary conclusion was reached where both the general laws of the State, and the by-laws of an incorporated society gave it the right to repeal alter, or amend its by-laws. It was held not a breach of contract for such society to amend a by-law which provides that, in case of sickness, a member shall be entitled to receive $10 per week, by limiting such allowance to a certain number of weeks thereafter, though a member was sick at the time of such amendment. Stohr v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc., 82 Cal. 557.

Notice of Changes.—Members of a mutual benefit association are chargeable with notice of amendments to its constitution and by-laws where they are provided for therein. May v. New York Safety Reserve Fund Soc., 14 Daly (N. Y.) 389.

2. Behler v. German Mut. F. Ins. Co., 68 Ind. 354; Leonard v. American Ins. Co., 97 Ind. 305; Hale v. Mechanics' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 169; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 410; Evans v. Tri-Mountain Mut. F. Ins. Co., 9 Allen (Mass.) 329; Brewer v. Chelsea Mut. F. Ins. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 209. Compare Westchester F. Ins. Co. v. Earle, 33 Mich. 150.

It was held in Day v. Mill Owners' Mut. F. Ins. Co. (Iowa), 38 N. W. Rep. 113, that one who, by insuring with a mutual fire company, has become a member, is not estopped to deny that amendments to the constitution not made known to him when he took the policy were part of the contract.

3. In Union Mut. F. Ins. Co. v.

The principles of agency must be considered in determining questions of this kind. Where directors are, as in many States, empowered to exercise all the corporate powers, their act may well be considered that of the corporation, which may waive conditions and rules established for its own benefit, as in the case of other parties to contracts.¹

If it be said that such acts are ultra vires, it may be replied that after the party has acted under the contract, it may be considered as partly executed, and to estop the company from claiming its lack or excess of corporate power.²

The rule that laws cannot be retroactive, applies to by-laws as to other legislation; therefore, their operation must be future and not relate to transactions under which vested rights have accrued. The only question which can arise upon changes in the by-laws, is to what extent the original contract, agreeing to future changes, is affected.³

Keyser, 32 N. H. 313; s. c., 64 Am. Dec. 375, the directors acted under a charter, which vested all powers relating to contracts in them; one provision of which was that they should divide the property insured into classes. After by-laws had been made establishing a rule for the division of risks, they knowingly insured property in one class which belonged in another, and in passing upon the question raised by this violation of the laws of the company, the court said: "In this case the action of the directors may have been irregular, contrary to the established usage, and in violation of their own rules, and of the by-laws; but it was still within the scope of their authority, expressly conferred on them by the charter, and therefore binding on the company."

1. Davenport v. Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co., 17 Iowa 276; New England F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Schettler, 38 Ill. 166; Insurance Co. v. Wilkinson, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 222; Emery v. Boston Marine Ins. Co., 138 Mass. 410.

In a case calling for a construction of Stat. Mass. 1882, ch. 78, providing that "the benefit to accrue by reason of the decease of members of the Boston Police Relief Association, or their wives, may be extended" to members retired under Stat. 1878, ch. 244, § 1, the former statute was held to be permissive merely. It was further held that the association may extend the benefit to a part only of the class named, by a by-law; and if this is done, the association will not be bound by the acts of its officers in extending the benefit to those not included by such by-law. Burbank v. Boston Police Relief Assoc., 144 Mass. 434.

It is said in some of the cases that the provisions of the by-laws of a corporation are made for the benefit of the company and may be waived. Splawn v. Chew, 60 Tex. 532; Manning v. Ancient Order United Workmen, 86 Ky. 136; Sanborn v. Fireman's Ins. Co., 16 Gray (Mass.) 448; s. c., 77 Am. Dec. 419; Cumberland Valley Mut. Protection Co. v. Schell, 29 Pa. St. 31; Prince of Wales etc. Co. v. Harding, 1 E. B. & E. 183; Sheldon v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 25 Conn. 221; s. c., 65 Am. Dec. 565.

2. See Fuller v. Boston Mut. F. Ins. Co., 4 Metc. (Mass.) 206; Lamont v. Grand Lodge Iowa Legion of Honor, 31 Fed. Rep. 177; Bloomington Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Blue, 120 Ill. 127; New England F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Schettler, 38 Ill. 166.

3. Stewart v. Lee Mut. F. Ins. Assoc., 64 Miss. 499.

A party had insured his property and given his note for the amount of the premium, with interest, and the company afterwards passed a by-law, at a meeting where he was not present, declaring that if the interest on any premium note should be three months in arrears, "the policy shall be suspended, and of no effect to make the company liable for loss until the interest be paid." His property insured was destroyed by fire, when the interest on his note had been more than three months in arrears. It was held that this by-law had no effect on the contract between the par-

The contract of membership, so far as it carries with it property rights, is not forfeitable otherwise than under statutory authority. Therefore, a by-law of a benefit society, passed without power conferred for the purpose in the charter or general law, after the issuance of a certificate, and providing for forfeitures of the interest which its members hold under their certificates to share benefits and death losses, would be of no force or validity.¹

But provisions for forfeiture, existing at the time of entering into such contracts, or whether pre-existing or not, if embodied in the certificates, have frequently been held valid and enforceable.²

A penalty is sometimes authorized by statute, and inflicted under the provision of the by-laws.

Such provisions, whether found in statutes, charters, or by-laws, are strictly construed.³

It may be provided that, upon failure to pay an instalment or assessment due upon a premium note, the entire amount of which is given shall become due and payable.⁴

IV. BENEFICIARIES—1. Designation.—An important difference between ordinary insurance companies and benefit societies consists in the fact that the beneficiaries of the latter are generally restricted and limited to those who are heirs; relatives, or dependents of the insured. Whether contained in the charter, articles, or by-laws, the restrictions must be observed, and in making contracts the society has no power to go beyond them. It is usually prescribed in the charter or articles who may become members and enjoy the benefits of membership as beneficiaries, after the death of members; and the rights of the parties cannot be altered ties, and that the company must pay the insured the amount of his loss. Insurance Co. v. Connor, 17 Pa. St. 136.

In one case it was held that a contract could not be varied by the directors by means of a by-law, so as to put an assured in a particular class which called for an assessment only on the policy-holders of that class, unless the assured knew of and assented to such by-law. Stewart v. Lee Mut. F. Ins. Assoc., 64 Miss. 499. See Bacon Ben. Soc. & Ins., § 185.

As to the power to enact by-laws with reference to changes of beneficiary, and the effect of such by-laws, see CHANGE OF BENEFICIARY, IV, 3, infra.

1. In Pulford v. Fire Department, 31 Mich. 458, 465, the court said: "There can be no power to impose forfeitures unless granted by clear legislative enactment. No such power is consistent with common law or ancient right, and it cannot be obtained from anything but the sovereignty. The only means for the enforcement of corporate charges and penalties is by action. Summary means and methods unknown to the common law must be authorized by express authority. And it would not be reasonable to enforce a pecuniary obligation or penalty by means disproportionate to its importance. The law of the land is made the test for analogies in cases where it affords analogies." See also Matter of Long Island R. Co., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 37; s. c., 32 Am. Dec. 429; Westcott v. Minnesota Min. Co., 23 Mich. 145.

2. See VII. FORFEITURE AND SUSPENSION OF CONTRACTS, infra.

3. Mor. Priv. Corp., 123.

4. Jones v. Sisson, 6 Gray (Mass.) 288; Bangs v. McIntosh, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 591; St. Louis Mut. F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Boeckler, 19 Mo. 135; Beadli v. Chenango Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 3 Hill (N. Y.) 161; Bangs v. Bailey, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 630, see PREMIUM NOTES, III, 6, supra.

by contract, by either or both of the parties, in violation of such restrictions.¹

The doctrine of ultra vires applies to such cases as to acts of corporations generally, and the same exception and application of the doctrine of estoppel is made where, by the death of the member, the contract has become executed.²

In the absence of any restrictions, the society may constitute any one the beneficiary of a member.³

1. Luhrs v. Supreme Lodge Knights and Ladies of Honor, 7 N. Y. Supp. 487; Supreme Council American Legion of Honor v. Perry, 140 Mass. 589; Kentucky Masonic etc. L. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 13 Bush (Ky.) 489; Presbyterian Mut. Assurance Fund v. Allen, 106 Ind. 593; Elsev v. Odd Fellows Mut. Relief Assoc., 142 Mass. 224; State v. People's Mut. Ben. Assoc., 42 Ohio St. 579; Supreme Council Knights of Honor v. Nairn, 60 Mich. 44; National Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Gonser, 43 Ohio St. —; Leonard v. American Ins. Co., 97 Ind. 305; Ben. Soc. v. Dugre, 11 R. L. (Queb.) 344.

Bacon Ben. Soc. and Ins. Secs., 168, 248; Kentucky Masonic etc. L. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 13 Bush (Ky.) 489.

For a review of the principles governing the subject of insurable interest, see Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Shaefer, 94 U. S. 457; INSURANCE, 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 312; LIFE INSURANCE, 13 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 650; FIRE INSURANCE, 7 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 1020.

It is only when the right of designation of beneficiary is unrestricted that the question of insurable interest and the rules of construction governing the same become important. Freeman v. National Ben. Soc., 42 Hun (N. Y.) 252, provided the contract be not in fact a mere cover for a wagering transaction.

Stat. Mass. 1882, ch. 195, authorizing corporations organized under Pub. Stat., ch. 115, for the purpose of assisting the widows, orphans or other persons dependent upon members to include among the beneficiaries other relatives of deceased members, does not authorize a certificate payable to a creditor of a member. Skillings v. Massachusetts Ben. Assoc., 146 Mass. 217.

Under the by-laws of an association providing that a member may designate as beneficiary of the fund accruing at his death, on the certificate held by him, any one "related to him," the wife of his nephew cannot be made such beneficiary, as the by-laws contemplate only blood relations. Supreme Council of the Order of Chosen Friends v. Bennett (N. J.), 19 Atl. Rep. 785.

The by-laws of a mutual beneficiary association organized under Stat. Mass. 1877, ch. 204, § 1 (Pub. Stat., ch. 115, §§ 2, 8), provided that only male Roman Catholics between the ages of 20 and 51 years were eligible to membership. The application of decedent which designated plaintiff as his beneficiary described him as about 49 years old, when in fact he was over 51 years old. It was held that even if the officers of the corporation attempted to waive the condition as to age they could not do so. McCoy v. Roman Catholic Mut. Ins. Co. (Mass.), 25 N. E. Rep. 289.

2. Martin v. Stubbings, 126 Ill. 387; Michigan Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Rolfe, 76 Mich. 146; Marsh v. Supreme Council American Legion of Honor, 149 Mass. 512; Lamont v. Grand Lodge Iowa Legion of Honor, 31 Fed. Rep. 177; Mutual Ben. Assoc. v. Hoyt, 46 Mich. 473; Bloomington Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Blue, 120 Ill. 127; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 558.

3. Mitchell v. Grand Lodge Iowa Legion of Honor, 70 Iowa 360; Swift v. Railway etc. Mut. Ben. Aid Assoc., 96 Ill. 309; Massey v. Mutual Relief Soc., 102 N. Y. 523; Eckert v. Mutual Relief Soc., 2 N. Y. Supp. 612.

In the following cases the terms of the constating instruments were held not to contain limitations upon classes eligible as beneficiaries. Where the words of the articles of association were that "the general nature of its business, and its general purpose, is the insuring the lives of the members upon the plan of paying to the representatives of every deceased member a certain sum, to be assessed upon and received from the other members of said association." Walter v. Odd Fellows' Mut. Ben. Soc., 42 Minn. 204. Where the law of the corporation required applicants to enter

But if the persons who may be beneficiaries, are, by the charter, limited to certain classes, and the certificate holder designate some one not of such classes, the designation is void, and any money paid to such beneficiary is held by him in trust for the upon their applications "the name or names of the members of their family, or those dependent upon them," to whom they desired the benefit paid, and that members in good standing might surrender their certificates and have new ones issued, payable "to such beneficiary or beneficiaries dependent upon them as they may direct." Marsh v. Supreme Council American Legion of Honor, 149 Mass. 512. The same rule was declared of a provision in the constitution that the object of the "order" is to "afford financial aid and benefit to the widows, orphans and heirs or devisees of the deceased members of the order." Lamont v. Grand Lodge Iowa Legion of Honor, 31 Fed. Rep. 177. Likewise where the purpose of the association, as recited in the charter, was to furnish life indemnity or pecuniary benefits to devisees or legatees of members. Bloomington Mut. Life Ben. Assoc. v. Blue, 120 Ill. 121; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 558. Likewise where the charter declared its purposes to be "benefiting and aiding the widows and orphans of deceased members." A by-law provided that the benefits on the death of a member should be payable "to such person as the deceased may have designated to receive the same, as appears on the books of the lodge of which he is a member." Maneely v. Knights of Birmingham, 115 Pa. St. 105. Also where the articles provided that its object was to "provide benevolence and charity by establishing a widows' and orphans' fund, from which, on satisfactory evidence of the death of a member, . . . a sum not exceeding $2,000 shall be paid to his family, or as he may direct." Mitchell v. Grand Lodge Iowa Knights of Honor, 70 Iowa 360.

A provision of the society's constitution limiting the beneficiaries to the members of assured's family, or those dependent upon him, is for the society's benefit only; and where it paid the money into court the limitation cannot aid the widow's claim. Johnson v. Supreme Lodge of Knights of Honor (Ark.), 13 S. W. Rep. 794.

Construction of Statutes and By-laws.—Where the designation was to "legal heirs," it was held that, if there were no children or descendants of any child, his widow was entitled to the whole fund. Lawwill v. Lawwill, 29 Ill. App. 643.

A member's mother comes within the term "families or heirs" as used in Ohio Rev. Stat., § 3630, relating to mutual benefit societies. Young Men's Mut. Life Assoc. v. Harrison, 23 Wk. Law Bul. 360.

A member's wife is preferred to his mother within the meaning of the laws of a benefit society, providing that care must be taken to see that the person or persons of a member's family legally dependent on him are the ones to be named as his beneficiaries. Arthurs v. Baird, 8 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 67, 71.

The term "legal representatives" refers to the widow, orphans and heirs of the member, within the meaning of the objects of an association, stating to be to provide pecuniary aid "for the widows, orphans, heirs and devisees of deceased members, and for no other purpose whatever." Murray v. Strang, 28 Ill. App. 608.

Where by the terms of the certificate the fund was payable to "the heirs of the person insured by virtue of this policy," and that it "will be paid to—, or lawful heirs," and the by-laws declare that "its object is to aid and benefit the families of deceased members of the brotherhood in a simple and substantial manner," a designation by the deceased of his wife and children as beneficiaries was held to entitle them to the fund. Hannigan v. Ingraham, 8 N. Y. Supp. 232.

A certificate was payable to insured's wife, E, or to such other person as might be entitled to the insurance. After the death of E the insured married plaintiff, but made no change as to the beneficiary. The objects of the association, as declared in its by-laws, were to afford financial aid to the widows, orphans and heirs of deceased members, or to such other persons as might be designated by the insured member. On the death of the member it was held that his widow and not the children of deceased wife was entitled to the insurance. Riley v. Riley (Wis.), 44 N. W. Rep. 112.

persons entitled to receive it, under the laws of the society, in default of a designation.¹

But a designation, valid in its inception, remains so, although the insurable interest or relationship of the beneficiary has ceased, unless it is otherwise stipulated in the contract.²

The real property interest is vested in the beneficiary, though it is simply equitable and liable to be defeated by the act of him in whose name it is made. The latter has the naked legal right.³

His only power over the benefit is that of appointing some one to receive it.⁴

Under some circumstances, if no designation is made, as required by the fund-law of the organization, the benefit reverts to the society.

The member has, however, a property right in the contract of membership, which the courts will protect, and which must be dis-

The wife of a nephew does not come within the meaning of the words "related to him" in a certificate. Supreme Council of Order of Chosen Friends v. Bennett (N. J.), 19 Atl. Rep. 785.

"Affianced wife" in a certificate does not come within the meaning under Stat. Mass. 1882, ch. 195 (Pub. Stat., ch. 115), which authorizes corporations to assist "the widows, orphans or other relations of deceased members, or any persons dependent upon deceased members." Palmer v. Welch (Ill.), 23 N. E. Rep. 412.

Adults are not orphan children within the meaning of the regulations of the beneficiary fund providing that, "should there be no widow, then the said amount shall be paid to the lodge of which the deceased was a member, for the use or benefit of his orphan children, in equal shares. In case there should be no widow, child or children, or designated person or object, the amount shall be paid to his executor or administrator." Hammerstein v. Parsons, 29 Mo. App. 509.

1. Daniels v. Pratt, 143 Mass. 216; Supreme Lodge American Legion of Honor v. Perry, 140 Mass. 580.

2. Clark v. Allen, 11 R. I. 439; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 496; Dalby v. India etc. Assoc. Co., 15 C. B. 365; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Schaefer, 94 U. S. 457; McKee v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 28 Mo. 383; 75 Am. Dec. 129; Provident L. Ins. & Investment Co. v. Baum, 29 Ind. 236; Campbell v. New England Mut. L. Co., 98 Mass. 381; Bacon Ben. Soc. & Ins. 253.

In one case it was held that a wife, designated as the beneficiary, from whom the husband, who held the certificate, had been divorced, could not take under it, because the statute restricted the beneficiaries to the dependents, or families, or relatives. Tyler v. Odd Fellows' Mut. R. Assoc., 145 Mass. 134.

3. Bloomer v. Waldron, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 365; Arthur v. Odd Fellows' Ben. Assoc., 29 Ohio St. 557; Maryland Mut. Ben. Soc. v. Clendinen, 44 Md. 429; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 52. This he can only exercise in accordance with the constitution and by-laws. Swift v. Railway etc. Mut. Aid & Ben. Assoc., 96 Ill. 309; Gentry v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 23 Fed. Rep. 718; Worley v. Northwestern Masonic Aid Assoc., 10 Fed. Rep. 227; Eastman v. Provident Mut. Relief Assoc. (N. H.), 20 Cent. L. J. 266; Barton v. Provident Mut. Relief Assoc., 63 N. H. 535; Greeno v. Greeno, 23 Hun (N. Y.) 478; Masonic Mut. Relief Assoc. v. McAuley, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 70; Presbyterian Assurance Fund v. Allen, 106 Ind. 593; Richmond v. Johnson, 28 Minn. 447; Masonic Mut. Ben. Soc. v. Burkhardt, 110 Ind. 189; Kentucky Masonic Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 13 Bush (Ky.) 489; Van Bibber v. Van Bibber, 82 Ky. 347; Duvall v. Goodson, 79 Ky. 224; Arthur v. Odd Fellows' B. Assoc., 29 Ohio St. 557; Tennessee Lodge v. Ladd, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 716; Durian v. Central Verein, 7 Daly (N. Y.) 168; Supreme Council Catholic Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Priest, 46 Mich. 429. See CHANGE OF BENEFICIARY.

4. Maryland Mut. Ben. Soc. v. Clendinen, 44 Md. 433; Arthur v. Odd Fellows Ben. Assoc., 29 Ohio St. 557; Hel-

tinguished from his right to appoint a beneficiary of the insurance money.¹

A power of appointment, restricted to a particular class, is called special,² and the doctrines concerning and distinctions between general and special powers apply to certificates and constating instruments of societies. The designation must be by the prescribed instrument,³ executed according to the requirements and formalities pointed out in the certificate or constating instruments, or both considered together.⁴

The law of situs of the subject of the power controls the execution of the power.⁵

That the benefit will not pass under the residuary clause of a will, nor by the general disposition of all the testator's property, unless some authority for that purpose is provided in the laws of the organization,⁶ is well settled by the authorities.⁷

2. Limitations and Their Constructions.—The cardinal rule is that the one to whom a certificate is issued may have as wide a range of choice in selecting a beneficiary as the certificate, the organic law of the association, and its by-laws, taken together, give him;⁸ and that, in the absence of restrictions, his power in this respect is unlimited.⁹

lenberg v. District No. 1 I. O. B. B., 94 N. Y. 580; Bishop v. Empire Order Mut. Aid, 43 Hun 472.

1. Bacon Ben. Soc. & Life Ins. 237.

2. 2 Washb. Real Prop. 307.

3. 2 Washb. on Real Prop. 317; 1 Sugden on Powers, 255; Daniels v. Pratt, 143 Mass. 216; Worley v. Northwestern Masonic Aid Assoc., 10 Fed. Rep. 227.

4. Holland v. Taylor, 111 Ind. 121; Daniels v. Pratt, 143 Mass. 216; Elliott v. Whedbee, 94 N. Car. 115; Supreme Lodge Knights & Ladies of Honor v. Grace, 60 Tex. 571; Supreme Council American Legion of Honor v. Perry, 140 Mass. 580; Presbyterian Mut. Assur. Fund v. Allen, 106 Ind. 593; 1 Sugden on Powers, 250, 255; 2 Washb. on Real Prop. 317.

Mr. Sugden says: "In the first it would be in direct opposition to the agreement to consider the estate charged when the mode pointed out is not adhered to; in the second, to dispense with the solemnities and forms required to attend the execution of the power, is to deprive a man of the bridle which he has thought to impose on his weakness or frailty of mind, in order effectually to guard himself against fraud or imposition."

A gift of a mutual benefit certificate by husband to wife, she being the beneficiary named therein, is not sufficiently shown by the husband's declarations that he had given the insurance to her, and by her possession of it, he having afterwards obtained it, and procured a change in the beneficiary. Supreme Council Catholic Knights v. Morrison (R. I.), 17 Atl. Rep.

5. Bingham's Appeal, 64 Pa. St. 345.

6. Weil v. Trafford, 3 Term. Ch. 108.

7. Eastman v. Provident Mut. R. Assoc. (N. H. 1883), 20 Cent. L. J. 267; Greeno v. Greeno, 23 Hun (N. Y.) 478; Highland v. Highland, 109 Ill. 366; Morey v. Michael, 18 Md. 241; Hellenberg v. Dist. No. 1 of I. O. B. B., 94 N. Y. 580; Maryland Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Clendinen, 44 Md. 429; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 52; Arthur v. Odd Fellows' Ben. Assoc., 29 Ohio St. 557. Contra, Kepler v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 274; Bown v. Catholic Mut. Ben. Assoc., 33 Hun (N. Y.) 263; St. John's Mite Assoc. v. Buchly, 5 Mackey (D. C.), 406.

It has been held, however, that defects or irregularities of form or manner of designation could be waived by a lodge. Kepler v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 274.

8. See DESIGNATION OF BENEFICIARY, 1, supra.

9. Massey v. Mutual Relief Soc., 102 N. Y. 523; Freeman v. Nat. Ben. Soc., 42 Hun (N. Y.) 252; Mitchell v. Grand Lodge Iowa Knights of Honor, 70 Iowa

A liberal construction will be given to the certificate, organic law, and by-laws, with a view to determining whether the designated beneficiary comes within the class specified or not, and, at the same time, carrying out the benevolent purposes of the organization. And yet care will be taken that the statute law of the State be not violated nor public policy contravened.¹

Unless the statute law or public policy of the place where enforcement is sought forbid, the lex loci contractus governs.²

General rules of construction must be resorted to and applied to the charters, laws, and certificates of benefit societies as well as to the various statutes relating to them. These are of a manifold nature and analogous to the general rules of construction of contracts and wills, for the subject matter partakes of the characteristics of them all.³ And the court will, if possible, so construe the designation as to bring it within the power given by the statutes.⁴

360; Gentry v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 23 Fed. Rep. 718; Bayse v. Adams, 81 Ky. 368; Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor v. Martin, 12 Ins. L. J. 628; 13 W. N. C. (Pa.) 160; Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor v. Nairn, 60 Mich. 44; Swift v. Railway etc. Mut. Aid & Ben. Assoc, 96 Ill. 309.

1. Elsey v. Odd Fellows' Mut. R. Assoc., 142 Mass. 224, 225; Maneely v. Knights of Birmingham, 115 Pa. St. 305; Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias v. Schmidt, 98 Ind. 374; Ballou v. Gile, 50 Wis. 614; Supreme Council American Legion of Honor v. Perry, 140 Mass. 580.

A collection of the terms used in the bylaws of some of the leading orders and benefit societies, designating the classes of persons to whom their benefits may be made payable, may be found in Bacon's Ben. Soc. & Life Ins. 254. The following words designating classes of persons entitled to benefits have received judicial construction: "Families and heirs," National Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Gonser, 43 Ohio St. 1; "to his family, or as he may direct," Gentry v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 23 Fed. Rep. 718; Mitchell v. Grand Lodge Iowa Knights of Honor, 70 Iowa 360; "widows, orphans, heirs and devisees," Worley v. Northwestern Masonic Aid Assoc., 10 Fed. Rep. 227; "legal representatives," Expressmen's Aid Soc. v. Lewis, 9 Mo. App. 412; "widows, orphans, heirs or devisees," Covenant Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Sears, 114 Ill. 108; "to his family or those dependent on him," Ballou v. Gile, 50 Wis. 614; "families of deceased members or their heirs," Elsey v. Odd Fellows' Mut. R. Assoc., 142 Mass. 224; "families or relatives," Van Bibber v. Van Bibber, 82 Ky. 347; Presbyterian Mut. Assur. Fund v. Allen, 106 Ind. 593; "to family, orphans or dependents," Supreme Council American Legion of Honor v. Perry, 140 Mass. 580.

2. Daniels v. Pratt, 143 Mass. 216; Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor v. Nairn, 60 Mich. 44; Supreme Council American Legion of Honor v. Perry, 140 Mass. 580.

3. Bacon Ben. Soc. & L. Ins. 255.

This author says: "The primary rule is, that the intent of the legislature, parties to a contract or designator must be first ascertained and then carried into effect; and this intention must be judged of exclusively by the words of the instrument, if unambiguous, as applied to the subject-matter and the surrounding circumstances. The whole of the statute, law, or designatory writing must be looked at and considered; and words are supposed, unless the contrary be shown, to have been used in their ordinary, every-day sense and with the meaning a long line of judicial decisions has given them." Citing 1 Redf. on Wills, * 433 and vol. 2, * 20; 2 Pars. on Con. * 494; Bishop on Con., § 380.

4. Ballou v. Gile, 50 Wis. 614; Supreme Council American Legion of Honor v. Perry, 140 Mass. 580; Elsey v. Odd Fellows' Mut. R. Assoc., 142 Mass. 224.

In Duvall v. Goodson, 79 Ky. 224, the court said: "A life policy for the benefit of the family of the person pro-

The rules and regulations of benefit societies are construed liberally in order to effect benevolent objects.¹

When several beneficiaries are named in a certificate, the same rule applies as in ordinary policies, which is that if one or more of them die before the maturity of the contract, the benefit ensures to the survivors, and that so long as any of the beneficiaries are living, the assured has no interest in the policy and cannot assign it.²

If a certificate or policy name two beneficiaries, and provides that, in the case of the death of either, the full amount shall go to the survivor, the question of survivorship relates to the date of the death of the insured and not to the date fixed for payment.³

The word "or" will be understood between the words where several classes are named in succession without connective words, and the persons belonging to the respective classes will take in the order named. Thus, if brothers, sisters, heirs, etc., are named, and, at the date of the maturity of the contract, there are no brothers, the sisters will take, and the heirs if there are neither brothers nor sisters.⁴

3. Change of Beneficiary.—The right of the person to whom a certificate of membership in a benefit society is issued to direct the payment of the proceeds of the contract to a person other curing, though not a testament, is in the nature of a testament, and in construing it the court should treat it, as far as possible, as a will, as in so doing they will more nearly approximate the intention of the persons the destination of whose bounty is involved in such cases."

1. Gundlach v. Germania Mechanics' Assoc., 4 Hun (N. Y.) 339; Supreme Council American Legion of Honor v. Perry, 140 Mass. 580; Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor v. Martin (Pa.), 12 Ins. L. J. 628; 13 W. N. C. (Pa.) 160; Maneely v. Knights of Birmingham, 115 Pa. St. 306; Erdmann v. Mut. Ins. Co., 44 Wis. 376; Ballou v. Gile, 50 Wis. 614; Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias v. Schmidt, 98 Ind. 381; Whitehurst v. Whitehurst, 83 Va. 133; Masonic Mut. Relief Assoc. v. McAuley, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 70; Duvall v. Goodson, 79 Ky. 224; Van Bibber v. Van Bibber, 82 Ky. 347; Massey v. Mut. Relief Assoc., 102 N. Y. 523; Dietrich v. Madison Relief Assoc., 45 Wis. 79; Expressman's Aid Assoc. v. Lewis, 9 Mo. App. 412.

2. Robinson v. Duvall, 79 Ky. 83; Day v. Case, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 179.

3. Union Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Mont- gomery, 70 Mich. 587; Thomas v. Leake, 67 Tex. 469.

In the second case the member had directed the benefit to be paid to his son and daughter or the survivor of them. The money was, by the terms of the certificate, payable ninety days after receipt of proof of the death of the member, and the son died after his father, but within the ninety days. In deciding that the son's executor and not the daughter was entitled to the son's share of the fund, the court said: "The provision relating to survivorship applies to the one of the two who shall survive the donor. If neither survive him, the fund goes to the heirs of the member. The time of payment provided for, namely, ninety days after the death of the member, has no reference to who shall take as survivor. The time of payment is defined simply to enable the corporation to raise the fund by assessment upon the members."

4. Covenant Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Sears, 114 Ill. 108; Kentucky Masonic etc. L. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 13 Bush (Ky.) 489; Addison v. New England Commercial Travellers' Assoc., 144 Mass. 591; Ballou v. Gile, 50 Wis. 614; Masonic Mut. Relief Assoc. v. McAuley, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 70.

than that named therein, is the most marked distinction between these forms of insurance and ordinary policies.¹

Under the contracts and laws of most societies the power of appointment partakes so far of the nature of a testamentary devise that it may be revoked and a new designation made at any time before the maturity of the contract, and the same rules of construction apply as in case of other testamentary writings.²

1. Bacon Ben. Soc. & L. Ins. 289. In further discussion of the subject he says: "In a policy of life insurance the undertaking is with the assured, and the stipulated sum is payable to him upon the contingency named—the ending of the life insured. Owing to the form of the contract the rights of the person to whom the insurance is to be paid become at once vested when the policy is delivered, and cannot be altered or affected except by his consent. The member of a beneficiary organization, on the other hand, as we have seen, has no property interest in the benefit, but only the naked power of designating some one to receive it. This designated recipient also has no property nor vested rights in the benefit, because his interest is contingent and uncertain, the power of the member to revoke the appointment and substitute a new beneficiary being specially reserved by the laws of the society, which laws enter into and form a part of the contract."

Still the rules of a mutual benefit society may forbid the transfer of its benefit certificates for valuable consideration, and where so forbidden a contract for the sale of such certificate to one who has no insurable interest in the life of the assured is void under that rule, as well as being against public policy.

Stoelker v. Thornton (Ala.), 6 So. Rep. 680. In this case it was held, however, that though such a sale be against public policy, yet as a matter of contract right it is a question between the society and the purchaser; and, when the society recognizes its validity by issuing a new certificate, in which the purchaser is named as the beneficiary, and upon the death of the assured pays the money due under the certificate to such purchaser, no stranger or volunteer can assail the validity of the payment.

But it was held in the absence of such prohibitory provision being shown that an assignment of a benefit certificate in a benevolent association to one not related to the member, but who has merely advanced him $50 against public policy, and the fund goes to the heirs, after deducting dues and advancements made by the assignee; and that it was immaterial that by the rules of the order the fund was to be paid to the member's "family, or as he may direct," and that the certificate was surrendered and a new one issued to the assignee, according to the constitution. Schonfield v. Turner, 75 Tex. 324.

2. Union Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Montgomery, 70 Mich. 587; Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Palmer, 42 Conn. 64; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 530; Washington Ben. Endowment Assoc. v. Wood, 4 Mackey (D. C.) 19; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 251; Duvall v. Goodson, 79 Ky. 228; National American Assoc. v. Kirgin, 28 Mo. App. 80; Thomas v. Leake, 67 Tex. 469.

In Holland v. Taylor, 111 Ind. 125, the court said: "For many, and, indeed, for most purposes, mutual benefit associations are insurance companies, and the certificates issued by them are policies of life insurance governed by the rules of law applicable to such policies. There are, however, some essential differences usually existing between the contracts evidenced by such certificates and the ordinary contract of life insurance. The most usual difference is the power, on the part of the assured in mutual benefit associations, to change the beneficiary. But as in either case the rights of the beneficiary are dependent upon and fixed by the contract between the assured and the company or association, there seems to be no reason why the assured should have any greater power to change the beneficiary in one case than in the other, except as that power may be inherent in the nature of the association, or is reserved to him by the constitution, or by the laws of the association, or by the terms of the certificate." See also Durian v. Central Verein, 7 Daly (N. Y.) 168; Lemon v. Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co., 38 Conn. 301; Johnson v. Van Epps, 14 Bradw. (Ill.) 201; 110 Ill. 551; Deady v. Bank Clerks' Mut. Ben.

The doctrine is now well settled that in the absence of prohibitory provisions in the by-laws of the society or of a previous delivery of the certificate to the beneficiary, the latter may be changed by the member at will.¹ To render a second delivery of a certificate effective to vest such an interest in the beneficiary as

Assoc., 17 Jones & Sp. 246; Tennessee Lodge v. Ladd, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 716; Swift v. Railway etc. Mut. Aid & Ben. Assoc., 96 Ill. 309; Richmond v. Johnson, 28 Minn. 449. In the last case the court said: "Here is not an ordinary contract of insurance made between an insurance company and another person, the rights of the parties to be determined exclusively by the policy. The rights of Charles H. Richmond, and of any one claiming through him, depended not on the certificate alone, but rather on his membership in the association; and such rights were defined and controlled by its constitution and by-laws."

1. Union Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Montgomery, 70 Mich. 587; Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters v. Callahan, 146 Mass. 391; Schillinger v. Boes, 85 Ky. 357; Masonic Mut. Ben. Soc. v. Burkhart, 110 Ind. 789; Lamont v. Grand Lodge Iowa Legion of Honor, 31 Fed. Rep. 177*; Sabin v. Grand Lodge Ancient Order United Workmen, 8 N. Y. Supp. 185*; Milner v. Bowman, 119 Ind. 448; Byrne v. Casey (Tex.), 8 S. W. Rep. 38; Knights of Honor v. Watson, 64 N. H. 577; Brown v. Grand Lodge of Iowa (Iowa), 45 N. W. Rep. 884; Highland v. Highland, 109 Ill. 366; Coleman v. Knights of Honor, 18 Mo. App. 189; Splawn v. Chew, 60 Tex. 532; Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor v. Martin, 13 W. N. C. (Pa.) 160; Ireland v. Ireland, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 212; Holland v. Taylor, 111 Ind. 121; Raub v. Masonic Mut. Relief Assoc., 3 Mackey (D. C.) 68; Lamont v. Hotel Men's Ben. Assoc., 30 Fed. Rep. 817; Supreme Council American Legion of Honor v. Perry, 140 Mass. 580; Gentry v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 23 Fed. Rep. 718; Supreme Council of the Catholic Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Priest, 46 Mich. 429; Barton v. Provident Mut. Relief Assoc., 63 N. H. 535.

The change may be made by any act clearly signifying such intention in the absence of any law prescribing the manner of effecting it. Thus, the constitution of a benefit society provided that the funds to which a member was entitled in case of death should be paid to his widow, or, in case of her death, to his children; and that a married member might bequeath one-half of the fund to either one or all of his children, but $500 at least must be devised to his widow. Deceased designated plaintiff as his beneficiary three years before his marriage to defendant, and four years thereafter died childless. It was held that his marriage annulled the preceding designation to plaintiff, and that his widow was entitled to the fund. Sanger v. Rothschild, 2 N. Y. Supp. 794. Or the change may be brought about by operation of law, as where an appointment was made by a husband in favor of his wife, in accordance with the company's rule that a member might appoint any person as beneficiary; but the instrument did not designate to whom the money should be paid in case the beneficiary died before the insured. It was held that the appointment was revoked by the death of the beneficiary. Rev. Stat. Wis., § 2347, which empowers a husband to insure his life in favor of his wife, and provides that such insurance shall enure to her separate use and that of her children, not vesting in the original beneficiary the absolute right to the money. Given v. Wisconsin Odd Fellows' Mut. L. Ins. Co., 71 Wis. 547.

Estoppel of Beneficiary.—A first beneficiary may be estopped from setting up the invalidity of an attempted change, as where a member of a beneficiary society makes a change of beneficiaries by will, a method not in compliance with the contract of insurance, but the original beneficiary, his wife, induces the assured to rely upon her acquiescence in the provisions of such will, and accept benefits under it after his decease. Hainer v. Iowa Legion of Honor, 78 Iowa 245.

Insurable Interest.—The transfer of a certificate of a mutual benefit society to one having no insurable interest, is not for that reason invalid, unless such transfer is itself a wagering contract. McFarland v. Creath, 35 Mo. App. 112.

will require his consent to a change, there must be some sufficient consideration to support the transaction.¹

And the right to change has been held not affected by the facts that the first beneficiary paid the assessments of the member and that the change was made without his consent.²

The laws of the organization regulate and govern the method of changing the beneficiary. Whatever formalities they prescribe must be observed and complied with. The expression of one method impliedly excludes all others.³ However, the authorities are not uniform in holding that no change of beneficiaries can be

1. The rules of an association allowed the surrender of a certificate and the issue of a new one. A son, who was a member of the association, held a certificate payable to his mother, to whom it was delivered. Having married, the son afterwards obtained the certificate, and, without his mother's knowledge or consent, surrendered it for one payable to his wife, to whom he delivered it. Afterwards, without the knowledge or consent of the wife, he obtained the second certificate and procured its cancellation, and the issue of another payable to the mother. Held that, though the certificate was delivered as a gift to the wife, it was subject to the condition attached that assured might at any time surrender it, and name another beneficiary, and that the wife had no right to the fund. Following Fisk v. Equitable Aid Union (Pa.), 11 Atl. Rep. 84; Appeal of Beatty, 122 Pa. St. 428.

2. Fisk v. Equitable Aid Union (Pa.), 11 Atl. Rep. 84.

In Byrne v. Casey, 70 Tex. 247, it was held that a beneficiary cannot complain that a by-law in existence at the issuance of a certificate requiring the consent of the beneficiary, was amended so as to allow such change and surrender, without the consent of the beneficiary, the constitution of the society providing that the by-laws might be amended at any time.

3. Supreme Council Am. Legion of Honor v. Smith (N. J.), 17 Atl. Rep. 770; Wendt v. Iowa Legion of Honor, 72 Iowa 682; Hainer v. Iowa Legion of Honor, 78 Iowa 245; Olmstead v. Masonic Mutual Ben. Soc., 37 Kan. 93; Coleman v. Knights of Honor, 18 Mo. App. 189. See also Manning v. Supreme Lodge Ancient Order United Workmen, 86 Ky. 136; Kentucky Masonic etc. L. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 13 Bush (Ky.) 489; Greeno v. Greeno, 23 Hun (N. Y.) 478; Highland

v. Highland, 109 Ill. 366; Elliott v. Whedbee, 94 N. Car. 115; Vollman's Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 50; Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor v. Nairn, 60 Mich. 44; Ireland v. Ireland, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 212; Gentry v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 23 Fed. Rep. 718; National Mut. Aid Soc. v. Lupold, 101 Pa. St. 111; Renk v. Herman Lodge, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 409; Hotel Men's Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Brown, 33 Fed. Rep. 11; Eastman v. Provident Mut. Relief Assoc. (N. H. 1883), 20 Cent. L. J. 266; Harman v. Lewis, 24 Fed. Rep. 97, 530; Daniels v. Pratt, 143 Mass. 216; Bayse v. Adams, 81 Ky. 368; Olmstead v. Masonic Mut. Ben. Soc., 37 Kan. 93; Luhrs v. Luhrs, 6 N. Y. Supp. 51; Gladding v. Gladding, 8 N. Y. Supp. 880. Holding also that a recital in an endorsement made by the secretary on a certificate of membership in a mutual benefit association, that, at the written request of the holder of the certificate, the beneficiary was changed from his brother to his wife, is sufficient evidence of a compliance with the by-laws of the association, which provide that a change of beneficiary may be made on the written order of the holder of the certificate, signed in the presence of two witnesses. The records of the association during the life of the member are prima facie evidence in respect to the rights of the beneficiary, the latter having no vested interest in the certificate. Bagley v. Grand Lodge Ancient Order United Workmen, 131 Ind. 498. Where a member executed a paper assigning his policy to one of his creditors as collateral security, but no application for a change was made to the association, nor was the assignment made upon the prescribed blank, nor had the association any notice of it until after the death of the member intestate, and both the widow and the assignee claimed the benefits, it was held that the widow made, otherwise than as provided in the laws of the society.¹ But by law provisions regulating the manner of changing beneficiaries are intended only for the convenience of the society, and may be waived by it² as well as by the original beneficiary.³

The same rules apply in determining when a change of beneficiary is complete as in the case of a transfer of shares in a capital stock corporation.⁴ Whenever the member has done the acts required of him by the by-laws to effect the change, the neglect of the agents of the association to give it effect will not be allowed to defeat his object.⁵ Nor can they require the performance of impossible conditions, though directed in the by-laws.⁶ Though was entitled to the fund. Hotel Men's Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Brown, 33 Fed. Rep. 11.

1. See Hirsch v. Clark (Iowa), 47 N. W. Rep. 78; Splawn v. Chew, 60 Tex. 532; Manning v. Ancient Order United Workmen, 86 Ky. 136; National Mut. Aid Soc. v. Lupold, 101 Pa. St. 111; Raub v. Masonic Mut. Relief Assoc., 3 Mackey (D. C.) 68; Block v. Valley Mut. Ins. Assoc. (Ark.), 12 S. W. Rep. 477; Order of Mut. Companions v. Griest, 76 Cal. 494; Supreme Council of the Catholic Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Priest, 46 Mich. 429; Nally v. Nally, 74 Ga. 669; s. c., 58 Am. Rep. 458.

2. Southern Tier Masonic Relief Assoc. v. Laudenbach, 5 N. Y. Supp. 901; Mayer v. Equitable Reserve Fund L. Assoc., 2 N. Y. Supp. 79*. And where defects in the formalities prescribed by the law of a society as to a change in the designation of a beneficiary have been waived by the society and the benefit paid, the former beneficiary cannot take advantage of such defects. Manning v. Ancient Order of United Workmen (Ky.), 5 S. W. Rep. 385.

3. In Marsh v. Supreme Council American Legion of Honor, 149 Mass. 512, it appeared that, by the laws of the corporation, a petition for substitution was required to have the seal of the member's subordinate council, and to be attested by the subordinate secretary. A member delivered his certificate and a petition for substitution to the subordinate secretary, who, acting in collusion with the original beneficiary, the member's wife, delivered the certificate to her, and forwarded the petition without sealing or attesting it. The corporation, notwithstanding these omissions, recognized the petition as valid, and stood ready to make the substitution if it had received the certificate. It was held that the wife would not be heard to object that there was no valid substitution. Marsh v. Supreme Council American Legion of Honor (Mass.), 21 N. E. Rep. 1070.

A party may be estopped from setting up the invalidity of the change of beneficiary, as where the aunt of a member having the certificate in her possession refused to give it up for the purpose of allowing a change to be made. Supreme Conclave Royal Aldelphia v. Cappella, 41 Fed. Rep. 1.

4. See STOCK AND STOCKHOLDERS, Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

5. National American Assoc. v. Kirgin, 28 Mo. App. 80; Grand Lodge Ancient Order United Workmen v. Child, 70 Mich. 163.

In Reversing, 6 N. Y. S. 51; Luhrs v. Luhrs (N. Y.), 25 N. E. Rep. 388. The constitution of the benefit society whose certificate was in question provided that a member might change his beneficiary by surrendering his certificate to the reporter of his lodge, who should forward it to the supreme reporter of the society, and that the latter should then cancel it and issue a new one, payable to the beneficiary designated. The certificate was surrendered in the manner prescribed, designating a new beneficiary, but the member died while it was in course of transmission. The supreme reporter, ignorant of this fact, issued a new certificate. Both certificates bore at the bottom a printed form of acceptance, and the member had signed his name thereto on the old one. It was held that the right to the new certificate attached when the old one was surrendered to the home lodge, and the new one, when issued, related back to that time, notwithstanding that the acceptance could not be signed, and therefore the new beneficiary was entitled to the fund.

6. Isgrigg v. Schooley (Ind.), 25 N. W. Rep. 151, following Grand Lodge

the general rule is that the consent of the beneficiary is not required¹ in order to effect a change, it may be otherwise provided in the by-laws.² And, even without such provisions, the interest of the beneficiary may become vested so that his consent will be necessary.³

The beneficiaries of a life insurance policy, who are affected by an attempted change of beneficiaries, may avail themselves of the failure of the insured to comply with the contract, as well as the company with which it was made.⁴

V. SEPARATION OF FUNDS—1. Duties of Directors with Respect to.—Independent of statutory provisions and those of the charter with respect to the security of policy holders of insurance companies in the matter of setting apart guaranty and reserve funds, such duty is sometimes imposed upon directors in the by-laws; and usually they have discretionary power to provide in this way for the safety and protection of certificate and policy holders, while insuring by similar segregation of sums derived from assessments, the payment of expenses of management, of benefits, relief, disability, dues, etc. As long as such separation and application do not amount to a diversion of the funds, or a deprivation of any right or just claim belonging to a member or creditor, it is but a fair and reasonable means for the accomplishment of the objects

Ancient Order United Workmen v. Childs, 70 Mich. 163, in which the facts were as follows: Deceased procured a certificate making his betrothed the beneficiary, but retaining the certificate in his possession. She, marrying another, and the certificate having been lost, he made a statement of the loss, and applied for a reissue of the certificate, making his son the beneficiary. Such application was refused—the rules of the organization requiring the change to be endorsed on the original certificate; but, by the advice of the officers of the organization, he attempted to make the change by giving a power of attorney to another to collect the amount which should accrue under the certificate. It was held that such acts constituted an equitable change of beneficiary, and that the son was entitled to the fund.

1. Luhrs v. Supreme Lodge Knights and Ladies of Honor, 7 N. Y. Supp. 487; Supreme Council Catholic Knights v. Morrison (R. I.), 17 Atl. Rep. 57. See also Masonic Mut. Ben. Soc. v. Burkhardt, 110 Ind. 189, construing the act of March 2, 1877 (Rev. Stat. Ind. 1881, § 3850), which declares certificates to be contracts between the association and the beneficiary, and holding that it did not change the rule, except to prevent any future restrictions in the constitution or by-laws of such society upon the contract or the rights of the parties to change the beneficiary.

2. See EFFECT UPON CONTRACT OF CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS, III, 7, supra.

3. In Butler v. State Mut. L. Assur. Co., 8 N. Y. Supp. 411, it was held that the beneficiary in a policy of insurance, payable to her trustee or his legal representatives, though she has no insurable interest in the life of the insured, acquired a vested interest in the policy on its delivery to the trustee, and a subsequent alteration so as to permit the insured to appoint a new trustee on the death of the former is nugatory without the consent of the beneficiary.

4. Wendt v. Iowa Legion of Honor, 72 Iowa 682, holding also that the fact that the insured authorizes a change in the beneficiaries and the secretary of the company assents and acts as though the beneficiaries had been properly changed, will not constitute a valid change as against the first beneficiaries, when the secretary has performed acts beyond his authority, and the provisions of the constitution as to such changes have not been complied with.

of the company or association, and is an ordinary feature of insurance book-keeping.

The separate funds of a mutual benefit association, when there are such, are made up in one or the other of two ways: first, by assessments levied and collected for the specified object; second, by a percentage of the general periodical assessments, collected without special mention of the fund to which it is to be applied. The general principles applicable to the duties and powers of directors and agents of private corporations control in this connection. The various provisions of the laws governing these matters are also part of the contract of membership, in the construction of which they must be observed and interpreted.¹

2. Guaranty and Reserve Funds—(a) Character and Purpose.—In most of the States it is required by statute that all insurance companies, whether ordinary or mutual, shall provide in cash or premium notes, properly secured, or in both, a fund for the security of those taking risks. Independent of statute most mutual insurance companies provide such fund. It is sometimes called an absolute, sometimes a guaranty or safety, and at other times a reserve fund;² but however designated its object is to provide against unexpected casualties and losses resulting therefrom. Most frequently it consists of absolute promissory notes, payable within a fixed time. These are usually designated guaranty notes, and evidence a limited liability contingent upon the extent of losses to the company. They are usually given by members, but not necessarily. Interest may or may not be allowed to the makers, but whether it is or not their character is not altered.³

(b) Procurance.—Whatever any statutes on the subject require to constitute the fund must be procured, whether it be cash, municipal bonds, or the notes of solvent parties.

1. It is provided by § 3 of Mass. Stat. 1885, ch. 183, that all companies then existing for the purposes contemplated by that chapter may exercise the rights and powers conferred by the chapter as if reincorporated thereunder. Harding v. Littlehale, 150 Mass. 100.

Where the statute under which an association was organized provided that "no part of the funds collected for the payment of death benefits shall be applied for any other purpose," it was held that the "advance mortuary assessments" required of new members were funds designed for payment of death benefits, and that the use of such assessments for the payment of current expenses was a violation of law justifying dissolution. Chicago Mut. L. Indem. Assoc. v. Hunt, 127 Ill. 257.

2. Under Starr & C. St. Ill., § 129,

ch. 73, the reserve fund of a mutual benefit association is a trust fund, to be used only for mortuary benefits, or otherwise applied as directed by the by-laws, and, when the association is not in a condition to pay the holders of death claims by a regular assessment, they have the first right to be paid out of such reserve, before a payment to the directors of an advance made by them in good faith to the association. Wilber v. Torgerson, 24 Ill. App. 119. See also Supreme Council American Legion of Honor v. Smith, 45 N. J. Eq. 466.

3. See Bouwer v. Hill, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 629; Holbrook v. Basset, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 147; Brookman v. Metcalf, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 429; Hope Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 2 Rob. (N. Y.) 278, holding that statutes requiring a guar-

The task of obtaining a statutory guaranty fund usually devolves upon the incorporators and promoters, and precedes organization,¹ and is a condition precedent to the right to transact business,² though it is not a prerequisite to corporate existence.³

When notes are taken for the guaranty fund, they are deemed security for the payment of losses, and are not to be resorted to except upon the happening of the condition upon which the liability of the makers depends. The fund thus provided must be held, used, and applied as required by statute.⁴ But such notes may be assessed if so provided in the by-laws, especially if such by-laws do not declare such notes to be absolute funds.⁵ When such notes are not given for the double purpose of securing assessments to pay liabilities and to constitute the guaranty fund, but express an absolute liability, they are collectible to the full antee fund and prescribing the duties of mutual insurance companies with respect thereto are valid and binding.

1. The statutes of Kansas divide mutual insurance companies into classes, and graduate the extent of their authority to do business according to the amount of the guarantee fund provided by them. The various acts on the subject were construed in Kansas Home Ins. Co. v. Wilder, 43 Kan. 731, and it was held under the circumstances that a mutual company which had provided no fund could not even do business beyond the limits of the State. Section 4 of chapter 130 of the Laws of 1885 provides that mutual fire insurance companies having a guarantee fund of $100,000 may do business outside the State of Kansas.

The system embraces companies organized from residents of the State, whose business is divided into two classes, each of which is to be conducted separately and independently of the other. Laws 1885, ch. 132. When any such company has done business for a certain length of time, and to a sufficient amount, it may create a guarantee fund to the amount of $25,000, and may then issue policies within certain limitations on property situate in the State of Kansas; Laws 1885, ch. 130, §§ 1-4. When such a company provides a guarantee fund of not less than $50,000, it may advertise for and do business in that class of the system within certain other limitations. Laws 1889, ch. 160. And then when the company reaches the stage of having a guarantee fund of $100,000, it may do business either in or out of the State. Laws 1885, ch. 130, § 4. See also Dwelling-house Ins. Co. v. Wilder, 40 Kan. 561; s. c., 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 1 n.; State v. Fidelity etc. Ins. Co., 39 Minn. 538; s. c., 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 11; State v. Thomas (Penn.), 12 S. W. Rep. 1034.

2. Mor. Priv. Corp. 29.

3. Harrod v. Hamer, 32 Wis. 162; Mor. Priv. Corp. 29. Compare In re Schmitt, 10 N. Y. Supp. 583. This case called for a construction of Laws N. Y. 1889, ch. 520, § 3, which provide, with reference to the preliminary organization of fraternal beneficiary societies, that when among other things a sworn statement has been filed that at least 200 persons have made application in writing for membership in such an association, the superintendent of insurance shall issue a licence, etc. The section further provides that when the licence has been filed, and when at least 200 persons have subscribed in writing to be beneficiary members, etc., such persons shall be constituted a body politic and corporate, etc. It was held that it was necessary, in order to become a body corporate under the law, not only for the prescribed 200 persons to make application for membership before the issuance of the preliminary licence, but they must subscribe in writing to be beneficiary members after the issuance of the licence.

4. In re California Mut. L. Ins. Co., 81 Cal. 364.

5. Citizens' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Sortwell, 10 Allen (Mass.) 110; Bell v. Shibley, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 610; McIntire v. Preston, 10 Ill. 48.

amount, without any assessment and without exhausting the remedies against others liable on such notes.¹

(c) Preservation.—Directors hold the guaranty fund in a fiduciary capacity subject to statutory directions and provisions of the by-laws relating thereto. Where it consists in promissory notes they have no power to surrender such notes in prejudice to the rights of members, without a unanimous consent of the latter.² Certainly not in violation of a statute.

(d) Disposition.—The provisions of statutes, charters, and by-laws must be consulted for the powers of directors and other officers in the use and disposal of the guaranty fund.³ When legally acquired it cannot be reached or made available for other objects than those authorized. When the object has failed or the fund is no longer needed or required to be kept intact, it may be disposed of as general assets.⁴

3. Relief and Disability Fund.—This is a fund set apart in anticipation of future requirements, to pay sick and disability benefits to those entitled to receive the same under the laws of the organization.⁵

4. Mortuary Fund.—This is an accumulation of assessments or dues to meet anticipated death losses.⁶

1. Shawmut Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Stevens, 9 Allen (Mass.) 332; Davenport F. Ins. Co. v. Moore, 50 Iowa 619; Maine Mut. M. Ins. Co. v. Swanton, 49 Me. 448; Union Ins. Co. v. Greenleaf, 64 Me. 123; Hope Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Weed, 28 Conn. 51; Hope Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Perkins, 38 N. Y. 404. See OFFICERS OF PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.

2. See Maine Mut. Marine Ins. Co. v. Pickering, 66 Me. 130; Brouwer v. Appleby, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 158.

It is no defence to such notes that the makers never became members or policy holders. Brouwer v. Appleby, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 158. See Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Davis, 12 N. Y. 569.

Like other promissory notes they are payable absolute, and may be collected for the purpose of applying the proceeds to the payment of losses and expenses accruing before the maker became a member. Nashua F. Ins. Co. v. Moore, 55 N. H. 48.

The Illinois statute concerning the security in the shape of a guarantee fund and its preservation provides that associations organized thereunder may provide for an accumulation of a surplus or guarantee fund, which shall belong to the association, and not to the officers, "and shall be used only for mortuary benefits, without assessment, or applied in payment of future assessments, or otherwise used for the promotion of the object for which such funds are specially provided and set apart, and such use shall not be deemed or construed to mean a profit received by members." The directors having created a tontine reserve fund, by reserving 25 per cent. of the assessments for death benefits, for the apportionment of which fund the members were divided into classes, the surviving persistent members of each class to receive a distribution at the end of 10 years. It was held that such disposition of the reserve fund was a direct violation of the statute, justifying dissolution. Chicago Mut. L. Indem. Assoc. v. Hunt, 127 Ill. 257.

3. See OFFICERS OF PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.

4. See XI, 1, infra.

5. Where funds have been contributed to a relief fund under a law afterwards declared invalid, the sums previously paid should be refunded. Murray v. Buckley, 1 N. Y. Supp. 247.

6. The beneficiary of a certificate holder has such an interest in the mortuary or death fund that, after the liability of the association has arisen and an action been brought, he is entitled to show that the death fund amounts to the agreed sum; or, if it does not, what amount an assessment would

5. Endowment Fund.—This is a provision similar to a mortuary fund, except that it is to be applied to payment of future maturing endowment claims. These may consist either, first, of a lump sum payable upon the maturity of the certificate, or, second, of coupons attached to the certificates to become due in the future, upon due compliance by the holders with all the conditions and requirements of the contract.

6. Expense Fund.—This is sometimes called the general fund, and signifies all the revenues not required to pay losses and benefits, and is available for payment of salaries and other expenses of carrying on the corporate enterprise and accomplishing the objects of the organization.¹

VI. TITLE TO PROCEEDS OF CONTRACT.—No question is likely to arise concerning the disposition of the money derived from a death loss upon a certificate of membership, where such disposition is specifically provided for in the certificate or by-laws, and the beneficiary named is a person belonging to a class contemplated in the laws and within the powers of the association. When classes are pointed out as recipients of the benefits and mortuary funds of the society as dependents, widows, orphans, relatives, etc., of members, they have a superior claim to that of administrators and executors, and it follows that creditors are excluded.²

realize, and may have an order for the examination of an officer of the association, before the trial, to ascertain whether he can testify to those facts. Chaffey v. Equitable Reserve Fund Life Assoc., 2 N. Y. Supp. 481.

1. A provision in the certificates that, on a division of the fund, the association should retain reasonable charges for its management, does not cover the general expenses of the association, except so far as properly chargeable to the management of the fund. Burdon v. Massachusetts Safety Fund Assoc., 147 Mass. 360.

Directors cannot appropriate funds set apart as a mortuary fund to the payment of current expenses. Chicago Mut. L. Indem. Assoc. v. Hunt, 127 Ill. 257.

Expenses of Grand and Subordinate Lodges.—Courts are frequently called upon to adjust the rights of superior and subordinate lodges growing out of funds derived from assessments. The affairs of mutual benefit societies, as has been seen, were often conducted by complex organizations, consisting of grand or supreme and subordinate lodges, by the conventional rules of which an obligation is imposed upon members to pay two kinds of contributions: first, assessments levied by the superior authority to meet death benefits; second, an amount periodically for the support of the subordinate lodge. In other associations not consisting of local and grand lodges stated sums are to be paid annually or oftener to meet the expenses of the organization additional to the assessments on death claims. The latter contributions are usually designated as dues, and generally go to make up a fund for the payment of expenses. These matters are regulated in the constitutions and by-laws which, as has been seen, are binding on all members. See INTERNAL MANAGEMENT AND POWERS, II, 2, d. supra.

2. Beckel v. Imperial Council of the Order of United Friends, 11 N. Y. Supp. 321; Supreme Council American Legion of Honor v. Perry, 140 Mass. 580; Skillings v. Massachusetts Ben. Assoc., 146 Mass. 217; National Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Gonser, 43 Ohio St. 1; Daniels v. Pratt, 143 Mass. 216.

In the second of these cases the court said: "If the fund were subject to testamentary bequest, then, upon the decease of the member, it might go into the hands of his executor, or the administrator of his estate and become assets thereof, liable to be swallowed up by the creditors. If there were no creditors the member, by his will, could divert it from the three classes named in the statute. In either case, this would defeat the purpose for which the fund was raised and held, and would be in direct conflict with the object of the statute for which the association was formed, and would set aside the contract entered into between the member and the corporation."

Citing Johnson v. Ames, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 173, 181; Osgood v. Foster, 5 Allen (Mass.) 560.

Failure to Designate.—Where the charter of an association provided that, upon the decease of any member, "the fund to which his family is entitled shall be paid as may be designated in the application for membership. This being rendered impossible, it shall go, first to the widow and infant children," and afterwards in the order named. A member having directed that the benefit should be paid as he might designate in his will, and having died intestate, leaving a widow but no infant children, it was held that the widow was entitled to the fund. Whitehurst v. Whitehurst, 83 Va. 153.

A mutual benefit certificate was payable to insured's wife E, or to such other person as might be entitled to the insurance. The by-laws of the association declared that its object was to afford financial aid to the widows, orphans and heirs of deceased members, or to such other person as might be designated by the insured member, and that on the death of a member his widow or designated heirs should receive the insurance. After the death of E, the insured married plaintiff, but made no change as to the beneficiary. It was held, on the death of insured, plaintiff and not the children of E was entitled to the insurance. Riley v. Riley (Wis.), 44 N. W. Rep. 112. See Jewell v. Grand Lodge Ancient Order United Workmen, 41 Minn. 405.

Disqualified Beneficiary.—Where the by-laws provided that "if all the beneficiaries die during the life of a member, and he shall have made no other directions, the benefit shall be paid to his heirs at law," the benefit will accrue to his heirs, though the beneficiary is still alive, where such beneficiary is one who, under the Missouri laws, is not within the class that may be made beneficiaries. Keener v. Grand Lodge, Ancient Order United Workmen, 38 Mo. App. 543.

Death of Beneficiary.—It being provided in a policy that, upon the death of the insured, the amount named should be paid "to L, heirs, administrators or assigns," and L, the wife of the insured, having died before the insured, it was held that, there being no children of the marriage, the heirs of the husband were entitled to the benefit of the policy, and not the heirs of the wife. Michigan Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Rolfe, 76 Mich. 146.

When a Trust Attaches to Fund.—Money due on a beneficiary certificate, made payable to a third person for the purpose and with the understanding that it shall be applied in payment of the debts and funeral expenses of the assured, is impressed with a trust to that effect, which equity will enforce. Boasberg v. Cronan, 7 N. Y. Supp. 5.

Meaning of "Heirs."—Where a benefit certificate was payable to the "heirs" of deceased, who left a widow, but no children, the word "heirs" will be construed to mean those designated by the statute of distribution to take personal property (Mansf. Dig. Ark., § 2522); and, since the widow is thereunder entitled only after all the husband's kindred, she has no claim to the fund as against his brothers and sisters. Johnson v. Supreme Lodge of Knights of Honor (Ark.), 13 S. W. Rep. 794; Addison v. New England Commercial Travellers' Assoc., 144 Mass. 591.

A divorced wife is entitled to no share of a benefit fund which, by the rules of the association, goes to the member's heirs, no beneficiary having been appointed by him. Schonfield v. Turner, 75 Tex. 324.

Deceased held a certificate in a mutual life association. Below the names of its president and secretary was the unsigned statement that "all payments or benefits that may accrue or become due to the heirs of the person insured by virtue of this policy will be paid to ——— or lawful heirs." The by-laws of the association declare that "its object is to aid and benefit the families of deceased members of the brotherhood in a simple and substantial manner." Deceased designated by will his wife and children as beneficiaries. It was held that the word "heirs," in the above form, meant the widow and children of deceased, and that the will was a valid designation of the beneficiaries. Hannigan v. Ingraham, 8 N. Y. Supp. 232.

Money Paid Under Void Policy Under a Statute. (Laws Mich. 1887, Act No.

Under a statute limiting the beneficiaries to relations of members, a designation of his estate by a member is ineffectual.¹ The beneficiaries in such cases derive title to the fund directly from the association and not from or through the estate.²

187, § 16), providing that any contracts of insurance on lives of more than 65 years issued by co-operative and mutual benefit associations, "organized, existing or doing business in this State under or by virtue of" its provisions, "shall be void as to the beneficiary therein named, but the amount thereof shall be payable to the heirs of the member," it was held that the law does not apply to a policy issued prior to its passage, and the heirs of the assured have no claim upon money voluntarily paid to the beneficiary of a void policy. Smith v. Pinch (Mich.), 45 N. W. Rep. 183. See also Whitmore v. Supreme Lodge Knights and Ladies of Honor, 100 Mo. 36.

"Affianced Wife" as Beneficiary.—Under St. Mass. 1882, ch. 195 (Pub. St. ch. 115), which authorizes corporations to assist "the widows, orphans or other relations of deceased members, or any persons dependent upon deceased members," a certificate issued for the benefit of a member's "affianced wife," who was not dependent on him for support, is payable to the member's next of kin, on his dying before marriage. Palmer v. Welch (Ill.), 23 N. E. Rep. 412.

Meaning of "Family."—Where an applicant for membership in a mutual life insurance company designates his "family" as the beneficiary, and his family consists at that time of himself and his wife and daughter, the wife and daughter are the beneficiaries; but where the daughter dies before her father, and the wife is the only member of his family who survives him, she takes the whole fund, and the daughter's children take nothing. Brooklyn Masonic Relief Assoc. v. Hanson, 6 N. Y. Supp. 161.

Though the constitution of an association provides that certificates shall be payable only to the families or some one dependent on members, yet this question can only be raised by the association, and payment by them into court of the amount of the certificate waives the objection. Knights of Honor v. Watson, 64 N. H. 517.

Word "Children" Entitles a Single Child.—If a policy does not vest in the children at the wife's death, it is payable to the children living at the husband's death, as a class, and would therefore go entirely to such as survived the husband, and, in either event, the children of a deceased child would have no interest in the fund. United States Trust Co. v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co., 115 N. Y. 152.

A certificate in a society which paid death benefits to the widows and orphans of members, and other persons shown to be dependent on members, was payable to the member's widow, "for the benefit of herself and the children of said member." They had one child, and the member also had two children by a former marriage, one of whom was married, and did not live at home at the member's death. It was held that the widow and each child were severally entitled to one-fourth of the amount each. Jackman v. Nelson, 147 Mass. 300.

A certificate as issued was payable to the member's children generally, without naming them. Held, that the certificate included children born after its issuance, it appearing that one of the main objects of the association was to provide a fund for the benefit of the entire family of a member, and not to restrict it to a portion, and that the charter contained no provision allowing an applicant to designate the beneficiary. Thomas v. Leake, 67 Tex. 469.

1. Daniels v. Pratt, 143 Mass. 516.

But where a certificate issued to a member himself as beneficiary matures at his death, as well as on his being totally disabled, or reaching 70 years of age, the heirs of such a member, who made no direction as to the payment of the certificate, are entitled to collect it, especially where such heirs belong to the class of persons to whom the member might have directed the certificate to be made payable. Peet v. Great Camp Knights of Maccabees of the World (Mich.), 47 N. W. Rep. 119.

2. Swift v. San Francisco Stock and Exch. Board, 67 Cal. 567; Briggs v. Earl, 139 Mass. 473; Felix v. Grand Lodge A. O. U. W., 31 Kan. 81; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 479; Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor v. Nairn, 60 Mich.

Courts are very much inclined to construe limitations to dependents and near relations as provisions in the nature of family settlements, and in many of the States are found statutory exemptions of policies of insurance, and a specified sum for the purpose of keeping premiums and assessments paid up from the demands of creditors.¹

44; Supreme Council of the Catholic Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Firnane, 50 Mich. 82; Supreme Council of the Catholic Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Priest, 46 Mich. 429; Durian v. Central Verein, 7 Daly (N. Y.) 168; Richmond v. Johnson, 28 Minn. 447; Fenn v. Lewis, 81 Mo. 259; 10 Mo. App. 478; Worley v. Northwestern Masonic Aid Assoc., 3 McCrary (U. S.) 53; 10 Fed. Rep. 227; Schmidt v. Grand Grove, 8 Mo. App. 601; Bown v. Catholic Mut. Ben. Assoc., 33 Hun (N. Y.) 263.

This rule does not, however, prevent a creditor from acquiring by contract a lien upon the fund for advances made by him to keep up the assessments, where there is no prohibition of such an arrangement in the contract or in the by-laws brought to the creditor's notice. Levy v. Taylor, 66 Tex. 652.

A creditor who takes out insurance certificates amounting to $6,500 on the life of his debtor, who owes him $1,000, the insurance being taken out in mutual aid associations, where the amount to be realized depends on the number and solvency of the members, and the creditor paying the mortuary dues and assessments, and actually realizing only $2,124.82 on the certificates on the debtor's death, is entitled to retain the balance remaining after deducting the debt, interest and expenses. Rittler v. Smith, 70 Md. 261.

Where in a policy the corporation agrees to pay "to the executors or administrators of said member, in trust, however, for, and to be forthwith paid over to, his heirs at law," but in the application, which is expressly made part of the contract, the contract is stated to be for the benefit of the applicant himself, in the absence of anything else to show an intention to make the heirs beneficiaries, the proceeds of the policy must be administered as part of the estate of the insured. Harding v. Littlehale (Mass.), 22 N. E. Rep. 703.

Estoppel as to Fund.—One insured in the plaintiff association made a written request for a change in his certificate in favor of his father, in the form prescribed by the by-laws, stating that the original certificate was in the hands of his aunt, the original beneficiary, and that he could not make an actual surrender of such certificate. Before the certificate was made out the insured died. The aunt had agreed to see that this change was made, but subsequently refused to do so. It was held that, plaintiff having filed a bill of interpleader and paid the money into the court, the aunt was estopped to claim that the change of beneficiary was invalid by reason of the nonsurrender of the original certificate, and the failure to issue a new one. Supreme Conclave Royal Adelpia v. Cappella, 41 Fed. Rep. 1.

1. People v. Phelps, 78 Ill. 147; Swift v. San Francisco Stock & Exch. Board, 67 Cal. 567; Rhode v. Bank, 52 Iowa 375, holding that even where the policy was payable to the assured, "his executors, administrators and assigns," the wife was entitled to the entire fund free from the claims of creditors. The same conclusion was reached where the policy was payable to "heirs and assigns," the death of the insured having occurred before any assignment. Mullins v. Thompson, 51 Tex. 7. See also Ætna Nat. Bank v. United States L. Ins. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 770; Central Bank v. Hume, 3 Mackey (D. C.) 360; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 780; Levy v. Taylor, 66 Tex. 652; Stigler v. Stigler, 77 Va. 173; Stone v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co., 52 Ala. 589; Pence v. Makepeace, 65 Ind. 345; Pullis v. Robinson, 73 Mo. 202; s. c., 5 Mo. App. 548; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 497; Thompson v. Cundiff, 11 Bush (Ky.) 567; Felrath v. Schonfield, 76 Ala. 199; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 319; Cole v. Marple, 98 Ill. 58; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 83; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Sandfelder, 9 Mo. App. 285; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Ryan, 8 Mo. App. 535.

In Baron v. Brummer, 100 N. Y. 372, it was held that creditors cannot compel an assignment, by a wife, of a policy of insurance upon her husband's life effected for her benefit.

Where it was provided by statute that the beneficiary fund should not be liable

In case of a policy on the life of one person payable to another, and the latter dying before the insured, the personal representatives of the insured are entitled to the insurance money.¹ However, the laws of the organization usually direct to whom the money shall be paid in the event of the beneficiary dying before the holder of the certificate, and without a substitution. In the absence of such provision and of a substitution there may be a lapse, so that the fund will revert to the society.² It has been held, however, that in such cases the administrator of the deceased member may sue for and recover the insurance money as part of his estate.³

Where the money has been paid to one not entitled to receive it because not having an insurable interest, the personal representatives of the deceased may sue for and recover it.⁴

VII. ASSESSMENTS—1. Power and Duty of Officers in Making.—Directors are frequently entrusted by statute with all the powers of the corporation, and even when not so authorized are subject to only such limitations as are imposed by the membership in the constitution and by-laws, provided always they must act impartially, justly, and in good faith.⁵

The power of directors of benefit societies to provide for the payment of benefits and death losses as they occur, and to exercise a reasonable discretion in providing for liabilities that are reasonably certain to mature in the future, is the same as in other corporations vested by their charters and articles with similar powers. The extent of the discretionary power of directors of benefit societies to accumulate funds has not been definitely fixed by the authorities.⁶

to be seized, taken or appropriated by any legal or equitable process to pay any debt of such deceased member, it was held that a member has no property interest in the beneficiary fund, and a designation of a beneficiary to receive the money and pay the member's debts is invalid. Reversing 7 N. Y. Supp. 5. Boasberg v. Cronan, 9 N. Y. Supp. 664.

Acts N. Y. 1840, §§ 1, 2, provide that a wife may insure her husband's life, and if she survives him the insurance shall be paid to her free from the claims of his representatives or creditors. In case of the death of the wife in the husband's life-time, the policy may be made payable after her death to her children and to their guardians if under age. United States Trust Co. v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co., 115 N. Y. 152.

1. Under a certificate naming two beneficiaries, and, "in case of death of either, full amount to go to the survivor if living, if not living to the heirs of said member," on the death of the member the shares of both beneficiaries vest in them, and if one dies before payment of the benefit his share goes to his executor, not to the survivor. Union Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Montgomery, 70 Mich. 587.

2. Eastman v. Provident Mut. Relief Assoc., 62 N. H. 555; Bacon Ben. Soc. & L. Ins., 344.

3. Rindge v. New England Mut. Aid Soc., 146 Mass. 286.

4. Herkimer v. Rice, 27 N. Y. 163.

See LIMITATIONS AND THEIR CONSTRUCTION, 4, b, herein; INSURANCE, 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 278; LIFE INSURANCE, 13 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 629; DESIGNATION, 4, a, herein; CHANGE OF BENEFICIARY, 4, c, herein.

5. See OFFICERS OF PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.

6. In Kelly v. Troy Fire Ins. Co., 3 Wis. 254, it was held that directors have discretionary power to provide by assessments for anticipated losses.

Where the charter of a mutual insurance company provides that the deposit

Assessments must be made in strict conformity to the provisions of the by-laws, and cannot be enforced if made otherwise.¹

The contract entered into by each member on becoming such is that he shall pay assessments only for the legitimate purposes note shall be payable in part or in whole when the directors deem the same requisite for the "payment of losses or other expenses," and the remainder after deducting such payment to be relinquished to the signer; that every member "shall pay his proportion of all losses and expenses accruing in and to the class in which his property is embraced;" and that the policy shall create a lien upon the property insured for the security of the deposit note," and the cost which may accrue in collecting the same," an assessment of ninety-five per cent. additional to the actual losses in a certain class upon the premium notes in such class to "meet estimated bad debts, interest, expenses, and costs of collection" is illegal. York Co. Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Bowden, 57 Me. 286.

An assessment laid by a mutual fire insurance company whose by-laws authorize their directors to borrow money to meet losses, and to include the sums thus borrowed, the interest thereon, and all necessary incidental expenses in the next assessment, is not rendered invalid by including reasonable sums for interest on money borrowed, and probable losses from the failure of some of the assessed to pay their assessments and ten per cent. for collecting assessments. Jones v. Sisson, 6 Gray (Mass.) 288.

In an action to recover insurance assessments, held, that, if the assessments are not much in excess of the amount actually required for the payment of losses, the presumption is that the gross sum was properly laid in view of the costs attending the collection of numerous small amounts, and the probable insolvency of the makers of some of the notes. Lehigh Valley F. Ins. Co. v. Dryfoos (Pa.), 9 Atl. Rep. 262.

In Rosenberger v. Washington Mut. F. Ins. Co., 87 Pa. St. 207, it was held that an assessment could no be made for anticipated losses in the absence of any provision in the laws of the society for such a call.

In other cases it is considered that their discretion is limited to an allowance for expenses and uncollectible assessments in addition to a sufficient amount to cover liabilities. Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Gackenback, 19 W. N. C. (Pa.) 287; People's Equitable Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Babbitt, 7 Allen (Mass.) 235.

In Crossman v. Massachusetts Ben. Soc., 143 Mass. 435, it was held that under the statute of 1880, ch. 196, section 3, providing that any beneficiary association may hold, as a death fund belonging to the beneficiaries of anticipated deceased members, an amount not exceeding one assessment, and that nothing in the section shall be held to restrict such death fund to less than $10,000; that a beneficiary association holding such a fund, when a loss occurs, is not obliged to pay the loss out of the fund, but may make an assessment therefor; and the fact that it designates such fund as a reserve fund is immaterial. The court said: "The idea of holding money as a reserve fund imports permanency to some extent. The statute does not provide that losses by death shall be paid out of this fund as they occur. To do this would soon deplete and destroy the fund, and defeat the object of the statute. Nor does the statute, directly or by implication, provide that no assessment shall be laid so long as there is enough in the reserve fund to meet losses as they occur. The officers of the association might use a part of the fund to pay a loss; they are not compelled to do so, and it was within their discretion to lay an assessment." Of course, the power of the directors in making assessments extends no farther in case of any member or class of members than the liability of the latter. If the assessment can only be made on those who are members of a certain class, subject thereto at the time the resolution was adopted, the members of that class are not liable to assessments to pay losses of members in another class which occurred during the time they were such. Miller v. Georgia Masonic etc. Co., 57 Ga. 221. See OFFICERS OF PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.

1. Bates v. Detroit Mut. Ben. Assoc., 51 Mich. 587; Passenger Conductors' L. Ins. Co. v. Birnbaum, 116 Pa. St. 565; Underwood v. Iowa Legion of

of the society, and that these shall be made by the company in strict accordance with the requirements of its constitution and by-laws,¹ even though some other more equitable method might be adopted,² and by the authority named in the charter or designated in the by-laws.³

If some of the members liable to an assessment be intentionally omitted, the assessment is void as to the rest; although it be accompanied by a computation of the liability of those so omitted and there be an intention to assess them in the future.⁴

Where the making of assessments calls for an exercise of discretion, such discretion cannot be delegated.⁵

If the by-laws require that an assessment shall be signed, an unsigned assessment is invalid.⁶

It may be stated generally that rights of members are not affected by the nonpayment of assessments not made according to the constitution and by-laws.⁷ But if the directors have power

Honor, 66 Iowa 134. See FORFEITURE AND SUSPENSION OF CONTRACT, VIII, herein.

1. Mutual Aid Soc. v. Helburn, 84 (Ky.) 1; Woodfin v. Asheville Mut. Ins. Co., 6 Jones L. (N. Car.) 558; Protection L. Ins. Co. v. Foote, 79 Ill. 362; Covenant Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Spies, 114 Ill. 463.

The delay of a mutual fire insurance company, for a time not unreasonable, to make an assessment does not invalidate the assessment, notwithstanding the provision of Rev. Stat., ch. 37, § 31, that, "if any member shall have a just claim on the corporation, founded on a policy issued by them, exceeding the amount of their existing funds exclusive of the deposit notes given by the members, the directors shall forthwith" lay an assessment. Marblehead Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Underwood, 3 Gray (Mass.) 210.

2. Slater Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Barstow, 8 R. I. 343.

3. Susquehanna Mut. Ins. Co. v. Tunkhannock Toy Co., 97 Pa. St. 424; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 816; Agnew v. Ancient Order United Workmen, 17 Mo. App. 254; Bates v. Detroit Mut. Ben. Assoc., 51 Mich. 587.

A meeting of a mutual fire insurance company, called "for the purpose of making such alterations in the by-laws of said company as may be deemed necessary, and for the transaction of such other business as may come before them," cannot, after voting to increase the number of directors (which is not limited by the by-laws), elect the additional directors; and an assessment or call made at a meeting of the board of directors, at which only the additional directors so chosen are present, is void. People's Mut. Ins. Co. v. Westcott, 14 Gray (Mass.) 440. Compare Currie v. Mutual Assoc., 4 Hen. & M. (Va.) 318; s. c., 4 Am. Dec. 517. 4. Marblehead Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Hayward, 3 Gray (Mass.) 208; People's Equitable Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Arthur, 7 Gray (Mass.) 1.

5. Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Chase, 56 N. H. 341.

6. Baker v. Citizens' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 51 Mich. 243.

7. American Mut. Aid Soc. v. Helburn, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 627; 2 S. W. Rep. 495; Underwood v. Iowa Legion of Honor, 66 Iowa 134; Passenger Conductors' L. Ins. Co. v. Birnbaum, 116 Pa. St. 565; Agnew v. Ancient Order United Workmen, 17 Mo. App. 254.

A by-law of a mutual insurance company provided that assessments should be made according to the following classification: First. All members whose policies were in force when the assessment was declared should be liable to assessment for all losses adjusted, unadjusted and unpaid, and all other liabilities then existing against the company, subject to abatement as thereafter specified. Second. All members whose policies had expired at the time of the assessment should, nevertheless, be liable to assessment for all unpaid losses and other liabilities which existed at the time of the expiration, pro rata with those then in force, the amount thus ascertained and levied to be deducted from to fix the rate of assessment, prescribe the manner of making it, and authorize the president or committee to make it in accordance with the prescribed method, such an assessment is just and proper.¹

A resolution by the directors levying a certain percentage on all premium notes need not mention the names of all the makers of such notes, nor the amount assessed on each.²

It is otherwise where the amount of the percentage is levied. In this case, without specific designation, the assessment is invalid as to all.³

Where several losses have occurred at the same time, or so nearly together that the same notes are liable to be assessed for the payment of them all, only one assessment is necessary.⁴ But an assessment in which a former unpaid assessment is included, but not mentioned, is irregular,⁵ as is an assessment which includes losses that have been paid by previous assessment.⁶

the gross amount of the liabilities for which such assessment was made, and balance of liabilities then remaining to be assessed on the policies then in force. Held, that the assessment should be laid in the first instance on the policies in force at the time of the loss, whether since expired or not, and that policies issued since the loss, and remaining in force at the time of the assessment should be assessed only for the balance if the first part of the assessment should be insufficient. Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Stauffer, 125 Pa. St. 416; New England Mut. Ins. Co. v. Belknap, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 140; Shaughnessy v. Rensselaer Ins. Co., 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 605.

1. Where it was directed that the chairman of a committee should examine the proofs of losses as they should arrive, and instruct the secretary, if the proof were found correct, to issue notice of the assessment, such directions having been complied with by the chairman and approved by him, and an assessment made in good faith accordingly, it was held legal and not open to the objection that it was made by the chairman and not by the directors. Passenger Conductors' L. Ins. Co. v. Birnbaum (Pa.), 116 Pa. St. 565.

But assessments made by a committee of directors is not valid under general authority conferred upon directors. Monmouth Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Lowell, 59 Me. 504; Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Chase, 56 N. H. 341.

The charter of a mutual fire insurance company provided that the directors shall settle and determine losses or damages to be paid by the several members of the company as their respective proportions thereof. A majority of the directors voted to assess "a sum not exceeding $18,000 to meet the losses and expenses incurred from October 14th, 1867, to October 14th, 1869," and appointed a minority thereof a committee to make the assessment, who thereupon made it in a less sum. Held, that the sum of the assessment, not having been fixed by a majority of the directors, was illegal. Monmouth Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Lowell, 59 Me. 504.

Under by-laws providing that directors shall fix the amount, they cannot order that a sum "not exceeding" a certain amount be called. Monmouth Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Lowell, 59 Me. 504.

2. Lycoming F. Ins. Co. v. Rought, 97 Pa. St. 415.

An assessment made by a mutual fire insurance company in good faith, upon correct principles and substantially correct, is binding, notwithstanding small errors, upon a member who is not affected to a perceptible amount by the errors. Marblehead Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Underwood, 3 Gray (Mass.) 210.

3. St. Lawrence Mut. Ins. Co. v. Paige, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 430.

4. In making the assessment, no discrimination is to be made between notes given when higher rates of insurance existed, and those made under reduced rates. Shaughnessy v. Rensselaer Ins. Co., 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 605.

5. Campbell v. Adams, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 132.

6. Cooper v. Shaver, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 151.

A provision that, in making assessments, the members shall be classified, is binding on the directors and must be observed.¹

Directors have power to make an assessment after assignment for the benefit of creditors.²

Nice questions are often presented where superior lodges in one State attempt to raise money by assessments upon the members of subordinate lodges in another. The rule is that the superior or governing body of a benefit society, incorporated under the laws of the State where it does business, has no power to enforce assessments levied by order of a supreme lodge incorporated under the laws of another State.³

The deposit notes of a mutual insurance company are part of its capital, and the directors are bound to call in a sufficient amount on them to pay the insured, who are losers by fire.⁴

1. Atlantic Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Moody, 74 Me. 385.

2. Schimpf v. Lehigh Valley etc. Ins. Co., 86 Pa. St. 373.

3. Lamphere v. Grand Lodge A. O. U. W., 47 Mich. 429.

The proceeding in this case was by mandamus to compel the recognition of relator as a member of one of the subordinate lodges of the order of which respondent was the supreme governing authority in the State of Michigan. As such member he stood insured by the respondent in the sum of $2,000, payable on his death, or on his surviving for a specified term of years. Upon these facts, the court said: "He stands suspended by the respondent, and thereby loses his insurance for refusing to recognize and pay an assessment made under the orders of the supreme lodge of the order, which is a corporation existing under the laws of Kentucky, and not subject to this jurisdiction. The assessment was made to pay losses on risks taken by the order in other States and by other State grand lodges. The respondent is a Michigan corporation, existing under chapter 94 of the Compiled Laws of 1871. The relator is not liable to pay the assessment. It is not competent for the respondent to subject itself or its members to a foreign authority in this way. There is no law of the State permitting it, nor could there be any law of the State which would subject a corporation created and existing under the laws of this State to the jurisdiction and control of a body existing in another State, and in no manner under the control of our law. The attempt of the respondent to do this is an attempt to set aside and ignore the very law of its being. A mandamus will therefore issue as prayed." See also Grand Lodge v. Stepp, 3 Pa. 45.

4. Rhinehart v. Allegheny Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Pa. St. 359.

If the necessity exists, resort must be had to the entire fund of the company. White v. Ross, 15 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 66; Maine Mut. M. Ins. Co. v. Swanton, 49 Me. 448.

The mode of obtaining contributions from the makers of deposit notes is to assess each liable for the loss and expenses with a pro rata assessment of a just proportion, and require its payment on due notice. This amount is determined by the directory, and must be assessed ratably on the deposit notes of those whose policies were in existence at the date of the loss. Responsibility to contribute to a loss begins when the insurance has been effected, and terminates when the policy expires. Planters' Ins. Co. v. Comfort, 50 Miss. 662.

Where a loss by fire takes the entire funds of the company, the losers have an immediate vested interest in the effects of the corporation. If the notes are insufficient to pay all the losers, then the whole amount of the notes and effects of the company must be called in by the directors and divided pro rata among the losers. Rhinehart v. Allegheny Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Pa. St. 359.

A mutual insurance company need not proceed, after every loss happening to it, to compute the assessment on its deposit notes requisite to meet such loss, but may adopt a rule of proceeding that will approximate as near as is practicable and reasonable to the above method. New England Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Belknap, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 140.

A mutual insurance company, organ-

Under the law governing mutual insurance companies, the power to make assessments upon premium notes is limited by the amount of losses sustained and unpaid at the time of making the assessment.¹

An assessment may be made notwithstanding the fact that a previous assessment upon a premium note for the same object remains unenforced.²

There are, undoubtedly, cases in which assessments may be made by a court of equity in a proceeding to wind up the affairs of an association, but such assessments cannot be made by the court, where the members are free, under the society's laws, to pay the assessments or not, and where the authority is conferred only upon the directors.³

2. In Collecting.—A valid assessment, having been regularly made, the most important duty of the officers connected with its collection is to give notice of the same, which must be according to the prescribed method. Until such notice is given, there is no liability on the part of a member to pay an assessment.⁴

ized under the General Insurance Companies act of April 10th, 1849, may divide its risks into classes, according to the degree of hazard, and assess the premium notes only for the payment of the losses happening in the class to which such notes belong. White v. Ross, 15 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 66. Overruling Thomas v. Achilles, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 491.

An assessment which ignores a division into classes of the makers of premium notes required by the charter to be made is invalid. Atlantic Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Moody, 74 Me. 385.

Annual Interest Plan.—A note on the "annual interest plan," not assessable to meet losses until other classes of notes have paid, in assessments, an amount equal to the interest paid on notes of its class, is subject, after interest has fallen due and remained wholly unpaid, to assessment, along with notes of other classes, proportionately on the losses sustained. Crawford v. Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co. (Pa.), 12 Atl. Rep. 844. See Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Leavy (Pa.), 20 Atl. Rep. 502, 505; holding also that the basis of the "schedule premium," which was found by multiplying the amount of insurance by the percentage or rate of the risk, was just and equitable.

1. Sinissippi Ins. Co. v. Taft, 26 Ind. 240.

An assessment laid by a mutual fire insurance company is not rendered invalid by the fact that the proportion between the cash premiums and the deposit notes taken by the company varied at different times, as against a member who suffered no damage thereby. Marblehead Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Underwood, 3 Gray (Mass.) 210.

Where the by-laws of a mutual insurance society declared that all expired policies should be assessable pro rata for losses occurring at the time of such expiration, an assessment which does not include such expired policies is void. Tolford v. Church, 66 Mich. 431.

As to liability of assignee of policy to pay assessments, see Francis v. Butler etc. Ins. Co., 7 R. I. 159.

2. Sands v. Sweet, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 108; Jackson v. Van Slyke, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 116 n.

Sums voluntarily paid to a mutual insurance company by its members, upon an assessment which is subsequently adjudged to be illegal, with interest thereon, may be treated by the company as just claims against it, within the meaning of Stat. 1863, ch. 249, and may be included as such in making a new assessment. People's Mut. Equitable F. Ins. Co., petitioners, 9 Allen (Mass.) 319.

3. In re Protection L. Ins. Co., 9 Biss. (U. S.) 188; Duff v. Canadian etc. Ins. Co., 6 Ont. App. 238; McDonald v. Ross-Lewin, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 87; Hill v. Merchants' etc. Ins. Co., 28 Grant Ch. (Up. Can.) 560.

4. People v. Supreme Council Catholic Ben. Legion, 10 N. Y. Supp. 248; Payn v. Mut. Relief Soc., 17 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 53; Sinking Springs Mut.

Nor can good standing be lost for the nonpayment of an assessment, of which the proper notice is not given.¹

The same principles applicable to corporations generally in the matter of making and giving notice of assessments, govern benefit associations, and the same strictness is required in complying with the provisions of constitutions and by-laws as in other business corporations organized and conducted for profit.²

That the parties may, by agreement, waive the prescribed formalities and manner of giving notice and contract for a different form of notice is well settled upon the authorities.³

The rule that insanity is no excuse for nonpayment of premiums or assessments of life insurance policies applies to the payment of assessments of benevolent societies.⁴

Where the requirement was that notice should be given by circular mailed to the party, or verbally, it was held that the mere mailing of a circular was insufficient, if it was not, in fact, received.⁵

Ins. Co. v. Hoff, 2 W. N. C. (Pa.) 41; Columbia Ins. Co. v. Buckley, 83 Pa. St. 298; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 172; Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor v. Johnson, 78 Ind. 110; Siebert v. Chosen Friends, 23 Mo. App. 268.

1. Hall v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 24 Fed. Rep. 450.

Unless personal notice be required to be in writing, verbal notice is sufficient. Jones v. Sisson, 6 Gray (Mass.) 288; York Co. Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Knight, 48 Me. 75.

2. As to contents of notice, see Miner v. Michigan Mut. Ben. Assoc., 63 Mich. 338; Siebert v. Chosen Friends, 23 Mo. App. 268; Bates v. Detroit Mut. Ben. Assoc., 51 Mich. 587; Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor v. Johnson, 78 Ind. 110; Covenant Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Spies, 114 Ill. 463.

A notice of an assessment made by the receiver of an insurance company, on the premium notes, which was published before it was ascertained by carrying out on the extension book what amount each member was to pay, and consequently contained no information to each member of the amount he was to pay, is irregular and defective, and will not render members not paying the assessment liable to a suit for the amount of the premium note. Bangs v. McIntosh, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 591.

Where the notice of an assessment made by a receiver of a mutual insurance company on the deposit notes specified different rates of assessment for small notes and large notes, but not in any way showing to which class a given note belonged, there being no evidence of any rule on that subject in the charter or by-laws, the notice was held inoperative for uncertainty. Bangs v. Duckinfield, 18 N. Y. 592.

As to time of notice, see Frey v. Wellington Mut. Ins. Co., 4 Ont. App. 293; Haskins v. Kentucky Grangers' Mut. Ben. Soc., 7 Ky. L. Rep. 371. As to the proper authority for the notice, see Payn v. Mut. Relief Soc., 17 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 53; Shay v. National Ben. Soc., 7 N. Y. Supp. 287. As to service of notice, see Borgraefe v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 22 Mo. App. 127; Epstein v. Mut. Aid & Ben. L. Ins. Assoc., 28 La. An. 938; Weakley v. Northwestern Ben. & Mut. Aid Assoc., 19 Bradw. (Ill.) 327; Greeley v. Iowa State Ins. Co., 50 Iowa 86; Yoe v. B. C. Howard Masonic Ben. Assoc., 63 Md. 86.

A notice erroneous in statement of amount due, owing to a miscalculation, is not so defective as to prevent a recovery of the amount actually due. Thropp v. Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co., 125 Pa. St. 427.

3. Epstein v. Mut. Aid & Ben. L. Ins. Assoc., 28 La. An. 938.

4. Hawkshaw v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 29 Fed. Rep. 770.

5. Castner v. Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 50 Mich. 273.

Where the charter required the notice to be published, unless actual personal notice were given and received, no collection could be had on the assessment. Castner v. Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co.,

In the absence of any provision as to the manner of giving notice, the notice must be personal and actual.¹

The time allowed for the payment of assessments runs from the date when notice is delivered or received and not the date written in the notice or the day it was mailed; and the day on which the notice was received will be excluded.²

50 Mich. 273; Greely v. Iowa etc. Ins. Co., 50 Iowa 86; Protection L. Ins. Co. v. Palmer, 81 Ill. 88.

On the contrary, notice by publication, when required, is sufficient without actual notice. Pennsylvania Training School v. Independent Mut. F. Ins. Co. (Pa.), 18 Atl. Rep. 392.

A member cannot take advantage of a want of notice after preventing such notice by change of residence. Lothrop v. Greenfield Stock & Mut. F. Ins. Co., 2 Allen (Mass.) 82.

As to notice of assessment by mail, see Jackson v. Roberts, 31 N. Y. 304.

A member of an accident association, subject to all the requirements thereof and entitled to all the benefits as provided in the by-laws; is bound by a by-law that the secretary shall give notice of assessments and dues by "sending all such notices by mail to the last given postoffice address of each member, which shall be considered a legal notice," and is in default if he fail to respond to such a notice whether he ever received it or not. Union Mut. Acc. Assoc. v. Miller, 26 Ill. App. 230.

1. Wachtel v. Noah Widows' & Orphans' Soc., 84 N. Y. 28; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 478; Siebert v. Chosen Friends, 23 Mo. App. 268; Borgreafe v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 22 Mo. App. 127; Castner v. Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 50 Mich. 273; Gunther v. New Orleans Cotton Exch. Mut. Aid Assoc., 45 La. An. 776.

Giving personal notice of an assessment laid by a mutual fire insurance company is a sufficient publication, within the meaning of a provision in their charter requiring an assessment to be paid "within thirty days after notice of said assessment shall have been published." Jones v. Sisson, 6 Gray (Mass.) 288.

A charter of a mutual insurance company made the nonpayment of assessments within a fixed period a cause of forfeiture. In a case in which this period had been exceeded and the assessment not paid, an affidavit of loss admitted that the notice of assessment had been received shortly after it was sent. But the affidavit was filled out by the agent of the company, and the insured was not led to suppose that the company intended to rely on the provision for forfeiture, or that the date of receiving the notice was of any importance. Held, that in an action on the policy he was not estopped by the recital in his affidavit from showing that, although the notice was taken from the postoffice soon after it was sent, it had not been delivered to him until long afterward. Castner v. Farmers' Mut. Ins. Co., 50 Mich. 273.

The charter of a mutual insurance company provided that members should be notified of assessments by circular or verbally, and that if they did not pay within a fixed time they would forfeit protection through their policy. Held, that such personal liability could not attach from merely mailing the notice, if it was not actually received. Castner v. Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 50 Mich. 273.

2. National Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Miller, 85 Ky. 88; Protection L. Ins. Co. v. Palmer, 81 Ill. 88; Wetmore v. Mut. Aid & Ben. L. Ins. Assoc., 23 La. An. 770; Pennsylvania Training School v. Independent Mut. F. Ins. Co. (Pa.), 18 Atl. Rep. 392; Stanley v. Northwestern Life Assoc., 36 Fed. Rep. 75; Taggart v. Phoenix Relief Assoc., 8 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 334.

Where the charter of a mutual benefit association provides that any member failing to pay his assessment in thirty days from the date of notice forfeits his membership, the time in which payment is to be made is not to be computed from actual date of notice, or from the day mailed, but from the time at which it would be received by the member in the regular mode of carrying the mail. National Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Miller, 85 Ky. 88.

Where the by-laws of a mutual benefit company give it the right to forfeit a policy for non-payment of dues by the insured for thirty days, a custom of the company to allow an extra ten days before enforcing the forfeiture does not give the insured the

Where notice is required to be given by publication, the time runs from the last day on which the notice is published.¹

The fact that the company owes the member a less sum than that due upon the assessment is no excuse for its nonpayment.² Nor is it any defence that enough was due the member from the society to offset the assessment, where the amount due belongs to a distinct fund of the lodge.³

The members of subordinate lodges are entitled to notice of assessments according to the laws of the order, and are not bound to pay without such notice.⁴

Payment of assessments not being necessarily a personal duty, neither insanity, absence, nor sickness constitute any excuse for nonpayment.⁵

Notice to the insured will be proper, although there has been an assignment of the policy of which no notice has been given to the company.⁶

right to claim the extra time in all cases when proved to be merely a matter of favor. Jones v. National Mut. Ben. Assoc. (Ky.), 2 S. W. Rep. 447.

1. Wetmore v. Mut. Aid & Ben. L. Ins. Assoc., 23 La. An. 770.

But in this as in other matters respecting the giving of notice, the parties may provide otherwise by contract. Weakly v. Northwestern Ben. & Mut. Aid Assoc., 19 Bradw. (Ill.) 327. Or waive the giving of any notice whatever. Hollister v. Quincy Mut. F. Ins. Co., 118 Mass. 478.

2. Hollister v. Quincy Mut. F. Ins. Co., 118 Mass. 478.

3. Ancient Order United Workmen v. Moore, 1 Ky. L. Rep. 93.

4. Siebert v. Chosen Friends, 23 Mo. App. 268; Coyle v. Kentucky Grangers' Mut. Ben. Assoc. (Ky.), 2 S. W. Rep. 676; Agnew v. Ancient Order United Workmen, 17 Mo. App. 254.

And it is held that personal knowledge derived otherwise than through a regular notice is not binding upon a member of such order. In the first case above cited, the court said: "There are many cases where a person must, at his peril, act upon the knowledge of a particular fact, however derived, or upon such information as should reasonably put him upon enquiry. But wherever the special law of the notice prescribes the form and manner in which it is to be given, especially when a forfeiture may result, the party to be affected will, as a general rule, not be bound by notice given in any form or manner. Thus, when a man's rights are to be adjudicated in a court of justice, he is entitled to just the form, manner and time of notice that are directed by the statute; otherwise he will not be bound by the proceedings, although bodily present in the court room, seeing and hearing all that may be done. The endorser of a promissory note may have a personal knowledge of the maker's intention not to pay, or of his failure to pay, at maturity. Yet the holder cannot subject him to any liability without a notice of the dishonor, given in the form, time and manner established by commercial law and usage. . . . That contract was visible in the printed laws of the association, and in her acceptance of them in her application for membership."

A similar case was that of Covenant Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Spies, 114 Ill. 467, in which the court said: "It was competent for the contracting parties to fix their own terms in this respect, and, having fixed them, they must abide by them. Thirty days after the date of the notice, but not until then, the parties having contracted, if the money is not paid the certificate shall be void. There was, therefore, no obligation to make a tender, in the absence of a notice, for the purpose of preventing a forfeiture."

See also Garretson v. Equitable Mut. L. Assoc., 74 Iowa 419.

5. Carpenter v. Centennial Mut. L. Assoc., 68 Iowa 453; s. c., 56 Am. Rep. 855; Hawkshaw v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 29 Fed. Rep. 773; Yoe v. B. C. Howard Masonic Mut. Ben. Assoc., 63 Md. 86.

6. Branin v. Mercer Co. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 28 N. J. L. 92.

A release by a mutual fire company of its claims against its insolvent policy holders, on compromise, is no defence to an action against another policy holder for his delinquent assessments.¹ But after the assignee has become a member of the company, and assumed the responsibility of membership by giving a new premium note, or otherwise, the notice should be given to him.²

In the absence of provisions to the contrary, the company may accept in payment either money, or its equivalent in notes, checks, or other property.³

3. Action On.—The incorporated benefit society is not restricted to its remedy by forfeiture and suspension for nonpayment of dues and assessments, but may have its appropriate action upon the contract,⁴ provided the contract or the constitution and by-

Defendant, having purchased insured property, took an assignment of the policy, and sent it to the secretary of the company to approve the transfer, which was done by endorsement on the policy and entry on the company's books; but, owing to a by-law requiring the execution of a premium note by the new owner before the delivery to him of the approved policy, it was retained for the execution of such note, which defendant informed the company he would make on the first convenient opportunity. This was neglected, and a loss occurred, on which defendant was assessed as a policy-holder, and, on refusal to pay, a bill was filed against him by the company. Held, that defendant's property was not insured, and the bill should be dismissed. Cranberry Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Hawk (N. J.), 14 Atl. Rep. 745.

1. Crawford v. Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co. (Pa.), 12 Atl. Rep. 844.

Where the constitution of a mutual benefit society provides that the financial reporter of a subordinate lodge shall receive all moneys due the lodge, and give a bond for the discharge of his duties, and authorizes no other person to receive or decline payment of assessments, and a notice of assessment states that assessments must be paid to the financial reporter only, a tender of payment to the secretary, an officer not under bond, and his refusal to accept it on the ground that the member is suspended, are ineffectual to bind the society, though it is customary for the secretary and other officers to receive such payments. Lazensky v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 3 N. Y. Supp. 52.

2. Bowditch Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Winslow, 3 Gray (Mass.) 415.

3. Missouri Valley L. Ins. Co. v. Dunklee, 16 Kan. 158; Protection L. Ins. Co. v. Foote, 79 Ill. 361; Lyon v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 55 Mich. 141; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 354; Kline v. National Ben. Assoc., 111 Ind. 462; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 703.

As to the manner of making payment and the proper officer to receive payment, see Manson v. Grand Lodge A. O. U. W., 30 Minn. 509.

4. Planter's Ins. Co. v. Comfort, 50 Miss. 662; Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. French, 2 Cinn. (Ohio) 321.

The action is strictly legal. McCulloch v. Indiana Mut. F. Ins. Co., 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 50.

Extent of Liability on Deposit Note.—“The whole amount of the deposit note,” which the directors of insurance companies are by statute allowed to sue for and collect upon default made in the payment of an assessment, means only the whole amount of the note as it stood reduced by all payments of assessments which have at any previous time been made thereon, and without interest. Bangs v. Bailey, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 630.

Power of Assignee.—He was held not to be by assignment for benefit of creditors vested with the judicial power of the directors to ascertain and apportion the amount to be paid on each premium note on account of losses by the company, nor can he maintain an action against the makers of such notes for assessments which he has levied on account of losses, and the expenses of levying the assessment. Hurlburt v. Carter, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 221.

Remedy of Foreign Company.—A provision in the charter of a foreign mutual fire insurance company, that if any member shall neglect to pay any assess-laws do not leave it optional with the member to remain such or to withdraw at pleasure.¹ To maintain such action the association must show strict compliance with all the provisions of its laws in making the assessment and giving notice thereof, and if the manner of notifying is not prescribed it must show personal notice.²

ment upon his deposit note, an action may be brought for the whole amount of the note, and the money thus collected shall remain in the treasury of the company, and the balance thereof, after contributing to the payment of losses and expenses, be repaid to the member at the expiration of his policy, is not a penal statute; and a member, neglecting to pay an assessment, is liable for the full amount of his note in an action brought in this commonwealth setting forth the note, the laying of the assessment, notice thereof to the defendant, his failure to pay the same, and his consequent liability to pay the whole note. Jones v. Sisson, 6 Gray (Mass.) 288.

Evidence.—In such action the record of losses kept by the company is prima facie evidence of such losses having occurred. People's Mut. Ins. Co. v. Allen, 10 Gray (Mass.) 297; West Branch Ins. Co. Macklin, 66 Pa. St. 34.

In an action by a mutual life insurance company against a member for assessments, where the defendant denies having the policy when called upon to produce it, the entries in the company's books, and the application for the policy after the signature thereto has been verified by the defendant, are competent evidence of membership. New Era Life Assoc. v. Rossiter, 132 Pa. St. 314.

Where the defendant files an affidavit under the Pennsylvania act of May 1st, 1876, § 56 (P. L. 53), the plaintiff is bound to prove its claim as if the statutory provision which makes an assessment certificate prima facie evidence of the validity of the assessment had not been enacted. Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Gackenbach, 115 Pa. St. 492.

In an action by a mutual insurance company against one of its members, for an assessment made on a deposit note, where the note itself recites the receiving of a policy, such recital is prima facie evidence that a policy has been issued; and it is no ground for a new trial that only an abstract of the policy was introduced in evidence by the company. New England Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Belknap, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 140.

Pleading—Demand.—If the charter of a mutual insurance company require the directors to publish a notice of the assessments laid upon the premium notes, and that the members shall pay within thirty days after, or be liable in a suit for the whole of the note, it is not necessary in such suit specially to aver such notice and neglect; it is sufficient to say that the defendant, though often requested, refused, etc., and that the time limited by the by-laws is passed. Missouri S. M. F. etc. Co. v. Spore, 23 Mo. 26.

1. The right of election does not exist where the member is at liberty to either pay the assessment or terminate his membership by not paying it. In re Protection L. Ins. Co., 9 Biss. (U. S.) 188, holding that in such a case no action will lie.

2. Demand and Notice.—Although ch. 79, Me. Rev. Stat. 1841, requires a demand before a mutual insurance company can maintain an action for an assessment, yet if the charter subsequently enacted provides that such action may be brought after notice in a paper, the provisions of the charter control the statute. York Co. Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Knight, 48 Me. 75.

Pleading and Evidence.—In an action by a mutual fire insurance company to recover an assessment upon a deposit note, an averment, in the declaration, that the directors "made, agreeably to their act of incorporation and by-laws, an assessment" on said note, is sufficiently answered, under St. 1852, ch. 312, § 14, by a denial "that any such assessment has been made as is set forth in the plaintiff's declaration," to authorize the defendant at the trial to deny the validity of the assessment. People's Equitable Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Arthur, 7 Gray (Mass.) 267; holding also that the plaintiff could not maintain an action to recover an assessment laid upon one class only of holders of their policies without proving that they have adopted the Stat. of 1849, ch. 107, which author-

The defences to an action on an assessment are various. They are most frequently based upon some illegality in the assessment itself or irregularity in making it,¹ though there are many others which may be set up to defeat the action.²

ized them to divide their risks into classes.

Presumptions.—Where a promissory note, on its face, is payable at such time or times as the directors of a mutual insurance company may, agreeably to their charter and by-laws require, the presumption is that it was given and taken as and for a premium or deposit note, and no recovery can be had on such a note unless it has been duly assessed. Sands v. St. John, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 628.

Liability on Note.—The plaintiff asked the court to instruct the jury that their verdict should be for the interest due on the note, the assessments claimed and interest thereon from the time they were severally payable. The court refused, and instructed the jury that the liability of defendants must be determined by them from the evidence. Held, that this was not erroneous, but it may be rebutted by showing fraud, illegality or gross mistake in making the assessments. The onus of rebutting it is on the defendant, and wide latitude should be allowed. People's F. Ins. Co. v. Hartshorne, 90 Pa. St. 465.

1. The directors of a mutual insurance company may divide the property insured by them into classes, under St. 1849, ch. 104, § 2, from time to time, as the policies are issued; and after the full amount of one hundred thousand dollars is subscribed to be insured in each class, the policies will take effect, and one who becomes insured thereafter cannot object, in an action to recover an assessment upon his deposit note, that the proceedings were irregular. Citizens' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Sortwell, 8 Allen (Mass.) 217.

2. Valid Defences.—That assessment was grossly excessive. Lehigh Valley F. Ins. Co. v. Dryfoos (Pa.), 9 Atl. Rep. 262. An unfulfilled parol agreement of the company to make a loan of money in consideration of his execution of the note and the damages resulting from a breach of such agreement, or that he has rescinded the contract by returning the policy and demanding the note. Life Assoc. of America v. Cravens, 60 Mo. 388. That a gross mistake has been made or fraud, practiced in making the assessment. People's F. Ins. Co. v. Hartshorne, 90 Pa. St. 465. Or the illegality of the policy for noncompliance by a foreign company with the laws of the State regarding foreign corporations. Lamb v. Lamb, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 420. Or that the note was given for an amount prohibited by law. Otis v. Harrison, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 210. That there has been a compromise of the claim by the directors and a cancellation of the policy and a surrender of the note. Tolford v. Church, 66 Mich. 431; Wadsworth v. Davis, 13 Ohio St. 123; York Co. Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Turner, 53 Me. 225; Hyde v. Lynde, 4 N. Y. 387; Campbell v. Adams, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 132. And see Miner v. Judson, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 300. That there is no law authorizing such companies to do business. Barbor v. Boehm, 21 Neb. 450. Or any other matter which brings in issue the validity of the contract under which such liability is claimed.

Insufficient Defences.—It is no defence to an action for an assessment either that the company has not accepted its charter or has not otherwise conformed to the law in respect to securing corporate existence and powers. Traders' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Stone, 9 Allen (Mass.) 483; Appleton Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Jesser, 5 Allen (Mass.) 446; Citizens' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Sortwell, 8 Allen (Mass.) 217; Sands v. Hill, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 651; Cooper v. Shaver, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 151; Brouwer v. Appleby, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 158; Currie v. Mutual Assoc. Soc., 4 Hen. & M. (Va.) 315; s. c., 4 Am. Dec. 517; Nashua F. Ins. Co. v. Moore, 55 N. H. 48; Providence F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Murphy, 8 R. I. 131; Judah v. American L. S. Ins. Co., 4 Ind. 333; Yard v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 10 N. J. Eq. 430; s. c., 64 Am. Dec. 467; Hope Mut. etc. Ins. Co. v. Beckmann, 47 Mo. 93; Fell v. McHenry, 42 Pa. St. 41. Or that the company is insolvent. Alliance Mut. Ins. Co. v. Swift, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 433; Sterling v. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co., 32 Pa. St. 75; s. c., 72 Am. Dec. 773; Conigland v. Ins. Co., Phill. Eq. (N.

VIII. FORFEITURE AND SUSPENSION OF CONTRACT—1. Distinguished from Expulsion.—In addition to the actions for the recovery of benefits and losses, it often becomes necessary to apply to the courts for preventive relief. An injunction is the proper remedy to prevent illegal expulsion or deprivation of the benefits of membership. It will be shown that if the right to expel a member is based upon a violation of disciplinary or doctrinal rules the party must exhaust his remedies within the organization.¹ And that the only question which can be raised in such cases is whether the lodge or tribunal had jurisdiction, proceeded according to its own laws and regulations, and whether the by-laws establishing the offence and prescribing the punishment were valid. These questions will first be enquired into by a court, and if no irregularity or invalidity is found, it will not interfere.²

Courts do not exercise visitatorial powers over voluntary associations or their proceedings, except to prevent the violation of some law of the State, or to protect or enforce some right already acquired.³

Car.) 341; s. c., 98 Am. Dec 89; Carey v. Nagel, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 244; Vanatta v. New Jersey Mut. L. Ins. Co., 31 N. J. Eq. 15. Or that a vote was cast for the cancellation of all its policies by the company, and that the insured did not assent to such cancellation. Alliance Mut. Ins. Co. v. Swift, 10 Cush. (Mass.) 433; Sterling v. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co., 32 Pa. St. 75; s. c., 72 Am. Dec. 773; Conigland v. Insurance Co., Phill. Eq. (N. Car.) 341; s. c. 98 Am. Dec. 89. Or that there is a want of insurable interest. New England Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Belknap, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 140; Com. v. Massachusetts Mut. F. Ins. Co., 112 Mass. 116; Boot & Shoe Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Melrose etc. Congregational Soc., 117 Mass. 199; Cumings v. Sawyer, 117 Mass. 30; Columbia Ins. Co. v. Buckley, 83 Pa. St. 293, 298; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 172.

When the charter of a mutual insurance company provides that, in an action for the recovery of assessments, the certificate of the secretary shall be prima facie evidence of the assessment and amount due. Or even, in the absence of such provision, if the plaintiff proves its claim without showing so large an excess in the assessment as in itself satisfies the jury of fraud or gross mistake, it is entitled to recover. The burden of showing fraud or misconduct is on the defendant when he relies on that as a defence. Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Gackenbach, 115 Pa. St.

Where such evidence is supplemented by proof that, while the defendant was insured, deaths occurred among the members, for which he was assessed, and notice thereof was given him, it is proper, in the absence of any contradictory testimony, to instruct the jury to find for the plaintiff. New Era L. Assoc. v. Rossiter, 132 Pa. St. 314.

1. In an action on a certificate issued by an order, it is not necessary, in order to set up a forfeiture, to show that assured was suspended or expelled from such order. Hogins v. Supreme Council of Champions of the Red Cross, 76 Cal. 109. See VIII, 2, herein.

2. Van Houten v. Pine, 36 N. J. Eq. 133; Fritz v. Muck, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 69; Olery v. Brown, 51 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 92; Loubat v. LeRoy, 15 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 1; Sperry's Appeal, 116 Pa. St. 391; Riddell v. Harmony F. Co., 8 Phila. (Pa.) 310; Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571; Littleton v. Blackburne, 45 L. J. Ch. 219; 33 L. T. 641; Labouchere v. Wharncliffe (Earl), 13 Ch. Div. 346; 41 L. T. 638; 28 W. R. 367; Richardson-Gardner v. Freemantle, 24 L. T. 81; 19 W. R. 256; Hopkinson v. Exeter (Marquis), 5 L. R. Eq. 63; 37 L. J. Ch. 173; 16 W. R. 266; Dawkins v. Antrobus, 17 Ch. D. 615; 44 L. T. 557; 29 W. R. 511; Fisher v. Keane, 11 Ch. Div. 353; 49 L. J. Ch. 11; 41 L. T. 335.

3. Mayor v. Journeymen Stone Cutters' Assoc. (N. J.), 20 Atl. Rep.

But if there is found injustice or capricious disregard of the members' rights, or any invalidity in the by-law, upon whose provisions the proceeding is based, an injunction will be granted to restrain the threatened injustice, even though no property rights are involved.

If the expulsion has already occurred without regard to a member's legal rights, a court of law will issue a writ of mandamus compelling the officers of an incorporated association to restore him.¹

2. Essentials.—The well settled rule that the enforcement of by-laws and ordinances concerning discipline, qualification, and doctrine, although such enforcement results in the expulsion of members of other than business corporations and voluntary associations,² must always be distinguished from its corollary that courts do uniformly entertain jurisdiction where such expulsion amounts to a forfeiture of property interests.³

A suspension is in effect a conditional forfeiture, which leaves in the suspended member a right similar to that of a mortgagor of property to redeem pending foreclosure. A suspension only deprives the member of the benefits of membership. Some affirma-

In Gregg v. Massachusetts Med. Soc., 111 Mass. 185; s. c., 15 Am. Rep. 24, it appeared that a medical society, incorporated under a charter empowering it to expel its members, summoned the plaintiffs, who were members, to appear before a board of trial, composed of members, to answer charges preferred by a committee that the plaintiffs had violated the by-laws of the society by conduct unworthy honorable physicians and members of the society, in practicing according to a certain exclusive theory or dogma, and belonging to an association whose purpose was at variance with the principles of the society and tended to disorganize it. The plaintiffs filed a bill in equity against the society, the board of trial and the committee preferring charges alleging that it was the defendants' intention to expel the plaintiffs only for practicing homeopathy; that the body to try them was wrongly constituted, and that the proceedings were irregular and void. It was held, on demurrer, that the court had no jurisdiction to interfere by injunction.

1. Fuller v. Trustees of Academic School etc., 6 Conn. 532; Green v. African M. E. Soc., 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 264; Delacy v. Neuse River Nav. Co., 1 Hawks (N. Car.) 274; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 636 (1820); Medical & Surgical Soc. v. Weatherly, 75 Ala. 248; Com. v. Pennsylvania Benefit Inst., 2 S. & R. (Pa.)

141; Roehler v. Mechanics' Aid Soc., 22 Mich. 86; State v. Georgia Med. Soc., 38 Ga. 608; s. c., 95 Am. Dec. 408; State v. Cartaret, 40 N. J. L. 295; State v. Adams, 44 Mo. 570; Evans v. Philadelphia Club, 50 Pa. St. 107; Manning v. San Antonio Club, 63 Tex. 166; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 639; Doyle v. New York Ben. Soc., 3 Hun (N. Y.) 361.

But before the member will be entitled to the remedy by writ of mandamus he must exhaust the internal remedies provided by the association's constitution and by-laws. Screwmen's Ben. Assoc. v. Benson, 76 Tex. 552; s. c., 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 239 n.; German Reformed Church v. Com., 3 Pa. St. 282; White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 329; Olery v. Brown, 51 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 92.

2. See EFFECT UPON CONTRACT OF CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS III, 7, supra, and the distinction between forfeiture and suspension of contract and expulsion just noticed.

3. Otto v. Journeymen Tailors' P. & Ben. Union, 75 Cal. 308; Thompson v. Tammany Soc., 17 Hun (N. Y.) 305; Mulroy v. Knights of Honor, 28 Mo. App. 463; Pulford v. Fire Department, 31 Mich. 458; Bauer v. Samson Lodge, 102 Ind. 262; Schmidt v. Abe Lincoln Lodge, 84 Ky. 490; Supreme Council of the Order of Chosen Friends v. Garigus, 104 Ind. 133; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 298; Olery v. Brown, 51 How. Pr. (N.

tive action by the society or lodge is necessary to a forfeiture, and the by-laws under whose operation the member is deprived of benefits are not self-executing to the extent of expelling the member and depriving him of all rights growing out of his connection as a member. Nor is the mere act of the secretary, in marking the member's account suspended, sufficient.¹

But such by-law or provision in the contract may undoubtedly operate to deprive the delinquent member of the benefits of the contract of insurance contained in his contract of membership, without other action than the proper entry in the books of the society, and perhaps without the latter.²

Y.) 92; Austin v. Searing, 16 N. Y. 112; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 665; White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 329.

1. Millard v. Supreme Council American Legion of Honor, 81 Cal. 340; People v. Theatrical Mechanical Assoc., 8 N. Y. Supp. 675; Knights of Honor v. Wickser (Tex.), 12 S. W. Rep. 175; Columbia Ins. Co. v. Buckley, 83 Pa. St. 293; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 172; Olmstead v. Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 50 Mich. 200; Scheu v. Grand Lodge Independent Foresters, 17 Fed. Rep. 214; Suppel v. Iowa State Ins. Co., 58 Iowa 29.

In Grand Lodge A. O. U. W. v. Brand (Neb.), 46 N. W. Rep. 95, it was held that the fact that a member of a mutual benefit association was addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors, contrary to the rules of the order, cannot be set up after his death in defence to an action on the certificate issued to him, and conditioned to be void unless he complied with all the rules of the order, where no objection was made and no forfeiture declared on this account during his lifetime, though the members of the association knew or might easily have ascertained his habits; also that the fact that a motion was made to suspend a member of a mutual benefit association, when the presiding officer refused to put the motion to a vote, on the ground that it was contrary to the rules, did not constitute such a suspension as would defeat the right of recovery of the beneficiary in his certificate after his death.

2. Rood v. Railway Passenger & Freight Conductors' Mut. Ben. Assoc. 31 Fed. Rep. 62; Blanchard v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 33 N. H. 9.

Although a condition be attached to a policy, declaring it void on a failure to pay an assessment upon a premium note within a specified time, yet the policy does not thereby become ipso facto void. The company may, at its option, declare the policy cancelled, and notify the delinquent, or may waive its right of avoidance. In the former case the premium note is not liable to assessment for the payment of future losses. In the latter the contract relation is not wholly dissolved, but the protection of the policy is suspended until the default of nonpayment is removed. Columbia Ins. Co. v. Buckley, 83 Pa. St. 293; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 172; Union Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Spaulding, 61 Mich. 77; Akers v. Hite, 94 Pa. St. 395; s. c., 39 Am. Dec. 792; Sans v. Hill, 55 N. Y. 18; New Hampshire Ins. Co. v. Rand, 24 N. H. 428. Though there may have been a total loss of property insured prior to the expiration of the term covered by the policy. Swamscott Machine Co. v. Partridge, 25 N. H. 369; New Hampshire F. Ins. Co. v. Rand, 24 N. H. 428; Thropp v. Susquehanna Mut. F. Ins. Co., 125 Pa. St. 427; Bangs v. Skidmore, 21 N. Y. 136. See also Mayer v. Attorney General, 32 N. J. Eq. 815.

A policy of insurance provided that the insured should pay such sums as might be assessed by the directors of the company, and that upon failure to pay an assessment, after notice duly given, the directors might annul the policy. Notice of an assessment was mailed to plaintiff, who at that time was out of the country. Upon receipt of notice, however, plaintiff forwarded the amount, but the company refused to receive it, the policy having been previously annulled. Held, that upon the loss of the property by fire, plaintiff could not recover. Greeley v. Iowa State Ins. Co., 50 Iowa 86.

Violation of Temperance Pledge.—Where the by-laws provided that "any member violating his pledge shall be by

As regards the mere matter of membership, a party must first exhaust the remedies provided by the organization itself, such as appealing from a subordinate to a superior body.¹

But it is otherwise where the action of the society, if allowed to stand, would amount to a forfeiture of property rights, and it is immaterial whether such rights are evidenced by a distinct instrument, or are inseparably connected with the contract of membership. This observation is peculiarly applicable to a certificate of membership in a benefit society, entitling a member to pecuniary benefits and his family to insurance money at his death. These the courts will not allow to be forfeited for a mere infraction of a by-law regulating personal conduct, except in a very strong and clear case.²

In this respect there is no difference between incorporated and voluntary associations, and when in a case affecting the latter a court has acquired jurisdiction, it will follow, and enforce, as far as applicable, the rules applying to incorporated bodies of the same character.³

But even property rights may be lost as a result of expulsion, under and in accordance with rules that are reasonable, and in the very act suspended," and that "the suspension shall work deprivation of all rights and claims of membership pending trial," and the application for membership contained a stipulation that suspension or expulsion should forfeit the rights to benefits, it was held that a violation of the pledge by a member, although not known to the society until after his death, of itself, and without trial on charges therefor, worked a forfeiture of the right of the beneficiaries under his certificate of membership to a payment agreed to be made on his death, provided he was at the time a member in good standing. Smith v. Knights of Father Mathew, 36 Mo. App. 184. See also Supreme Council Royal Templars of Temperance v. Curd, 111 Ill. 284. Compare Supreme Lodge Ancient Order United Workmen v. Zuhlke, 30 Ill. App. 98, affirmed; 129 Ill. 298, holding that notice will be required, although the rules of the society do not require notice.

Expulsion by Directors.—Where the charter of a club, incorporated for patriotic and social purposes, gives the power to expel members, "the causes which justify their expulsion, and the manner of effecting the same," to be regulated by the by-laws which the corporation is empowered to make, a by-law is valid which gives a board of directors the power to expel a member "for acts or conduct which they may deem disorderly or injurious to the interests or hostile to the objects of" the club, with right of appeal to a meeting of the club. Com. v. Union League of Philadelphia (Pa.), 19 Atl. Rep. 1030.

1. Lafond v. Deems, 8 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 344; 81 N. Y. 508; White v. Brownell, 4 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 162; s. c., 2 Daly (N. Y.) 329; Harrington v. Workingmen's Ben. Assoc., 70 Ga. 340; Carlen v. Drury, 1 Ves. & B. 154; Poultney v. Bachmann, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 49; Grosvenor v. United Society of Believers, 118 Mass. 78; Karcher v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 137 Mass. 368; Chamberlain v. Lincoln, 129 Mass. 70; Dolan v. Court Good Samaritan, 128 Mass. 437.

2. Supreme Council of the Order of Chosen Friends v. Garrigus, 104 Ind. 133; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 298; Bauer v. Samson Lodge, 102 Ind. 262; Austin v. Searing, 16 N. Y. 112; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 665; Pulford v. Fire Department, 31 Mich. 457; Mulroy v. Knights of Honor, 28 Mo. App. 463; Oleroy v. Brown, 51 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 92.

As to the power of a new association succeeding an old one to enforce forfeiture for nonpayment of assessments made by the latter prior to its quitting business, see Abe Lincoln Mut. L. & Acc. Soc. v. Miller, 23 Ill. App. 341.

3. Otto v. Journeymen Tailors' P. & Ben. Union, 75 Cal. 308.

compliance with proper or prescribed rules of procedure, or by virtue of the express terms of a contract. Where time of payment of assessments is made of the essence of contracts, those made by a mutual insurance company with its members stand upon no better or different footing than those of other companies, and the adjudications upon the latter are applicable.¹ One who has become a member of such society is bound by a by-law making a transfer, by a mortgage or otherwise, avoid the policy, unless ratified by the directors.²

A verbal agreement at the time a policy was taken, that the date of payment of the premium should be extended beyond the time expressed, is of no avail in such a case.³

In most societies, however, it is provided in the by-laws forming a part of every contract, that the mere non-payment of an assessment or due shall operate to suspend or forfeit the contract. The parties have a right so to stipulate, and having done so in clear and express terms, the courts will give the contract due force and effect.⁴

1. See Mobile L. Ins. Co. v. Pruett, 74 Ala. 487; Catoir v. American L. Ins. etc. Co., 33 N. J. L. 487; Klein v. New York L. Ins. Co., 104 U. S. 88; Shaw v. Berkshire L. Ins. Co. 103 Mass. 254; Ayer v. New England Mut. L. Ins. Co., 109 Mass. 430; Williams v. Washington L. Ins. Co., 31 Iowa 541; Alabama Gold L. Ins. Co. v. Garmany, 74 Ga. 51; Security L. Ins. etc. Co. v. Gober, 50 Ga. 404; Gateman v. American L. Ins. Co., 1 Mo. App. 300; Franklin L. Ins. Co. v. Sefton, 53 Ind. 380; Akers v. Hite, 94 Pa. St. 394; s. c., 39 Am. Dec. 792.

2. Pfister v. Gerwig, 122 Ind. 567.

A provision that, upon failure to pay an assessment within 30 days from notice, the certificate shall be void, in the absence of any qualifying expressions, cannot be construed to render the policy only voidable at the option of the association. Bosworth v. Western Mut. Aid Soc., 75 Iowa 582.

3. Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Girard L. Ins. Co., 100 Pa. St. 172.

4. Rood v. Railway Passenger & Freight Conductors' Mut. Ben. Assoc., 31 Fed. Rep. 62; Borgraefe v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 22 Mo. App. 127, 142.

In the second case, the court said: "There is, in view of this provision, a plain distinction between this case and cases which have arisen under the constituting instruments of mutual insurance companies, and other benevolent orders of this character, where the governing statute recites that for the non-payment of dues, or other named delinquency, the member may be suspended by the lodge or other judicatory. Here the member is not suspended until the lodge or other designated judicatory exercises the power of suspension. The reason is that, whatever right the lodge or the order may have against the member for an infraction of its rules, must be sought in conformity with the laws and rules of the order. The remedy therein prescribed must be exhausted before resort can be had to the judicial courts. But where, as in this case, the suspension attaches by operation of law upon an event named and the member dies before the suspension has been set aside in conformity with the rules of the order, there can be no recovery upon his benefit certificate."

See also Olmstead v. Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 50 Mich. 200; Chamberlain v. Lincoln, 129 Mass. 70; Yoe v. B. C. Howard Masonic Mut. Ben. Assoc., 63 Md. 86; Madeira v. Merchants' Exchange Mut. Ben. Soc., 16 Fed. Rep. 749; 5 McCrary (U. S.) 258; Rood v. Railway Passengers' & Freight Conductors' Mut. Ben. Assoc., 31 Fed. Rep. 62; Illinois Masons' Ben. Soc. v. Baldwin, 86 Ill. 479; McDonald v. Ross-Lewin, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 87; American Mut. Aid Soc. v. Kilburn, 7 Ky. L. Rep. 750; Blanchard v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 33 N. H. 9.

It is sometimes provided in the rules

It is well settled that no forfeiture can be established, except for a violation of the precise conditions laid down.¹

If the constitution and by-laws of the lodge give the member the right of appeal, and some affirmative proceeding resulting in his expulsion or suspension has been consummated, he must exercise his right of appeal before resorting for redress to the courts, but it must appear that the lodge or society had jurisdiction, and had given notice and proceeded in a regular manner.²

Where the forfeiture is claimed under by-laws and proceedings under their provisions, they must appear reasonable, and the proceedings of the society must be in strict accordance with them, and regulations governing the relative rights and duties of grand and subordinate lodges, that the latter shall become suspended from the enjoyment of benefits for neglect to pay dues and assessments. In case of suspension under such provisions, the members of the subordinate lodge become reinstated without act or proceeding on their part upon the restoration of their lodge to its former right and charter. If, during such suspension, a member died, the right of the beneficiary to recover the insurance money is not lost but restored with the restoration of the lodge. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor v. Abbott, 82 Ind. 1.

And such a power reserved to the directors in the by-laws is equally binding and enforceable.

Coles v. Iowa State Mut. Ins. Co., 18 Iowa 425.

1. Bates v. Detroit Mut. Ben. Assoc., 51 Mich. 587.

A member expelled or suspended without notice or trial, has a cause of action against the association. Ludowski v. Polish Roman Catholic etc. Ben. Soc., 29 Mo. App. 337.

2. Chamberlain v. Lincoln, 129 Mass. 70; Mulroy v. Knights of Honor, 28 Mo. App. 463; Karcher v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 137 Mass. 368.

When an assessment is not made in accordance with the charter upon a deposit note, the failure to pay such an assessment does not work a forfeiture of the policy under the charter. Planters' Ins. Co. v. Comfort, 50 Miss. 662.

A vote by a company that, if the assessments upon its premium notes should not be punctually paid, the insurances previously made should be suspended, is of no validity, unless assented to by the insured. New England Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Butler, 34 Me.

451; Hamilton Mut. Ins. Co. v. Hobart, 2 Gray (Mass.) 543; Rosenberger v. Washington Mut. F. Ins. Co., 87 Pa. St. 207; Bradford v. Union etc. Ins. Co. (C. C. P. Pa.), 10 Ins. L. J. 551; Van Slyke v. Trampealeau Co. Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 48 Wis. 683; Great Falls Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Harvey, 45 N. H. 292.

A refusal to pay an illegal assessment for thirty days after demand will not render void a policy of insurance issued by a mutual insurance company, or defeat a subsequent assessment upon the same, although the by-laws authorize the directors to terminate the same in case of a refusal to pay assessments, and the directors, when making the assessments, voted that any policy, the holder of which should refuse to pay any assessment for thirty days after a demand on him, shall be void. Peoples' Mut. Equitable F. Ins. Co. Petitioners, 9 Allen (Mass.) 319.

Evidence that the delinquent was absent at the time the notice was mailed to his residence rebuts the presumption of its receipt by him which would ordinarily arise from the mailing of a notice to his place of residence. People v. Theatrical Mechanical Assoc., 8 N. Y. S. 675.

Where the constitution of a mutual benefit association provided that when an assessment was made the secretary should at once notify the members, and each member should pay the same within thirty days from the date of the notice under penalty of forfeiture, the omission to pay an assessment levied thirty-four days before the member's death was held to be no cause for forfeiture when the notice was not given until thirteen days after levy of the assessment. Knight v. Supreme Council Order of Chosen Friends, 6 N. Y. Supp. 427.

upon due notice to the accused, and an opportunity on his part to defend and explain his conduct.¹

Without these, the attempt of a lodge or its officers to suspend a member or a lodge of members, is a usurpation which cannot affect the rights or legal status of any one.²

It is evident that, after the liability under a contract of membership to pay insurance money has become fixed and executed by the death of the member, the right of forfeiture is at an end.³

A certificate is not forfeited by failure to pay the monthly dues for expenses after the association has stopped business.⁴ Provisions providing for forfeitures and penalties are construed strictly.⁵

3. Waiver.—Just what acts and circumstances will in all cases be construed as a waiver of the right to declare the rights of membership in a benefit society forfeited or suspended, has not been, and, in the nature of the case, cannot be definitely declared. It is, however, a generally recognized principle, that whatever clearly indicates an intention on the part of the society, acting through its duly appointed agents, not to take an advantage of a member's default, or amounts to a recognition of his claim to the continuing rights of membership, will bind the company and relieve the member from the consequences of his default. The receipt of payment of premiums or assessments, after breach of conditions, is the most common form of waiver, and will ordinarily be held to estop the insurer from alleging such breach as a ground of

1. Mullen v. Dorchester Mut. F. Ins. Co., 121 Mass. 171; Grand Lodge Ancient Order United Workmen v. Brand (Neb.), 46 N. W. 95; Bacon Ben. Soc. & L. Ins. Co., § 116.

Where a certificate provided that assessments should be payable within thirty days of the date of notice, payment within such thirty days was held sufficient to keep the certificate in force, though made by the beneficiary after the death of the member. Bankers' & Merchants' Mut. L. Assoc. v. Stapp, 77 Tex. 517.

Under by-laws providing that notice shall be given of assessment due before there shall be a forfeiture, notice to a member put in the mail, directed to him, but not shown to have reached him, is insufficient to support a forfeiture. McCorkle v. Texas Ben. Assoc., 71 Tex. 149.

Without a provision in the by-laws for the purpose of expiration or suspension for nonpayment of dues, it must be upon trial and after due notice. Com. v. Pennsylvania Beneficial Inst., 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 141; Com. v. German Soc., 15 Pa. St. 251; Borgraefe v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 22 Mo. App. 127; Diligent Fire Co. v. Com., 75 Pa. St. 291; Wachtel v. Noah Widows and Orphans' Soc., 84 N. Y. 28; s. c., 9 Daly (N. Y.) 476; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 478.

2. Hall v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 24 Fed. Rep. 450.

3. Olmstead v. Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 50 Mich. 200. And if by the terms of the certificate itself a member's rights stand suspended by nonpayment of dues, he cannot be reinstated to his rights by his beneficiary.

A member failed to pay certain dues required by the rules, and was accordingly suspended. After his death, the beneficiary paid the dues to the collector of the local society, but the receipt thereof was not authorized by the society itself. It was held that the society was not liable on said certificate. Brown v. Grand Council Northwestern Legion of Honor (Iowa), 46 N. W. 1086.

4. Burdon v. Massachusetts Safety Fund Assoc., 147 Mass. 360.

5. American Mut. Aid. Soc. v. Helburn, 85 Ky. 1; Mandego v. Centennial Mut. L. Assoc., 64 Iowa 134.

forfeiture.¹ It is in most cases a question of fact for the jury.² This presumption of waiver may be abutted.³

A long continued habit of receiving overdue assessments without question, may, in some cases, estop a company from insisting upon a forfeiture for nonpayment at a specified time.⁴

1. Mershon v. National Ins. Co., 34 Iowa 87; Lasher v. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co., 55 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 318; McDonald v. Supreme Council, Order of Chosen Friends, 78 Cal. 49; Martin v. New Jersey Ins. Co., 44 N. J. L. 273; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Lansing, 15 Neb. 494; Pomeroy v. Rocky Mountain Irs. & Sar. Inst., 9 Colo. 295; s. c., 59 Am. Rep. 144; Viele v. Germania Ins. Co., 26 Iowa 55; s. c., 96 Am. Dec. 83; Tobin v. Western Mut. Aid. Soc., 72 Iowa 261; Kline v. National Ben. Assoc., 111 Ind. 462; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 703.

It has been held sufficient to estop the society from insisting upon a forfeiture, if it received assessments after the death of a member. Millard v. Supreme Council American Legion of Honor, 81 Cal. 340.

In Erdmann v. Mutual Ins. Co., 44 Wis. 376, the assessments had been received by a local lodge, and it was held that the retention of them by the supreme court lodge, with knowledge of the facts, waived the forfeiture. See also Illinois Masons' Ben. Soc. v. Baldwin, 86 Ill. 479.

If after a first notice the right accrues to the company to consider the policy forfeited, the forfeiture will be waived by giving a second notice. Shay v. National Ben. Soc., 7 N. Y. S. Nat. Rep. 287.

An assessment by defendant on the premium notes of persons to whom it has issued policies, being payable absolutely, whether such policies have been forfeited or not, an acceptance of such a payment after a loss of which the company has notice, is not a waiver of any forfeiture. Joliffe v. Madison Mut. Ins. Co., 39 Wis. 111; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 35.

In the same case it was held that in the absence of a stipulation making the whole premium due on default as above described, acceptance of the whole after default, with notice of a loss which occurred during the default, is a waiver of the condition, and makes the insurer liable, such acceptance being inconsistent with any claim that the risk was suspended when the loss occurred.

But the court remarked: "If such condition had further provided that in case of default the whole cash premium should be considered earned, acceptance of the whole amount by the insurer after a loss would not be a waiver of the condition, or make the insurer liable for such loss; although such payment during the life of the policy would revive the risk from the date of the payment as to all of the insured property then remaining."

2. Kenyon v. Knights Templar etc. M. Mut. Aid Assoc. (N. Y.), 25 N. E. Rep. 299; United Brethren Mut. Aid Soc. v. Swartz (Pa.), 13 Atl. Rep. 769.

In Bosworth v. Western Mut. Aid Soc., 75 Iowa 582, the court having found that no general custom existed of waiving such defaults by accepting assessments after the prescribed time, and it not appearing that deceased had any knowledge of such custom, if any, except that it had been waived in a few instances as to himself, refused to disturb the finding that there had been a waiver as against the evidence.

In an action on a policy, the plaintiffs contended that this assessment was invalid, and that their policy was not forfeited nor suspended by their neglect to pay it. The court took an opposite view, and directed a verdict for the defendants. Held, that this was an error. Rosenberger v. Washington Mut. F. Ins. Co., 87 Pa. St. 207.

3. As where the company expressly asserted its right to insist upon the forfeiture. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Amerman, 119 Ill. 329.

4. Stylow v. Wisconsin Odd Fellows Mut. L. Ins. Co., 69 Wis. 224, where the right had been waived in sixty three previous similar instances.

A certificate issued by a mutual benefit association provided that it should be void unless assessments were paid within ten days after receiving notice but it appeared that it was the habit of the association to receive payments from the assured if made within sixty days from the time of notice, and the certificate remained uncanceled at the death of the insured. The association was held estopped to claim a forfeiture

But to make out a case based upon such a usage, it must be shown not only that assessments were habitually received when overdue, which would be a waiver in each case, but also that the insurer intended to waive the future prompt payment of assessments as one of the conditions of the contract, or that the assured had reasonable ground for believing, and did believe, that the condition had been waived.¹ There is some question as to the authority of a subordinate lodge to waive the positive requirements of the by-laws of the order.² The receipt of an assessment through mistake is no waiver.³ Nor does the receipt of an assessment constitute a waiver where the insurer had no knowledge of the breach of the condition.⁴

The same is true where, at the time of the receipt of the premium or assessment, it is stated that it is received on condition because the assessments were not paid within the ten days. Odd Fellows' Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Sweetser (Ind.), 19 N. E. Rep. 722*.

1. Crossman v. Massachusetts Ben. Assoc., 143 Mass. 435.

Where a mutual insurance company imposes forfeiture in case a loss occurs while its assessments are still unpaid, but its local agent receives past due assessments with knowledge of a loss and forwards them to the company, without notifying them of it, and they receive them, and two or three weeks afterward order the loss to be paid when adjusted, they cannot afterward refuse payment on the ground of the delay in paying the assessments, since they have waived that by receiving them when overdue and ordering payment. Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Bowen, 40 Mich. 147; Sands v. Hill, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 651; Viall v. Genessee Mut. Ins. Co., 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 440; Insurance Co. v. Slockbower, 26 Pa. St. 199; Tuttle v. Robinson, 33 N. H. 104.

But in Diehl v. Adams Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 58 Pa. St. 443; s. c., 98 Am. Dec. 302, after a policy had been forfeited by alterations in violation of the by-laws, the company passed a resolution directing an assessment on all policies "in force at this date;" the treasurer assessed the forfeited policy, and the assured paid the assessment. It was held not a waiver of the forfeiture.

2. Swett v. Citizens' Mut. R. Soc., 78 Me. 541; Miller v. Hillsborough Mut. F. Assoc., 42 N. J. Eq. 458; Borgraeve v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 22 Mo. App. 127; 26 Mo. App. 218. But see Manning v. Ancient Order United Workmen, 86 Ky. 136; Erd- mann v. Wisconsin etc. Ins. Co., 44 Wis. 376; Splawn v. Chew, 60 Tex. 532.

In Hoffman v. Supreme Council of American Legion of Honor, 35 Fed. Rep. 252, defendant having, through its duly appointed officers, after deceased had been suspended for delinquency in his assessments, continued to make calls on him for subsequent dues, and to receive the amounts called for, and the local council having, on full hearing of deceased's application for reinstatement, though not acting in all respects in conformity with the rules of the institution, granted such application, defendant was held estopped to deny that deceased was a member in good standing.

3. Elliott v. Lycoming etc. Ins. Co., 66 Pa. St. 22; s. c., 5 Am. Rep. 323.

Nor will the omission to pay an assessment work a forfeiture when the association has received from the member on assessments for losses occurring before he joined the association more than the amount of such unpaid assessment. Knight v. Supreme Council Order of Chosen Friends, 6 N. Y. Supp. 427.

4. Robertson v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 88 N. Y. 541; Gilbert v. North American F. Ins. Co., 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 43; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 543.

Where the custom of the company has been to receive overdue premiums only with the understanding that the insured was in good health, the receipt of an assessment, when he was not in good health, without knowledge of the fact, has been held not to amount to a waiver. Lewis v. Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co., 44 Conn. 73.

that the insured is in good health.¹ But a waiver may be established in such case, if further assessments and dues are paid and accepted, without any enquiry into the condition of the member's health.²

While it is true that a waiver will sometimes be presumed from an habitual usage or habit of receiving overdue assessments, yet one instance of the kind in the case of another member cannot be set up to bind the company in the particular case.³

It is not always necessary, to constitute a waiver of the forfeiture, that an assessment be actually paid. If, after a default, it recognizes the continued existence of the policy by notifying the assured that he is liable to suspension unless he at once pays, a waiver may be inferred.⁴ But the mere sending of assessment notices to members who have been suspended for nonpayment of assessments, for the purpose of inviting reinstatement, will not of itself amount to a waiver of the forfeiture.⁵

A clause in a certificate denying to agents the power to make, alter, or discharge contracts, waive forfeitures, or extend credits,

In case overdue assessments have been received by the company in ignorance of facts which, if known, would void the policy, the company may, upon discovering the facts, tender a return of the money and insist upon the forfeiture. Diboll v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 32 La. An. 179; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. McMillen, 24 Ohio St. 67.

But a forfeiture may be waived in such case by failure to offer to return the unpaid premium note, as required by the contract, although notice of the forfeiture was given. Johnson v. Southern Mut. L. Ins. Co., 79 Ky. 403.

1. Crossman v. Massachusetts Ben. Assoc., 143 Mass. 435; Rockwell v. Mutual L. Ins. Co., 27 Wis. 372; 20 Wis. 335; 21 Wis. 548; Unsell v. Hartford L. & A. Ins. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 443.

2. Rice v. New England Mut. Aid Soc., 146 Mass. 248.

3. Mobile L. Ins. Co. v. Pruett, 74 Ala. 487; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Girard L. Ins. Co., 100 Pa. St. 172; Marston v. Massachusetts L. Ins. Co., 59 N. H. 92; Thompson v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co., 2 Woods (U. S.) 547; 104 U. S. 252.

4. Olmstead v. Farmers' Mut. Ins. Co., 50 Mich. 200.

5. Mutual Protection L. Ins. Co. v. Laury, 84 Pa. St. 43.

If the amount of the premium is subject to reduction, by the allowance of dividends, and the company has been in the habit of notifying the assured of the amount of these dividends and of the balance to be paid in cash, and fails to give the customary notice, it is estopped from claiming forfeiture for nonpayment. Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Smith, 44 Ohio St. 156; s. c., 58 Am. Rep. 806; Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Doster, 106 U. S. 30.

The receipt of many assessments overdue, where the member was required at the time of payment to furnish certificates of health which were not furnished, does not amount to a waiver, or if the payment be extended as an act of kindness to a certain time, and be not made within that time. To constitute a waiver the insured must be induced by the company to do or omit to do some act which he would not otherwise have done or omitted. Illinois Masons' Ben. Soc. v. Baldwin, 86 Ill. 479. See also generally, Equitable Ins. Co. v. McCrea, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 541; Steele v. St. Louis etc. L. Ins. Co., 3 Mo. App. 207; Washoe Tool Mfg. Co. v. Hibernia F. Ins. Co., 66 N. Y. 613; 7 Hun (N. Y.) 74; Fowler v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 41 Hun (N. Y.) 357; Appleton v. Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co., 59 N. H. 541; s. c., 147 Am. Rep. 220; Protection L. Ins. Co. v. Foote, 79 Ill. 361; Southern L. Ins. Co. v. McCain, 96 U. S. 84; Insurance Co. v. Tullidge, 39 Ohio St. 240; Home L. Ins. Co. v. Pierce, 75 Ill. 426; Piedmont etc. Ins. Co. v. Fitzgerald, W. & W. (Tex.) 784.

does not apply to the secretary and general manager of the company.¹

4. Payment of Arrearages and Reinstatement.—Under provisions for the reinstatement of suspended members, the acts required being done, no proceeding or further recognition is necessary on the part of the society. The performance of the acts required is in itself effective for that purpose.²

The decision of the officers of a society on the sufficiency of an excuse for neglect to pay assessments is not conclusive. It is reviewable in the courts.³

It is immaterial that the restoration of a member's name to the list of members was not made until after his death.⁴ Unless it is provided that the mere fact of being in arrears shall operate to suspend a member, some action on the part of the society is neces-

1. Bankers & Merchants' Mut. L. Assoc. v. Stapp, 77 Tex. 517.

In Odd Fellows' Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Sweitser (Ind.), 19 N. E. Rep. 722, the assured made several payments about a month after the assessments were due, and paid the last assessment about two months after due at the home office of the association, when he was informed by the general manager that he was delinquent in still another assessment, and that an assessment would fall due on the following day, but no forfeiture was suggested. It appeared that notices of assessments stated that the agents were not authorized to extend the time of payment of assessments, and that any delay beyond the stipulated time would be at the risk of the member. The assured died about twenty days after his last payment, leaving two assessments unpaid, and the policy remaining uncanceled. It was held that it was for the jury to say whether there had not been a waiver of any forfeiture.

The statement of the secretary of a mutual benefit association to the insured that he need not pay his dues until certain charges then pending against him, which, if true, made the policy forfeitable, were disposed of, is not ultra vires, but binds the company. Jones v. National Mut. Ben. Assoc. (Ky.), 2 S. W. Rep. 447.

Where a member, relying on the promise of the manager to draw on him for assessments, and, being misled by the fact that such drafts have been twice made on him, is suspended for nonpayment of an assessment for which no draft was made, and cannot be reinstated because his health has become impaired, the association is estopped to insist on a forfeiture. McCorkle v. Texas Ben. Assoc., 71 Tex. 149.

2. Manson v. Grand Lodge Ancient Order United Workmen, 30 Minn. 509.

A by-law of defendant, that if a member is in arrears when taken sick he shall not be entitled, by paying up such arrearages, to benefits during such sickness, is not waived by the acceptance of arrearages from a member, he being in arrears at beginning of sickness. Nagel v. Glasburger, 10 N. Y. Supp. 503.

3. Dennis v. Massachusetts Ben. Assoc., 120 N. Y. 496.

4. Connelly v. Masonic Mut. Ben. Assoc. (Conn.), 20 Atl. Rep. 671; Dennis v. Massachusetts Ben. Assoc., 120 N. Y. 496.

In the first case it appeared that the power of a local lodge of Masons to suspend a member for nonpayment of dues was given by the constitution of the district lodge, which provided that certain notice should be given the delinquent member, and gave the district deputy grand master power to determine when a member alleged to have been illegally suspended should be restored. It was held that the decision of such deputy, affirmed by the grand master, that the notice given was not proper, and that the member should be restored, followed by a vote of the local lodge restoring his name as of the date of the alleged suspension, when made in good faith, bound the association, membership in which being contingent on continued membership in a local lodge.

sary.¹ A member may have paid all arrearages, and may still stand suspended for noncompliance with other provisions of the by-laws.² Where the constitution and by-laws give a member the right to appeal from the order of suspension for nonpayment of assessments, he is not required to pay such assessments until an order of reversal is actually made.³

IX. REMEDIES AND DEFENCES ON CERTIFICATES.—The certificates of membership differ greatly in form, but being in effect policies of life insurance, the fundamental principles of practice and pleadings which govern actions upon other insurance policies are applicable.⁴

The federal courts have jurisdiction of actions upon contracts between benefit societies and their members, as in other cases, and the same circumstances of residence, etc., will warrant the parties in removing a case brought in a State court to the federal courts.⁵

Where the policy issued by a mutual insurance company provides that the only action maintainable on the policy shall be to compel the association to levy the assessments agreed upon, and where its conditions are such that if a levy were ordered by the court, the association will only be liable for the sum collected, and the only mode of enforcing the policy in the first instance is by a suit in equity, such a provision in the policy is valid.⁶

In many States a different rule prevails; and although a suit in equity may be maintained to compel the company to levy an assessment and pay the proceeds to the beneficiary, still it is not necessary for the policy holder to resort to it, for, when the insurance company refuses to make an assessment, it violates its

1. McDonald v. Supreme Council Order of Chosen Friends, 78 Cal. 49.

In this case the by-laws of a mutual benefit society provided that a member, failing to pay an assessment in thirty days, should be suspended by the society at its next meeting. By the relief laws, any member so delinquent should forfeit all rights to benefits under the relief fund laws, and should be reported suspended from the "beneficiary membership," and should be declared suspended by the society, and should stand suspended until payment of arrearages and compliance with the other laws governing reinstatements. It was held that compliance with "the other laws governing reinstatements, which required a new certificate of the medical officer, and a re-election, was not necessary where no suspension had been declared by the society.

As to the status of parties and the nature of their title to a fund made up of advance dues and assessments, where the enterprise was abandoned before any risks were taken or business done, see Brown v. Stoerkel, 74 Mich. 267.

2. Crossman v. Massachusetts Ben. Assoc., 143 Mass. 435.

3. Vivar v. Supreme Lodge of Knights of Pythias (N. J.), 20 Atl. Rep. 36.

4. Elkhart Mut. Aid etc. Assoc. v. Houghton, 98 Ind. 149; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 514.

5. Home Ins. Co. v. Morse, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 445.

6. Eggleston v. Centennial Mut. L. Assoc. of Iowa, 19 Fed. Rep. 201; distinguishing Lueder v. Hartford L. & A. Ins. Co., 12 Fed. Rep. 465.

In the case of Eggleston v. Centennial Mut. L. Assoc. of Iowa, 19 Fed. Rep. 201, the policy sued on contained the following clause: "The only action maintainable on this policy shall be to compel the association to levy the assessments herein agreed upon, and if a levy is ordered by the court, the assocontract, and becomes liable to the beneficiary for damages caused by such violation. Such damages, like all damages for breaches of contract, can be recovered by an action at law.¹

ciation shall be liable under this policy only for the sum collected under an assessment so made." The court said: "It is not for the court to comment on the wisdom or folly of such contracts. If parties choose to enter into them they are bound by their terms, in the absence of fraud, unless they are contra bonos mores. There is nothing to void the agreement the parties voluntarily entered into, and hence this court adheres to the decision heretofore made in this case—viz., that redress must be sought in equity alone."

An action at law upon a certificate of mutual insurance cannot reach questions outside of such certificate, so as to enable the plaintiff to recover benefits otherwise than as specified in the certificate. Bailey v. Mut. Ben. Assoc. (Iowa), 27 N. W. Rep. 770; Tobin v. Western Mut. Aid Soc., 72 Iowa 261; Ranis Barger v. Union Mut. Aid Assoc., 72 Iowa 191. If the recovery desired is outside the contract contained in the certificate, in an action at law, only nominal damages can be recovered. Newman v. Covenant Mut. Ben. Assoc. (Iowa), 33 N. W. Rep. 662.

In Nerskin v. Northwestern Endowment Assoc. of Minn. 30 Minn. 406, the court said: "In view of the well known character of the contracts of many of these so-called mutual protection associations, it is possible that if the articles of association and by-laws of defendant were set out, it might appear that this was the extent of the benefits of membership. But these articles and by-laws are neither set out in the pleadings nor introduced in evidence. Hence, we are left to construe this language of the certificate of membership by itself. There is nothing in it suggestive of the idea that defendant's liability is dependent upon collections received from an assessment. Upon its face we think it amounts to an absolute undertaking to pay a sum of money, the amount of which is to be determined by the number of contributing members. Hence, we think the complaint states a cause of action, although it neither alleges the actual receipt of money upon an assessment to meet the loss nor a neglect to make such assessment." See also Harl v. Pottawatomie Co. Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 74 Iowa 39.

Against Voluntary Association.—

Where the by-laws of an unincorporated association provide for the payment of death losses out of the treasury, or, if the fund therein be insufficient, by special assessment against the members, the beneficiaries of any member who dies have no claims as such against the surviving members, but are only entitled to enforce the means of payment provided by the by-laws. Hammerstein v. Parsons, 38 Mo. App. 332.

1. O'Brien v. Home Ben. Soc., 117 N. Y. 318; s. c., 4 N. Y. Supp. 275; Peck v. Equitable Acc. Assoc., 5 N. Y. Supp. 215; Freeman v. National Ben. Soc., 42 Hun (N. Y.) 252; Cumming v. Mayor of Brooklyn, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 596, 602; Fulmer v. Fitzgerald Equitable Acc. Assoc., 5 N. Y. Supp. 837; Lueder v. Insurance Co., 12 Fed. Rep. 465; Earnshaw v. Sun Mut. Aid Soc., 68 Md. 465; Jackson v. Northwestern Mut. Relief Assoc., 73 Wis. 507; Burland v. Northwestern Mut. Ben. Assoc., 47 Mich. 424; Taylor v. National Temperance Relief Union, 94 Mo. 35; Kansas Protective Union v. Whitt, 36 Kan. 760; s. c., 59 Am. Rep. 607; Kansas L. Assoc. v. Lemke, 40 Kan. 142; Excelsior Mut. Aid. Assoc. v. Riddle, 91 Ind. 84; Hankinson v. Page, 12 Civ. Proc. Repts. (N. Y.) 279, 288; Union Mut. Acc. Assoc. v. Frohard, 25 N. E. Rep. 642.

An omission of the officers of the company to make an assessment, which, if made, would produce a fund equal to or greater than, the claim, would create an obligation against the society the same as if it had funds on hand from which to make the payment. The company cannot lie by and omit to put in operation the means possessed by it to obtain the fund and omit payment because of its own neglected duty. This would be to take advantage of its own wrong, and it would operate as a fraud on the beneficiary under the certificate. Freeman v. Society, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 252.

In Earnshaw v. Sun Mut. Aid Soc., 68 Md. 465, the court said: "In fact, we have neither found nor been referred to any case in which it has been expressly decided that no action at law will lie against the corporation before an assessment had been made. In Essender v. Mut. Endowment Assessment Assoc.,

The recovery should be for the maximum amount insured, unless the defendant shows by pleadings and proof that such sum should be reduced.¹

Plaintiff cannot recover for benefits accruing after the commencement of his action.²

59 Md. 463, and Yoe v. B. C. Howard, Masonic Mut. Ben. Soc., 63 Md. 86, the certificates were of the same character as in this case and the actions were at law, but no objection was made to them on that ground. In Eggleston v. Centennial Mut. L. Assoc., 18 Fed. Rep. 17; 19 Fed. Rep. 201, the instrument contained a clause that 'the only action maintainable upon this policy shall be to compel the association to levy the assessments herein agreed upon,' and the decisions were based exclusively on that clause. And in Smith v. Covenant Mut. Ben. Assoc., 24 Fed. Rep. 685, the opinion as we read it, concedes that an action at law would lie if it was grounded upon a refusal by the company to make the assessment." The court has made a mistake as to the effect of Smith's Case, cited supra. That case holds that "to maintain this action (at law) it must appear that the association has in its hands the money collected by assessment, which it ought to pay to the plaintiffs as the beneficiaries entitled to the same. If the association has failed to make the required assessment, or, having made an assessment, has failed to collect the same, the plaintiffs' remedy is in some other form of action or proceeding."

1. Lawler v. Murphy (Conn.), 20 Atl. Rep. 457; Kaw Life Assoc. v. Lemke, 40 Kan. 142; Lueder v. Hartford L. & A. Ins. Co., 4 McCrary (U. S.) 149; s. c., 12 Fed. Rep. 465; Elkhart Mut. Aid & Relief Assoc. v. Houghton, 103 Ind. 286; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 514; Excelsior Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Riddle, 91 Ind. 84.

Where a by-law provides that on the death of a member, when there is not enough money in the treasury to pay the claim, there shall be an assessment on the members, from which, if it is sufficient, the claim shall be paid in full, and it appears that on the death of a member the corporation wrongfully refused to make such assessment, and that, if made at the proper time, the assessment would have paid the claim in full, it is proper, when afterwards decreeing that such an assessment should be made, to direct that, if the assessment prove insufficient to pay the claim in full, the association shall make up the deficiency. Union Mut. Acc. Assoc. v. Frohard (Ill.), 25 N. E. Rep. 642.

A declaration containing no allegation of neglect to make the assessment provided for, and assigning no breach, except of a promise to pay the face value of the policy, is fatally defective, and is not cured by the verdict. Curtis v. Mutual Ben. Life Co., 48 Conn. 98.

In Elkhart Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Houghton, 103 Ind. 286, a complaint was held sufficient which did not state the number of members of the association against whom assessments might be made to raise the money with which to pay in full or in part the amounts named in the certificate.

Contra.—To recover in an action at law, it is necessary to show what is the amount realized from one assessment. It may be more or less than the face of the policy. In the absence of evidence there can be no presumption that it will equal the face of such policy, for that sum is specified as the greatest sum payable, thus clearly implying that it may be less. O'Brien v. Home Ben. Soc., 117 N. Y. 318.

The complaint and proof should show the sum which would have been realized on an assessment, or that an assessment would have yielded returns. Martin v. Equitable Acc. Assoc. of Binghamton, 9 N. Y. Supp. (Sup. Ct.) 16; Freeman v. Society, 42 Hun 253.

In Peck v. Equitable Acc. Assoc. of Binghamton, 5 N. Y. 215, it was found by the trial court that if an assessment had been levied as provided by the policy, it would have produced at least a sum equal to the face of the policy, and the court awarded the plaintiff the full amount of the policy with interest and cost.

Demand—Where the contract stipulates that proofs of death shall be furnished to the secretary of the association, the complaint is sufficient if it show that such proofs were furnished to the association, and it is not necessary to aver therein a demand before suit brought. Excelsior Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Riddle, 91 Ind. 84.

2. Baltimore etc. Employés' Relief Assoc. v. Post, 122 Pa. St. 579.

If an action at law would result in only nominal damages, or would for other reasons furnish no remedy, or one that is inadequate, a party may sue in equity for a specific performance of the contract in the form of a decree, compelling an assessment to be levied.¹

Where an ordinary civil action affords an adequate and specific legal remedy, the beneficiary cannot resort to a proceeding by mandamus.²

1. Covenant Mut. Ben. Assoc. v. Sears, 114 Ill. 108; Van Houten v. Pine, 36 N. J. Eq. 133. In the first case the court gave as a reason that, as the corporation is not organized for pecuniary profit, has no surplus, and relies entirely upon the mortuary assessments made upon each death for the payment of benefits to the beneficiaries of a decedent, it would be difficult to realize anything by execution; and the association stands as a trustee of a fund in the hands of its numerous members, but belonging to the beneficiaries, which can be called in by assessment for their use.

Estoppel.—A mutual company which, after the death of the assured, assesses his administrator upon the policy, and receives payment from him, is estopped, in a suit on the policy by the administrator, from denying its liability. Harl v. Pottawattamie Co. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 74 Iowa 39.

Change from Legal to Equitable Action.—Under Code Iowa, §§ 2514, 2689, providing that an error of plaintiff in the kind of proceedings adopted shall not cause an abatement or dismissal, but merely a change into proper proceedings, and a transfer to the proper docket, and that, in furtherance of justice, pleadings may be amended by the insertion of material allegations, and other statutes relative to amendments, a petition at law for damages, on a mutual benefit certificate, may, after reversal of judgment thereon, be changed to one in equity by amendment praying that defendant be compelled to levy an assessment on its members to pay the certificate, and such amendment does not introduce a new cause of action. Newman v. Covenant Mut. Ben. Assoc., 76 Iowa 56.

In Harl v. Pottawattamie Co. Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 74 Iowa 39, the plaintiff was allowed, in an action on the policy, to amend his petition so as to ask for a levy by mandamus.

2. Excelsior Mut. Aid. Assoc. v. Riddle, 91 Ind. 84. See also MANDAMUS, vol. 14, p. 95.

"Mandamus does not purport to adjudge or decide any right. It is rather in the nature of an award of execution than of judgment. It is the mode of compelling the performance of acknowledged duty or enforcing an existing right rather than deciding what that right or duty is. The award is no finality. It concludes nothing. If the writ is denied, the relator cannot have error, and if granted, the award could not be pleaded in law." Burland v. Mutual Ben. Assoc., 47 Mich. 427.

So where a loss had been adjusted by the proper officers, and sixty days had elapsed after such adjustment before the commencement of the action at law, and the company had neglected and refused to make any assessment to pay the loss, mandamus was held to be a proper remedy to compel the levy of such an assessment. Harl v. Pottawattamie Co. Mut. Fire Ins. Co. (Iowa), 36 N. W. Rep. 880.

In Miner v. Michigan Mut. Ben. Assoc. (Mich.), 31 N. W. Rep. 763, mandamus was asked for to compel the company to make an assessment upon the members of the association sufficient to pay the judgment, and the company in defence set up that they had made an assessment and were proceeding in good faith to collect it. Held, that plaintiff having judgment, and the execution returned unsatisfied, no further proceeding could be taken at law, and the mandamus must be refused. Such further proceedings, if any are proper, must be had under How. St. Mich., § 8153, providing that when a judgment shall be obtained against a corporation and the execution thereon shall be returned unsatisfied, the circuit court may sequester the property of such corporation.

Execution.—After a general judgment on a benefit certificate execution cannot be limited to a particular fund. Seitzinger v. New Era L. Assoc., 111 Pa. St. 557; McKnight v. Mutual L. Assoc., 15 W. N. C. 400.

The assessments paid into the treas-

It follows that the rights growing out of such contract of insurance may be enforced like external contracts growing out of the dealings of the organization with third parties; and the insured may recover benefits or his beneficiary a death loss by action at law where a legal remedy is otherwise adequate and appropriate, notwithstanding the fact of membership.

Where the liability of the society is contingent upon the performance of a condition by the insured or his beneficiary, substantial performance, or performance according to the terms of the contract or provisions of the constitution and by-laws, must be shown,¹ ury of a benefit society by its members become the property of the society and the members have no further claim or right to it. Swett v. Citizens' M. Relief Soc., 78 Me. 541; York Co. Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Myers, 11 W. N. C. 541; Brown v. Orr, 112 Pa. St. 233. And a member of the association, having no interest in the fund, cannot maintain a suit to enjoin its payment. Elsev v. Odd Fellows' M. R. Soc., 142 Mass. 224; 7 N. E. Rep. 844; 2 N. Eng. Rep. 667.

1. In Bishop v. Empire Order of Mut. Aid, 43 Hun 472, the defence set up was the failure of the deceased member to designate a beneficiary. The charter provided for a beneficiary fund, to be maintained by the order for this object, which should be under the control of the grand lodge, and from which a specified sum should be paid over to the families, heirs or legal representatives of deceased or disabled members, or to such person or persons as such deceased member may, while living, have directed, and also that the manner and time of payment, and the persons to whom payment was to be made, should be regulated by the rules and by-laws of said grand lodge. The issue of a certificate was also provided for which it was required should set forth the name of the person to whom the benefit should be paid. No certificate having ever been issued, the court held the defendant not liable, and considered the making of such designation a condition precedent to the defendant's liability. See also Order Mut. Companions v. Griest, 76 Cal. 494.

Payment of Advance Fee.—Where the defence was nonpayment of fee required as a condition precedent to membership, it appeared that the certificates had been forwarded to the deceased who was one of its agents; that the accounts between him and the company were confused; that on one occasion they had returned to him part of a remittance sent by him on the ground that it was an overpayment; that they had published his name in the list of members and had levied a mortuary assessment on him as if he were a member. It was held that this evidence warranted the jury in finding that the fee had either been paid or its payment waived as a condition precedent. Bankers' & Merchants' Mut. L. Assoc. v. Stapp, 77 Tex. 517.

Proofs of Loss.—A benefit society may enforce a by-law requiring an appeal to be taken before suit brought on the membership certificate from a subordinate to a superior council or lodge, but such by-law is void in so far as it declares the decision of the appellate tribunal final so as to bar a resort to the courts. Supreme Council of Order of Chosen Friends v. Forsinger (Ind.), 25 N. E. 129.

Proofs of Disability.—The by-laws of a benefit society may require the approval of proofs of a member's disability to be satisfactory to the subordinate council, but such subordinate council has no power to finally reject a claim. Albert v. Order of Chosen Friends, 34 Fed. Rep. 721.

Knowledge of By laws.—As the by-laws form part of the contract, a replication alleging ignorance of the same, and the contracting of debts and expenditures of money through mistake constitutes no cause of action, and a complaint setting up these facts as a basis for recovery is demurrable. Gray v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 118 Ind. 293.

Good Standing.—In an action by the beneficiary on a certificate of mutual benefit insurance, it appeared that decedent on the day he was notified of his suspension for nonpayment of a de-unless a waiver of such conditions is proven.¹

If a member has paid assessments as demanded, and complied with all the requirements of the constitution and by-laws, the fact that no certificate has been issued to him, and that he has not designated a beneficiary, cannot be set up to defeat his action.²

A provision in a certificate that "no question as to the validity of an application or certificate of membership shall be raised, unless such question be raised within the first two years from and after the date of such certificate of membership, and during the life of the member therein named," embraces the defence of fraud of the insured and beneficiary in obtaining the certificate.³

linquent assessment of which he had had no notice, paid the same and all prior assessments due, and a subsequent one which had not yet become delinquent; that therefore when all assessments had been paid and accepted by the association decedent gave notice of the substitution of the plaintiff for the original beneficiary in the regular manner; that after decedent's suspension, when one meeting having taken place and no action having been taken in reference thereto, he was not reinstated into full membership until shortly after this notice and shortly before his death; it was held that there was a sufficient finding that decedent was "a member in good standing" at the time of his notice. Millard v. Supreme Council American Legion of Honor, 81 Cal. 340.

Resort to Internal Remedy.—A beneficiary is entitled to recover on a valid claim, though he did not exhaust the remedies known to the society for the recovery of claims, as required by its laws before bringing suit, where he is prevented from doing so by the wilful refusal of the proper officer to certify to his sickness, from which refusal no appeal is given by the laws of the society. Supreme Sitting Order of the Iron Hall v. Stein, 120 Ind. 270.

Disability—Meaning of.—Where the agreement is to pay benefits to "every member who, through sickness or other disability, is unable to follow his usual business," must pay benefits to a member who becomes a lunatic. McCullough v. Expressman's Mut. Ben. Assoc. (Pa.), 19 Atl. Rep. 355.

Where the object of an association was to relieve its members while they are unable to work by reason of sickness or injury, total inability to labor, provided for by the constitution, was held not to mean inability to labor at the same occupation, but if the member is able to work at other employments the benefits do not accrue. Baltimore & Ohio Employees' Relief Assoc. v. Post, 122 Pa. St. 579.

The constitution of a relief fund association provided that a member "permanently disabled from following his or her usual or other occupation" was entitled to a benefit; and in another section defined such disability as one which should "permanently prevent the member from following any occupation whereby he or she can obtain a livelihood." Held, that one who, disabled from his own profession, had been working at another totally dissimilar one, was not entitled to a benefit. Albert v. Order of Chosen Friends, 34 Fed. Rep. 721.

1. A policy required all insured to make out within thirty days a statement under oath, etc., of the loss. C, within the required time, notified the company of his loss. The company replied to this, repudiating all liability on the ground of nonpayment of assessment. Held, that such an act was a waiver by the company of any further proof of loss by C. Planters' Ins. Co. v. Comfort, 50 Miss. 662.

An insured declared for a loss. The company pleaded that he had altered the buildings, which he traversed by his replication. Held, that under the pleadings evidence of waiver by the company was inadmissible. Diehl v. Adams Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 58 Pa. St. 443; s. c., 98 Am. Dec. 302.

2. Bishop v. Grand Lodge, 112 N. Y. 627.

3. Wright v. Mutual Ben. L. Assoc., 118 N. Y. 237; Vivar v. Supreme Lodge

Payment to the trustee of the beneficiary designated in the policy, and having the same in possession, constitutes a defence,¹ as does a forfeiture or assignment of the contract by the insured during his lifetime.² But when a forfeiture is relied upon it must be clearly established according to the contract or by-laws.³

Whether assessments were made according to the constitution and by-laws of a benefit society is a question of law, which, being left by the court to the decision of a jury, constitutes error.⁴

Where the action is by an assignee, the fact that he has no insurable interest in the life of the insured does not bar his recovery, where it is shown that the insured himself procured the insurance and paid the premiums.⁵

The defences are as various and numerous as in other actions on contract, and the general rules governing liability and discharge therefrom must be consulted.⁶

of Knights of Pythias (N. J.), 20 Atl. Rep. 36.

Where the constitution and regulations provided that, on examination of an applicant and approval of the application by the supreme lodge, and the signing of the certificate of membership, and the forwarding of it to the subordinate lodge, the contract should be complete, it was held that the certificate having been forwarded to the subordinate lodge, and retained on the ground of fraud in the application, the beneficiary might recover without producing it, no evidence of the fraud being given by the corporation. Lorscher v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 72 Mich. 316.

1. Butler v. State Mut. L. Assurance Co., 8 N. Y. Supp. 411.

2. The assignment is not rendered void by the fact that the insured died insolvent, when it is not shown that he was insolvent at the date of the assignment. Milner v. Bowman, 119 Ind. 448.

3. Stanley v. Northwestern L. Assoc., 36 Fed. Rep. 75.

Where the by-laws of a mutual benefit society require written notice of forfeiture of a policy, proof of any other notice is properly excluded in an action thereon. Dial v. Valley Mut. L. Assoc., 29 S. Car. 560.

Nonpayment of assessment after loss does not defeat an action on the policy, where the nonpayment is of an assessment falling due after loss of the property insured. Such provision refers to the contract of indemnity. Seyk v. Millers' Nat. Ins. Co., 74 Wis. 67;

Knights of Honor v. Wickser (Tex.), 12 S. W. Rep. 175.

4. Bagley v. Grand Lodge Ancient Order United Workmen, 131 Ind. 498.

5. Milner v. Bowman, 119 Ind. 448.

Where a certificate provided that the benefit should be payable to E. L. V., the wife of V., or to such other person or persons as he might subsequently direct, and a similar power was given to V. by the constitution of the endowment rank, it was held that the relationship of the payee was not material in the contemplation of the insurer, and that, as in New Jersey, it is not necessary that the payee should have an insurable interest in the life of the insured, the fact that V. knew his statement as to the relationship of E. L. V. to be false did not preclude a recovery on the certificates. Vivar v. Supreme Lodge of Knights of Pythias (N. J.), 20 Atl. Rep. 36.

6. New Agreement.—Where by the terms of the policy a member who had forfeited his certificate had a right to be restored upon certain conditions, it was held that a reinstatement upon compliance with these conditions, constituted no consideration for a stipulation exacted by the society from the beneficiary that it should be liable to pay him only a part of the amount to which he would be entitled under the terms of the policy. Davidson v. Old People's Mut. Ben. Soc., 39 Minn. 303.

Estoppel.—A person is not estopped from claiming compensation from the railroad for an injury resulting from a collision by having been previously compensated by the relief association for the injury which he then untruthfully alleged was caused by malaria, jaundice, constipation, etc., as the railroad and the association are separate corporations; and while the former guaranties all contracts of the latter, yet the association funds are sufficient to meet all liabilities likely to arise. Owens v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 35 Fed. Rep. 715.

Double Liability.—The by-law of a railroad relief association, requiring its members to release the railroad company from any claim for damages before applying to the association for relief, is not against public policy, as it simply puts a claimant to his election whether he will look to the railroad company or the relief association for compensation. Owens v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 35 Fed. Rep. 715. As to the defence of double insurance, see Bock v. Ancient Order of United Workmen, 75 Iowa 462. As to payment by levy of assessment under peculiar by-law provisions, see Wadsworth v. Jewelers' etc. Co., 9 N. Y. Supp. 711.

Expulsion of Insane Member.—A member of a mutual benefit insurance association cannot be expelled from the association so as to deprive him of his right to mortuary benefits by proceedings had while he is insane, when no notice of the proceedings has been served upon him, and the expulsion is based mainly upon his admission of the matters charged against him, made to the tribunal by which he was tried. Supreme Lodge Ancient Order United Workmen v. Zuhlke (Ill.), 21 N. E. Rep. 789.

Violation of By-law—Drunkennes.—Where, in an action on a certificate issued by a temperance order, it appeared that the member died from the excessive use of liquor; that he agreed in his written application to comply with all the requirements of the order as a condition precedent to his being entitled to the benefits; that the certificate contained a clause in substance and effect the same as the application, it was held that plaintiff could not recover. Hogins v. Supreme Council of Champions of Red Cross, 76 Cal. 109.

Release.—A member of a railroad relief association, whose constitution provided that the railroad's liability should be released before the benefit should be paid, had designated his mother as his beneficiary, and upon his death his wife and minor child, the persons legally entitled to damages, did not release the railroad company, but brought suit, and recovered damages by a compromise. It was held that the mother had no right of action against the relief association for the benefits. Fuller v. Baltimore etc. Employes Relief Assoc., 67 Md. 433. See also State v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 36 Fed. Rep. 655.

No Signature to Application.—An application for a membership in a mutual insurance company, made a part of the certificate of membership, stated that it "must be signed by the applicant, or the certificate, if issued, will be void." An application was made by a husband for the wife, at her direction, and was signed by him with the knowledge and consent of the agent of the company. The action of the husband was afterwards approved by the wife. Held, that the signature to the application became in law the signature of the wife, and is binding upon the insurance company. Somers v. Kansas Protective Union, 42 Kan. 619.

Limitations—Injunction.—Where the certificate provides that all suits to recover claims under it are to be begun within six months after death of the assured, and the beneficiary is enjoined from receiving payment until the six months have expired, suit may be brought after the removal of the injunction at any time within the statute of limitations. Earnshaw v. Sun Mut. Aid Soc., 68 Md. 465.

Same—Part Payment.—See Kentucky Mut. Security Fund Co. v. Turner (Ky.), 13 S. W. Rep. 104.

Under a clause in a policy limiting the right of action to a period of "six months after the happening of the death on account of which the action is brought," the limitation does not begin to run until the cause of action matures, following McConnell v. Iowa Mut. Aid Assoc. (Iowa), 43 N. W. Rep. 188; Matt v. Iowa Mut. Aid Assoc. (Iowa), 46 N. W. Rep. 857.

Ultra Vires.—A religious society, formed under the auspices of a church, which includes a mutual life insurance scheme as one of its features, cannot defend against a suit on one of its policies upon the plea of ultra vires, when it has been receiving the assessments on the policy. Matt v. Roman Cath. Mut. Protective Soc., 70 Iowa 455.

But, a charter of a fire insurance company authorizing its members to take out insurance on their property, and to provide for a lien on the same

Against Officers.—Under some circumstances the officers and agents of benefit societies, like directors of ordinary business corporations, incur personal liability to persons who have contracted with them in a common name assumed by them, whether they hold out such name as that of a corporation or of a purely voluntary association.¹

Fraud is the usual basis of personal liability in such cases, but this is not always the case.²

to secure assessments, does not authorize a husband to take out such policy on separate property of his wife. It is void in its inception as ultra vires, and cannot be validated by an assignment to the wife. Froehly v. North St. Louis Mut. F. Ins. Co., 32 Mo. App. 302.

Withdrawal of Member.—Where the by-laws of a life insurance association provided that a member may at any time withdraw from this association by giving notice in writing of such intention to do so, and paying all assessments and dues to date, it was held in an action on his certificate after his death, that a notice of withdrawal by decedent was a bar to the action, though the company had not assented or dissented thereto, nor erased his name. Cramer v. Masonic L. Assoc., 9 N. Y. Supp. 356.

Misrepresentations in Application.—The benefits of Rev. Stat. Mo. 1879, §§ 5976, 5977, which declare that in certain instances misrepresentations shall not be a defence, do not apply to this class of insurance. Whitmore v. Supreme Lodge Knights & Ladies of Honor, 100 Mo. 36.

Where the rules of a mutual aid association forbade the insurance of any person over 50 years old, and the agent thereof and the insured, both knowing of this restriction, conspired together to falsely represent that the applicant was under 50 years, the company was held not bound by the agent's acts. Hanf v. Northwestern Masonic Aid Assoc. (Wis.), 45 N. W. Rep. 315.

1. The authorities are conflicting on this point, it having been held in numerous early cases that such liability does not attach to directors unless they are either actual partners or actually assumed a personal responsibility. See Morawetz Priv. Corp., §§ 748, 749, and cases cited. But several recent well considered cases have gone very far to establish the doctrine that pretended directors and officers of private corporations should be held to a joint and several liability in all cases where they have assumed to act as such for a corporation which does not in fact exist, and contracted in the assumed common or corporate name, unless they act in good faith and upon an honest belief that a corporation has been actually formed and that no estoppel exists in their favor against persons who have dealt and contracted with them in such common name. See next note; also OFFICERS OF PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.

2. In Lawler v. Murphy (Conn.), 20 Atl. Rep. 457, it was held that where a certificate recited a contract between the member and the State Insurance Fund A. O. H., and being signed by its officers, the liability of the latter was sufficiently shown by a complaint which alleged that they were jointly engaged in carrying on a life insurance business, and that they entered into the contract under the said name, the court said: "The defendants assign for further cause for demurrer, that it appears from the contract declared on that the defendants made no personal agreement upon which they were personally liable, but that the contract was signed by them only as officers of the organization mentioned therein. This issue is raised, not as a question of fact, but as a question of law upon the pleadings. As a matter of law, does the contract upon its face show that the defendants made no personal contract upon which they were personally liable? The complaint alleges that they were jointly engaged in carrying on a life insurance business, under the name of the Connecticut State Insurance Fund, and that they entered into the contract sued upon. If the facts are so, should they not be held liable? Does the contract, as a matter of law, preclude that state of facts? If they had simply been sued as individuals, upon a contract headed with the name of the association, and signed by them, respectively, as president, secretary and treasurer, as ap-

Directors of incorporated associations are liable personally to a member or beneficiary of a matured claim to the extent of all appears to have been the case in Hitchcock v. Buchman, 105 U. S. 416, cited by the defendants, and the complaint had contained no allegation that they were carrying on the insurance business under a certain name, and made the contract with Thomas Lawler, the question would be a difficult one, especially if it appeared that the association was incorporated. . . . It seems clear, without pursuing the subject matter further, that this cause for demurrer cannot be sustained. Individual members of an unincorporated association are liable for contracts made in the name of the association, without regard to the question whether they so intended or so understood the law, and even if the other party contracted in form with the association and was ignorant of the names of the individual members composing it. And the individual members of such an association do not acquire any immunity from individual liability by force of the statutes, which provide that any number of persons associated and known by some distinguishing name may sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, by such name; and that the individual property of the members shall not be liable to attachment or levy of execution in a suit brought against the association."

In Davison v. Holden, 55 Conn. —, under a similar state of facts, the court held, "As a matter of law the plaintiff, in giving credit to the associate name; gave credit to the individuals who, upon enquiry, should be found to stand behind it." See also Hitchcock v. Buchanan, 105 U. S. 416.

In Grayson v. Willoughby, 78 Iowa 83, defendants were the directors of the association, and dissolved the corporation by consolidating it with another, to which it attempted to turn over its insurance. The latter corporation refused to issue a policy to plaintiff in lieu of the one held by her, alleging that she had contracted a disease rendering her uninsurable. Code Iowa, §§ 1071, 1072, provides that intentional fraud by persons having the management of a corporation, such as the diversion of the assets from their proper uses, whereby insufficient funds remain to meet its liabilities, will constitute a cause of action in favor of any person injured thereby. The court held that under said statute plaintiff could recover for the damages sustained by reason of the consolidation, which would be measured by the amount she had paid into the association. Also that the application for insurance to the company with which the defunct corporation was consolidated would not amount to a ratification of the act of consolidation, so as to bar her action for damages.

In disposing of the first point the court said: "It is charged in the petition that 'defendants herein, as officers and directors of the said association, abstracted and received therefrom large sums of money, the exact amounts of which these plaintiffs are unable to state, and that the said transfer of the said Cosmopolitan Mutual Benefit Association to and consolidation with the said Mutual Benefit Association was fraudulent, and without any authority of law, and that by reason therefor, and as a consideration therefor, these defendants received further large sums of money, the exact amounts of which the plaintiffs are unable to state, all of which was and is in gross fraud and violation of the rights of these plaintiffs.' At the first reading of the abstract in this case some of us were of the opinion that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover more than nominal damages. But if it be true that the plaintiff has paid $100, and has lost her insurance by the acts of the defendants, and the defendants received large sums of money by reason of the consolidation, their act was a gross fraud, and the plaintiff ought at least to recover of them the amount she had paid, and which now appears to be wholly lost to her."

On the second point, the objection of plaintiff's estoppel, the court was equally explicit, saying: "It is set forth as ground of demurrer that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover damages because she ratified the action of the defendants by applying to the Mutual Benefit Association for membership in that corporation. Her application was no ratification, such as to estop her from now asserting any claim she may have against the defendants for fraud. We think the demurrer should have been overruled."

misappropriations and misapplications of assets whereby the association is rendered insolvent.¹

A receiver appointed after insolvency may maintain such action.²

The action lies in favor of the beneficiaries of an unincorporated association for any deficiency they may be unable to collect by enforcement of the by-laws, where the funds have been misappropriated by the directors.³ See also OFFICERS OF PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.

X. MATTERS OF PRACTICE—1. Parties.—The statutory provisions governing parties to civil actions will, to a great extent, be found applicable to actions on certificates, whereon members of benefit societies are entitled to benefits and their beneficiaries to death losses. The latter have, after the death of a member on whose life the insurance was held, a vested interest within the meaning of statutes requiring actions to be brought in the name of the real party in interest, as has often been recognized in actions on regular policies, and the principle is applied to benefit certificates,⁴ although the beneficiary be not privy to the contract.⁵

The administrator and the heirs cannot join in an action on a policy of insurance for a loss occurring after the death of the assured.⁶

But where the policy is payable to the assured, "his executors, administrators or assigns" for the benefit of wife and children, the personal representative is held to be the proper party plaintiff.⁷

1. Stewart v. Lee Mut. F. Ins. Assoc., 64 Miss. 499. In this case the funds in the hands of the company arising from dues and advance assessments had been appropriated by the directors to the payment of its privilege, taxes and attorney's fees, stripping it of its assets and rendering it insolvent.

2. Appeal of McCarty, 110 Pa. St. 379.

3. Hammerstein v. Parsons, 29 Mo. App. 509.

4. York County Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Myers, 11 W. N. C. (Pa.) 541.

5. Beardslee v. Morgner, 4 Mo. App. 139; Barbaro v. Occidental Grove No. 16; 4 Mo. App. 429.

6. Pfister v. Gerwig, 122 Ind. 567.

An administrator of the insured may maintain an action on such certificate though his petition needlessly aver that the action is for the benefit of the creditor. Rindge v. New England Mut. Aid Soc., 146 Mass. 286.

7. Fairchild v. Northeastern Mut. L. Assoc., 51 Vt. 613; Grattan v. National L. Ins. Co., 15 Hun 74; Massachusetts Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 98

Ill. 324; Connecticut L. Ins. v. Luchs, 108 U. S. 498; Catland v. Hoyt, 78 Me. 355; Stowe v. Phinney, 78 Me. 244; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 796.

The bringing of an action in the name of the administrator of a deceased member of a mutual benefit association on a certificate of membership payable to the member's heirs, is a harmless error, where the administrator is also the sole heir of such deceased member. Peet v. Great Camp Knights of Maccabees of the World (Mich.), 47 N. W. Rep. 119.

Statutory Provisions.—The provisions of Stat. Mass., 1877, ch. 204 (Pub. Stat., ch. 115, § 8), that beneficiary corporations may establish by assessment a fund "to be held by such association until the death of a member occurs, and then to be forthwith paid to the person or persons entitled thereto," and the similar language of Stat. 1882, ch. 195, § 2, which increased the number of those for whose benefit such corporations could insure, do not give a right of action on the certificate to the persons for whose benefit the contract is expressed to be made. Upon the death

If, however, a certificate provide for the payment of different sums to different parties, they cannot join in one suit, but must bring separate actions, each for his individual share.¹

Whether, if the amount of the insurance be payable to certain persons equally, they may join in one action, seems not to be settled.² Upon principle it would seem that they might and thus avoid a multiplicity of suits.

2. Pleading.—The complaint on a benefit certificate must allege due performance of whatever conditions are, in the contract or by-laws, or both, made conditions precedent to the society's liability. Proofs of death of the insured are generally required to be furnished to the officers within a specified time. In the absence of a good and sufficient cause excusing it, compliance with this requirement must be alleged and shown.³

The requisites of a declaration on an ordinary insurance policy are entirely applicable to certificates of membership.⁴

of a member intestate, such action is properly brought by the administrator. Flynn v. Massachusetts Ben. Assoc. (Mass.), 25 N. E. Rep. 716.

1. Emmeluth v. Home Ben. Assoc. (N. Y.), 25 N. E. Rep. 234; Frazer v. Phoenix M. L. Ins. Co., 36 Up. Can., Q. B. 422; Keary v. Mutual Reserve Fund L. Assoc., 30 Fed. Rep. 359; Campbell v. National L. Assoc. Co., 34 Up. Can., Q. B. 35.

2. Covenant Ben. Mut. Assoc. v. Hoffman, 110 Ill. 603.

3. Fire Ins. Co. v. Felrath, 77 Ala. 194; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 58, holding also that such stipulations are binding on the parties. It is an essential of such by-laws as of all others that they be reasonable and not retroactive. In Universal F. Ins. Co. v. Block, 109 Pa. St. 535, it was held that a condition in a fire policy requiring a certificate or affidavit from the nearest magistrate, or a fire marshal, stating certain facts, is unreasonable and therefore void. See also Shannon v. Hastings Mut. F. Ins. Co., 26 U. C. C. P. 380, and where it is provided or the member has contracted that proofs of death should be "satisfactory to the directors," they cannot capriciously demand unreasonable proof. Braunstein v. Accidental Death Ins. Co., 1 B. & S. 782; 8 Jur., N. S. 506; 31 L. J., Q. B. 17; 5 L. J., N. S. 550.

4. The essential parts of the declaration are stated in Brooklyn L. Ins. Co. v. Bledsoe, 52 Ala. 538. The court said: "The contract or policy of insurance must be declared on, in hæc verba, or according to its legal effect; the plain-tiff's interest in the subject of insurance; the payment of the premium; the inception of the risk; the performance of any precedent condition or warranty contained in the policy, and the loss, or happening of the event, on which, within the terms and meaning of the policy, the liability of the insurer attaches, must be alleged. The general rule applicable to all executory contracts is, that if the defendant's performance depended upon a condition precedent, the plaintiff must aver the fulfilment of such condition, whether it is affirmative or negative, or to be performed or observed by him, or the defendant, or a mere stranger to the contract, or must show an excuse for non-performance. If nonperformance is excused, the matter of excuse must be distinctly averred."

A declaration, which names no sum for which defendant became liable under the terms of the certificate, and which does not make the certificate a part thereof, is fatally defective, and the omission is not cured by the verdict. Abe Lincoln Mut. L. & Acc. Soc. v. Miller, 23 Ill. App. 341.

Assumption of Liability by New Corporation.—A petition on a certificate against a mutual benefit association, alleging that defendant was the legal successor of another such association which had issued the certificate, having received all its assets and effects and assumed to pay all its liabilities, and to fulfil all its obligations and engagements, including the demand sued on, sufficiently states that the first association no longer exists, and that defend-

Where the liability of the society is limited to the proceeds of an assessment upon the members, the complaint should aver that the assessment has been made and collected, or that the company had refused to make the assessment;¹ and a petition which does not aver that defendant failed, or refused to lay any such assessment, or that, having laid one and collected it, failed and refused to pay the same to plaintiff, is demurrable.²

A complaint, in an action on such a certificate, need not aver the number of members of the rank to which the deceased belonged at the time of his death, that fact being peculiarly within the knowledge of the defendant.³

To maintain an action at law upon such certificate for the maximum sum therein, it must be alleged and shown that the company has levied an assessment upon certificate holders to pay the death claim, has collected the amount of such assessment, and has failed to pay to the beneficiary the sum so collected.⁴

The rules of pleading at common law have been modified, and to some extent abrogated, by the statutory provisions in the various States. These need not be discussed in this connection. The general averment that plaintiff has "fulfilled all the conditions" is not a sufficient averment that proofs of loss have been made in the way specifically required in the by-laws or contract.⁵

Where plaintiff claims under the by-laws of a benefit society, it is not sufficient to allege generally that there was a rule or by-law under which he was or became entitled, etc.⁶ The rule or its ant is its legal successor. Stanley v. Northwestern L. Assoc., 36 Fed. Rep. 75.

When Assignment Must be Alleged.—Under act Pa., April 15, 1868, § 1 (P. L. 103), providing that all policies of life insurance taken out for the benefit of the insured's wife shall be vested in such wife clear from the claims of the insured's creditors, a declaration in an action on a benefit certificate by an administrator, which shows that the certificate was taken out in the name of plaintiff's decedent, and was made payable to his wife, and shows no transfer of title from the wife to decedent, is demurrable, though it also avers that the certificate is part of decedent's estate, and that such estate is insolvent. McNeil v. Supreme Commandery, 131 Pa. St. 339.

1. Fitzgerald v. Equitable Reserve Fund L. Assoc., 5 N. Y. Supp. 837; Taylor v. National Temperance Relief Union, 94 Mo. 35.

2. Taylor v. National Temperance Relief Union, 94 Mo. 35.

3. Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias v. Knight, 117 Ind. 489.

4. Smith v. Covenant Mut. Ben. Assoc., 24 Fed. Rep. 685.

Where the declaration alleged in two of the special counts that the membership was sufficient to make the amount named in the certificate by the payment of two dollars each, it was held on demurrer, that these allegations reduced to certainty that which would without them have been uncertain. Gossett v. Union Mut. Acc. Assoc., 27 Ill. App. 266.

5. Dolbier v. Agricultural Ins. Co., 67 Me. 180; Crescent Ins. Co. v. Camp, 64 Tex. 521; Quarrier v. Peabody Ins. Co., 10 W. Va. 507; Royal Ins. Co. v. Smith, 8 Ky. Law R. 521; Fayerweather v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 7 N. Y. St. Rep. 25; Edgerly v. Farmers' Ins. Co., 43 Iowa 587. But see Scheiderer v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 58 Wis. 13; Sun Mut. Ins. Co. v. Holland, 2 Wills. (Tex.) 391; Schobacker v. German-town Farmers' Mut. Ins. Co., 59 Wis. 86.

6. Irish Catholic Ben. Assoc. v. O'Shaughnessey, 76 Ind. 191.

So in an action for sick benefits to recover a balance alleged to be due at the rate of $3 per week, the mere state-substance, as well as compliance with its provisions, must be stated.¹

Where the original beneficiary brings an action upon a changed certificate, and any proper regulation of the society has been violated by such change, he must aver and prove the same.²

In California it has been held that plaintiff must set out in his complaint and prove performance of conditions contained in the application for membership, and the truth of statements and declarations therein contained.³ But the weight of authority is opposed to this view.⁴

With regard to answers in actions upon certificates of membership, it need only be said that they must conform to the general rules of good pleading as in other actions.⁵

ment that such an amount is "the sum paid to the sick of said society," is not sufficiently specific, and states no cause of action. Beneficial Society v. White, 30 N. J. L. 313.

1. Taylor v. National Temperance Relief Union, 94 Mo. 35.

This rule is changed by statute in Indiana where, in pleading the performance of condition precedent in a contract, it is sufficient to allege generally that the party performed the condition on his part. National Ben. Assoc. v. Bowman, 110 Ind. 355.

2. Masonic Mut. Ben. Soc. v. Burkhardt, 110 Ind. 189.

3. Bidwell v. Connecticut L. Ins. Co., 3 Sawyer (U. S.) 261; Gilmore v. Lychoming F. Ins. Co., 55 Cal. 123. See also Bobbitt v. Liverpool L. & G. Ins. Co., 66 N. Car. 70; s. c., 8 Am. Rep. 494.

4. See Redman v. Aetna Ins. Co., 49 Wis. 431; Continental L. Ins. Co. v. Kessler, 84 Ind. 315; Commonwealth Ins. Co. v. Monninger, 18 Ind. 352; Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Cannon, 48 Ind. 264; Forbes v. American Mut. L. Ins. Co., 15 Gray (Mass.) 249; s. c., 77 Am. Dec. 360; Herron v. Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co., 28 Ill. 235; s. c., 81 Am. Dec. 272; Lounsbury v. Protection Ins. Co., 8 Conn. 459; s. c., 21 Am. Dec. 186; Union Ins. Co. v. McGookey, 33 Ohio St. 555; Penn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Wiler, 100 Ind. 92; Guardian Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Hogan, 80 Ill. 35; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 180.

In May v. Buckeye Ins. Co., 25 Wis. 291; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 76, after stating what the application must contain, and that any false description by the assured, or omission to make known any fact material to the risk, shall render it void, the policy added, "but the company will be responsible for the accuracy of surveys made by its agents," it was held that the word "survey" must here be construed to include the whole application, when made out by the agent, and the company is thus expressly precluded from taking advantage of his inaccuracy or omission in drawing the same, where the facts have been fully stated to him by the assured. It was said by the court that it would be intolerable in an action on an insurance policy to require the plaintiff to prove affirmatively in the first instance the truth of every statement usually contained in an application for insurance.

5. Due Performance.—The charter of a mutual benefit insurance company provides that the board of directors may appoint a committee to make assessments, and that a member in default for 30 days forfeits his membership. It was held that before an assessment is due, or forfeiture can occur, it must affirmatively appear that the assessment was legally made, viz, by the board, or by the committee appointed by the board; and an allegation by the company that the assessment was "duly made," is not sufficient. American Mut. Aid Soc. v. Helburn, 84 Ky. 1.

Waiver—Admission.—Where the defendant set up that the member insured had failed to pay his assessments during a certain year and plaintiff, by reply, denied such failure, and alleged that defendant had subsequently demanded, received, and retained annual payments, and had thereby waived the alleged prior breaches, it was held that the pleading of a waiver did not admit the failure to pay assessments, and was not inconsistent with the denial of such failure. Tobin v. Western Mut. Aid Soc., 72 Iowa 261. See also Gray v. National Ben. Assoc., 111 Ind. 531.

3. Evidence.—The law of evidence as applied to actions on insurance policies, and certificates of benefit societies, presents nothing peculiar. The rules excluding parol evidence to contradict a writing has seemed to receive important modification when applied to this form of contract. But if, under the supposed pressure of the equities of the case, or prevailing prejudice, new exceptions to the general rule have apparently been discovered or invented, "it has been to give effect to great principles of justice without too strict a regard to mere technicalities."¹

Suicide of Member.—Where the plea was that a stipulation in the application excepting death by suicide from the risk was proposed by the member to induce defendant to issue the certificate, well knowing that he would not be received as a member unless he so stipulated; that the certificate would not have been issued if he had no stipulation, and that he committed suicide, it was held not obnoxious to a general demurrer. Northwestern Ben. & Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Hard, 29 Ill. App. 73.

Champerous Contract.—The defendant cannot set up as a defence a champerous contract for the collection of assessments made by the treasurer of the company with a person not a party to the suit. Connecticut River Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Way, 62 N. H. 622.

Conclusion as to Effect of By-law.—Where the defence is that the certificate was issued in violation of the rules and by-laws of the association, a copy of such rules and by-laws should be set out in the answer. It is not sufficient for the pleader to give his own conclusions as to their effect. Gray v. National Ben. Assoc., 118 Ind. 293.

Want of "Legal Notice."—An answer is not sufficient which sets out that deceased failed to pay his dues after "legal notice." The giving of notice being a condition precedent to a member's liability, the facts showing that the notice provided by the charter had been given should have been set out. Coyle v. Kentucky Grangers' Mut. Ben. Soc. (Ky.), 2 S. W. Rep. 676.

Nonpayment of Assessments.—An answer stating that decedent failed to pay assessments within the time limited, after being duly notified, is not demurrable on the ground that it does not allege that the assessments were not in fact paid, as no person other than decedent was liable to pay the assessments. Gray v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 111 Ind. 531.

1. Bacon Ben. Soc. & Life Ins., § 456.

Admissible evidence of defendant's medical examiner that plaintiff had never been examined as required by the rules. Baltimore etc. Employees' Relief Assoc. v. Post, 122 Pa. St. 428.

Of decedent's withdrawal, though not pleaded. Cramer v. Masonic L. Assoc., 9 N. Y. S. 356.

Under a notice by defendant, under the plea of the general issue, that it will insist on its defence that the certificate was procured by false statements to the medical examiner, and the concealment of material facts concerning the health of the insured, is sufficient to let in evidence of a particular disease with which the insured was suffering. Breisenmeister v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias (Mich.), 45 N. W. Rep. 977.

Inadmissible evidence of the number of policy holders in the State who paid the mortality assessment in question, and to whom notices and extra assessments had been sent, the evidence not bearing upon the question whether the policies sued on were forfeited. Dial v. Valley Mut. L. Assoc., 29 S. Car. 560.

In an action against a mutual insurance company to recover benefits accruing from plaintiff's inability to work, receipts of plaintiff for the benefits as a former member of the association. Baltimore etc. Employees' Relief Assoc. v. Post (Pa.), 5 Atl. Rep. 885.

Holding also that the statements of an agent of a railroad company who has nothing to do with making out the pay-rolls, having no authority to deduct dues owed by an employee to the Employees' Relief Assoc., and his declarations that a deduction had been made without a previous showing that it had been officially notified that the employee was a member of the association were not admissible, plaintiff's inability to labor being the cause of action.

A statement made by the member

If the failure to pay assessments is relied upon, the burden of proving such failure is upon the defendant,¹ but where the allegation that the member was in good standing at the time of his death is denied by the answer, the burden of proving such good standing is on the plaintiff.²

Where the action is by the assignee of a member, the burden of proving that the assignment was made in accordance with the by-laws of the society is on the plaintiff.³

Where the policy is payable to a number of individuals, between whom the right of survivorship with relation to the contract exists, the burden of proving that any one of them survived the others, is upon the party asserting it.⁴

If the by-laws of the society require proofs of death to be furnished, and a presentation of such proofs is alleged, of course no further proof of that fact can be required; but, in the absence of any such provision, the fact of the death of the insured may be established as in other cases, and according to the general rules of evidence on the subject—such as the issuance of letters of administration, etc.,⁵ or by circumstantial evidence, when direct evidence is not attainable, to the extent at least of raising a presumption of the party's death.⁶

The insured in a mutual insurance company, being a member, that he was suspended for the nonpayment of an assessment is not competent evidence to prove that fact. Lazensky v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 31 Fed. Rep. 592.

In an action against a mutual benefit association letters written by officers of the association commenting on the merits of plaintiff's claim and discussing its validity. Bagley v. Grand Lodge Ancient Order United Workmen, 131 Ind. 498.

Where the issue was whether or not a forfeiture had occurred, evidence that the general manager of the association had told the assured that some of his assessments were overdue; that he had thereby lost his right to the certificate, and that he was delaying payment at his own risk and peril. Odd Fellows' Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Sweetser (Ind.), 19 N. E. Rep. 722.

1. Tobin v. Western Mut. Aid Soc., 73 Iowa 261.

2. Siebert v. Chosen Friends, 23 Mo. App. 268. Compare Tobin v. Western Mut. Aid Soc., 72 Iowa 261.

3. Henry v. Trustees of Grand Lodge I. O. M. A., 15 Bradw. (Ill.) 151.

4. Fuller v. Linzee, 135 Mass. 468.

5. Millard v. Supreme Council American Legion of Honor, 81 Cal.

340; Lancaster v. Washington L. Ins. Co., 62 Mo. 121; Tisdale v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 26 Iowa 170; s. c., 96 Am. Dec. 136; Newman v. Jenkins, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 515; Cunningham v. Smith, 70 Pa. St. 450; Jeffers v. Radcliff, 10 N. H. 242; Munro v. Merchant, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 383; McKimm v. Riddle, 2 Dall. 100.

In an action for a benefit claimed on the death of a member, evidence that defendant's officers declined to receive proofs of death on the ground that the deceased member had been suspended, is not proof of actual suspension such as to require a nonsuit. Stewart v. Supreme Council American Legion of Honor, 36 Mo. App. 319.

6. Travellers' Ins. Co. v. Sheppard (Ga.), 12 S. E. Rep. 18; Boyd v. New England Mut. L. Ins. Co., 34 La. An. 848.

As to absence of party raising presumption of death, see Lancaster v. Washington L. Ins. Co., 62 Mo. 121; John Hancock Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Moore, 34 Mich. 41; Sensenderfer v. Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co., 19 Fed. Rep. 68; Whiteley v. Equitable L. Assurance Soc., 72 Wis. 170; Hancock v. American L. Ins. Co., 62 Mo. 26; Prudential Assurance Co. v. Edmonds, L. R., 2 App. Cas. 487.

the books of the company are as much his as other members, and are evidence against him.¹

Where a policy provides that the company will pay the beneficiary a percentage of the assessments collected, the beneficiary can recover without proving demand on the company to make assessments, or that assessments have been made, or the amount collected thereon.²

In an action by a receiver upon a premium note given to an insurance company, such evidence of general losses and of settlement and allowance of the same as would have concluded the company in its proper business, will suffice.³

1. Diehl v. Adams Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 58 Pa. St. 443; s. c., 98 Am. Dec. 302.

The question whether the books of a mutual fire insurance company furnish sufficient data for a correct assessment is a question for the jury. Marblehead Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Underwood, 3 Gray (Mass.) 210.

When Only Prima Facie Evidence.—The entry of an order upon the minutes of a mutual association, suspending a member for nonpayment of an assessment, being only prima facie evidence of its legality, parol evidence is admissible to show that it was by order of an officer alone. Knights of Honor v. Wickser (Tex.), 12 S. W. Rep. 75; Lazensky v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 31 Fed. Rep. 592. Holding also that an application for reinstatement, made by the member, is not competent evidence to prove the fact of his suspension.

The record of a director's vote authorizing assessment is prima facie evidence of losses and assessments. Connecticut Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Way, 62 N. H. 622.

Mailing Notice.—A finding that notice was not mailed to the insured will not be disturbed, such mailing being proved only by the general course of business of defendant. Garretson v. Equitable Mut. L. Endowment Assoc., 74 Iowa 419. As to proof of long continued usage of society to waive personal notice, and the admissibility of evidence on that point, see Stewart v. Supreme Council American Legion of Honor, 36 Mo. App. 319.

Presumption of Proofs Furnished.—Where it is the duty of the subordinate lodge to report the death of the member to the supreme lodge, it will be presumed that the requisite proofs of the death were furnished; especially where defendant refuses to pay on the ground of the fraud in the application. Lorcher v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 72 Mich. 366.

Of Good Standing.—Where it was a condition of the certificate that the member should be in good standing at the time of his death, it was held that proof of a recognition of such membership by the defendant up to within a short time of the death of the member, in connection with the presumption that all persons follow such laws, rules and regulations as they are under, was sufficient evidence of the good standing of the member to maintain the action. Lazensky v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor, 31 Fed. Rep. 592.

Of Extent of Liability.—In an action on a certificate, in which plaintiff is entitled to the amount of one death assessment, not exceeding a given sum, he can recover nominal damages only, in the absence of the evidence of the amount realized by one assessment. Ball v. Granite State Mut. Aid Assoc., 64 N. H. 291; Newman v. Covenant Mut. Ben. Assoc., 72 Iowa 242.

Priest as Witness—Neglect of Easter Duties.—Where the constitution of the society provided that if the insured neglected his Easter duties he forfeited at once all his rights and interests in the society, testimony of the priest of the defendant's parish of a negative character to establish defendant's neglect of such duties is not sufficient. Matt v. Roman Catholic Mut. Protective Soc., 70 Iowa 455.

2. Kansas Protective Union v. Gardner, 41 Kan. 397.

3. Jackson v. Roberts, 31 N. Y. 304; Pacific Mut. Ins. Co. v. Guse, 49 Mo. 329; s. c., 8 Am. Rep. 132; Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Jarvis, 22 Conn. 133; Long Pond Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Houghton, 6 Gray (Mass.) 77; Com. v. Dor-

XI. CONTRIBUTION AND DISTRIBUTION UPON WINDING UP—1. By Insolvency Proceedings.—The peculiarity distinguishing the insolvency of a benefit society from that of ordinary corporations and copartnerships, consists in the fact that usually the only creditors, as well as the only distributees, are the members of which it is composed. A receiver appointed by the court to wind up its affairs should proceed in other respects to collect the assets and make distribution as in receiverships of other insurance companies.¹

Upon winding up an insolvent mutual insurance company, claims founded upon policies which matured before the appointment of the receiver, are to be preferred to claims which were at that time unmatured. The status of the policy holder or his representative toward the company is changed by the maturity of the policy, and he then stands to the company in the same relation that a creditor holds to a firm—he is to be preferred to its members.² But a policy holder, whose loss occurred after an appointment of a receiver for the insolvent company, is not entitled to a share in the distribution of the assets.³

Death losses should be allowed in full, with a credit to the amount of any premium notes in the hands of the company.⁴

chester Mut. F. Ins. Co., 112 Mass. 142; Atlantic Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 2 Gray (Mass.) 279; Appleton Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Jesser, 5 Allen (Mass.) 446; Nashua F. Ins. Co. v. Moore, 55 N. H. 48; Atlantic Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Young, 38 N. H. 451; s. c., 75 Am. Dec. 200; Thomas v. Whallen, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 172; Matter of Bangs, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 264; Savage v. Medbury, 19 N. Y. 32; Bangs v. Duckinfield, 18 N. Y. 592; Herkimer Co. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Fuller, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 373; Devendorf v. Beardsley, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 656; American Ins. Co. v. Schmidt, 19 Iowa 502; Ohio Mut. Ins. Co. v. Marietta Woolen Factory, 3 Ohio St. 348.

1. Attorney General v. Guardian Mut. L. Ins. Co., 77 N. Y. 272.

Where the assessment made by a receiver was greatly in excess of the amount required to pay losses, it was held that in an action on a premium note by the assignee to recover the assessment due thereon, the burden is on him to show that such assessment was reasonably proper in view of all the circumstances. Lehigh Valley F. Ins. Co. v. Dryfoos (Pa.), 9 Atl. Rep. 262.

Notice.—If publication be required to be for a certain number of weeks, and the effects of the company go into the hands of a receiver after an assessment is levied and before the notice by publication is completed, it is held that actual notice by the receiver is sufficient. Cooper v. Shaver, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 151.

2. Vanatta v. New Jersey Mut. L. Ins. Co., 31 N. J. Eq. 15.

3. Doane v. Milville Mut. M. & F. Ins. Co., 43 N. J. Eq. 522, holding also that where the officers of a mutual company, with knowledge of its insolvency, but before it had been so declared, voluntarily cancelled the policy of one of its members, and executed a release from all liability thereunder, the policy holder was, nevertheless, still liable for all losses and expenses incurred during the life of the policy, and which actually existed at the time of cancellation.

4. People v. Security L. Ins. etc. Co., 78 N. Y. 114; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 522.

Where no holders of death claims had applied to have an assessment ordered by the court, and as it was found expressly that an attempt to raise the money to pay them by an assessment would be futile, it was held that no assessment should be ordered. Burdon v. Massachusetts Safety Fund Assoc., 147 Mass. 368.

As such societies are either prohibited from accumulating funds or prop-

When such an institution becomes insolvent, the collapse is generally complete, as the obligation to pay assessments generally rests upon the will of the members without any personal promise to pay.¹

The liability assumed in the contract of membership is not optional, but absolute and fixed; it is not released either by dissolution or insolvency.²

When a mutual fire insurance company has become insolvent, the previously accrued profits which have been credited to the policies do not belong to the policy holders, but are funds for the payment of losses.³

2. By Dissolution or Abandonment.—As regards the duties, rights, and liabilities of members, the effect of dissolution or abandonment differs but little from insolvency. In either case no further business can be transacted by the company as such, nor any additional risks taken. When a corporation, in the nature of a benefit society, ceases to do business because of some impediment—as, for example, being refused a licence by the State in which it was incorporated—it cannot organize a new company against the will of the old members, but, on application of such old members or parties insured, a court of equity will wind up the affairs of the old company and compel the distribution of such fund among those for whose benefit it was created.⁴

erty, and have no occasion to do so, it is rarely the case that any distribution is to be made to the members, except to those holding matured claims for benefits, who, as has been stated, are with respect to these not to be treated as members but as creditors. For liability of members to assessment to pay accrued losses upon insolvency, see EXTENT AND NATURE OF LIABILITY, III, 5, herein; ASSESSMENTS, VII, 1 and 2 herein.

1. Bacon Ben. Soc. & Life Ins., § 479.

2. North Carolina etc. Ins. Co. v. Powell, 71 N. Car. 389. Or expiration of charter. Huntley v. Beecher, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 580; Huntley v. Merrill, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 626.

Where a portion of the business of an insurance company is transacted upon the stock plan, and a portion upon the mutual system, and the premiums received from persons obtaining insurance upon the former plan, by paying the whole premium in cash, have been expended in the payment of losses and expenses, and thus relieving former members from assessments upon their notes, and leaving others to be assessed for the payment of subsequent losses, there is no remedy for any injustice which may result from this mode of transacting the business of the company; although the effect is to cast the greater burden upon those whose notes happen to be in force at the time the insolvency of the company occurs. Shaughnessy v. The Rensselaer Ins. Co., 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 605.

Neither the insolvency of a mutual fire insurance company nor the cancellation of a policy, deprives the company of the right to assess upon the policy holder losses that accrued while he was a member of the company. Commonwealth v. Massachusetts Mut. F. Ins. Co., 112 Mass. 116. It was also held in this case that when the losses by fire suffered by a mutual fire insurance company render it insolvent, and require an assessment to the full amount authorized by law, the holder of an unexpired policy, the cancellation of which has been rendered necessary by such insolvency, has no right of set-off or of recoupment, or claim for return of premium, or for damages on account of the unexpired term of his policy; but that the holder of such policy has a right, in case of the subsequent insolvency of the company and the distribution of its assets by receivers, to share in the assets.

3. Com. v. Massachusetts Mut. F. Ins. Co., 112 Mass. 116.

4. Bacon Ben. Soc. & Life Ins., § 479.

A voluntary association may be dissolved similarly, and with like effect as a copartnership, either by direct consent of the members, or such intent may be presumed from abandonment, as from a neglect to hold meetings for a protracted period.¹

Where the objects of the organization are impracticable, illegal, or fraudulent,² or in case of violent dissensions and irreconcilable differences between the members, it will be dissolved by a court of equity and its funds distributed as on the winding up of a copartnership,³ and under the general rules of equity jurisprudence applicable to copartnerships.⁴

When the society is incorporated its dissolution and the proceedings in the disposition of its property are governed by the rules applicable in the case of corporations generally.⁵

Where, upon dissolution, a pro rata distribution is proper in payment of losses, no notice should be taken of priority in their occurrence.⁶ The ordinary rules governing the distribution of

In Stamm v. Northwestern Mut. Ben. Assoc., 63 Mich. 317, the court said: "My opinion is that no assessments could legally be made by the board of trustees for the purpose of paying losses which occurred after licence to do business was refused. The inhibition of the statute extended to the exercise of corporate functions in Michigan. Its proceedings as a corporation were arrested, and, as no steps were taken by it to obtain the right to do business any longer, but, on the contrary, it abandoned the field, the proceedings to close up its affairs should date from that time." Such revocation of licence has the effect of a dissolution except for the purpose of administering the assets either through the directors under statutory authority or by a waiver. The members are entitled to their distributive share of any money on hand at the time, and if losses occurred prior to that time, the beneficiaries are entitled to precedence and payment of their policies in full from the fund. If members have died since, their representatives are entitled to the distributive shares of such members. See Cramer v. Bird, L. R., 6 Eq. 143; Slee v. Bloom, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 456; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 273; Bradt v. Benedict, 17 N. Y. 93; Marr v. Bank of West Tennessee, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 471; In re Suburban Hotel Co., L. R., 2 Ch. App. 737.

1. Strickland v. Prichard, 37 Vt. 324; Penfield v. Skinner, 11 Vt. 206.

2. Peltz v. Supreme Chamber of the Order of Financial Union (N. J.), 19 Atl. Rep. 668; Pearce v. Piper, 17 Ves. 1; Ellison v. Bignold, 2 Jac. & Walk. 511; Reeve v. Parkins, 2 Jac. & Walk. 390. Beaumont v. Meredith, 3 Ves. & Bea. 181; Lowry v. Stotzer, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 397; Toram v. Howard Ben. Asso., 4 Pa. St. 519.

3. Lafond v. Deems, 52 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 41; 81 N. Y. 507. See Fischer v. Raah, 57 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 94; Wells v. Gates, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 557; Wait Insolvent Corp. 391.

4. Gorman v. Russell, 14 Cal. 531.

5. See Morawetz on Priv. Corp., §§ 1002, 1004.

At common law the funds of a corporation remaining after payment of its liabilities vested upon dissolution in the State. Titcomb v. Kennebunk Mut. F. Ins. Co., 79 Me. 315.

The rule applies to incorporated mutual insurance companies in the absence of statutory provisions, preserving the rights of members and incorporators. Titcomb v. Kennebunk Mut. F. Ins. Co., 79 Me. 315.

However, there is a strong inclination on the part of courts to look beyond the entity and preserve the rights of those composing the corporation, and it is probable that such a result would be prevented by a court of equity in most of the States even without a statutory provision on the subject. See Carlton v. Southern Mut. Ins. Co., 72 Ga. 371; Mor. Priv. Corp., § 1032; CORPORATIONS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 306.

6. Richards v. New Hampshire Ins. Co., 43 N. H. 263.

The winding up and distribution of the assets of a mutual insurance company by mutual agreement of all the members, does not relieve them from assets upon dissolution may be altered by contract or provisions previously made in the constitution and by-laws.¹

MUTUALITY OF CONTRACT—(See also CONTRACTS).—Mutuality of contract means an obligation on each to do, or permit to be done, something in consideration of the act or promise of the other. It does not imply that every stipulation is absolute and unqualified.²

MUTUAL MISTAKE—(See also MISTAKE).—According to the real signification of the word “mutual” in such connection, and the ordinary acceptation and understanding of the term, “mutual mistake” would mean a mistake reciprocal and common to both parties, where each alike labored under the same misconception in respect to the terms of the written instrument.³

MUTUANT—MUTUARY.—These terms denote the lender and borrower respectively in a “Mutuum.”⁴

MUTUUM—(See also BAILMENTS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 40).—Mutuum is a loan of an article for consumption which is to be returned in kind, such as corn, oil, wine or money.⁵

MY.—If a testator refers to his possessing any particular and definite thing such as, “my estate,” “my ring,” or “my horse,” it seems that the contrary intention referred to by the Wills act⁶ is manifested, and the will as to such bequests speaks from its date and the gift is specific, but when the bequest is generic of paying the premium notes in an action brought by the receiver. Lawrence v. Nelson, 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 240.

The legal representatives of certificate holders who died without having incurred any forfeiture, and who had not had any benefit from an assessment, are to share equally with other holders of certificates in force.

But certificates which, at the time the bill for dissolution was filed, had not been in force for a year, within which time they were to make their first payment to the fund, are not to share in the fund unless it should appear that the payment had been made since that date within the year. Burdon v. Massachusetts Safety Fund Assoc., 147 Mass. 360.

1. It may be provided that certificate holders who have suffered losses shall not be preferred, but share equally with other members. Burdon v. Massachusetts Safety-Fund Assoc., 147 Mass. 360.

Rev. St. Mo. 1879, § 6046 provides that, in proceedings to dissolve insolvent fire insurance companies, the commissioner “shall ascertain the amount of premium unearned on each policy outstanding and in force at the time of the decree dissolving the company, and the amount of losses outstanding at that time” to which are to be applied the assets of the company. It was held that the holder of a policy issued after the enactment of the statute was only entitled, where the loss occurred after the decree of dissolution, to the amount of the unearned premium, though he had no notice of the dissolution proceedings. Relfe v. Commercial Ins. Co., 10 Mo. App. 393; Carr v. Union Mut. F. Ins. Co., 28 Mo. App. 215.

Cross Bill by Holder of Death Claim.—Upon the filing of a bill in equity to wind up a mutual benefit association and distribute its assets, the holder of a death claim against the association has an interest in the subject matter of the proceeding and may properly file a cross-bill to prevent the misappropriation of a trust fund. Wilber v. Torgerson, 24 Ill. App. 119.

2. Spear v. Orendorf, 26 Md. 37, 43.

3. Botsford v. McLean, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 478. See MISTAKE.

4. And. L. Dict. 694.

5. Story on Bailm., § 228.

6. 1 Vict. 26.

that which may be increased or diminished such as "consuls," the act requires something more to indicate such contrary intention than that the subject matter should be preceeded by "my," and accordingly as to such a bequest the will would speak from the death of the testator.¹ But it has been stated that the use of the pronoun "my" in the description of the thing given is not sufficient evidence of an intention that the will shall not speak from the date of the death.²

1. Goodlad v. Burnett, 1 K. & J. 341; Re Gibson, L. R., 2 Eq. 669; s. c., 35 L. J. Ch. 596. See also Jarm. on Wills 329-332. And as to the old rule, see Jarm. on Wills 320-329.

2. Dart, 309. This statement is made on the authority of Miles v. Miles, L. R., 1 Eq. 462.

My Arrival.—In an instrument of bottomry the term "my arrival" was used in the following connection: "I bind myself, my ship and tackle, etc., to pay the sum borrowed with twelve per cent. bottomry premium in eight days after my arrival at the port of London. Held, that the words "my arrival" must be understood to mean my arrival with the ship, or my ship's arrival. The court, in discussing the question whether or not the borrower was personally bound by this clause or whether the lender took upon himself the peril of the voyage, says: "Now, if the words instead of eight days after my arrival had been eight days after my ship's arrival, there could have been no doubt that the lender took upon himself the perils of the voyage, if there be not, in some part of the instrument, some matter denoting a contrary intention. Now, the personal arrival of the master unconnected with the ship is a matter which it cannot be supposed either party contemplated; it cannot be supposed that the lenders looked to him personally or to his personal means, nor that he intended to pledge himself personally and absolutely for the payment without regard to the means he might be furnished by the ship and her freight. Simonds v. Hodgson, 3 B. & Ad. 50.

My Books.—A testator directed in his will "that any advancements made by me to or for the account of my said children or either of them, and evidenced either by entries in my books of account or by any written memorandum of acknowledgment signed by such child or children, shall be deducted from the amount or charged upon the share," etc. The testator was the leading member of a firm and kept no private book account of his own, and there appeared from these books that the firm had advanced money to some of his children, and that these accounts were balanced and carried into the testator's private account. Held, that the term my books was to be regarded as meaning the books of the firm, as used in this clause of the will. Lawrence v. Lindsay, 68 N. Y. 108.

My Brother's Son.—A testator used the following expressions in his will: "I give, devise and bequeath unto Mathew Westlake, my brother, and to Simon Westlake, my brother's son, all that my fee simple," etc., in certain premises. It appeared in evidence that the testator had three brothers, Thomas, Richard and Mathew, and each of whom had a son of the name of "Simon." The defendant's counsel contended that these facts established a latent ambiguity in the will, and they tendered evidence of declarations of the testator to show that he had intended to bequeath his property to the defendant, Simon Westlake, who was the son of Richard Westlake. Held, that the fact of the three brothers of the testator having each a son of the name of "Simon" did not raise any ambiguity upon this will, and that in point of legal construction, where the testator is speaking of his brother's son, he must be taken to speak of the son of his brother who was then particularly in his mind. Mathew Westlake was then in the testator's mind, and consequently Simon Westlake, his son, must be the person intended. Westlake v. Westlake, 4 Barn. & Ald. 57.

My Chambers for Which I Paid Six Hundred Guineas.—A testator, in a codicil to his will, after making a special bequest in money to Hon. Thomas Stapleton, used the following expression: "And also bequeath to him my chambers in Albany, for which I paid six hundred guineas, with all my furniture," etc. The testator died seized in fee of the chambers in Albany, and of no other. Stapleton, under whom the defendant claimed, and who was a stranger in blood to the testator, entered into the possession of the chambers, and died about eleven years afterwards. The lessor of the plaintiff was the only surviving trustee under the will. Held, that the words which the testator used in this codicil are not sufficient to take the fee simple from the heirs at law. Sewell v. Parrett, 3 B. & Adol. 469.

Definition.MY.*Definition.

My Desire.—A testatrix, in her will, gave all of her property to her daughter. It also contained the following clause: "My desire is that she allows to A G an annuity of £25 during her life." Held, that no trust or obligation to pay an annuity was imposed upon the daughter, but that there was only a request to the daughter, not binding her in law, to make that provision for A G. In re Diggles; Gregory v. Edmonds, 39 Ch. D. 253.

My Estate.—The words "my estate," as used in the Cal. Civ. Code, § 1402, have been held to relate to what the testator owned and could dispose of. Momford's Estate, Myrick's Probate, p. 133.

My House.—In an application for insurance upon a house, it was described as "my house in which I reside," and in the policy as, "his two story frame dwelling house." The assured was in possession under a contract, and had partly paid for it, but had not received his deed. Held, that there was no misdescription in this case of the subject of insurance in the policy. Neither was there any misrepresentation or concealment of any fact on the part of the assured which was at all material to the risk, in the application for the insurance; and that it is a fact of public notoriety that, in common parlance, the person who is in possession of real property as owner, under a valid and subsisting contract for the purchase thereof, whether he has paid the whole of the purchase-money and gotten the legal title or not, is called the owner thereof, and the property is usually called his by others; and in equity it is in fact his, and the vendor has only a lien thereon for the security of his unpaid purchase money. Actna Fire Ins. Co. v. Tyler, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 385; s. c., 30 Am. Dec. 90.

My Land.—The words "my land" were used in a will, with an additional description erroneously naming it as the south half of the north-east (instead of north-west) quarter of the section. The testator never owned the northeast quarter, but did own the northwest quarter. Held, that it was the intention of the testator to devise the southwest quarter of the section. Cleveland v. Spilman, 25 Ind. 94.

My Plantation.—A testator's will contained, among other things, the following devise: "My plantation on Stann's Island I devise to my cousin, William Smith." Held, that this passed the fee. Peyton v. Smyth, 4 McCord (S. Car.) 476; s. c., 17 Am. Dec. 758.

My Property.—A testator's will contained the following devise: "My property, after my debts are paid, I leave and bequeath to my beloved wife," etc. Held, that this passed the whole of the testator's property, both real and personal, in fee to his wife. In deciding this case, SPENCER, CH. J., says: "The question turns upon the term 'my property,' whatever that was he devised to his wife. The deviser gave her all his property. There is nothing to limit the devise to any species of property or to any portion of it; all the testator's property must pass or none." Jackson v. Housel, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 281.

A bequest of "all my property" will pass property subject to a general power of appointment. Chandler v. Pocock, 16 Ch. D. 648.

"My house," where there are two answering the description given. See Gardiner v. Jewers, W. N. (72) 35.

A devise of "my Bland Air estate, with all the slaves and their increase, which I derived from my uncle, T F, and all the personal property thereon, not slaves, and used with the same at the time of my death, unto my daughter," is a specific devise; and so is a devise of "all my books, historical and geographical, of Greece, of Rome, etc., to my son in law," etc. Mayo v. Bland, 4 Md. Ch. 484.

A will contained a bequest of "half my property at Rothschilds Bank." At the time of the making of the will, and at the time of his death the testator had at R.'s bank in Paris a cash balance and certificates of French shares, some inscribed and some of them transferable by delivery, which were deposited with the bankers, who received the dividends and carried them to the testator's credit. Held, by CHITTY, J., that half of the property meant

Definition.

MY SON—MYSTIC WILL.

Definition:

MY SON.—When the object of a gift in a will is designated by the term “my son” of a particular name, it means the son of that name at the date of the will and him only.¹ And the same rule seems to apply when the legatee or devisee in a will is described as “my son;” it would relate to the son (if any) living at date of the will, and would exclude any after born son, although such after born son should, by reason of the death of the former son, happen to be the only person answering that description at the death of the testator.²

MY WIFE.—See note 3.

MYSTERY.—In statutes that require the addition to be given to the defendant, who is indicted, of his estate or degree, or “mystery,” “mystery” in this connection means the defendant’s trade, art or occupation, such as merchant, mercer, tailor, painter, clerk, schoolmaster, laborer, or the like. If a man has two trades, the degree of “mystery” must be stated as that to which the defendant was entitled at the time of the indictment.⁴

MYSTIC WILL.—In Louisiana, a mystic will is a will under seal.⁵

only half of the cash balance due the testator. But it was held on appeal that it meant half of both the cash balance and the shares. In re Prater Designe v. Beare, 37 Ch. D. 481.

Myself.—Where a promissory note was made payable “to the order of myself,” and there being two names as payors to the note, held that parol evidence was admissible to show who were the parties meant by “myself.” Jenkins v. Bass, 11 S. W. Rep. 293.

1. 1 Jarm. on Wills 323. Where an estate is given to a person described by relation either to the testator or to other devisees, on a contingency that may or may not happen, and a person is in being at the time of the execution of the will, to whom, on the happening of the contingency, the description would apply, it is a safe general rule to hold such person as intended to be the devisee. Aushutz v. Miller, 81 Pa. St. 212.

2. 1 Jarm. on Wills 323. Although this author lays this down to be the rule, yet he admits in a note that it is done with some diffidence because of the strong tendency of the courts to extend as much as possible gifts to children, and calls attention to the case of Perkins v. Micklithwait, 1 P. W. 275, where, as he states, “a legacy, originally designed for a son of the testator who died after the execution of the will, was held to belong by effect of the codicil to a subsequently born son of the same name, but the express terms of the codicil appear to have warranted the construction, since it gave to the latter over and above what the testator had given him by his will.” 1 Jarm. on Wills 200.

When a testator, in his will, made three bequests to his three sons, and in each bequest described them as follows: “My beloved son David Stewart,” etc., “my beloved son Alexander Stewart,” etc., “my beloved son Joseph Stewart,” etc., these bequests were held to be good, although two of the sons mentioned were illegitimate. Stewart v. Stewart, 31 N. J. Eq. 398.

3. A testator, during his lifetime, separated from his wife, and a marriage ceremony took place between him and another woman, with whom he lived for many years as his wife. In his will he made this second wife his residuary legatee as “my wife.” The first wife, being still alive, it was held that the second wife was the person intended in the will, and grant of probate was made to her as residuary legatee. Howes Goods, H. Ct. Prob. Div. 48; J. P. 743; s. c., Cent. L. J. 479.

4. State v. Bishop, 15 Me. 122.

5. Hart v. Thompson, 15 La. 88; Stafford v. Villian, 10 La. 319-328.

NAKED.—Nude; uncovered.¹

NAKED DEPOSIT.—See also BAILMENT, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 40; DEPOSIT, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 570.

NAKED POWER.—(See also POWERS).—A power simply collateral and without interest or naked power is, when, to a mere stranger, authority is given of disposing of an interest in which he had not before, nor hath by the instrument any estate whatsoever.² It is a right or authority disconnected from any interest of the donee in the subject matter.³

NAME.—(See also ABATEMENT; ABBREVIATION; CORPORATIONS; CRIMINAL PROCEDURE; FOREIGN CORPORATIONS; INDICTMENT; JUDICIAL NOTICE; JUDGMENTS; TRADE MARKS; PARTNERSHIP).

- I. Definition, 112.
- II. Name Has Two Members, 113.
- III. Christian Name, 113.
- IV. Middle Name Unimportant, 114.
- V. Abbreviations, 115.
- VI. Corruptions, Derivations and Prefixes, 116.
- VII. Presumption that Letter Constitutes Name, 116.
- VIII. Names of Bastards, 117.
- IX. Names of Divorced Women, 117.
- X. Name of Month, 117.
- XI. Change of Name, 117.
 1. Power of Courts, 117.
 2. Effect of Change, 118.
- XII. Right to Adopt Any Name, 118.
- XIII. Right to Name Child, 118.
- XIV. Right of Property in Names, 118.
- XV. Marriage Under Fictitious Name, 119.
- XVI. Land Office Proceedings, 119.
- XVII. Identity, 119.
- XVIII. Sex, 121.
- XIX. Junior or Senior, 121.
- XX. Doctrine of Idem Sonans, 122.
 1. Statement of the Rule, 122.

2. How Question Determined, 126.
3. Names Beginning with Different Letter, 127.
- XXI. Words of Identification, 127.
- XXII. Names on Ballots, 127.
- XXIII. Names in Legal Proceedings—Misnomer, 128.
 1. In General, 128. [130.
 2. Initials of Third Persons, 130.
 3. Partnership Names, 130.
 4. Change of Name Pending Action, 130.
 5. Name Unknown, 131.
 6. Alias Dictus, 131.
 7. Names in Judgments, 132.
 8. Statute of Additions, 133.
 9. Effect of Sustaining Plea; Amendment, 134.
- XXIV. Names of Corporations, 135.
 1. In General, 135.
 2. Express Averment Not Necessary Where Name Implies a Corporation, 139.
 3. Variance in Corporate Name in Judgments, 141.
 4. Variance in Corporate Name in Grants, 141.
- XXV. Miscellaneous, 142.

I. DEFINITION.—One or more words used to distinguish a particular individual; as, Socrates, Benjamin Franklin.⁴

1. Publishing photographs of girls bare to the waist will not support an indictment for publishing obscene pictures of "naked" girls. Com. v. Dejardin, 126 Mass. 47.

Naked Authority.—See AUTHORITY; AGENCY.

Naked Confessions.—A free and voluntary confession. See also CONFES-

SIONS, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 449.

Naked Contract.—See CONTRACT, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 825.

2. Bergen v. Bennett, 1 Cal. Cas. (N. Y.) 15.

3. Clark v. Hornthal, 47 Miss. 434-534.

4. Bouvier's Law Dict., tit. Name.

II. NAME HAS TWO MEMBERS.—At common law, the name of an individual consists, presumptively, of one Christian, baptismal, or given name, and also one surname, family name, or patronymic.¹ But it has been held that the legal presumption that every person possesses both a Christian name and a surname, does not prevail in respect to the names of negroes in those States where, as slaves, they very frequently had no surname whatever.² It is held also in an early Kentucky case that whether a person has both a surname and a Christian name is entirely a question of fact; and that if a plaintiff sues by only one name, the court will not presume that he has any other.³

III. CHRISTIAN NAME.—The name usually conferred upon a person in infancy by his parents, referred to in the old books as "the name of baptism," and used to distinguish him from others having the same patronymic, which it precedes, is his "Christian name."⁴

There is no presumption of law that any name is used exclusively as a Christian name and not as a surname, or vice versa.⁵

Where a person has selected one of his Christian names other than the first, as the one by which he is to be known, he cannot

As applied to persons, it is a "discriminative appellation or designation of an individual." People v. Ferguson, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 102.

For an interesting account of the origin and growth of names as applied to persons and families, see Encyc. Brit., tit. Names.

1. Vawter v. Gilliland, 55 Ind. 278; Frank v. Levie, 5 Robt. (N. Y.) 599.

Legal Name.—"By the common law, since the time of William the Norman, a full name consists of one Christian or given name and one surname or patronymic, the two, using the Christian name first and the surname last, constitute the legal name of the person." BIDDLE, J., in Schofield v. Jennings, 68 Ind. 233.

In 4 Bacon's Abr. 752, it is declared to be "repugnant to the rules of the Christian religion that there should be a Christian without a name of baptism."

2. In Boyd v. State, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 69, the court held that it would not take judicial notice that colored persons necessarily have a surname, and that an indictment charging the murder of "one William ———, a man of color," was sufficient in the absence of evidence that the deceased had any other name.

3. Brashears v. Stothard, Lit. Sel. Cas. (Ky.) 209.

4. See also tit. CHRISTIAN NAMES, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 239.

LORD COKE is authority for the statement that "a man may have divers names at divers times, but not divers Christian names." Also that "regularly it is requisite that the person be named by the name of baptism, for that a man cannot have two names of baptism as he may have divers surnames." Coke Lit. 3a.

"If a man be baptized by one name and confirmed by another name, as if he be baptized by the name of Thomas and confirmed by the name of Francis, he shall be named in actions Francis, according to the confirmation, and not according to the Christian name." 15 Viner's Abr., tit. Names, p. 595.

The name which a man "always went by," which he declared to be his name in a dying declaration, and by which his mother knew him, may be deemed his right name, notwithstanding he may have had a different name of baptism. Binfield v. State, 15 Neb. 484.

5. State v. Bayonne, 23 La. An. 78, in which case the court refused to hold that the name Ambrosio, as given in an indictment ("one Ambrosio") to designate the person alleged to have been murdered, referred to his Christian name.

The court cannot determine, without proof, whether the name Santa Anna is a Christian name, a surname, or both. Gabe v. State, 6 Ark. 519.

Defendant was sued by the name of object to being sued or indicted by such name instead of by his first name.¹

When a certificate of stock was filled out with the wrong Christian name of stockholder, parol evidence was admitted to show the mistake.²

IV. MIDDLE NAME UNIMPORTANT.—The common law recognizes but one Christian name; hence the middle name or names, or the middle initial letter or letters, of a person's name are not material, either in civil or criminal proceedings, and a variance between the pleading and proof in respect to such names or initials is, according to nearly all the authorities, harmless.³

Such names or initials may properly be omitted altogether.⁴

The middle name not being recognized in law, it is error to sue or indict a person by such name alone, unless it be made to appear that he commonly uses and is known by that name.⁵

"Jonathan, otherwise John Soans." It was held no ground of demurrer, for non constat that it was not all one Christian name. Scott v. Evans, 3 East 3.

1. United States v. Winter, 13 Blatchf. (U. S.) 276.

2. Cleveland v. Burnham, 64 Wis. 347; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 221. See also PAROL EVIDENCE.

3. Bratton v. Seymour, 4 Watts (Pa.) 329; Paul v. Johnson, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 32; Dilts v. Kinney, 15 N. J. L. 130; Stewart v. Colter, 31 Minn. 385; Tucker v. People, 122 Ill. 583; Miller v. People, 39 Ill. 457; Langdon v. People (Ill. 1890), 24 N. E. Rep. 874; State v. Bowman, 78 Iowa 519; State v. Smith, 12 Ark. 622; s. c., 56 Am. Dec. 287; Rooks v. State, 83 Ala. 79; Pace v. State, 69 Ala. 231; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 513; Edmundson v. State, 17 Ala. 179; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 169; Choen v. State, 52 Ind. 347; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 179; People v. Ferris, 56 Cal. 442; State v. Black, 12 Mo. App. 531; Hughes v. Sellers, 34 Ind. 337; Van Voorhis v. Budd, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 479; Milk v. Christie, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 102.

4. Rooks v. State, 83 Ala. 79; Ross v. State, 116 Ind. 495; People v. Lake, 110 N. Y. 61; Roosevelt v. Gardinier, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 463; Franklin v. Talmadge, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 84; State v. Martin, 10 Mo. 391; Hart v. Lindsey, 17 N. H. 235; King v. Hutchins, 28 N. H. 561; s. c., 43 Am. Dec. 597; Keene v. Meade, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 7; Games v. Stiles, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 322; Harris v. Muskingum Mfg. Co., 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 267; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 372; Alexander v. Wilmoth, 2 Aik. (Vt.) 413; Isaacs v. Wiley, 12 Vt. 674; Walbridge v. Kibbee, 20 Vt. 543; Allen v. Taylor, 26

Vt. 599; McKay v. Speak, 8 Tex. 376; Sullivan v. State, 6 Tex. App. 319; Dodd v. State, 2 Tex. App. 58; Dixon v. State, 2 Tex. App. 531; Thompson v. Lee, 21 Ill. 242; Erskine v. Davis, 25 Ill. 251; Bletch v. Johnson, 40 Ill. 116; Hendershott v. Thompson, 1 Morris (Iowa) 186; Schofield v. Jennings, 68 Ind. 232. But see Bowen v. Mulford, 10 N. J. L. 230, where a judgment for the plaintiff by default was set aside because his middle name was not given in the summons, but was inserted in the declaration.

In Conveyances.—The omission or insertion of, or even a mistake in, a person's middle name or initial in a conveyance is unimportant, as between the parties thereto. Dunn v. Games, 1 McLean (U. S.) 321; Games v. Stiles, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 322; Banks v. Lee, 73 Ga. 25. See also Morgan v. Woods, 33 Ind. 23. Contra, Dutton v. Simmons, 65 Me. 583; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 729.

Different Rule in England.—The English cases seem to attach more importance to the middle name than do the American courts. Thus, in Kinnersley v. Knott, 7 Dowl. & L. 128; s. c., 7 Com. B. 980; 13 Jur. 568, where the defendant was sued as John M. Knott, a special demurrer to the declaration was sustained because the middle name was not given in full. A similar ruling was made in Nash v. Collier, 5 Dowl. & L. 341, where the defendant was sued as William Henry W. Collier. See also Charter v. Charter, L. R., 2 Prob. Div. 323. But in Rex v. Newman, 1 Ld. Raym. 562, an indictment was quashed because it gave the defendant two Christian names.

5. State v. Martin, 10 Mo. 391; Diggs

And it has been held proper to strike out of a summons and complaint, on motion, the middle initial of the defendant's name.¹ Some courts hold that while it is not necessary to give the middle name or initial, yet if either be given, a mistake therein is a fatal variance.² The doctrine in Massachusetts is that the middle name is an essential part of the name, particularly in indictments, and its omission a misnomer.³

V. ABBREVIATIONS.—Judicial notice will be taken of the ordinary and commonly used abbreviations and equivalents of Christian names; but it has been doubted whether this rule ought to be extended to surnames.⁴

v. State, 49 Ala. 311; Jernigan v. Carter, 60 Ga. 131.

1. Griel v. Solomon, 82 Ala. 85; 60 Am. Rep. 733.

2. State v. Hughes, 1 Swan (Tenn.) 261; Rockwell v. State, 12 Ohio St. 427; Price v. State, 19 Ohio 423; State v. Homer, 40 Me. 438; State v. Dudley, 7 Wis. 664; Edmundson v. State, 17 Ala. 179; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 169; Ersine v. Davis, 25 Ill. 251; Hart v. Lindsey, 17 N. H. 235; s. c., 43 Am. Dec. 597; Miller v. People, 39 Ill. 457.

3. Com. v. Perkins, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 388; Com. v. Hall, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 262; Com. v. Shearman, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 546; Com. v. McAvoy, 16 Gray (Mass.) 235; Terry v. Sisson, 125 Mass. 560.

4. Fenton v. Perkins, 3 Mo. 144, cited in Jones' Estate, 27 Pa. St. 338. See also title ABBREVIATIONS, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 15.

"The abbreviations of a man's given name are so common that, without any violence to the law of the land, the courts may take judicial notice of them." TOMPKINS, J., in Fenton v. Perkins, 3 Mo. 144.

Instances.—In Weaver v. McElhennon, 13 Mo. 89, the court judicially noticed that "Christy" or "Christ" was an abbreviation of Christopher. See also Gordon v. Holiday, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 285. "Jo" has been held to be equivalent to Joseph. Com. v. O'Baldwin, 103 Mass. 210. "Polly" equivalent to Mary. Sowle v. Sowle, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 376; Com. v. Terry, 114 Mass. 263. "Sally" equivalent to Sarah. Shelburne v. Rochester, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 470. "Th." equivalent to Thomas. Ogden v. Gibbons, 5 N. J. L. 518, 531. And "Jack" or "Jock" equivalent to John. Walter v. State, 105 Ind. 589. Jane and Joan, and Jean and John are given in 2 Roll. Abr. 155, as being well recognized equivalents.

William and Wilhelm.—But in Becker v. German M. F. Ins. Co., 68 Ill. 412, the defendant was sued on a note as William Becker; the note was signed in German, Wilhelm Becker. The court held that the names were different both in spelling and in sound, and that the variance was fatal, notwithstanding the admitted fact that Wilhelm is the German equivalent of William.

Ben.—Where the defendant was indicted by the Christian name of "Ben," the court, on appeal, held that the trial court properly refused to quash the indictment, saying: "It seems to us that Ben may have been the true and full Christian name of the appellant. Ben is not necessarily a contraction of Benjamin, Benoni, Benedict, or any other name, and on the motion to quash, the court, we think, was right in assuming that Ben may have been the full Christian name of the appellant." Burton v. State, 75 Ind. 477. And see also People v. Ferguson, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 120.

Geo.—Where the defendant was declared against as "Geo. Turner," it was held a good plea in abatement to allege that his Christian name was George, and not "Geo." Wilson v. Shannon, 6 Ark. 196.

Mr.—The court will not presume that the letters "Mr." placed before a person's surname constitute his Christian name. Gatty v. Field, 9 Ad. & El., N. S. 631.

Mrs.—In condemnation proceedings an award to "Mrs. Kearsley" was set aside, on the ground that "Mrs." was not a legal name. Kearsley v. Gibbs, 44 N. J. L. 169.

Though a statute permits the description of persons in indictments by one or more of the initials of the Christian name, and also permits the use of either of two names by which a person is equally well known, yet it is error to rule as matter of law that a person is correctly described as "Mrs. C. Davis," because it is shown that her husband's name is C. Davis. The question whether she was well known by that name should have been submitted to the jury. Davis v. State (Tex. 1889), 11 S. W. Rep. 647.

VI. CORRUPTIONS, DERIVATIVES AND PREFIXES.—Where the derivation of two names is the same, or where one is merely a corruption of the other and both are by common usage recognized as identical, though they differ in sound, it is not a material misnomer to use one for the other.¹

Where surnames having a prefix are ordinarily written with an abbreviation, it is sufficient to write them in the same manner in a pleading.²

VII. PRESUMPTION THAT LETTER CONSTITUTES NAME.—When a party or third person is designated in a pleading, warrant or indictment by a surname preceded by one or more capital letters only, the court, in the absence of evidence, will not presume that he has any Christian name other than such letter or letters.³ It was formerly held that this presumption would be indulged only where the letter given was a vowel,⁴ but under more recent decisions the rule seems to be established that a consonant, as well as a vowel, will be presumed to be an entire Christian name.⁵

Name of Railroad Company.—The court will not take judicial notice that the letters "C., B. & Q. R. R. Co." mean the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company. Accolo v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 70 Iowa 185.

1. Wilkerson v. State, 13 Mo. 91; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 137; State v. Huston, 15 Mo. 512; Gordon v. Holiday, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 285.

"If two names are in original derivation the same, and are taken promiscuously to be the same in common use, though they are different in sound, yet there is no variance—as, Piers Griffith brought an audita querela, and outlawry was pleaded by the name of Peter Griffith and allowed." 15 Viner's Abr., title Misnomer, p. 408.

2. State v. Kean, 10 N. H. 347; s. c., 34 Am. Dec. 162; Moynahan v. People, 3 Colo. 367; People v. Tisdale, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 59.

To write a surname with an "M" as "M'Neal" instead of McNeal, is no variance. Campbell v. Wolff, 33 Mo. 459.

3. State v. Webster, 30 Ark. 166; Burford v. McCue, 53 Pa. St. 427;

Dana v. Fielder, 12 N. Y. 40; Fewlass v. Abbott, 28 Mich. 270; Oakley v. Pegley (Neb. 1890), 46 N. W. Rep. 920. But see Frank v. Levie, 5 Robt. (N. Y.) 599, where it is said that the law does not recognize a single letter as a name.

4. Vowel Initials.—Where a single vowel immediately precedes a surname, the court will understand such vowel to be the Christian name of the person referred to. Kinnersley v. Knott, 7 Com. B. 980; s. c., 13 Jur. 658; Nash v. Collier, 5 Dowl. & L. 341; Lomax v. Landells, 6 Com. B. 577; s. c., 6 Dowl. & L. 396. In the case last cited, MAULE, J., said that "a vowel, which is in itself a word, and may be pronounced separately, may be a name; though a consonant, which is incapable of being pronounced without the addition of a vowel, cannot."

"I know no law, nor do I see any reason, why a man may not take the letters A W for his first name, or, as it is generally called, his Christian name; for as there is no union here between church and state, and no obligation on parents to baptize their children, this name may be as often changed as the patronymic." COLCOCK, J., in City Council v. King, 4 McCord L. (S. Car.) 487.

Where the plaintiff sued as O. B. Abbott, and obtained judgment, it was held that it would not be presumed, for the purpose of invalidating the judgment, that he had any other Christian name. Fewlass v. Abbott, 28 Mich. 270.

5. Consonants.—Tweedy v. Jarvis, 27

VIII. NAMES OF BASTARDS.—Until he has acquired one by reputation or adoption, a bastard has no surname, not even that of his mother. Probably, however, less evidence would be required to show that he had adopted his mother's name than that he had acquired a different one.¹

IX. NAMES OF DIVORCED WOMEN.—A woman at marriage loses her own surname and acquires that of her husband; and a subsequent divorce a vinculo does not restore to her her former name.²

But by statute in many of the States the court granting the divorce may, at her instance, give her back her maiden name, or authorize her to adopt another.³

X. NAME OF MONTH.—See note 4.

XI. CHANGE OF NAME—1. Power of Courts.—In the United States, authority to change the names of persons or corporations has been very generally conferred upon courts of record.⁵ It has been held that the exercise of such power is discretionary with the court to Conn. 45, in which the court, per STORRS, C. J., said: "We see no sensible or rational ground for any distinction between a vowel and a consonant, and think that either of them may be a name; and that name is denoted by the sound by which it is called or pronounced when it is spoken or uttered audibly as a letter." To the same effect see Reg. v. Dale, 15 Jur. 657; s. c., 5 Eng. L. & Eq. 360, in which case LORD CAMPBELL remarked that he had been reliably informed that an individual had been baptized by the name of "T." And in Kinnersley v. Knott, 6 M. G. & S., a person was reported as having been christened "J."

In Perkins v. McDowell (Wyo. 1890), 23 Pac. Rep. 71, the plaintiff sued as "J. M. McDowell," and, on demurrer, the court, per VAN DEVANTER, C. J., said: "While it does not occur frequently, there are many instances where single letters constitute the only Christian name. We cannot, then, judicially know that the letters 'J. M.' are not a name, and, as the petition does not disclose that the letters 'J. M.' are not the Christian name of the plaintiff, it follows that there is no defect apparent on the face of the petition in this respect."

In Breedlove v. Nicolet, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 413, where the plaintiff's name as given in a pleading was "J. J. Sigg," and objection thereto was raised for the first time on writ of error, MR. CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL said: "He may have assumed the letters 'J. J.' as distinguishing him from other persons of the surname of Sigg. Objections to the name of the plaintiff cannot be taken advantage of after judgment."

1. Rex v. Clark, Russ. & Ry. 358; Rex v. Waters, 1 Mood. C. C. 457; Rex v. Smith, 1 Mood. C. C. 295; s. c., 6 Car. & P. 151; Rex v. Sheen, 2 Car. & P. 634; Reg. v. Evans, 8 Car. & P. 765; Wakefield v. Mackey, 1 Phill. 133; Shannon v. People, 5 Mich. 71; Wright v. Wright, 2 Mass. 109; 1 Russ. Cr. (3rd Eng. ed.) 656; 1 Bishop Crim. Proc. (3rd ed.), § 686.

2. Fendall v. Goldsmith, 2 P. D. 263.

3. Resumption of Maiden Name.—The court has jurisdiction to decree a resumption by the wife of her former name in Massachusetts, Vermont, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Ohio, Illinois, Kentucky, Texas, Washington and District of Columbia. But in Minnesota, Missouri, Arkansas and Nevada, only in actions where the wife is plaintiff. In Oregon, if she is not in fault. Stimson's Am. Stat. Law, § 6242.

4. February.—In an indictment the name of the month was written, apparently, "Tebruary." A motion to quash on this ground was held properly overruled, as the court judicially knew that there was no month beginning with the letter T, and would presume that the letter was meant for an F. Witten v. State, 4 Tex. App. 70.

5. Constitutional Provisions.—Local or special laws changing the name of any person are forbidden in Arkansas, California, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, which application for the change is made, and that its decision is reviewable only in case of manifest abuse of discretion.¹

2. Effect of Change.—A person by taking a new name under an act of parliament does not lose his original name; the grant is a permission, but not an obligation, to adopt and use the new name.²

XII. RIGHT TO ADOPT ANY NAME.—A person may legally name himself, or change his name, or acquire one by reputation, general usage or habit.³ So, in the absence of fraud, a person may do business and execute contracts under any name he chooses to assume.⁴

XIII. RIGHT TO NAME CHILD.—It has been held that this right belongs to the father, and that it is of sufficient pecuniary value to furnish a valid consideration for a note given to the father by a third person for the privilege of conferring the maker's name upon the payee's child.⁵

XIV. RIGHT OF PROPERTY IN NAMES.⁶—At common law there is no property right in any person to the use of a particular name as a Texas, Virginia and Wisconsin. Several States forbid special laws changing name of place: California, Illinois, Missouri, Nebraska, Pennsylvania and Texas. In Tennessee the legislature is prohibited from changing the names of persons, but is required to confer such power upon the courts. Stimson's Am. Stat. Law, §§ 395, 432.

Facts Required to be Shown.—The rule in the New York common pleas was stated to be to require a statement showing whether the applicant for the change is married or single, whether any judgments exist or actions are pending against him, whether there is any outstanding commercial paper in the name sought to be abandoned; and also showing the applicant's age and birthplace, and the names of his parents. Matter of Hamilton, 10 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 79. See also Petition of John Snook, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 566.

1. In re United States Mercantile Reporting etc. Co., 115 N. Y. 176; Petition of Snook, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 566; Matter of Hamilton, 10 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 79.

2. Leigh v. Leigh, 15 Ves. 100.

3. England v. New York Publishing Co., 8 Daly (N. Y.) 375; City Council v. King, 4 McCord L. (S. Car.) 487.

In Doe v. Yates, 5 Barn. & Ald. 544, ABBOTT, C. J., said: "A name assumed by the voluntary act of a young man at his outset in life, adopted by all who know him, and by which he is constantly called, becomes, for all the purposes that occur to my mind, as much and effectually his name as if he had obtained an act of parliament to confer it on him." See also Matter of Snook, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 566.

Patronymic Not Binding.—No person is bound to accept his patronymic as a surname, nor his Christian name as a given name, though the custom to do so is almost universal among English-speaking people who have inherited the common law." BIDDLE, J., in Schofield v. Jennings, 68 Ind. 233. See also City Council v. King, 4 McCord L. (S. Car.) 487.

4. Bell v. Sun Printing Co., 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 567; petition of Snook, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 566.

Right to Sue Under Adopted Name.—A girl who has been taken into a family and treated in all respects as a daughter, though not formally adopted, may use the family name as her own in a suit against the head of the family. Watson v. Watson, 49 Mich. 540.

As to unlawful assumption and use of names, see titles FALSE PRETENCES, 7 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law; FORGERY, 8 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law; TRADE-MARKS.

5. Wolford v. Powers, 85 Ind. 294; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 16; Parks v. Francis, 50 Vt. 626; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 517.

6. See title CORPORATIONS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 206.

surname, to the extent of enabling him to prevent the assumption of the same name by another person.¹

Nor is there any property right in a name given to a piece of real property or to a private dwelling, which would warrant an injunction against the use of such name by others, in connection with their own property.²

XV. MARRIAGE UNDER FICTITIOUS NAME.—The mere fact that the name under which a person assents to a formal contract of marriage is not his true name, does not affect the validity of the marriage, even though it was preceded by publication of banns.³

But if the fictitious name be used in furtherance of a fraudulent scheme, and for the purpose of deceiving as to identity, it may, together with the attendant circumstances, render the marriage voidable at the instance of the innocent party.⁴

XVI. LAND OFFICE PROCEEDINGS.—The commissioners may correct an error in a land certificate stating wrongly the Christian name of the owner; and may do this where a patent, since returned for cancellation, has issued in the wrong name.⁵

XVII. IDENTITY.—The presumption, subject to some exceptions, is that identity of name—by which is meant identity of both Christian name and surname—prima facie establishes identity of person, and casts upon the adverse party the burden of proving the contrary.⁶

1. Du Boulay v. Du Boulay, 2 L. R., P. C. 430; s. c., 17 W. R. 594; 6 Moore P. C. C., N. S. 31; 38 L. J., P. C. 35.

2. Day v. Browning, 10 Ch. Div. 294, 302; s. c., 48 L. J. Ch. 173; 39 L. T. 553, reversing the decision of the vice chancellor in 39 L. T. 226. This was a peculiar case, and probably the only one of its kind ever reported. The plaintiff was the proprietor of a certain residence property which had for many years been known and called by the name of "Ashford Lodge." The defendant owned an adjoining residence, which had for nearly an equally long period of time been called "Ashford Villa." In 1876 the defendant, for some reason which does not appear in the report of the case, changed the name of his residence to Ashford Lodge, the name so long used by the plaintiff, who brought an action to enjoin the use of those particular words as a designation or name for the defendant's residence, alleging irreparable damage, etc. The defendant interposed a general demurrer, which the vice chancellor, MALINS, overruled; but on appeal from that order, all the judges agreed that the defendant's conduct, however unneighborly or reprehensible from an ethical point of view, did not constitute an infringement of any property right of the plaintiff; and that the demurrer should have been sustained.

As to property rights in trade names and trademarks, see title TRADEMARKS.

3. Rex v. Inhabitants of Billingshurst, 3 M. & S. 250; Rex v. Inhabitants of Burton-upon-Trent, 3 M. & S. 537.

4. Rex v. Inhabitants Burton upon-Trent, 3 M. & S. 537; Rex v. Wroxton, 4 B. & Ad. 640; s. c., 24 Eng. C. L. 131. See also consistory court decisions in Frankland v. Nicholson, and Pougett v. Tomkyns, cited in note to Rex v. Inhabitants of Billingshurst, 3 M. & S. 250.

5. Bell v. Hearne, 19 How. (U. S.) 252.

6. See title IDENTITY, 9 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 863 et seq. McConeghy v. Kirk, 68 Pa. St. 200; Clark v. Freeman, 25 Pa. St. 133; Stebbins v. Duncan, 108 U. S. 32; Jackson v. Cody, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 140; Hatcher v. Rocheleau, 18 N. Y. 86; Jackson v. Christman, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 277; State v. Moore, 61 Mo. 276; Cross v. Martin, 46 Vt. 14; Jackson v. King, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 237; s. c., 15 Am. Dec. 468; Atchison v. McCulloch, 5 Watts (Pa.) 13; Douglass v. Dakin, 46 Cal. 49; Brown v. Metz, 33 Ill. 339; Cates v. Loftus, 3 A. K. Marsh.

Identity will be presumed if the names sound alike, within the rule of idem sonans, even though there be slight differences in the spelling.¹

(Ky.) 202; Hubbard v. Lees, L. R., 1 Ex. 255; Burns v. Hyatt, 1 Pa. L. J. 323; Bogue v. Bigelow, 29 Vt. 183; Fletcher v. Conly, 2 Greene (Iowa) 88. Compare Wilson v. Holt, 83 Ala. 528; Ward v. Dougherty, 75 Cal. 240; People v. Lake, 110 N. Y. 61.

Identity of person will not be presumed from identity of initials and surname. The People v. Smith, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 298. See also People v. Ferguson, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 102; Zeller v. State, 7 Ind. 659.

In Hatcher v. Rocheleau, 18 N. Y. 86, the court held that identity of name was prima facie evidence that a person sued in New York in 1857 was the same person who was sued by that name in Mississippi in 1841.

In Aultman v. Zimm, 93 Ind. 158, the court held that proof showing the liability of a person bearing the defendant's name, in the absence of counter-vailing evidence as to the identity of the person, is sufficient to establish the defendant's liability.

Identity of Name Raises a Presumption of Identity of Person.—Goodell v. Hubbard, 32 Mich. 47; Campbell v. Wallace, 46 Mich. 320; State v. Moore, 61 Mo. 276.

And where the identity is clearly established, the use of a different name by a party is not material where the question is one of identity merely. Boyce v. Dautz, 29 Mich. 146; Bothe v. Dayton etc. R. Co., 37 Ohio St. 147. If denied, the identity may be proved, and if the bill is taken as confessed the identity is admitted. Ramsdell v. Eaton, 12 Mich. 117.

Return of a Commission Establishes Identity.—A commission to take a deposition, directed to "Messrs. Swan & Moore, attorneys at law," of Ottawa, etc., was returned with a certificate of execution signed "J. J. Moore, C. J. Swan, commissioners." Held, That an objection to the reading of the deposition in evidence, on this ground, raises only a question of identity of persons, and is untenable where the return establishes such identity. Eaton v. Peck, 26 Mich. 57.

Objection to Identity Cannot First be Raised in the Supreme Court.—Objection to the identity of a person cannot be raised for the first time in the supreme court, on account of the use of the initial letters of proper names in the assessment made by the commissioners in such proceedings. Houk v. Barthold, 73 Ind. 21.

Presumption When Initials Only Are Used.—A suit brought and judgment rendered in the name of the plaintiff by initials only for his given name, is not open to objection on that ground, in the absence of any showing that he had any other name; it will not be presumed for the sake of invalidating such judgment that the plaintiff has any other Christian name than the initials used in bringing the suit. Fewlass v. Abbott, 28 Mich. 270.

Proof of Identity of Names and Persons.—See IDENTITY, 9 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 866, 867.

See also Com. v. Gale, 11 Gray (Mass.) 320; Berber v. Kerzeinger, 23 Ill. 286; Jackson v. Goes, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 518; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 399; Jackson v. Stanley, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 136; s. c., 6 Am. Dec. 319.

After a lapse of twenty-five years, identity of name is not sufficient evidence of personal identity. Sailor v. Hertzogg, 2 Pa. St. 182. See also Sitler v. Gehr, 105 Pa. St. 577; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 207.

"The reason given for casting the onus on the party who denies [the identity] is that disproof can be readily had by calling the person whose identity is contested into court." Sailor v. Hertzogg, 2 Pa. St. 183, per GIBSON, C. J.

But identity of name, without more, was held not sufficient to uphold attempted justification in libel. Regensperger v. Kiefer, 20 W. N. C. (Pa.) 97.

It is error to submit to the jury, without other proof, whether R. P. O'Neil, who executed a deed, is identical with Rev. Patrick O'Neil, the owner of the land. Burford v. McCue, 53 Pa. St. 427.

Where an instrument is signed "Adam Lautermilch," the identity of the assignor with one John Adam Lautermilch is for the jury, the writing agreeing in other respects with the presumption of identity. Lautermilch v. Kneagy, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 200.

1. Kelly v. Valney (Pa.), 5 Pa. Law Jour. 300; s. c., 2 Am. Law Reg. 499; Jackson v. Cody, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 140.

It will not be presumed, however, that a plaintiff and defendant,¹ or an obligor and obligee,² or a subscribing witness and a surety,³ are, respectively, the same person merely because of identity of name.

If the surname in question be a very common one, and the Christian name not unusual, the courts have a disinclination to apply the rule.⁴

XVIII. SEX.—It would seem that the well known fact that a large number of Christian names are invariably conferred only upon persons of a particular sex would become a matter of judicial notice; but so far as the reported cases show, the courts are not disposed to indulge a presumption as to sex merely from the nature of the Christian name. Thus, it has been held that the name "Jo" does not designate the sex of the person referred to.⁵ Nor will the court say, as a matter of judicial knowledge, that the Christian name, Lawrence, does not designate a female.⁶

XIX. JUNIOR AND SENIOR.—The word Junior, or Jr., or words of similar import, are ordinarily mere matter of description, and no part of a person's legal name; and to improperly add or omit them is harmless error, whether in civil or criminal proceedings.⁷ So of the word Senior, or Sr.⁸

Where there are two persons residing in the same place, and having the same Christian name and surname, and one of them uses the addition Jr., or "the second," they will be presumed to be father and son.⁹

So, where father and son living in the same locality have the same Christian name and surname, it will be presumed, in the ab-

1. Suttles v. Whitlock, 4 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 452.

2. Allen v. Shadburne, 1 Dana (Ky.) 69.

3. Jones v. Chappell, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 425; Jackson v. Christman, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 277.

4. Jones v. Jones, 9 M. & W. 75; Jackson v. Christman, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 277.

5. Crawford v. Slye, 4 Cranch C. C. (U. S.) 457. But see Com. v. O'Baldwin, 103 Mass. 210, which holds that "Jo." will be presumed to mean Joseph, a male.

6. LaMotte v. Archer, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 46.

7. Hodgson's Case, 1 Lewin C. C. 236; Rex v. Bailey, T. C. & P. 264; Leplot v. Browne, 1 Salk. 7; Geraghty v. State, 110 Ind. 103; Ross v. State, 116 Ind. 495; People v. Cook, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 259; People v. Collins, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 549; Padgett v. Lawrence, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 170; s. c., 40 Am. Dec. 232; Com. v. Perkins, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 388; Cobb v. Lucas, 15 Pick. (Mass.)

7; Kincaid v. Howe, 10 Mass. 203; State v. Grant, 22 Me. 171; Coit v. Starkweather, 8 Conn. 293; Fleet v. Youngs, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 522; Prentiss v. Blake, 34 Vt. 465; Brainerd v. Stilphin, 6 Vt. 9; s. c., 27 Am. Dec. 532; Keith v. Ware, 6 Vt. 680; Blake v. Tucker, 12 Vt. 39; Jameson v. Isaacs, 12 Vt. 611; Isaacs v. Wiley, 12 Vt. 677; Johnson v. Ellison, 4 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 526; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 163; Headley v. Shaw, 39 Ill. 354; State v. Weare, 38 N. H. 314.

Second of that Name.—Where the ownership of stolen goods was laid in W. R., "the second of that name," and the proof showed that he was generally known as W. R., Jr., it was held that there was no variance. Com. v. Parmenter, 101 Mass. 211.

8. Neil v. Dillon, 3 Mo. 59; People v. Collins, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 549; Fleet v. Youngs, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 522.

9. Cross v. Martin, 46 Vt. 14, where a deed from Elijah Gore, of Halifax, to Elijah Gore Jr., of Halifax, was presumed to be from father to son.

sence of some such addition as Junior, or "the younger," that process issued against a defendant of that name is intended for the father.¹

XX. DOCTRINE OF IDEM SONANS—1. Statement of the Rule.—The absence of a set of definite rules for the spelling and pronunciation of the names of persons, and more especially of surnames, has led the courts to the adoption of a principle known as "the rule of Idem Sonans." This rule may be stated to be, that absolute accuracy in spelling names is not required in legal documents or proceedings, either civil or criminal; that if the name as spelled in the document, though different from the correct spelling thereof, conveys to the ear when pronounced according to commonly accepted methods, a sound practically identical with the sound of the correct name as commonly pronounced, the name as thus given is a sufficient designation of the individual referred to, and no advantage can be taken of the clerical error.² In other words,

1. Jarmain v. Hooper, 6 M. & G. 827; s. c., 1 Dowl. & L. 769; 7 Scott, N. R. 663; Stebbing v. Spicer, 8 M. G. & S. 827; Bate v. Burr, 4 Harr. (Del.) 130; Brown v. Benight, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 39; s. c., 23 Am. Dec. 373; Lepiot v. Brown, 1 Salk. 7; Singleton v. Johnson, 9 M. & W. 67. See also State v. Vitum, 9 N. H. 519; Cobb v. Lucas, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 1; State v. Grant, 22 Me. 171; Com. v. Beckley, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 330; Kincaid v. Howe, 10 Mass. 203; Com. v. Perkins, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 388; State v. Weare, 38 N. H. 314; People v. Collins, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 549; Stevens v. West, 6 Jones L. (N. Car.) 49; Fleet v. Youngs, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 522; Padgett v. Lawrence, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 170; s. c., 40 Am. Dec. 232; Allen v. State, 52 Ind. 486; Brainerd v. Stilphin, 6 Vt. 9; s. c., 27 Am. Dec. 532; Hadley v. Shaw, 30 Ill. 354.

It seems that where father and son of the same name reside in the same town, the omission of "Junior" in a writ against the son is good cause of abatement. Zuill v. Bradley, Quincy (Mass.) 6.

But in Simpson v. Dix, 131 Mass. 179, it was held that where a conveyance is made to a grantee of a certain name, and there are two persons, father and son, of that name, no presumption will be indulged in that the conveyance is to the father; and the evidence is admissible to show who was in fact intended as the grantee.

2. Leatherbarrow v. Ward, 5 Jur. 385.

Definitions.—"The proper rule in such cases is that if two names, according to the ordinary rules of pronouncing the English language, may be sounded alike, without doing violence to the letters found in the variant orthography, then the variance is, prima facie, at least, immaterial, and may be so decided by the court. And in the pronunciation of proper names, greater latitude is indulged than in any other class of words." SOMERVILLE, J., in Rooks v. State, 83 Ala. 79.

"The law does not take notice of orthography; therefore, if a name is misspelled, no harm can come of this, provided the name as written in the indictment is idem sonans, as the books express it, with the true name. It is sometimes a nice matter to determine when the names are of the same sound; and the courts do not, in this matter, hold the rule of identity with a strict hand." 1 Bish. Crim. Proc., § 688.

"Courts are not fastidious in enforcing absolute precision in regard to orthography. Names admitting of the same pronunciation are often made up of very different letters. In these cases, a mistake of one mode of spelling for another is unimportant, even in an indictment. The public prosecutor is not bound to ascertain the particular letters used by the accused in writing his name, for this might often be impracticable." MASON, C. J., in Donnel v. United States, 1 Morris (Iowa) 141; s. c., 39 Am. Dec. 457.

"It matters not how two names are spelled, what their orthography is, they are idem sonans within the meaning of the books, if the attentive ear finds difficulty in distinguishing them when pronounced, or common and long continued usage has by corruption or abbreviation made them identical in pronunciation." Robson v. Thomas, 55 Mo. 581.

"In the use of foreign names, courts should not pronounce that a variance, unless it be palpable, which may be only a misspelling or a mispronunciation." Chiniquy v. Catholic Bishop, 41 Ill. 148.

Instances of Idem Sonans.—In the following cases, the names in conjunction have been held to be within the rule of idem sonans, or to be immaterially variant in sound:

A.—Alessandro and Alexander (the English equivalent). Alexander v. Com., 105 Pa. St. 1. Anthron and Antrum. State v. Scurry, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 68. Adamson and Adanson. James v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 325. Annie and Anny. State v. Upton, 1 Dev. (N. Car.) 513. Amel and Amiel. People v. Gosch (Mich. 1890), 46 N. W. Rep. 101.

B.—Bobb and Bubb (local usage). Myer v. Fegaly, 39 Pa. St. 429; s. c., 80 Am. Dec. 534. Booth and Boothe. Jackson v. State, 74 Ala. 26. Brearley and Brailey. People v. Gosch (Mich. 1890), 46 N. W. Rep. 101. Bert Samrud and Bernt Sannerud. State v. Sannerud, 38 Minn. 229. Barnabus and Barney. McGregor v. Balch, 17 Vt. 562. Beneux and Bennaux. Ben-eux v. State, 20 Ark. 97. Boge and Bogue. Bogue v. Bigelow, 29 Vt. 179. Beckwith and Beckworth. Stewart v. State, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 171. Boyce and Bice (as pronounced by foreigners). Boyce v. Danz, 29 Mich. 146. Blankenship and Blackenship. State v. Blankenship, 21 Mo. 504. Bikerstoffs and Bickerstaffs. Heskett v. Lee, 1 Vent. 73. Benedetto and Beniditto. Abitbol v. Benedetto, 2 Taunt. 401. Burdet and Boudet or Boredet. Aaron v. State, 37 Ala. 106; Bryon and Bryan. Tyser v. Bryan, 2 Dowl. 640.

C.—Chin Chan and Chin Chang. Wells v. State, 4 Tex. App. 20; Conly and Conolly. Fletcher v. Conly, 2 Greene (Iowa) 88. Chatam and Chatham. Roth v. State, 4 Tex. L. J. 393. Chambles and Chambless. Ward v. State, 28 Ala. 53. Conklan and Conklin. Cutting v. Conklin, 28 Ill. 506. Cuffy and Cuffee or Cuff. State v. Farr, 12 Rich. (S. Car.) 24. Charlestown and Charleston. Alvord v. Moffat, 10 Ind. 366. Conn and Coen. Moore v. Anderson, 8 Ind. 18. Chicopee and Chickopee. Com. v. Desmarteau, 16 Gray (Mass.) 1; Conaway and Conaway. Conaway v. Hays, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 159. Che-gaw-go-quay and Che-gaw-ge-quay. Brown v. Quinland, 75 Mich. 289. Colburn and Coburn. Colburn v. Bancroft, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 57.

D.—Danner and Dannaher. Gahan v. People, 58 Ill. 160. Deadema and Diadema. State v. Patterson, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 346; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 699. Donly and Donnelly. Donnelly v. State, 78 Ala. 453. Doerges, Dierges, and Dierkes. Gorman v. Dierkes, 37 Mo. 576; Droun and Drown. Com. v. Woods, 10 Gray (Mass.) 477. Dixon and Dickson. Reading v. Waterman, 46 Mich. 107. Dillahunty, Dillahinty, and Dillaunty. Dillahunty v. Davis (Tex. 1889), 12 S. W. Rep. 55.

E.—Emonds, Emmons, and Emmens. Lyon v. Kain, 36 Ill. 362. Edmundson and Edmindson. Edmundson v. State, 17 Ala. 179; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 169; Elliott and Ellett. Robertson v. Winchester, 85 Tenn. 171.

F.—Fain and Fanes. State v. Hare, 95 N. Car. 682. Fauntleroy and Fontleroy. Wilkes v. State, 27 Tex. App. 381. February and Tebruary. Witten v. State, 4 Tex. App. 70. Forrest and Fourai (as pronounced in French). State v. Timmens, 4 Minn. 325. Finnegan and Finegan. People v. Mayworm, 5 Mich. 146. Fayelville and Fayetteville. United States v. Hinman, 1 Bradw. (Ill.) 292. Foster and Faster. Foster v. State, 1 Tex. App. 533.

G.—George Rooks and George W. Rux. Rooks v. State, 83 Ala. 79. Giddings, Gidings and Gidines. State v. Lincoln, 17 Wis. 597. Gardiner and Gardner. Rector v. Taylor, 12 Ark. 128. Geesler and Geissler. Cleaveland v. State, 20 Ind. 444. Girous and Geroux. Girous v. State, 29 Ind. 93.

H.—Hearn and Hearne. Coster v. Thomason, 19 Ala. 717. Hicks Nowells and Hix Nowels. Spoonemore v. State, 25 Tex. App. 358. Hinsdall and Hinsdale. Meredith v. Hinsdale, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 362. Heremon and Hariman. State v. Bean, 19 Vt. 530. Hanley and Hanly. Irvin v. Sebastian, 6 Ark. 33. Haverly and Havelly. State v. Havelly, 21 Mo. 498. Hudson and Hutson. State v. Hutson, 15 Mo. 512; Cato v. Hutson, 7 Mo. 142. Joel D. Hubbard (correct name), J. D. Hubba, J. D. Huba and J. D. Hub (names written on ballots). Gumm v. Hubbard, 97 Mo. 311.

I.—Isah and Isaiah. Ellis v. Merri- man, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 297.

J.—Jacob and Jaacob. Jacob Aboab's
Case, 1 Mod. 107. Japheth and Japh-
ath. Morton v. McClure, 22 Ill. 257.
Jefferds, Jeffards and Jervais. Com. v.
Brigham, 147 Mass. 414. Josiah and Josier. Schooler v. Asherst, 1 Litt.
(Ky.) 217; s. c., 13 Am. Dec. 232. Juli
and Julee. Point v. State, 37 Ala. 148.

K.—Kamberling and Kimberling.
Houston v. State, 4 Greene (Iowa) 437.
Kenney and Kinney. Kinney v. Har- rett, 46 Mich. 87. Kay and Key.
Deckenson v. Bower, 16 East 112.
Kealiher, Keoliher, Kelliher, Kellier, Keolhier and Kelhier. Millett v.
Blake, 81 Me. 531. Kreitz, Krietz,
Critz and Crit. Kreitz v. Behrens- meyer, 125 Ill. 141.

L.—Lancaster and Lancaster. Anony- mous, All. 91. Lebering and Lebrun, or Lebring. Kentland v. Admr., 2
Wash. (U. S.) 201. Lawrence and Lawrance. Webb v. Lawrence, 2
Dowl. P. C. 81; s. c., 1 Crompt. & M.
806. Lawson and Lossene. State v.
Pullens, 81 Mo. 387. Little and Lytle.
Lytle v. People, 47 Ill. 422. Leaphardt and Leaphat. Leaphardt v. Sloan, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 278. Langford and Lankford. State v. Mahan, 12 Tex.
283. Louis and Lewis. Girous v.
State, 29 Ind. 93; Block v. State, 66
Ala. 493. T. C. Lucky and C. C.
Lucky. Brown v. State, 32 Tex. 134.

M.—Mary Etta and Marietta. Goode
v. State, 2 Tex. App. 520. Michael and Michaels. State v. Houser, Busb.
(N. Car.) 410. Minner and Miner.
Jackson v. Boneham, 15 Johns. (N. Y.)
286. McDonald and McDonell. Mc-
Donald v. People, 47 Ill. 533. Mc- Laughlin and McGlofin. McLaughlin
v. State, 52 Ind. 476. McGinnis and McInnis. Barnes v. People, 18 Ill. 52;
s. c., 65 Am. Dec. 699. McGilligan and Megilligan. Pope v. Kirchner, 77 Cal.
152. Marres and Mars. Com. v. Stone,
103 Mass. 421. McNicole and Mc-
Nicoll. Rex v. Wilson, 2 C. & K. 527.
Meyer, Meyers and Mayer. Smurr v.
State, 88 Ind. 504. Mozer and Mou- seuer. Ruddell v. Mozer, 1 Ark. 503.
See also McAllister v. Clark, 86 Ill.
237.

N.—Nowels and Nowells. Spoone- more v. State, 25 Tex. App. 358. Nunne and Nonne. Nonne v. Maxev, 2 Jo.
219. Newton, Nuton and Newton.
Newton v. Newell, 26 Minn. 529.

O.—Owen D. Haverly and Owens D.
Havely. State v. Havely, 21 Mo. 498.

P.—Poll and Polly. McAllister v.
Clark, 86 Ill. 236. Philip and Pilip.
Taylor v. Rogers, 1 Ala. 197. Penryn and Pennyryne. Elliott v. Knott, 14 Md. 121. Patterson and Petterson.
Jackson v. Cody, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 140.
Petris and Petrie. Petrie v. Wood- worth, 3 Cal. (N. Y.) 219. Preyer,
Prior and Pryor. Page v. State, 61
Ala. 16.

R.—Reed and Read. State v. Pott, 9
N. J. L. 32; s. c., 17 Am. Dec. 444.
Rae and Wray. Vance v. Wray, 3
Upp. Can. L. J. 69. Rennoll and Ren- nolls. — v. Rennolls, 1 Chitty
659. Robinson, Robertson and Rober-
son. Winkerson v. State, 13 Mo. 91;
s. c., 53 Am. Dec. 137. Robinson and Robison. People v. Cooke, 6 Park. Cr.
(N. Y.) 31. Rooks and Rux. Rooks
v. State, 83 Ala. 79. Rombauer and Rambauer. Patmor v. Rombauer, 41
Kan. 295.

S.—Sarmine and Sarmin. Cull v.
Sarmin, 3 Lev. 66. Saffell and Saffle.
Hoffman v. Bircher, 22 W. Va. 537.
Segear and Segar. Brunger v. Segar,
1 Roll. 425. Segrave and Seagrave.
Williams v. Ogle, 2 Strange 889. Sha- croft and Shacraft. Denner v. Sha- croft, Cro. Eliz. 258. Shafer and Shaffer. Rowe v. Palmer, 29 Kan.
337. Shields and Sheals. Shield's Es- tate, 3 Luz. Leg. Obs. (Pa.) 174. Staf- ford and Stratford. Wilson v. Stafford, Chitty 355. Steven Stebbins and Stevens Stebins. Stevens v. Stebbins, 4 Ill. 25. St. Clair and Sinclair. Riv- ard v. Gardner, 39 Ill. 125. Storrs and Stores. People v. Sutherland, 81 N.
Y. 1. Sunderland and Sandland.
Sandland v. Adams, 2 How. Pr. (N.
Y.) 31. Susan and Susannah. State
v. Johnson, 67 N. Car. 55. Sofia and Sofira. Owen v. State, 7 Tex. App.
329. See also Burgany v. State, 4
Tex. App. 72.

T.—Thompson and Thonpson. State
v. Wheeler, 35 Vt. 261. Tougaw and Tugaw. Girous v. State, 29 Ind. 93.
Tinmarsh and Tidmarsh. Homan v.
Tidmarsh, 11 Moore 231. Trowbridge and Trobridge. Buhl v. Trowbridge, 42
Mich. 44.

U.—Usrey and Userry. Gresham v.
Walker, 10 Ala. 370.

V.—Van Nortrick and Van Nort-wick. Mallory v. Riggs, 76 Iowa 748.

W.—Wanzer and Wanser. Wanzer
v. Barker, 4 How. (Miss.) 363. Wash
Pans and Was Pans. Lynch v. Wil- son, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 288. Whyneard and Winyard. Rex v. Foster, R. &

Ry. 412. Wilkinson and Wilkerson. Wilkerson v. State, 13 Mo. 91; s. c., 53 Am. Dec. 137. Woolley and Wolley. Power v. Woolley, 21 Ark. 462. Whiteman and Whiteman. Henry v. State, 7 Tex. App. 388. Wray and Rae. Vance v. Wray, 3 Upp. Can. L. J. 69. William and Williams. Williams v. State, 5 Tex. App. 226.

Z.—Zemeriah and Zimri. Ames v. Snider, 55 Ill. 498.

Sutinge.—In State v. Wilson, 40 La. An. 751, the verdict was, guilty of "assault by sutinge with intent to murder." It was held that the verdict was good, the word "sutinge" being reasonably intended to mean "shooting," under the rule of idem sonans.

Names Not Idem Sonans.—In the following cases the names in conjunction have been held to be not within the rule:

A.—Ammon and Amann. Amann v. People, 76 Ill. 188. Abie Burgamy and Avie Burgamy. Burgamy v. State, 4 Tex. App. 572. Able and Ebling. Weber v. Ebling, 2 Mo. App. 15.

B.—Brimford and Binford. Entrenkin v. Chambers, 11 Kan. 377. Barnepe and Barnap. Queen v. Carter, 6 Mod. 168. Bart and Bartholomew. Curtis v. Marrs, 29 Ill. 508. Burrall and Burrell. Com. v. Gillespie, 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 469. Burger and Buerger. Shumaker v. Schoen, 19 Pitts. L. J. (Pa.) 69. Behrensmeyer and Dehbenmeyer. Kreitz v. Behrensmeyer, 125 Ill. 141.

C.—Catherine Swails and Ratherine Swails. Swails v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 324. Comyns and Cummins. Cruikshank v. Comyns, 24 Ill. 692. Cunnington v. Cunningham. Ex parte Cheatham, 6 Ark. 531; s. c., 44 Am. Dec. 525. Carter Gabriel and Gabriel Carter. Collins v. State, 43 Tex. 577.

D.—Darius and Trius. Rex v. Davis, 4 New Sess. Cas. 411; s. c., 5 Cox C. C. 237; 2 Den. C. C. 233. Dellia and Della. Vance v. State, 65 Ind. 460.

E.—Ebling and Able. Weber v. Ebling, 2 Mo. App. 15. Elijah and Elisha. Craig v. Brown, Pet. C. Ct. (U. S.) 139. Eliere Lowtrhelser and Ezra Loutzenheiser. Abbott v. State, 59 Ind. 70.

F.—Fallock and Falk. Calkins v. Falk, 1 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 291; s. c., 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 620. Frank and Franks. Parchman v. State, 2 Tex. App. 228; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 435. Fitzpatrick and Fitz Patrick. Moynahan v. People, 3 Colo. 367.

G.—Grautis and Gerardus. Mann v. Carley, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 148. Griffin and Griffith. Henderson v. Cargill, 31 Miss. 367.

H.—Hemessey and Hennessey. Com. v. Mehan, 11 Gray (Mass.) 321. Hairholser and Hairholts. Mitchell v. State, 63 Ind. 276, 574. Henry M. Hawkins and Henry F. Hawkins. Dutton v. Simmons, 65 Me. 583; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 729. Henry and Harry. Garrison v. People, 21 Ill. 535. Humphreys and Humphrey. Humphrey v. Whitten, 17 Ala. 30.

J.—Jonathan and John. Moore v. Graham, 58 Mich. 25. Jeffery and Jeffries. Marshall v. Jeffries, 1 Hempst. (U. S.) 299. Jacques and Jakes. Jacques v. Nichols, T. T. 586, Vict., Ont. Rep.

K.—Kritler and Kladder. Brotherline v. Hammond, 69 Pa. St. 128.

L.—Lindly and Lindsey. Selman v. Orr, 75 Tex. 528. Labarron and Labern. Lanesborough v. New Ashford, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 190. Lyons and Lynes. Lynes v. State, 5 Port. (Ala.) 236; s. c., 30 Am. Dec. 557.

M.—Maley and Mealey. Com. v. Donovan, 95 Mass. 57. McKlaskey or McKloskey, McCoskey and McKaskey. Black v. State, 57 Ind. 109. Mathews and Mather. Robson v. Thomas, 55 Mo. 582. May and Mary. Kennedy v. Merriam, 70 Ill. 228. McCann and McCarn. Tannett's Case, Russ. & R. 351. Miller and Millen. Chamberlain v. Blodgett, 96 Mo. 482. Melvin and Melville. State v. Curran, 18 Mo. 320. McDevro and McDero. McDevro v. State, 23 Tex. App. 429. Mincher and Minchen. Adams v. State, 67 Ala. 89. Munkers and Moncus. (If, by local usage, the two names are given the same pronunciation, it was a question for the jury.) Munkers v. State, 87 Ala. 94.

N.—Newton, New, Newt, Newto and Newn; Newell, Nall, Null and Neden (names of candidates on ballots). Newton v. Newell, 26 Minn. 529.

O.—Otha and Oatha. Brown v. People, 66 Ill. 344. Owen and Orrin. Ferry v. Matthews, T. T. 586, Vict. Ont. Rep.

S.—Saunders and Launderers. Jeune v. Jeune, 7 Mass. 94. Sedbetter and Ledbetter. Fellers v. State, 7 Ind. 659. Schoonhoven and Schoonhover. Schoonhoven v. Gott, 20 Ill. 46; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 247. Shurtliff and Shirliff. Gordon v. Austin, 4 T. R. 611. Shakespeare and Shakepeare. Shakespeare's Case, 10 East 83. Service and Servoss. Shinkell v. Letcher, 40 Ill. 48. Semon and Seaman. 7 Ark. 70. Ssenderfer and Ssenderf. Com. v. Bowers, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 350. Swift and Swist.

it is sufficient in law to spell a name as it is regularly or commonly pronounced.¹

2. How Question Determined.—The question whether or not two or more names are idem sonans may, on a plea in abatement or special demurrer, be determined by the court upon a mere comparison, where the issue is free from doubt, as if the words necessarily do or do not sound alike; but the modern and approved practice is to submit the question to the jury whenever there is an opportunity to do so and where the correct sound appears at all doubtful or dependent upon particular circumstances.²

Jones v. Stenor, 3 Bulst. 121. Spintz and Sprinz. United States v. Spintz, 18 Fed. Rep. 377. Smith and Weston and Smith and Wesson. Morgan v. State, 61 Ind. 447. E. Seymour and E. Ly-mour. Porter v. State, 17 Ind. 415.

T.—Trius and Darius. Rex v. Davis, 4 New Sess. Cas. 411; s. c., 5 Cox C. C. 237. Tarbart and Tabart. Bingham v. Dickie, 5 Taunt. 814. Tarpley and Tapley. Tarpley v. State, 79 Ala. 271. Tragar and Troyer. Troyer v. Wood. 96 Mo. 478.

W.—Wood and Woods. Neiderluck v. State, 21 Tex. App. 320. Workman and Wortman. LaFayette v. Workman, 107 Ind. 404. Weston and Wesson. Morgan v. State, 61 Ind. 447. Wheeler and Wheelen. Whelen v. Weaver, 93 Mo. 430. Wilkin and Wilkins. Brown v. State (Tex. 1889), 11 S. W. Rep. 1022. Wilhelm and William. Becker v. German M. F. Ins. Co., 68 Ill. 412. Williston and Willison (Christian names). Bull v. Franklin, 2 Speers (S. Car.) 46. Pat Whelan and P. Whelan or D. Whelan. Murray v. State, 6 Week. Jur. 463.

Emily J. Schweitzer will not be presumed to be the same person as E. J. Schweitzer. Yount v. State, 64 Ind. 443.

An indictment for assault gave the name of the person assaulted in different clauses, as McKaskey, McKlaskey and McKloskey, and the evidence showed that his name was McCoskey. Held, after conviction, that the indictment was insufficient. Black v. State, 57 Ind. 109.

1. Schooler v. Ashurst, 3 Marsh. (Ky.) 493.

2. In Sayres v. State, 30 Ala. 15, STONE, J., referring to the issue of idem sonans, said: "Generally such issue is triable by the court without evidence, and not by the jury. We will not say that there might not be cases in which it would be permissible to introduce evidence on the question. A foreign name might be in issue; and although the orthography of the supposed names might, according to the laws of our language, require us to affix to each a different sound, yet, in fact, the foreign orthography might be there sounded precisely as the letters employed by the American pleader would be here pronounced. Whether in such case the proper issue is idem sonans, or that the party is as well known by one name as the other, or if the former, whether the issue thereby becomes one for the jury, we do not now determine."

In the English case of Rex v. Davis, 4 New Sess. Cas. 411; s. c., 5 Cox C. C. 233, the rule of procedure is stated to be that: "If two names spelled differently necessarily sound alike, the court may, as matter of law, pronounce them to be idem sonans; but if they do not necessarily sound alike, the question whether they are idem sonans is a question of fact for the jury." This rule has been recognized and applied in Com. v. Donovan, 95 Mass. 57; Com. v. Jennings, 121 Mass. 47; Com. v. Warren, 143 Mass. 508; Weitzel v. State, 28 Tex. App. 523; Underwood v. State, 72 Ala. 220. See also Whart. Crim. Ev. (8th ed.), § 96; 1 Bish. Crim. Proc. (3rd ed.) 792, note 3.

In Taylor v. Com., 20 Gratt. (Va.) 825, the court said that "the question is one for the jury and not for the court, which cannot instruct the jury, as matter of law, that any two names are or are not of the same sound."

If a defendant submits to the court the question whether a name as proved is idem sonans with the name as alleged, and does not ask to have the question presented to the jury, and there is nothing of record to show how the names are pronounced, the appellate court will not interfere with the determination of the trial court. Com. v. Gill, 14 Gray (Mass.) 400.

Judicial Notice.—As a general rule,

3. Names Beginning with Different Letter.—Though two names be commonly pronounced alike, yet if the first letter of each is different, the rule of idem sonans cannot be invoked so as to bind third persons by constructive notice of public records indexed according to the different letter. Thus, although Yoest and Joest are pronounced alike in German, yet searchers for record encumbrances against "Yoest" are not bound to consult the indexes under the letter J.¹

XXI. WORDS OF IDENTIFICATION.—Though the name of a party or third person be incorrectly given, yet the mistake may be sometimes cured by accompanying words of identification.²

XXII. NAMES ON BALLOTS.—While there has not been an entire unanimity of decision upon questions as to the effect of errors occurring in the names of candidates for office, as printed upon the tickets or written by the voters, it may be stated to be the prevailing tendency of courts and legislative bodies to disregard all such errors where, from the ballot itself and the circumstances surrounding the election, it can be ascertained with reasonable certainty that the name erroneously spelled was intended by the voter to designate the candidate whose name it resembles.³ The judicial notice will not be taken of the fact that two names are ordinarily pronounced so nearly alike as to be indistinguishable. Donnel v. United States, 1 Morris (Iowa Ty.) 141; s. c., 39 Am. Dec. 457.

Instances.—Whether "Flory" and "Fleurer" are identical is a question for the jury. Imhoff v. Fleurer, 2 Phila. (Pa.) 35. So as to "Gigger" and "Jiger" or "Jigr." Com. v. Jennings, 121 Mass. 47. So as to whether "Hennessey" and "Hemessey" are usually sounded alike. Com. v. Mehan, 11 Gray (Mass.) 321. So as to the name "Celestia" and "Celeste." Com. v. Warren, 143 Mass. 568.

Where the name of the owner in an indictment for theft is alleged to be "Fraude" and is proven to be "Freude," the question of variance is for the jury, and it is error to rule as matter of law that the names are idem sonans. Weitzel v. State, 28 Tex. App. 523.

See also Underwood v. State, 72 Ala. 220; Smurr v. State, 88 Ind. 504; Seibert v. State, 95 Ind. 471.

1. Heil and Lauer's Appeal, 40 Pa. St. 453. The searcher is not required to know how the name he is examining may be spelled according to the rules applicable to foreign languages. Buchan v. Sumner, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 197; s. c., 47 Am. Dec. 305. See also Johnson v. Hess (Ind. 1890), 25 N. E. Rep. 445.

2. In Schee v. La Grange, 78 Iowa 101, it was held that a notice and petition designating the defendant as "Charles A. Luckenbough, assignee of Benjamin G. Unangst," sufficiently named such assignee, though his true name was Charles A. Luckenbach. So, where John C. Hopkins and wife were defendants, the wife's initials being T. P. B., and in the notice they were given as P. T. B., but she was further designated as "the wife of John C. Hopkins," the court held that such descriptive words were sufficient to apprise her that she was the person intended. Fanning v. Krapfl, 68 Iowa 244; s. c., 26 N. W. Rep. 133. So, where an indictment charged the defendant with entering upon the land of S. Sicily Garrett, "wife of John H. Garrett" and the evidence showed that the owner's name was Sicily Garrett, and that she was the wife of the man named, the variance was held immaterial. Sewell v. State, 82 Ala. 57.

3. Thus, where ballots were cast at an election for Henry M. and also for Joseph M., and it was proved in a contest of election that Henry M. was the Democratic nominee and another was the Republican nominee, and there were no other candidates for that office at that election and no person by the name of Joseph M. resided in the town or was known to the witnesses, residents of such town, and the name of Joseph M.

rule of idem sonans is by all the courts applied to names on the ballots.¹

XXIII. NAMES IN LEGAL PROCEEDINGS, MISNOMER—1. In General.—There are a number of rules governing the manner of stating the names of parties and third persons, which apply to both criminal and civil proceedings. Other principles belong distinctively to, or are more rigidly enforced in, criminal cases.² Both classes will be treated of in this connection.

Although, as has already been stated, the courts will sometimes presume that a single letter, more especially a vowel, is itself a Christian name, the general rule is that it is not sufficient to designate a party, either plaintiff or defendant, by the initial letter or letters of the Christian name. The full name must be given for purposes of identification.³

But the designation of the parties by their initials and surnames only, or a misnomer, is not a ground of general demurrer. The remedy for such defects is by special demurrer or plea in abatement;⁴ or, under the reformed procedure, by a motion to amend.⁵

Even the entire omission of the Christian name of a party is not a ground of general demurrer.⁶

It has been held immaterial that the plaintiff's name does was printed on a number of Democratic ballots and voted by mistake, held, that the extraneous evidence admitted to show who was intended by Joseph M. was properly received, and that the ballots cast for Joseph M. counted for Henry M. McKennon v. Malzacher, 110 Ill. 305; s. c., 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 492. See title ELECTIONS, 6 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 346, 347. See also Gumm v. Hubbard, 97 Mo. 311; Kreitz v. Behrensmeyer, 125 Ill. 141; State v. Williams, 95 Mo. 159.

1. Newton v. Newell, 26 Minn. 529; Kreitz v. Behrensmeyer, 125 Ill. 141.

2. See titles INDICTMENT, 10 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 483; CRIMINAL PROCEDURE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 769. See also PLEADING; PRACTICE.

3. Turner v. Fitt, 3 M. G. & S. 701; Oakley v. Pegler (Neb. 1890), 46 N. W. Rep. 920; Knox v. Starks, 4 Minn. 20; Gardner v. McClure, 6 Minn. 250; Kenyon v. Semon (Minn. 1890), 45 N. W. Rep. 10; Wilthaus v. Ludecus, 5 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 326; Norris v. Graves, 4 Strobb. (S. Car.) 32; Beggs v. Wellman, 82 Ala. 391; Labat v. Ellis, Taylor (N. Car.) 148; Chappell v. Proctor, Harp. (S. Car.) 49; Seeley v.

Boon, 1 N. J. L. 138; Bliss Code Pl., § 146a.

4. Turner v. Fitt, 3 M. G. & S. 701; Wilthaus v. Ludecus, 5 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 326; Woodbury v. Dye, 10 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 31; Seeley v. Boon, 1 N. J. L. 138; Peden v. King, 30 Ind. 181; Handley v. Ludington, 3 W. Va. 53; Miller v. Hay, 3 Exch. 14; Rust v. Kennedy, 4 M. & W. 586; s. c., 7 Dowl. P. C. 199, 3 Jur. 198.

5. Kenyon v. Semon (Minn. 1890), 45 N. W. Rep. 10; Hoffman v. Dickenson, 31 W. Va. 142.

Unless the objection that the initials only are given is raised by motion to require the full Christian name to be set out, it will be regarded as waived. Walgawood v. Randolph, 22 Neb. 493; Simonton v. Rohm (Colo. 1890), 23 Pac. Rep. 86. And it has been held proper to dismiss a suit where the plaintiff's agent is unable to comply with an order to set out the plaintiff's full Christian name at or before the time issue is joined. Fisher v. Northup, 79 Mich. 287.

6. Hahn v. Behrman, 73 Ind. 120; Hopper v. Lucas, 86 Ind. 43; Morningstar v. Wiles, 96 Ind. 458.

In Ohio it is held a fatal defect to in-not appear in the caption, if it does in the body of the complaint.¹

As a general rule, misnomer can be taken advantage of only by timely objection in the nature of a plea in abatement.²

A plea in abatement or similar objection for misnomer must disclose the defendant's true name.³ One defendant cannot object to a misnomer of his codefendant.⁴

After a trial under the general issue, an appeal, and order for new trial, a plea in abatement for defects in names will not be entertained.⁵ Nor can the objection be raised for the first time on appeal.⁶

By pleading to the indictment, the defendant admits his name as laid therein, and is estopped to set up misnomer.⁷ And if he is indicted by a wrong name and when arraigned declines to give his true name, he cannot afterwards complain that he was tried by the wrong name.⁸

If a person customarily uses the initial letter only of his Christian name, and is not known by any other name, he may be sued or indicted under such initial, and evidence of the use and reputation will be a sufficient answer to his plea of misnomer.⁹ But an indictment against a person by the initials only of his Christian name is bad on a plea in abatement, unless it is alleged that his Christian name is to the grand jury unknown except as set out.¹⁰ sert only the initials of the plaintiff's Christian name in the writ. Herf v. Shulze, 10 Ohio 263.

1. Collins v. Lightle, 50 Ark. 97.
2. Sunapee v. Eastman, 32 N. H. 470; State v. Farr, 12 Rich. (S. Car.) 24; First Nat. Bank v. Jagers, 31 Md. 38; s. c., 100 Am. Dec. 53; Peden v. King, 30 Ind. 181; Melvin v. Clark, 45 Ala. 285; Hudson v. Poindexter, 42 Miss. 304; Salisbury v. Gillett, 3 Ill. 290; Moss v. Flint, 13 Ill. 570; Pendleton v. Bank of Kentucky, 1 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 174; Hanly v. Blanton, 1 Mo. 49; Thompson v. Elliott, 5 Mo. 118; Plymouth Christian Soc. v. Macomber, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 235; Smith v. Bowker, 1 Mass. 76; Jewett v. Burroughs, 15 Mass. 469; Porter v. Cresson, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 257; Pate v. Bacon, 6 Munf. (Va.) 219; Mann v. Carley, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 148; Waterbury v. Mather, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 611; Barnes v. Perine, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 202; Scull v. Briddle, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 200; Baker v. Bessey, 73 Me. 472; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 377; Conaway v. Hays, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 159.

3. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Hall, 12 Bush (Ky.) 132; Union Bank v. Tillard, 26 Md. 446; Bliss Code Pl., § 146a.

4. Atkinson v. Clapp, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 71.

5. Lanier v. Cocke, 6 Munf. (Va.) 580; Murdock v. Hurndon, 4 Hen. & M. (Va.) 200.

6. Traver v. Eighth Ave. R. Co., 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 422; Dawson v. State, 33 Tex. 491.

7. Mayo v. State, 7 Tex. App. 342; Musquez v. State, 41 Tex. 226.

8. State v. Burns, 8 Nev. 251.

9. City Council v. King, 4 McCord L. (S. Car.) 487; Diggs v. State, 49 Ala. 311; Vandermark v. People, 47 Ill. 122; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Paul, 48 Ind. 98; Rockwell v. State, 12 Ohio St. 427; Taylor v. Rossiter, 2 Miles (Pa.) 355; Jones's Estate, 27 Pa. St. 336.

Business Name.—Where the defendant, whose name was Oscar R. Pegles, was in the habit of signing checks and doing business at banks and other places by the name of O. R. Pegles, those initials will be regarded as his business name, and a default judgment recovered against him by that name is not subject to collateral attack. Oakley v. Pegles (Neb. 1890), 46 N. W. Rep. 920. See also Cummings v. Rice, 9 Tex. 527.

10. United States v. Upham, 43 Fed. Rep. 68.

To a plea of misnomer, it is a sufficient replication that the party is as well known by the name used in the process or pleading as by the one he alleges.¹

If the name of the defendant or of a third person be correctly given in the charging part of the indictment, an error in a subsequent unnecessary repetition of the name may be disregarded as surplusage.² But it is not sufficient to give the defendant's name in the caption alone, omitting it entirely from the charging part.³

The rule that the full Christian name and surname must be given in a pleading is not so strictly enforced in respect to papers subsequently filed in the cause. As to these, any designation which clearly identifies the party is sufficient.⁴

2. Initials of Third Persons.—The rule that initials cannot be used to designate an individual is not so strictly applied in cases of names of persons not parties to the proceeding. It is generally held to be sufficient, in giving the names of third persons in indictments, or in civil actions, to designate them by the initials of their Christian names.⁵ It has been held, however, that the full name of the owner of property alleged to have been stolen must be given in the indictment, if ascertainable.⁶

3. Partnership Names.—Where a partnership, a part of whose firm name is "Co.," "Bros.," or "Sons," sues, a declaration in the firm name, without setting out the names of all the partners, is bad on demurrer or motion to dismiss, the reason being that there are apparently parties plaintiff whose names are not given at all.⁷

4. Change of Name Pending Action.—It is no cause of abatement that the plaintiff has had his name changed during the pendency of the action; but it is proper to suggest such change upon the record.⁸

1. Petrie v. Woodworth, 3 Cal. (N. Y.) 219; Goodenow v. Tappan, 1 Ham. (Ohio) 61; Frye v. Hinkley, 18 Me. 320; Taylor v. Rossiter, 2 Miles (Pa.) 355; Norris v. Graves, 4 Strobb. (S. Car.) 32.

2. Com. v. Hunt, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 252; Greeson v. State, 5 How. (Miss.) 42; Rex v. Morris, 1 Leach 109.

3. Campbell v. State, 10 Ind. 420.

In State v. Hand, 6 Ark. 165; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 689, the defendant was indicted by the name of "Hawkins —, late of," etc., and in a subsequent part of the indictment it was alleged that "be, the said Hawkins Hand, did," etc. The defendant pleaded, in abatement, that his name was not Hawkins, but was Hawkins Hand, and the plea was held good, notwithstanding the fact that the correct name was to be found in the indictment.

4. Gordon v. State, 59 Ind. 75.

5. State v. Brite, 73 N. Car. 26; State

v. Black, 31 Tex. 560; Mead v. State, 26 Ohio St. 505; State v. Seeley, 30 Ark. 162; Ferguson v. Smith, 10 Kan. 396.

6. Willis v. People, 1 Scam. (Ill.) 399. In this case, the property stolen was alleged to be the property of "T. D. Hawke and E. Dobbins, doing business in the town of E., under the style and firm of T. D. Hawke & Co.," but it was held that their Christian names ought to have been given.

7. Weisz v. Davey (Neb. 1890), 44 N. W. Rep. 470; Hays v. Lanier, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 322; Hughes v. Walker, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 51; Barrackman v. Worthington, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 213; Tanner v. Swearengen, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 277; Bentley v. Smith, 3 Cal. (N. Y.) 169; Brubaker v. Poage, 1 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 123; Revis v. Lamme, 3 Mo. 207. See also PARTNERSHIP.

8. Town of Ottawa v. La Salle Co., 11 Ill. 654.

5. Name Unknown.—In criminal cases, in warrants as well as in indictments, if the name of the accused or of a third person is not known, and cannot by due diligence be ascertained, it is sufficient to state that the name is not known; and the accused may be proceeded against under any fictitious name, the right one to be inserted when discovered.¹ It is not, however, necessary in such cases to give a fictitious name; the name may be entirely omitted, and the identity shown by words of description.²

It is not to be implied from circumstances, as shown by the indictment, that the names of third persons who are referred to therein, but whose names are not given, are unknown. There must be a positive averment to that effect.³ The allegation that the true name is unknown need not be proven beyond a reasonable doubt.⁴

6. Alias Dictus.—When a person is known by two or more different names, and it is uncertain which one is his true name, he may be sued or indicted under any one of them, with an averment that he is also, or otherwise known by the other name—the common practice being to give the two names thus: "Smith alias Brown."⁵ The omission of the word dictus after the word alias does not render the pleading uncertain or bad.⁶ Christian names may be set out in the same way,⁷ though the contrary was formerly held in England.⁸ And so may the names of third persons.⁹ In all cases it is sufficient to prove that the person in question is known by either one of the names given.¹⁰

It is a plain proposition that when a person executes a contract or deed in a name differing in any respect from his true name, he will not be allowed, on that account alone, to deny that

See also Pennsylvania Co. v. Sloan, 125 Ill. 72.

1. See also INDICTMENT, 10 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law. 483-485; CRIMINAL PROCEDURE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 769, 770, 780.

Rutherford v. State, 13 Tex. App. 92; Bryant v. State, 36 Ala. 270; Cameron v. State, 13 Ark. 712; State v. O'Donald, 1 McCord L. (S. Car.) 532; State v. Burns, 8 Nev. 251; People v. Jim Ti, 32 Cal. 64; State v. White, 32 Iowa 19.

2. Harris v. State, 2 Tex. App. 102.

Omission of Name.—In State v. Jackson, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 49, the deceased was described as "an Indian of this State, of the Miami nation of Indians, the name of which said Indian to the jurors aforesaid is wholly unknown," and it was held sufficient. So in Reed v. State, 16 Ark. 499, where the deceased was described as "a certain Wyandotte Indian, whose name is unknown to the grand jury." So in Cameron v. State, 13 Ark. 712, where the defendant was indicted for assaulting "one Rice, whose Christian name is to the grand jurors aforesaid unknown." But in State v. Geiger, 5 Iowa 484, an indictment describing the defendant as "a man in Turner Hall, whose name to the grand jurors is unknown," was held fatally indefinite.

3. State v. O'Donald, 1 McCord L. (S. Car.) 532.

4. Guthrie v. State, 16 Neb. 667.

5. Anonymous, 3 Salk. 238; Kennedy v. People, 39 N. Y. 245; Reid v. Lord, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 118; Harrison v. State, 6 Tex. App. 256; Williams v. State, 13 Tex. App. 285; Rutherford v. State, 13 Tex. App. 92; U. S. v. Wright, 16 Fed. Rep. 112; Haley v. State, 63 Ala. 89.

6. Kennedy v. People, 39 N. Y. 245.

7. Lee v. State, 55 Ala. 259.

8. Rex v. Newman, 1 Ld. Raym. 562.

9. Kennedy v. People, 39 N. Y. 245.

10. Williams v. State, 13 Tex. App. 285; Evans v. State, 62 Ala. 6.

it is his contract or deed.¹ An action thereon against him should be brought in his true name, and the manner of executing it shown by an alias dictus.²

One to whom an instrument is made payable by a name differing from his true name, should properly sue thereon in his true name, and aver that the instrument was executed to him by the wrong name, giving it.³

7. Names in Judgments.⁴—The entry of a judgment against “the defendants,” or in favor of “the plaintiffs,” is good, even though the names of the parties are not specified in the judgment. Their names are to be ascertained by the process, pleadings and proceedings in the action.⁵ So a judgment for plaintiffs in their partnership name only is good where their individual names are given in the pleadings.⁶ So is a judgment against a partnership, though their firm name is transposed.⁷ But if the party in whose favor or against whom the judgment is rendered is not named therein, and is not referred to so as to be ascertainable from the pleadings, the judgment is a mere nullity.⁸

A judgment is not void where there were real parties in interest in the action, a real controversy and a real decision, though it was prosecuted by the real plaintiff under a fictitious name.⁹ Material errors in the defendant's name, and variances therein between the pleadings and the judgment, are often sufficient to vitiate the judgment.¹⁰

1. Fallon v. Kehoe, 38 Cal. 44; s. c., 99 Am. Dec. 347; O'Meara v. North American Min. Co., 2 Nev. 112; Boothroyd v. Engles, 23 Mich. 19.

Martindale, Conveyancing, 64; Com. Dig. tit. Fall, B. 1.

2. Wilson v. Shannon, 6 Ark. 196; Lowell v. Morse, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 473; Blood v. Crandall, 28 Vt. 396.

3. Nicholay v. Kay, 6 Ark. 59; s. c., 42 Am. Dec. 680; Jester v. Hopper, 13 Ark. 43; Lowell v. Morse, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 473; Commercial Bank v. French, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 486; Medway Cotton Manufactory v. Adams, 10 Mass. 360; Board of Education v. Greenbaum, 39 Ill. 609; Pinckard v. Wilmine, 76 Ill. 453; Taylor v. Strickland, 37 Ala. 642; Wood v. Coman, 56 Ala. 283; Leaphardt v. Sloan, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 278; Patterson v. Graves, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 593; Robb v. Bailey, 13 La. An. 457.

4. See also title JUDGMENTS, 12 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 76, 106.

5. Finnegan v. Manchester, 12 Iowa 521; Boyd v. Baynham, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 386; s. c., 42 Am. Dec. 438; Wilson v. Nance, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 189; Marshall v. Hill, 8 Yerg. (Tenn.) 101; Thomas v. Sterns, 33 Ala. 137; Collins v. Hyslop, 11 Ala. 508; Little

v. Birdwell, 27 Tex. 688; Hays v. Yarbrough, 21 Tex. 487; Claggett v. Blanchard, 8 Dana (Ky.) 41.

6. Brooks v. Ratcliff, 11 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 321; Cohoon v. Morton, 4 Jones L. (N. C.) 256; McNamee v. Huffman, 3 Har. (Del.) 425; Marshall v. Hill, 8 Yerg. (Tenn.) 101; Condry v. Henley, 4 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 9; Davis v. Kline, 76 Mo. 310.

7. Loyd v. Hicks, 31 Ga. 140.

In Pennsylvania, judgments against partnerships, without setting out the names of the members, are not liens as respects subsequent purchasers and encumbrancers, without actual notice. York Bank's Appeal, 36 Pa. St. 458; Smith's Appeal, 47 Pa. St. 128; Stephens' Appeal, 38 Pa. St. 9.

8. A decree entered in favor of the “legatees of Phillip Joseph,” without giving the names of such legatees, cannot be enforced by execution, nor can a writ of error be maintained against the legatees by that name. Joseph v. Joseph, 5 Ala. 280. See also Turner v. Dupree, 19 Ala. 198.

9. McNair v. Taber, 21 Minn. 175.

10. See also title JUDGMENTS, 12 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 76, 106.

Wrong Name.—A judgment is of no

Whether the docket entry of a judgment affords constructive notice of its existence to subsequent encumbrancers or purchasers from the judgment debtor, depends upon the accuracy with which the name is given in the record. Instances where this question has been considered are given in the note.¹

8. Statute of Additions.—By the English statute, 1 Hen. V, ch. 5, known as the statute of additions, indictments in certain cases were required to describe the defendants by adding to their names their "estate, degree or mystery, and place of residence." This statute has been held to be in force in some of the States of the force against a party who made no appearance, and whose name is different from the name given in all the proceedings to designate the defendant, though process in the action was served upon him and judgment was rendered against him in his true name. Moulton v. De McCarty, 6 Robt. (N. Y.) 470.

Christian Name.—Where a writ and declaration were against "David" and the verdict and judgment against "Daniel," the variance was held to vitiate the judgment. Sweazy v. Nettles, 2 Mo. 6.

Where a person was sued by the Christian name of James, service was returned on John, and judgment entered against J., the judgment was held bad unless there was something of record to show that the person served was the defendant. Sutter v. Cox, 6 Cal. 415.

In an action against "Frederick D. Conrad," a judgment against "Daniel Frederick Conrad, the defendant," is good. Conrad v. Griffey, 11 How. (U. S.) 480.

1. Junior.—A judgment against M. C., Jr., under the name of M. C., becomes a lien upon the land of M. C., Jr., and is constructive notice to all persons, though there is another M. C., the defendant's father, residing in the same county. Bidwell v. Coleman, 11 Minn. 78.

Middle Name.—The record of a judgment against William Mankedick is not constructive notice to purchasers in good faith from H. W. Mankedick, who had never heard him called by the name of William. Johnson v. Hess (Ind. 1890), 25 N. E. Rep 445.

Middle Initial.—It is the successful party's duty to see that the judgment is correctly entered, and if the omission of the judgment debtor's middle initial, which alone distinguishes him from others of the same name, deceives the purchaser of the defendant's real property, the judgment cannot be enforced against such purchaser. Wood v.

Reynolds, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 406; Hutchinson's Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 186.

But unless it be made to appear that purchasers have been misled thereby, the omission of the defendant's middle initial does not affect the lien of the judgment. Clute v. Emmerich, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 10; Hopper v. Lucas, 86 Ind. 43.

In Pennsylvania the rule is well settled that the wrongful introduction or omission of a middle name or letter will postpone the judgment to one subsequently properly entered. Scott v. Irwin, 2 Chest. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 137; Wood v. Reynolds, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 406; Jones's Estate, 27 Pa. St. 336. See also Perkins v. Nichols, 1 Del. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 519.

But it seems that knowledge of the facts by the subsequent lienholder will cause his postponement. King v. King, 2 Chester Co. Rep. (Pa.) 45.

In Geller v. Hoyt, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 265, an error in the docket entry of the initial letter of the judgment debtor's middle name was corrected and the judgment declared a lien from the date of the original docketing.

Idem Sonans.—The index of a judgment against William Burger is not constructive notice of a judgment against William Buergee. Schumaker v. Schoen, 19 Pitts. L. J. (Pa.) 69.

Docketing Under Wrong Letter.—Docketing a judgment under the letter P, the initial of the judgment debtor's Christian name, and not under the letter S, the initial of his surname, is no compliance with the New York statute prescribing the docketing of judgments in an "alphabetical docket." Buchan v. Sumner, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 165; s. c., 47 Am. Dec. 385.

Omitting Christian Name.—A judgment docketed against "Mitchell, Green . . . Wilson," omitting their Christian names, is not preferred to subsequent encumbrances. The judg-

Union,¹ but in others it is regarded as inapplicable, or has been changed by statutory provisions.²

9. Effect of Sustaining Plea; Amendment.—At common law in criminal cases, the indictment abated if the plea of misnomer was sustained;³ but the more modern practice, particularly under the prevailing statutes of amendment, is to have the true name inserted when ascertained, and the trial to proceed under the indictment as amended.⁴

In civil proceedings nothing is gained by sustaining the plea, except to have the correct name inserted in the record.⁵

If the defendant has been sued under a wrong name, and the right one is disclosed by the answer, he cannot object to an amendment of the complaint accordingly, even after the evidence is in;⁶ or after judgment.⁷

ment creditor was bound to see his judgment properly entered, so as not to deceive other creditors or purchasers, or put them to unnecessary trouble or risk. Ridgway's Appeal, 15 Pa. St. 181.

1. In Alabama, Morgan v. State, 19 Ala. 556.

In Maryland, State v. Hughes, 2 Har. & M. (Md.) 479.

Maine.—State v. Bishop, 15 Me. 122; State v. Nelson, 29 Me. 329.

Massachusetts.—Com. v. Lewis, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 151.

Pennsylvania.—Com. v. France, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 568.

Virginia.—Com. v. Sims, 2 Va. Cas. 374.

Georgia.—Studstil v. State, 7 Ga. 2.

Kentucky.—Com. v. Rucker, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 184.

New Hampshire.—State v. Moore, 14 N. H. 451.

North Carolina.—State v. Newmans, 2 Car. L. Repos. (N. Car.) 74.

2. In Rhode Island the requirement has been abolished by statute, yet to give in an indictment a false addition or degree has been held to be fatal, as where a feme covert was indicted as "Spluster." State v. Daly, 14 R. I. 510. So it has been held in England that to describe a woman as "widow" when she is known to be married, is a fatal variance, though no description was necessary. Rex v. Deeley, 1 Wood. C. C. 303; s. c., 4 C. & P. 579.

In Indiana, the statute of additions is considered inapplicable. State v. McDowell, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 49, in which DEWEY, J., said: "The objection urged against the indictment is that the defendant is not described by the addition of his degree, or mystery, and place of residence. By the common law no addition was required in indictments against persons under the degree of a Knight. 1 Chit. C. L. 204. The statute of additions, 1 Hen. V, ch. 5, enacts that defendants shall be described by adding to their names their estate, degree or mystery, and place of residence, in all cases in which 'the exigent shall be awarded.' . . . The exigent, being a step in the proceedings of outlawry, is unknown to our law. It is therefore, evident that the statute of additions, from its own terms, is not applicable to prosecutions in this State; and it is equally clear that the common law does not require the defendant to be described by his addition."

3. 1 Bac. Abr. 10; State v. Middleton, 5 Port. (Ala.) 484; Findley v. People, 1 Mich. 234; Rawls v. State, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 599.

4. See State v. Jackson, 4 Blatchf. (Ind.) 49; ante, XXIII, § 5, note 2.

5. 1 Chit. Pl. 246; Murray v. Hubbard, 1 B. & P. 645; Dickinson v. Bowers, 16 East 110; Rogers v. Boehm, 2 Esp. 702; Reeves v. Slater, 7 Barn. & C. 487; Waterbury v. Mather, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 611.

6. Ramsey v. Cortland Cattle Co., 6 Mont. 498; Oakley v. Pegles (Neb. 1890), 46 N. W. Rep. 920.

7. McDonald v. Swett, 76 Cal. 257.

In Anderson v. Horn, 23 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 475, where defendant was sued by the name of John Horn, but in his answer he described himself as John A. Horan, the court, on an application to vacate the judgment, ordered the parties to appear for oral examination in order to ascertain the defendant's true name or his alias dictus, so as to decide whether or not he had been correctly proceeded against.

Where the plaintiff has made a mistake in his own name in the complaint, the court may permit him to amend.¹ But in Maryland it has been held that, under the code, where an attorney mistakes the name of his client in the declaration, he cannot have the error amended.²

It has been held that a company may acquire a name other than its original corporate name as a trade mark, and that another company will be enjoined from using it.³

XXIV. NAMES OF CORPORATIONS⁴—1. In General.—Corporations should, of course, sue or be sued by their corporate names, and not by the individual names of their members.⁵ And when an

1. Weaver v. Young, 37 Kan. 70; Woodson v. Law, 7 Ga. 105 (where the plaintiff was permitted to change his name from William to James).

But in Bingham v. Dickie, 5 Taunt. 814, the court refused to allow an amendment of a clerical error in the spelling of the plaintiff's name in a bail piece, unless the sureties thereon would consent.

2. Thanhauser v. Savins, 44 Md. 410.

3. Goodyear Rubber Co. v. Goodyear Rubber Mfg. Co., 8 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 317. See also TRADE MARK. Drummond v. Tobacco Co., 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 9.

4. See CORPORATIONS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 203, 206; 188 note 5; FOREIGN CORPORATIONS, 8 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 329.

5. Illinois State Hospital etc. v. Higgins, 15 Ill. 185; Campbell v. Brunk, 25 Ill. 210; Town of Fort Wayne v. Jackson, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 36.

"Where corporate rights and interests are affected in any way wrongfully and injuriously, those rights and interests, generally speaking, and unless some special ground be shown, must be asserted and defended, both at law and in equity, in the corporate name." Bradley v. Richardson, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 343.

"A court in a declaration in debt commenced as follows: A. P. Hay and others (naming them), being a body corporate and politic, known by the name of the Board of Trustees of the Clark County Seminary, and being the regular successors in office of Jno. C. Parker and others (naming them), were summoned to answer, etc. It then stated that the last named persons, Parker and others, being the board of trustees, etc., by an agreement, sealed with the seals of the trustees last mentioned, promised, etc., that neither they nor the defendants, being their successors, had paid, etc. Held, that this count was insufficient; that the addition to the defendants' names of the words 'being a body corporate, etc.,' was a mere descriptio personarum; that the defendants must be considered, under this count, as being sued in their individual capacities, on a contract to which they were not parties, and by which they were not bound; and also that if, as the plaintiff contended, the agreement sued on was binding on the board of trustees of the Clark County Seminary as a corporation, the suit should have been brought against the corporation by its corporate name." Hay v. McCoy, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 69.

Where one subscribed for certain shares in a turnpike, and promised to pay to A B, agent of the proprietors, all assessments, etc., it was held that the agent could maintain no action for the assessments unpaid, but that the promise would support an action by the proprietors in their corporate capacity. Gilmore v. Pope, 5 Mass. 491.

In Commercial Bank v. French, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 486, the court held that where a promissory note was made payable "to the cashier of the Commercial Bank or his order," and the consideration proceeded from the bank, an action on the note might be maintained in the name of the bank as the promisee. MORTON, J., observes: "Had the note been made to the cashier by name, the addition of 'cashier of the Commercial Bank' might have been considered as descriptio personæ, used to designate, as between him and the bank, the relation he bore to it in the transaction, and the individual might have been deemed the promisee. But such was not the fact." . . . See also Medway Cotton Manufactory v.

offence is charged in reference to the property or rights of a private corporation, its corporate capacity should be alleged,¹ and its corporate name should be stated with substantial accuracy;² but a slight variation in the name, such as would not raise a doubt of the identity of the corporation, will be regarded as immaterial.³

Adams, 10 Mass. 360, where it was decided that a note payable to Richardson, Metcalf & Co., might be declared on as a promise to The Medway Cotton Manufactory.

In Taunton etc. Turnpike v. Whiting, 10 Mass. 327; s. c., 6 Am. Dec. 124, it was held that the promise, in a subscription paper, to pay the assessments which should be made on certain shares to John Gilmore or order, would support an action in the name of the corporation.

And in Gilmore v. Pope, 5 Mass. 491, it was decided that an action would not lie upon the same subscription in the name of Gilmore, but must be brought by the corporation. See also Tucker v. Seaman's Aid Soc., 7 Metc. (Mass.) 188, 209.

See, however, Fisher v. Ellis, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 322, where the court held that a note payable to the treasurer of a parish might well be sued in the name of the treasurer. (But this case does not show that an action might not have been maintained in the name of the corporation.)

And in Fairfield v. Adams, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 381, it was decided that a note endorsed to S. S. Fairfield, cashier, would sustain an action in the name of Fairfield. See also Little v. O'Brien, 9 Mass. 423; Brigham v. Marean, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 40.

A banking association . . . brought an action, describing itself as "the Washington County National Bank, a corporation duly established by law and doing business in Greenwich in the State of New York;" and, to prove its corporate existence, introduced an organization certificate of "The Washington County National Bank of Greenwich" to be located . . . in the town of Greenwich, county of Washington and State of New York," and a certificate of the comptroller of the currency that "The Washington County National Bank of Greenwich, in the county of Washington and State of New York" had been duly organized. Held, that in the absence of evidence of the existence at Greenwich of another bank named "the Washington County National Bank of Greenwich," the evidence would warrant the inference of the plaintiff's due organization. Washington County National Bank v. Lee, 112 Mass. 521. See also Gifford v. Rochett, 121 Mass. 431.

1. People v. Schwartz, 32 Cal. 160; Cohen v. People, 5 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 330; Wallace v. People, 63 Ill. 452; State v. Mead, 27 Vt. 722; Emmonds v. State, 87 Ala. 12; Johnson v. State, 73 Ala. 483; 2 Russ. Crimes, 100; Whart. Crim. Pl., § 110, note 1.

In Emmonds v. State, 87 Ala. 12, an indictment was held bad which charged a breaking and entering of the store of the "Perry Mason Shoe Company," without alleging such company to be either a corporation or a copartnership. If it had been a copartnership, there was nothing to show that the defendant was not one of the partners, in which case he could not have been guilty of the offence of breaking and entering into the firm's premises.

But see Fisher v. State, 40 N. J. L. 169, where an indictment for burglary with intent to steal, alleging that the building and goods were the property of the O. Iron Company, was held sufficient without an allegation that the company was duly incorporated. See also Norton v. State, 74 Ind. 337, where it was held unnecessary to allege the corporate existence of a certain railroad company upon whose premises the offence was alleged to have been committed, because it would be presumed to be a corporation.

2. In an indictment for wilfully obstructing a railroad alleged to have been built by the B. and W. Railroad Company, it is a fatal variance if the true name is the B. and W. Railroad corporation. Com. v. Pope, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 272. But the use of "railroad" for "railway" was held unimportant in State v. Brin, 30 Minn. 522. See also Propst v. Georgia Pac. R. Co., 83 Ala. 518.

3. In Thatcher v. West River Nat. Bank, 19 Mich. 198, by the declaration, the plaintiff claimed to be a corporation by the name of "The West River National Bank of Jamaica, Vermont," and

Where a corporation sues or is sued by a wrong name, the proper practice is to take advantage of the misnomer by a plea in abatement.¹

Change of Name—How Change Is Effected.—A corporation cannot of itself, like a partnership or simple stock company, effect a change of name. Such a change can only be wrought by the power that created the corporation.² In many of the States, the certificates did not tend to show the existence of a corporation by this name, but only of one by the corporate name of "The West River National Bank of Jamaica." The variance was held to be immaterial.

Where the name of a corporation consists of several words, the transposition, omission or alteration of some of them may not be regarded as important, if it is evident what corporation is intended. Chadsey v. McCreery, 27 Ill. 252. See also Mott v. Hicks, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 513; s. c., 13 Am. Dec. 550; People v. Love, 19 Cal. 677.

Employers Liability Companies.—Plaintiff, an English corporation doing business in New York under the corporate name of "Employers' Liability Assurance Corporation," sought to enjoin the defendant, a New Jersey corporation named the "Employers' Liability Insurance Company of the United States," and doing business in New York, from using the words "Employers Liability" as part of its corporate name. Plaintiff contended that such use by defendant would cause confusion as to the identity of the two companies, in view of the custom of referring to insurance companies by abbreviated titles. The evidence showed the existence of several other insurance companies engaged in the same kind of business, and that they all used the words "Employers Liability" in their corporate names. Held, that although plaintiff was the first to adopt and use the words, they must be considered as designating a particular kind of insurance business, rather than as expressing proprietorship, and that defendant had a right to use them. Also that, as defendant would have no right to do business except in its full corporate name, which is clearly distinguishable from plaintiff's, the objection based on the custom of abbreviating was not available. Employers Liability Assurance Corp. v. Employers Liability Ins. Co., 10 N. Y. Supp. 845.

1. Burnham v. Savings Bank, 5 N.

H. 446; Mellor v. Spateman. 1 Saunders Rep. 340; Lewiston v. Proctor, 27 Ill. 416; Marsh v. Astoria Lodge, 27 Ill. 4; Hoereth v. Franklin Mill Co., 30 Ill. 157; Northumberland Co. Bank v. Eyer, 60 Pa. St. 436. And cases cited where distinction is drawn between plea in abatement and plea in bar, as regards misnomer of corporations.

If a corporation, being sued by a wrong name, plead to the action by its true name, the misnomer is no cause for arresting the judgment; for it should have been pleaded in abatement. Gilbert v. Nantucket Bank, 5 Mass. 97. See also Com. v. Dedham, 16 Mass. 141.

Court will not take judicial notice of a statement in a report of the commissioner of railroads to the effect that the terms of a statute authorizing a change of name on the part of a railroad company have been complied with, and the name of the company changed. Cincinnati etc. R. Co. v. Hoffhines, 46 Ohio St. 643; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 221.

Where a fraternal beneficiary association organized under the Massachusetts statute sought an injunction against the use of a similar name by another organization, it was held that as the statute made the certificate of the insurance commissioner and secretary of the commonwealth conclusive, the interposition of the court was not required. American Order of Scottish Clans v. Merrill (Mass. 1890), 24 N. E. Rep. 918.

2. Waterman on Corp., vol. 1, p. 119; Boone on Corp., § 31; Ang. & Ames on Corp., § 102; McGary v. People, 45 N. Y. 153; Regina v. Registrar, L. R., 10 Q. B. 844; s. c., 59 E. C. L. 843; Shackelford v. Dangerfield, L. R., 3 C. P. 407; Morris v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 19 Minn. 528; Dubuque & Minn. R. Co. v. Keisel, 43 Iowa 39.

The identity of name is the principal means for effecting the perpetuity of succession, which is an important purpose of incorporation. The title to

however, the legislature has empowered the courts, upon application, to change the names of corporations.¹

Effect Thereof.—A mere change or abbreviation of the name of a corporation does not change or affect its corporate identity, nor will such change affect the right of a corporation to sue upon a note made payable to it under its former name; nor to accept the benefits of a grant made to it under such name; nor in any other way affect its rights or liabilities.² And where a corporation has shares, the liability on contracts, and the right to assets, would be in danger of confusion if the name were subject to such change. Regina v. Registrar, 10 Adol. & Ell. 839. See also Hazelett v. Buttes University, 84 Ind. 232.

1. Corporations of this State (N. Y.), if organized under general laws (except banks, banking associations, trust companies, life, health, accident, marine, and fire insurance companies, railroad companies), may apply to supreme court, general term, in the judicial district in which is situated the principal corporate property of such corporation, or its chief business office, to have name changed. 1 L., 1870, p. 750, ch. 322, § 1.

In Tennessee, courts of chancery are clothed by statute with authority to change the name of any private corporation upon application and good reason shown by the directors. Act of Tenn. of 1871, § 11. In Maine, a corporation may, at a legal meeting of stockholders, vote to change its name and adopt a new one; and when the proceedings of such meeting, certified by its clerk, are returned to the office of the secretary of state, to be recorded by him, the name will be deemed changed. Rev. Stats. of Me. (ed. of 1871), p. 394, § 5. See Trustees of Northwestern College v. Schwagler, 37 Iowa 577; In re First Pres. Church of Bloomfield, 111 Pa. St. 156. The New York Code, § 1777.

Legislature May Change Name of Corporation, Though Forbidden to Create by Special Act.—Notwithstanding a clause in the constitution of a State, that "corporations may be formed under general laws but shall not be created by special acts except for municipal purposes," the legislature may change the name of a corporation, and give it powers to purchase additional property, no new corporate powers or franchises having been created. Wallace v. Loomis, 97 U. S. (7 Otto) 146.

In the case of Pacific Bank v. Re Ro., 37 Cal. 538, this question was considered, but not determined. The court said: "The mere changing the name of a corporation is not, as it appears to us, the creation of a corporation in the sense of the constitution. As suggested by the counsel for the plaintiff, it would seem that the changing of the name of a corporation is no more the creation of a corporation than the changing of the name of a natural person is the begetting of a natural person. The act, in both cases, would seem to be what the language, which we use to designate it, imports—a change of name and not a change of being." Waterman on Corp., vol. 1, p. 120.

A Corporation May Resume Its Old Name by Usage.—Even if the legislature changes the name of a corporation, yet if the corporation continues to do business in its old name, it may regain such name by usage, and be lawfully sued or proceeded against in bankruptcy by that name. Alexander v. Boney, 28 N. J. E. 90.

3. Boone on Corp., § 31; Ang. & Ames, § 354; Meyer v. Johnston, 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 584; Girard v. Philadelphia, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 1; Rosenthal v. Madison, 10 Ind. 358; Cohill v. Bigger, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 213; Northwestern College v. Schwagler, 37 Iowa 577; Meyer v. German Lutheran Church, 17 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 195; s. c., 37 Minn. 241; McGary v. People, 45 N. Y. 153; Shackelford v. Dangerfield, L. R., 3 C. P. 407; Morris v. St. Paul etc. R., 19 Minn. 528; Wallace v. Loomis, 97 U. S. 146; Dean v. La Motte Co., 59 Mo. 523.

A law changing the name of a corporation does not alter the contract between the shareholders, or impair any of their franchises. Delaware etc. R. Co. v. Irick, 3 Zabr. (N. J.) 321.

In Re Application of First Presbyterian Church of Bloomfield for Change of Name, 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 481, it was held that the court of common pleas of Pennsylvania may change the name of a corporation to that of been incorporated under the general laws of a State, but has assumed no certain name, and has been known by various names, such want of name will not affect its identity.¹

2. Express Averment Not Necessary Where Name Implies a Corporation.—In general, it may be stated, that the declaration in a suit brought in a corporate name need not aver the plaintiffs to be a corporation, where the name is such as might probably be adopted by a corporation, and the complaint does not show that they are not a corporation; for, under such circumstances, they will be presumed to be a corporation with capacity to sue.²

another corporation; but that change does not invest the corporation under its new name with any of the property, trusts, or charter rights of the corporation whose name is taken.

In Episcopal Charitable Society v. Episcopal Church of Dedham, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 372, by Stat. 1793, ch. 68, the rector, wardens and vestry of the Episcopal Church of Dedham were invested with certain corporate powers, by the name of the Episcopal Church of Dedham; but the proprietors of pews were left without any powers, except as a voluntary society. In 1879, the rector and wardens alone, pursuant to a vote of the proprietors, borrowed money for the use of the proprietors, and subscribed a promissory note for it, and the agents of the proprietors at different times paid the interest. The Stat. 1818, ch. 27, incorporated certain persons and the proprietors of the pews by the same name, gave them the control of the church property, and repealed the former act. The new corporation authorized the wardens and vestry to receive and make payment of all debts in favor of or against the church, which accrued under the first act. Held, that the new corporation was answerable on the note, or at least on the money counts.

A corporation organized under a special charter, and reorganized subsequently under a general law, with a change of its name, and, to some extent, of its powers, is essentially still the same; and a judgment in an action brought against it by its latter name, to adjudge it dissolved for forfeiture of its charter, may appropriately cover the acts of the original corporation. Supreme Ct. Sp. T. 1862, People ex rel. Barton v. Rensselaer Ins. Co., 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 323.

And when, pending a suit by a corporation, an act of the legislature was passed changing the name of the corporation, if the incorporators should consent, and the suit proceeded to judgment in the original name, held, that it was too late after judgment for the defendant to set up that there was no such corporation, especially if he fails to make it appear that the incorporators accepted the new name. Water Lot Co. v. Bank, 53 Ga. 30.

1. Wardens v. Hall, 22 Conn. 132.

2. Bank of Waterville v. Beltzer, 13 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 270; Bank of Lowville v. Edwards, 11 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 216; Bank of Havana v. Wickham, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 97; Kennedy v. Cotton, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 60; United States Bank v. Haskins, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 132; Dutchess Cotton Mfg. v. Davis, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 238; Jackson v. Plumbe, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 378; Bank of Utica v. Smalley, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 770; s. c., 14 Am. Dec. 526; Bank of Auburn v. Weed, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 300; Bank of Michigan v. Williams, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 478; Shoe & Leather Bank v. Brown, 9 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 218; Lafayette Ins. Co. v. Rogers, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 491; Clark v. Benton etc. Mfg. Co., 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 218; Proprietors of Southold v. Horton, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 50; Phenix Bank v. Donnell, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 571; Camden etc. R. Co. v. Remer, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 127; Union Mut. Ins. Co. v. Osgood, 1 Duer (N. Y.) 707. Contra, Johnson v. Kemp, 11 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 186; Litchfield Bank v. Church, 29 Conn. 148; Brown v. Illius, 27 Conn. 83; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 49; Phoenix Bank v. Curtis, 14 Conn. 437; s. c., 36 Am. Dec. 492; West Winsted Sav. Bank v. Ford, 27 Conn. 282; Plymouth Christian Soc. v. Macomber, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 235; First Parish in Sutton v. Cole, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 245; Concord v. McIntire, 6 N. H. 527; School District v. Blaisdell, 6 N. H. 197; Woodson v. Bank of Gallipolis, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 203; Jones v. Bank of Tennessee, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 122; Depew v.

Bank of Limestone, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 380; Bank of Gallipolis v. Trimble, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 599; Taylor v. Bank of Illinois, 7 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 576, 584; Roxbury v. Huston, 37 Me. 42; Inhabitants of Orono v. Wedgewood, 44 Me. 49; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 81; Norris v. Stapes, Hobart 211; Harris v. Muskingum Mfg. Co., 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 267; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 372; Richardson v. St. Joseph Iron Co., 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 146; s. c., 33 Am. Dec. 460; Jones v. Cincinnati Type Foundry Co., 14 Ind. 89; Emery v. Evansville etc. R. Co., 13 Ind. 143; Cole v. Merchants' Bank, 60 Ind. 350; Heston v. Cincinnati etc. R. Co., 16 Ind. 275; Guago Iron Co. v. Dawson, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 202; Dunning v. New Albany etc. R. Co., 2 Ind. 437; Railsback v. Liberty etc. Turnpike Co., 2 Ind. 656; Hubbard v. Chappel, 14 Ind. 601; O'Donald v. Evansville etc. R. Co., 14 Ind. 259; Cicero Hygiene Draining Co. v. Craighead, 28 Ind. 274; Indianapolis Furnace & Min. Co. v. Herkimer, 46 Ind. 142; Wiles v. Trustees of Phillippi Church, 63 Ind. 206; Stein v. Indianapolis etc. Assoc., 18 Ind. 237; s. c., 81 Am. Dec. 353; Mackenzie v. School Trustees, 72 Ind. 189; Beatty v. Bartholomew Co. Agricultural Soc., 76 Ind. 91; New Albany etc. R. Co. v. Lewis, 49 Ind. 161; Patterson v. Indianapolis Plank Road Co., 56 Ind. 20; Hunter v. Burnsville Turnpike Co., 56 Ind. 203; Walker v. Shelbyville etc. Turnpike Co., 80 Ind. 452; Cole v. Merchants' Bank, 60 Ind. 350; Anderson v. New Castle etc. R. Co., 12 Ind. 376; s. c., 64 Am. Dec. 218; Emery v. Evansville etc. R. Co., 13 Ind. 143; Ewing v. Robeson, 15 Ind. 26; Adams Express Co. v. Hill, 43 Ind. 157; Indianapolis Sun Co. v. Horrell, 53 Ind. 527; Johnson v. State, 65 Ind. 204; Northwestern Conference v. Myers, 36 Ind. 375; Grays v. Turnpike, 4 Rand. (Va.) 578; McKiel v. Real Estate Bank 4 Ark. 592; Lion Church v. St. Peter's Church, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 215; Bennington Iron Co. v. Rutherford, 18 N. J. L. 105; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 528; Lake Superior Building Co. v. Thompson, 32 Mich. 293; United States v. Insurance Cos., 22 Wall. (U. S.) 99; Conrad v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 450; Society for Propagation of the Gospel v. Pawlet, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 501; Pullman v. Upton, 96 U. S. 328.

Estoppel.—A contract with a party as a corporation estops the party so contracting to deny the existence of the corporation at the time it was contracted with as such. Jones v. Cincinnati Type Foundry Co., 14 Ind. 89. See also Hamtramck v. Bank of Edwardsville, 2 Mo. 169; Hubbard v. Chappel, 14 Ind. 601; Mackenzie v. School Trustees, 72 Ind. 190.

But see as to the rule in New York, where it seems that, in a suit by a corporation, the plaintiffs, when the general issue is pleaded, must prove that they are a body corporate. Welland Canal Co. v. Hathaway, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 481; s. c., 24 Am. Dec. 51, and cases cited.

See also Williams v. Bank of Michigan, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 540; Jackson v. Plumbe, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 378; Bank of Michigan v. Williams, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 478; United States Bank v. Stearns, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 314.

In The Utica Ins. Co. v. Tilman, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 555, it was held that a corporation was sufficiently proved by the production of an exemplified copy of the act of incorporation, and evidence of user under it.

By sec. 3, R. S. N. Y. (4th ed.) 698, in suits by a domestic corporation, it is not necessary to prove its existence unless the defendants plead in bar that the plaintiffs are not a corporation. Otherwise as to foreign corporations. Williams v. Bank of Michigan, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 540, 547, note (a).

See also, in this connection, Dutchess Cotton Mfg. Co. v. Davis, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 245; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 459; Henriques v. Dutch West India Co., 2 Ld. Raym. 1532; Norris v. Staps, Hobart 211.

Rule in Regard to Foreign Corporations.—The cases in which foreign corporations must prove their existence, under the general issue, are exceptions to the general rule. School District v. Blaisdell, 6 N. H. 197; Lord v. Bigelow, 8 Vt. 445.

In Jackson v. Bank of Marietta, 9 Leigh (Va.) 240, PARKER, J., observes: "I think it is clearly established that although it is not necessary in the declaration to aver the incorporation, it is necessary, under the general issue, to prove it."

See Gray v. Turnpike Co., 4 Rand. (Va.) 578; Rees v. Conococheague Bank, 5 Rand. (Va.) 326; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 755; Taylor v. Bank of Alexandria, 5 Leigh (Va.) 471; Jackson v. Plumbe, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 378; Bill v. Fourth Great Western Turnpike Co., 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 416; Bank of Auburn v. Weed, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 300; Ports-

3. Variance in Corporate Name in Judgments.—Corporate names are no exception to the general rule applied to natural persons: that names, with other circumstances, are facts from which identity can be presumed or established; and where a judgment is rendered against a corporation by one name, and execution issued upon that judgment under a different name, if both names are in fact applied to the same corporation, the apparent difference between the two names may be explained and harmonized by extrinsic evidence.¹

But if the name of the corporation is mistaken, materially and substantially, the corporation cannot be affected by the proceedings, and the test seems to lie in the distinction made between a variance in words and syllables only and a variance in substance. If a corporation is sued by a name varying only in words and syllables, and not in substance, from the true name, the misnomer must be pleaded in abatement.² But if the name be mistaken in substance, the suit cannot be regarded as against the corporation.³

4. Variance in Corporate Names in Grants.—A variation from the legal designation in a deed, grant or devise to a corporation will not make the same void, provided that the corporation meant can be sufficiently ascertained from the terms used.⁴

mouth Livery Co. v. Watson, 10 Mass. 91; Bank of Utica v. Smalley, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 770; s. c., 14 Am. Dec. 526.

Where Corporation Is Public.—While, under the general issue in a suit by a corporation, it is necessary for the plaintiff to show its charter, yet where such charter is a public law which judicial tribunals are bound to notice ex officio, it is not necessary to give it in evidence to make out the plaintiff's title. Agnew v. Bank of Gettysburg, 2 Hen. & G. (Md.) 478.

1. Talbott v. Hale, 72 Ind. 1.

2. "That a corporation defendant is not correctly named in an action can only be taken advantage of by plea in abatement. Where service is made upon the proper officers, and such plea is not made, the judgment will bind the corporation though named by another than its corporate name." Wilson v. Baker, 52 Iowa 423. See also Burnham v. Savings Bank, 5 N. H. 446; Sunapee v. Eastman, 32 N. H. 470; Lafayette Ins. Co. v. French, 18 How. (U. S.) 404; Lehman v. Warner, 61 Ala. 455; Medway Cotton Manufactory v. Adams, 10 Mass. 360; African Society v. Varick, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 38.

3. Gilbert v. Nantucket Bank, 5 Mass. 97; Com. v. Dedham, 16 Mass. 141; Medway Cotton Manufactory v. Adams, 10 Mass. 360; Society for Propagating the Gospel v. Young, 2 N. H. 310; Bank of Utica v. Smalley, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 770; s. c., 14 Am. Dec. 526.

A judgment against a corporation cannot be corrected nunc pro tunc by striking out the name under which the defendant was sued and served with process, and substituting another name. Brown v. Terre Haute etc. R. Co., 72 Mo. 567.

4. Inhabitants of the First Parish in Sutton v. Cole, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 232; Case of the Chancellor of Oxford, 10 Coke 57, b; Witman v. Lex, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 88; Vidal v. Girard, 2 How. (U. S.) 127; Chapin v. School District, 35 N. H. 445; Oler v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 41 Md. 583; Union Bank of Florida v. Call, 5 Fla. 409; Northwestern Distilling Co. v. Brant, 60 Ill. 658; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 631; O'Brien v. People, 41 Ill. 456; Garrison v. People, 21 Ill. 535; State Hospital v. Higgins, 15 Ill. 185; Graves v. People, 11 Ill. 542; Carder v. Fayette Co., 16 Ohio St. 353; Green Township v. Campbell, 16 Ohio St. 11; Douglass v. Branch Bank of Mobile, 19 Ala. 659; Brittan v. Newland, 2 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 363; Clark v. Potter Co., 1 Pa. St. 163; Berks etc. Turnpike Co. v. Myers, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 12; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 402; Porter v. Blakely, 1

XXV. Miscellaneous.—Instances where the word “name,” as employed in statutes or legal documents, has been considered by the courts, are given in the note.¹

NAMED.—See note 2.

Root (Conn.) 440; County Court v. Griswold, 58 Mo. 175; Romeo v. Chapman, 2 Mich. 179.

Mistake in Name Avoided by Pleading and Proof.—Where a deed is made to a corporation by a name varying from the true one, the corporation may sue in its true name, and aver in the declaration that the defendant made the deed to them by the name mentioned in the deed. Northwestern Distilling Co. v. Brant, 69 Ill. 658; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 631. See also N. Y. African Soc. v. Varick, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 39.

Parol Evidence to Explain Mistake in Name.—A departure from the strict style of a corporation will not avoid its contracts, if it substantially appear that the particular corporation was intended; and a latent ambiguity may, under proper averments, be explained by parol evidence. Berks etc. Turnpike Co. v. Myers, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 12; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 402.

1. “Name of the Owner.”—Where a statute made it lawful to kill dogs not wearing a collar “with the name of the owner or owners carved or engraved thereon,” and the plaintiff, Jeremiah P. Morey, had engraved upon the collar of his dog the letters “J. P. M.,” it was held that this was not engraving the “name” of the owner, within the meaning of the statute. Morey v. Brown, 42 N. H. 373.

Where a statute required that petitions for the establishment of a highway should be signed with “the names of the owners” of land affected, it was held that signatures containing only the initials of Christian names were not a compliance with the statute. Vawter v. Gilliland, 55 Ind. 278.

A similar ruling was made where land was owned by partners, and only the partnership name was signed. Hughes v. Sellers, 34 Ind. 337.

“Of My Name and Blood.”—In a devise, a remainder was limited “unto the first and nearest of my kindred, being male and of my name and blood, that shall be living,” etc. The complainant was of the testator’s blood, but his name originally was not that of the testator; he had, however, by act of parliament, been allowed to change his name to that of the testator. LORD ELDON held that he did not answer the description of the devise. Leigh v. Leigh, 15 Ves. Jr. 92.

Name in Notice of Copyright.—Under the act of congress requiring a notice of copyright to be placed on each copy of the copyrighted book or article, the “name” of the owner of the copyright is sufficiently indicated by his surname and the initial of his Christian name. Burrow-Giles Lithographic Co. v. Sarony, 111 U. S. 53.

“Sometimes it is made part of the description or qualification of a devisee or legatee that he be of the testator’s name. The word ‘name,’ so used, admits of either of the following interpretations: 1. As designating one whose name answers to that of the testator (which seems to be the more obvious sense); 2. As denoting a person of the testator’s family—the word ‘name’ being, in this case, synonymous with ‘family’ or ‘blood.’ The former, as being the more natural construction, prevails in the absence of an explanatory context; and such is most indisputably its meaning when found in company with some other term or expression which would be synonymous with ‘name’ if otherwise construed.” 2 Jarm. on Wills 141, 146.

A woman losing the “name” by marriage, loses her right to be classed as one of the “name;” but not so a person who assumes another name by licence or act of parliament. 2 Jarm. on Wills 144.

“Descendants who shall bear the name of.” V. Re Roberts, 19 Ch. D. 520; 50 L. J. Ch 265.

2. Where a provision in a charter stated the names of specific officers, together with the term “such other subordinate officers as the common council deem necessary,” and later in the same section it is stated that “the officers above named shall hold their several offices for one year,” it was held that the words “above named” apply only to the officers specifically mentioned. State v. Trenton, 13 Atl. Rep. 228; State v. Trenton, 50 N. J. L. 388.

“Relatives hereinbefore named” in a will, held to mean “legitimate relatives hereinbefore mentioned nominatim, if

NARCOTICS.—The act of congress of May 20th, 1887 (24 Stat. at Large 69), requires that special instruction as to the nature and effects of alcoholic drinks and narcotics shall be given in the military and naval schools, in the schools of the District of Columbia, and in the Indian schools. Statutes similar in substance have been enacted in some of the States.¹

NARR.—An abbreviation of the word narratio; a declaration in a cause.²

NATION.—The term "nation" implies a body of men united together to procure their mutual safety and advantage by means of their union.³

NATIONAL BANKS—(See BANKS AND BANKING).

I. Nature and Organization, 144.

1. General Nature, 144.
2. National Bank Act, 145.
3. Formation, 145.
4. Extension or Termination of Existence, 147.
5. Location and Citizenship, 147.
6. Transaction of Business, 148.
7. Transformation of State Into National Banks, 149.

II. State Control, 150.

1. State Control in General, 150.
2. Jurisdiction of State Courts, 152.

3. Place of Bringing Action, 153.

4. Attachment Against National Banks in Another State, 154.
5. Suits for Recovery of Interest Penalties, 154.

III. National Control, 155.

1. National Control in General, 155.
2. Jurisdiction of Federal Courts, 156.
3. Functions of Comptroller of Currency, 157.

not by all their names, by some at least." Re Jodrell, 61 L. T., N. S. 677. This was reversed in 59 L. J. R., Ch. 538, it being held that the children of persons named as cousins, whether legally related or not, came within the description of "relatives hereinbefore named."

"Relations Hereafter Named."—Where a testator left his property among his "relations hereafter named," and none were named in the will, it was held that the word "named" must be taken in its plain sense, indicating an intention to specify certain relations, and as testator had not done so there was an intestacy. Crampton v. Wise, 58 L. T., N. S. 718.

In a City Charter.—Where, in a city charter, power was given to a common council to appoint certain specifically designated officers and "other subordinate officers," and provision was made that the "officers above named" should hold their offices for one year, it was held, construing this section in connection with another similar one, that the "officers above named" included only those particularly designated by name, and excluded "other subordinate officers." State v. Trenton, 50 N. J. L. 388.

1. Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 1-52.

The very term "Nation" so generally applied to Indians, means a people distinct from others. The constitution declaring treaties already made, as well as those to be made, to be the supreme law of the land, has adopted and sanctioned the previous treaties with the Indian Nations, and consequently admits their rank among the powers who are capable of making treaties. The words "treaty" and "nation" are words of our own language, selected in our diplomatic and legislative proceedings by ourselves. Each has a definite and well understood meaning. We have applied them to Indians as we have applied them to the other nations of the earth, and in the same sense. Langford v. Monteith, 1 Idaho, N. S. 612. See INDIANS, 10 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 38. See also INTERNATIONAL LAW, 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 432.

2. As to opium, see OPIUM, REVENUE LAWS.

3. Bouv. Law Dict.

- IV. Powers, 160.
 - 1. General and Incidental Powers, 160.
 - 2. Prescribing By-laws, 162.
 - 3. Acts Ultra Vires, 164.
 - 4. Laws Which Are Ultra Vires, 166.
 - 5. Powers Concerning Personal Property, 166.
 - 6. Powers Concerning Negotiable Instruments, Stocks, etc., 167.
 - 7. Powers Concerning Real Estate, 169.
- V. Liabilities in General, 171.
- VI. Interest and Usury, 172.
 - 1. Interest in General, 172.
 - 2. Penalty for Taking Excessive Interest, 174.
 - 3. Action to Recover Double Interest, 176.
 - 4. Usurious Interest on Series of Renewal Notes, 178.
- VII. Taxation, 179.
 - 1. Taxation in General, 179.
 - 2. Authority of State to Tax, 180.
 - 3. Discrimination as Compared with Other Moneyed Capital, 181.
 - 4. Exemption of Portion of Other Moneyed Capital, 183.
 - 5. Deduction of Bona Fide Debts, 184.
 - 6. Deductions in General, 185.
 - 7. Inequalities in Valuation, etc., 186.
 - 8. Place of Taxation, 187.
 - 9. Limits of Taxation, 189.
 - 10. Exemptions from Taxation in General, 190.
 - 11. Restrictions Upon Municipal Taxation, 191.
 - 12. Mode of Assessment, 191.
 - 13. Inspecting Powers of State Authorities, etc., 192.
 - 14. Collection of Taxes on Shares, 192.
- VIII. Stock and Stockholders, 193.
 - 1. Stockholders in General, 193.
 - 2. Rights of Stockholders, 194.
 - 3. Stockholders' Right to Vote, 194.
 - 4. Liabilities of Stockholders, 194.
 - 5. Individual Liability of Stockholders, 195.
 - 6. Assessments Upon Stockholders, 196.
 - 7. Recovery of Assessments, 197.
 - 8. Specification of Capital Stock, etc., at Formation of Bank, 197.
 - 9. Increase of Capital Stock, 197.
 - 10. Reduction of Capital Stock, 198.
 - 11. Transfer of Stock in General, 198.
 - 12. Failure to Make Transfer on Books, 199.
 - 13. Evasive or Colorable Transfers, 200.
 - 14. Loans by Bank on Its Stock, or Purchase Thereof, 201.
 - 15. Lien by Bank on Its Stock, 201.
- IX. Officers, 201.
 - 1. Officers in General, 201.
 - 2. President, 203.
 - 3. Cashier, 203.
 - 4. Teller, 204.
 - 5. Directors, 204.
- X. Circulation, 205.
- XI. Deposits, 206.
- XII. Collections, 207.
- XIII. Payments, 207.
- XIV. Loans and Discounts, 208.
- XV. Winding Up and Liquidation, 208.
 - 1. Winding Up, 208.
 - 2. Receiver, 209.
 - 3. Insolvency, 211.
 - 4. Preferences, 212.
 - 5. Claims Against Suspended Bank, 213.
- XVI. Suits and Remedies, 213.
 - 1. Jurisdiction Over Suits or Proceedings, 213.
 - 2. Parties and Pleadings, 214.
 - 3. Maintenance of Actions, 214.
 - 4. Trials, 215.
 - 5. Appeals, 215.
 - 6. Remedies By and Against, 215.
 - 7. Attachment, 216.

I. NATURE AND ORGANIZATION—1. General Nature—Description of.
 —National banks are private associations authorized by congress for the joint purposes of convenience and profit to the holders of United States bonds, and of furnishing the public with a convenient and uniform circulating medium. They were intended to be to the nation what a well-regulated system of State banks was to the States, respectively.¹

Resemblance to Former United States Bank.—The qualities, powers, and duties, as national agencies, of these associations, resemble, in almost all essential particulars, those of the bank of the United States authorized by the act of April 10th, 1816. But they are much more intimately associated with the national government in their functions and operations than was that bank.²

2. National Bank Act.—By an act passed February 25th, 1863, and amended and re-enacted on the 3rd of June, 1864, which is known as the National Bank act,³ congress provided for the organization of national banking associations for the purpose of enabling the national government to exercise more effectually its constitutional powers and functions.⁴

Object of Act.—The object of the national banking act was to establish a system of national banking institutions, in order to provide a uniform and secure currency for the people, and to facilitate the operations of the treasury of the United States.⁵

Constitutionality of Act.—The constitutionality of the national bank act is beyond all question. It rests on the same principle as does the act creating the second bank of the United States.⁶

3. Formation in General.—A national banking association may be formed by any number of natural persons, not less than five, who shall enter into articles of association to be signed by them, and

1. Stetson v. Bangor, 56 Me. 274; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 520. See also Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 573; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 1; Mercantile Nat. Bank v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 121 U. S. 138; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 92; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 243, 257; Flint v. Board of Aldermen, 99 Mass. 141; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 571. Compare National Currency acts, 11 Op. Atty. Gen. 334.

2. CHASE, C. J., in Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 573; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 1.

3. See declaration to this effect in act of June 3rd, 1874, ch. 343, p. 123, given in note to Rev. Stat. U. S. (2nd ed. 1878), § 5133, p. 992.

4. Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 573; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 1. The statutes of the United States regulating the organization, conduct and dissolution of national banking associations are contained in the revised statutes (Rev. Stat. U. S. (2nd ed.), 1878, tit. LXII., §§ 5133-5243), and in various enactments subsequent thereto. 2 Abb. L. Dict. 148. A State statute prohibiting the establishment of banking companies without authority of the legislature does not apply to national banks. Stetson v. Bangor, 56 Me. 274; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 520.

5. Mercantile Nat. Bank v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 121 U. S. 138; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 243; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 92. See also Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 573; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 1. Compare National Currency Acts, 11 Op. Atty. Gen. 334. Concerning these associations as governmental agencies, see Farmers' etc. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 117; and First Nat. Bank v. Lamb, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 429.

6. Farmers' etc. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 117, 120; s. c., regarding as applicable the reasoning in McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 316, and Osborne v. Bank of the United States, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 738. See also Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 573; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 1.

filed in the office of the comptroller of the currency,¹ and shall make an organization certificate to be also recorded and preserved by the same officer,² and no authority other than that conferred by congress is necessary to enable a bank existing under a special or a general State law to become a national banking association.³

Articles of Association.—The national bank act provides that national banking associations shall enter into articles of association, which shall specify in general terms the objects for which the association is formed,⁴ and may contain any other provisions, not inconsistent with the provisions of the act, which the association may see fit to adopt for the regulation of the business of the association and the conduct of its affairs.⁵ And it is further required that these articles shall be signed by the persons uniting to form the association, and that a copy of them shall be forwarded to the comptroller of the currency, to be filed and preserved in his office.⁶

Certificate of Organization.—The contents and disposition of the organization certificate are prescribed by the act.⁷ It seems to be well settled that a copy of the certificate of organization of a national bank, which is certified by the comptroller of the currency and authenticated by his seal of office, is competent evidence⁸ of the existence of the corporation.⁹ But there is not entire uniformity among the decisions as to the effect of such certificate. Some of the cases appear to hold merely that it makes out a prima facie case in favor of the existence of the corporation, when supplemented by other evidence of like purport.¹⁰ Yet, other rulings, perhaps more authoritative, including a decision of the United States Supreme Court, regard the certificate of the comptroller as conclusive as to the completeness of the organization of a national bank.¹¹

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5133, partially quoted in Bullard v. Nat. Eagle Bank, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 589; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 93.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5134.

3. Casey v. Galli, 94 U. S. 673, 678; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 142.

4. The provisions of the National Currency act of June 3rd, 1864 (13 U. S. Stat. at Large 99), and of the amendatory act of March 3rd, 1865 (Id. 484), authorize the creation of banking associations without the right to obtain, issue and circulate notes. National Currency acts, 11 Op. Atty. Gen. 334.

5. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5133; Act of 1864, § 5, substantially quoted in Lockwood v. Mechanics' Bank, 9 R. I. 308; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 253.

6. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5133.

7. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 5134, 5135. References to some of the requirements are made in Davis v. Stevens, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 259; Chatham Nat. Bank v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 4 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 196.

8. Tapley v. Martin, 116 Mass. 275; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 611, relating to competency in a State court. See also First Nat. Bank v. Kidd, 20 Minn. 234; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 935.

9. Mix v. National Bank, 91 Ill. 20; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 44; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 232.

10. Mix v. National Bank, 91 Ill. 20; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 44; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 232. See also Merchants' Exchange Nat. Bank v. Cardozo, 35 N.Y. Super. Ct. 162.

11. Casey v. Galli, 94 U. S. 673; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 142. See also Thatcher v. West River Nat. Bank, 19 Mich. 196; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 622; National Bank v. Phoenix Warehousing

Other Evidence of Organization.—In an action, however, by a national bank against the maker of a promissory note, the fact that the note is made payable at the plaintiff bank, without such bank being a party to the note, is not conclusive evidence that such bank is a corporation.¹

4. Extension or Termination of Existence—Effect of Extension.—Where the term of existence of a national bank, which would otherwise have expired in 1883, was by act of congress prior to that time extended twenty years longer, the identity of the old corporation was in no wise affected, but it simply obtained a new lease of life.²

Effect of Closing Up Business.—Where, however, a national bank has determined to close its business and not to avail itself of the right given by the statute of the United States, to continue after the term of twenty years, the corporation, as such, is not wholly dissolved and reduced to a nominal existence without power to elect directors.³

5. Location and Citizenship—Where National Bank "Located" or "Established."—A national banking association is "located" or "established" at the place specified in its organization certificate as that where its operations are to be carried on.⁴

Citizenship of Bank.—It may be treated for jurisdictional purposes, as a citizen of the State within which it is, in this sense, "located,"⁵ and the fact that it is incorporated under an act of congress of the United States does not make it a citizen of the United States exclusively, or necessitate the removal to the federal courts of an action brought by it against a citizen of the State in which it is located.⁶ Yet, as a citizen of the State in Co., 6 Hun (N. Y.) 71. The first of the cases cited in this note laid down the doctrine as applicable in a suit against a stockholder to enforce his liability, or against a party upon his contract with the bank. The second regarded it as immaterial that the bank was shown to have been doing business before the date of the organization certificate.

1. Hungerford Nat. Bank v. Van Nostrand, 106 Mass. 559; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 559. As to variance in name of bank, see Washington Co. Nat. Bank v. Lee, 112 Mass. 521. As to proof of doing business, see Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Glendon Co., 120 Mass. 97. Putting organization in issue, see on this subject Huffaker v. National Bank, 12 Bush (Ky.) 287; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 504; National Bank v. Orcutt, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 256.

2. National Exch. Bank v. Gay, 57 Conn. 224.

3. Richards v. Attleborough Nat. Bank, 148 Mass. 187; citing, as to condition of corporation closing up its affairs, Crease v. Babcock, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 334; Thornton v. Marginal Freight R. Co., 123 Mass. 32; First Nat. Bank v. Colby, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 615; and Central Nat. Bank v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 104 U. S. 54.

4. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank v. Baach, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 232; s. c., 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 137; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 161. See to like effect, Main v. Second Nat. Bank, 6 Biss. 26; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 200.

5. See St. Louis Nat. Bank v. Allen, 2 McCrary (U. S.) 92.

6. Davis v. Cook, 9 Nev. 134; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 656; relying upon full discussion of subject in Manufacturers' Nat. Bank v. Baach, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 232; s. c., 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 137; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 161. The State case points out that though a corporation existing by virtue of an act of congress of the United States which it is located, it may be entitled to remove into the federal courts an action against a bank in another State.¹

Citizenship of Shareholders.—So it has been held in a circuit court that on the strength of the citizenship of its shareholders in the State² in which it is located, it may be a citizen of that State and sue an individual in the federal courts of another State of which such individual is a citizen, because the controversy then arises between citizens of different States.³

Recent Enactments.—But all that has been stated concerning suits or their removal must be understood as expressing the state of the law prior to recent enactments of 1882 and 1888 of the most material bearing upon the matter.⁴

6. Transaction of Business—Place of.—Under the provision that the usual business of each national banking association shall be transacted at an office or banking house located in the place specified in its organization certificate,⁵ it would not be competent for a national bank to provide for the cashing of checks upon it at any other place than at its office or banking house,⁶ and it cannot make a valid contract for the cashing of checks must be considered as a citizen of the United States, yet a citizen of the United States resident in any State in the Union is a citizen of that State, and cites upon this matter Gassies v. Ballou, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 761.

1. Chatham Nat. Bank v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 4 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 196; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 769. Decisions adverse to such removals were, however, made in Pettilon v. Noble, 7 Biss. (U. S.) 449; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 120; Widder v. Union Nat. Bank, 2 Chic. Leg. News 84; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 124.

"Habitation."—Prior to the amendment of the Judiciary act the "habitation" of the national bank for purposes of suit was held to be in the federal district in which it was located. Main v. Second Nat. Bank, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 26; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 200. But compare Commercial Bank v. Simmons, 10 Abb. L. J. 155; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 294; Mitchell v. Walker, 25 Int. Rev. Rec. 64; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 180. As to change in Judiciary act, see Osgood v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 6 Biss. (U. S.) 330. As to locality, etc., of corporations in general, the Main case relies upon Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 519; Day v. Newark India Rubber Mfg. Co., 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 628, and Pomeroy v. New York etc. R. Co., 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 120.

2. See Manufacturers' Nat. Bank v. Baach, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 232; s. c., 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 147; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 161.

3. National Park Bank v. Nichols, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 315. Compare St. Louis Nat. Bank v. Allen, 2 McCrary (U. S.) 92. In the former of these cases reference is made to the doctrine of the United States Supreme Court, modifying Bank of the United States v. Deveaux, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 61, that it is an irrebuttable presumption that the individual members of a corporation are citizens of the State in which the corporation is located. This point is fully considered in Ohio etc. R. Co. v. Wheeler, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 286. See also to like effect subsequent cases of Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 168; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Harris, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 65; Home Ins. Co. v. Morse, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 445; Hatch v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 105; Terry v. Imperial Ins. Co., 3 Dill. (U. S.) 408. But compare Williams v. Missouri etc. R. Co., 3 Dill. (U. S.) 267. See CORPORATIONS, 4 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law 276.

4. See Leather Manufacturers' Bank v. Cooper, 120 U. S. 778; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 208; First Nat. Bank v. Forrest, 40 Fed. Rep. 705.

5. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5190.

6. Armstrong v. Second Nat. Bank, 38 Fed. Rep. 883.

upon it, at a different place from that of its location, through the agency of another bank.¹

Time of Commencing.—So whatever the terms of such an arrangement, yet if it is made before the date of the certificate of authorization of the drawee bank, it is invalid under the provision² that no banking association shall transact any business except such as is incidental and necessarily preliminary to its organization, until it has been authorized by the comptroller of the currency to commence the business of banking.³

7. Transformation of State Into National Banks—In General.—The act of congress providing for the organization of national banking institutions was intended not only to provide for the organization of new banks, but to absorb the old, and establish a general exclusive banking system for the whole country; and it, therefore, provided for the reorganization of the existing State banks.⁴ Thus a bank existing under a special or general State law may, by complying with prescribed requirements, become a national banking association under the provisions of the national bank act.⁵

Ad Interim Directors, etc.—In prescribing the mode in which State banks may become national banks, the national bank or currency act provides that the articles of association and the organization certificate may be executed by a majority of the directors of the bank or banking institutions, etc., and that the directors aforesaid⁶ may be the directors of the association until others are elected or appointed in accordance with the provisions of the act.⁷

Status of Reorganized Bank.—The general scheme of the national banking act is that State banks may avail themselves of its privileges and subject themselves to its liabilities, without abandoning their corporate existence, without any change in the organization, officers, stockholders, or property, and without in-

1. Armstrong v. Second Nat. Bank, 38 Fed. Rep. 883.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5136.

3. Armstrong v. Second Nat. Bank, 38 Fed. Rep. 883.

4. State v. Phoenix Bank, 34 Conn. 205.

5. Rev. Stat. U. S., §§ 5154, 5155; Scofield v. State Nat. Bank, 9 Neb. 316; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 412; Lockwood v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 9 R. I. 308; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 253; Coffey v. National Bank, 46 Mo. 140; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 488.

Want of State Authority.—No authority from the State is necessary to enable the bank so to change its organization. Casey v. Galli, 94 U. S. 673, 678; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 142. Nor can the State continue to exact from a State bank so reorganized a bonus imposed under legislative provisions. State v. National Bank, 33 Md. 75; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 527.

District of Columbia.—As to right of savings banks in the District of Columbia to avail themselves of the law, see Keyser v. Hitz, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 473.

6. These words mean those who were the directors of the State bank, whether they signed the articles of association and the organization certificate or not. Lockwood v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 9 R. I. 308; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 253; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 895.

7. Act of 1864, § 44; 1st sess. 38th congress, chap. 106. As to recognition of nonacting directors, see Lockwood v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 9 R. I. 308; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 253; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 895.

interruption of their pending business or contracts.¹ And even where a national bank does not adopt the mode of transformation prescribed by the act of congress, yet, if it is, in fact, organized as the successor of a State bank with the consent of more than two-thirds of the stockholders, it has been held that such bank may hold and own assets of its predecessor, although in form it was organized as a new bank, and the assets were transferred to it as if by sale and purchase.²

II. STATE CONTROL—1. State Control in General—Subject to Permission of Congress.—National banks organized under the act are the instruments designed to be used to aid the government in the administration of an important branch of the public service;³ and as congress, which is the sole judge of the necessity for their creation, has brought them into existence, the States can exercise no control over them, nor in any wise affect their operation, except so far as congress may see proper to permit.⁴

Stockholders.—As to effect of transformation upon nontransferable and qualified stockholders, see State v. Phoenix Bank, 34 Conn. 205; s. c., note, 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 930-31; State v. Hartford Bank, 34 Conn. 240, 246-47; s. c., note, 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 931.

Legacy in Bank Shares.—As to effect of transformation upon legacy in bank shares, see Maynard v. Mechanics' Bank, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 6; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 892, citing, as to ademption of legacy, 1 Roper on Legacies, 240, 241; Walton v. Walton, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 258; and Bringhurst v. Cuthbert, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 398.

1. City Nat. Bank v. Phelps, 97 N. Y. 44; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 513. See also, to like effect, Coffey v. National Bank, 46 Mo. 140; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 488; s. c., 1 Thomp. Nat. Bank Cas. 644.

Action on Continuing Guaranty.—A national bank changed from a State bank may maintain an action on a continuing guaranty for loans, for fresh advances, as well as on those made prior to its reorganization. City Nat. Bank v. Phelps, just cited, and reported on a former appeal in 86 N. Y. 484, and below in 16 Hun (N. Y.) 158.

Foreclosing Mortgage.—So a reorganized national bank may foreclose a mortgage assigned to it by the State bank out of which it was formed, and to which the mortgage was given. Scofield v. State Nat. Bank, 9 Neb. 316; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 412, where the transfer is held not to be invalid, and citation is made of Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621.

Other Rights and Liabilities.—As to validity of assignment to reorganized national bank of right of action for officer or agent's improper dealing with property, see Grocers' Nat. Bank v. Clark, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 26; s. c., 32 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 160. As to liability of transformed bank for conversion of special deposits, see Coffey v. National Bank of Missouri, above cited. As to want of set-off against reorganized bank, see Thorpe v. Wegesfarth, 56 Pa. St. 82; s. c., 93 Am. Dec. 789. Reorganized national bank is proper party to be sued for a reward offered by the State bank. Kelsey v. National Bank, 69 Pa. St. 426; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 847.

State Enabling Acts.—For the construction of State enabling acts, see Thomas v. Farmers' Bank, 46 Md. 43; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 248; Atlantic Nat. Bank v. Harris, 118 Mass. 147; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 454; Claggett v. Metropolitan Nat. Bank, 4 N. Y. Supp. 115; Claffin v. Farmers' etc. Bank, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 228.

2. Bank v. McIntire, 40 Ohio St. 528; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 707.

As to a State bank succeeding a national bank, see Eans v. Exchange Bank, 79 Mo. 282.

3. But for view of these banks as private corporations, etc., see Branch v. United States, 12 Ct. of Cl. 281; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 363.

4. Farmers' etc. Nat. Bank v. Dearling, 91 U. S. 29; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 117; citing, as to the authority of the States in general, McCulloch v. Mary-

Taxation by States.—But the power of the States to tax the existing national banks lies within the category of those governmental powers which the States may exercise, at least with the consent of congress.¹

Scope of State Legislation.—So in general the national banks, as federal agencies, are exempted from State legislation only so far as that legislation may interfere with or impair their efficiency in performing the functions by which they are designed to serve the government of the United States;² and, in fact, these banks are subject to the laws of the State, and are governed in their daily business far more by the laws of the State than of the nation.³

land, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 316; Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 466; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 419; Dobbins v. Erie Co., 16 Pet. (U. S.) 435; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 713; and Ex parte McNell, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 240. Portions of the opinion in the case first noted are quoted in Central Nat. Bank v. Richland Nat. Bank, 52 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 136, 138; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 801.

1. Farmers' etc. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 117. See also, concerning taxation of national bank shares, Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 573; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 1; affirmed in People v. Commrs. of Taxes, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 244; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 9, and in Bradley v. People, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 459; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 14. Even under the original act of 1863 national bank shares were held taxable by State authority in Stetson v. Bangor, 56 Me. 274; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 520, which relies upon questions of constitutional taxation, etc., on McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 316; Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 449; Bank of Commerce v. N. Y. City, 2 Black (U. S.) 620; Osborne v. Bank of U. S., 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 738; Bank Tax Case, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 200; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 563; Sturgis v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 122; Wilson v. Blackbird Creek Marsh Co., 2 Pet. (U. S.) 245; Cooley v. Port Wardens of Philadelphia, 12 How. (U. S.) 299; and Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 200. As to conditions and reservations upon the exercise of the power of the States to tax anything pertaining to national banks, see Maguire v. Board of Revenue etc., 71 Ala. 401; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 452. Concerning right of State taxation, consult also full discussion in First Nat. Bank v. Com., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 353; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 34.

2. Thomas v. Farmers' Bank, 46 Md. 43; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 248.

3. First Nat. Bank v. Com., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 353; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 34. All their contracts, as is pointed out in this case, are governed and construed by State laws. Their acquisition and transfer of property, their right to collect their debts, and their liability to be sued for debts, are all based on State law. It is only when the State law incapacitates the banks from discharging their duties to the government that such law becomes unconstitutional. The argument that these banks are financial agents of the government, and, as such, exempt from State legislation, based on the statements of CHASE, C. J., in Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 589; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 1, is combatted and confined to adverse legislation, and not as authorizing exemption from State process for breach of contract, in Talmage v. Third Nat. Bank, 91 N. Y. 531; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 148. See also First Nat. Bank v. Lamb, 50 N. Y. 95.

Restriction Upon Extra-state National Bank.—In New York, a national bank organized under the laws of the United States and doing business in another State is prohibited from keeping an office of discount or deposit in the State of New York, and cannot maintain an action upon any note discounted by it at such office. National Bank v. Phoenix Warehousing Co., 6 Hun (N. Y.) 71; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 784.

In Winter v. Baldwin (Ala.), 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 406, it was held that the provisions of § 1677 of the Code, giving stockholders of private corporations the right to inspect the corporate

2. Jurisdiction of State Courts—In General.—It has been held that State courts have jurisdiction of suits brought by national banks, because such courts may exercise jurisdiction in cases authorized by the laws of the State, and not distinctly prohibited by enactments fixing the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal courts.¹

Governing Provisions.—Any objection to the jurisdiction, in cases where a national bank is a party to the action, founded upon the character of the association as an instrument of the national government, is met by the existence of an express provision in the act of congress,² whereby suits, actions and proceedings against any such association may be had not only in the federal courts, but also in any State, county, or municipal court in the county or city in which said association is located, having jurisdiction in similar cases;³ and this provision has been extended by construction to cover actions by as well as against such associations.⁴

Provision as Permissive or Otherwise.—But there is a conflict in the decisions upon the question whether suit may also be brought in a State other than that in which the national bank is legally located.⁵ books and papers, apply to national banks within the State as well as to other corporations, and that §§ 5240 and 5241 of the U. S. Rev. Stat., providing for national bank examiners, and exempting national banks from all visitatorial powers other than those authorized by congress, or vested in courts of justice, did not affect the statutory right of the stockholder.

1. First Nat. Bank v. Hubbard, 49 Vt. 1; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 912; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 97. See also, to like effect, Adams v. Daunis, 29 La. An. 315; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 510. Concerning the principles regulating this matter, see Ordway v. Central Nat. Bank, 47 Md. 217; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 559; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 455, 460, stating the conclusion reached in 1 Kent's Com. 396, 400, and following and quoting the decision in Clafin v. Houseman, 93 U. S. 130; also Crocker v. Marine Nat. Bank, 101 Mass. 240; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 336; citing, besides 1 Kent's Com. (6th ed.) 396, et seq.; the cases of Bank of United States v. Deveau, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 85, and Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 738, neither of which seems to be directly in point; and the more pertinent cases of Teall v. Felton, 1 N. Y. 537; s. c., 12 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 284, and Ward v. Jenkins, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 583; also First Nat. Bank v.

Overman, 22 Neb. 116; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 556, which substantially quotes the statement of the ruling in Clafin v. Houseman, 93 U. S. 130, made in Hade v. McVay, 31 Ohio St. 231; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 353. Consult, further, Holmes v. National Bank, 18 S. Car. 31; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 558; Robinson v. National Bank, 81 N. Y. 385; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 508; Bletz v. Columbia Nat. Bank, 87 Pa. St. 87; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 343; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 366.

Receiver's Suit Against Directors.—An action may be brought in a State court by a receiver or a stockholder of a national bank against its directors for negligence, etc., causing loss of funds. Brinckerhoff v. Bostwick, 88 N. Y. 52; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 591.

2. National Bank act, § 57; 13 U. S. St. at Large 116.

3. Bank of Bethel v. Pahquioque Bank, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 383; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 77.

4. First Nat. Bank v. Hubbard, 49 Vt. 1; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 912; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 97, following a like construction in Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 498. See reference to this construction in Robinson v. National Bank, 81 N. Y. 385; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 508.

5. Some of the cases hold that the Proceeding to Oust Director of Bank.—And it has been held that an information in the nature of a quo warranto will not lie in a State court to try the right to office of a director in a national bank.¹

3. Place of Bringing Action—Conflicting Views.—Not only is it the general doctrine that State courts have jurisdiction of suits brought by a national bank,² and that it may be sued in the proper courts of the State in which it is located,³ but it is held by some of the cases that such a bank can be sued only in the courts of the State in which it is established, and not in those of another State.⁴ Furthermore, it is sometimes, at least, indicated that the suit in such cases must be brought in the proper court of the particular city or county in which the bank is located.⁵ Other cases, however, hold that a national bank doing business in one State may be sued in the courts of other States,⁶ and even in a county of the same State different from that in which the bank is located.⁷ Indeed, a national bank has been regarded as being a foreign corporation even in the State in which it is located, within the meaning of a statute requiring security for costs.⁸

provision in question is permissive, not mandatory. See full statement of grounds for this construction in Cooke v. State Nat. Bank, 52 N. Y. 96; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 667; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 698. Consult further Talmage v. Third Nat. Bank, 91 N. Y. 531; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 148. According to this view the provision does not, of itself, exclude the jurisdiction of other State courts. See Robinson v. National Bank, 81 N. Y. 385; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 508, citing Claffin v. Houseman, 93 U. S. 130; 1 Kent's Com. 395, 396; Bank of United States v. Deveaux, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 85; Osborn v. United States Bank, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 738; Teall v. Felton, 1 N. Y. 537, and Houston v. Moon, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 1. The pertinency of most of these citations has already been considered. According to the other view the provision is not permissive in any such sense as to allow a national bank, established in one State, to be sued in the courts of any State of the Union in which litigation against an extra-State corporation is authorized, and in which it might be effectually served with process. Crocker v. Marine Nat. Bank, 101 Mass. 240; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 336. See, to same effect, Cadle v. Tracy, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 101; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 230.

1. State v. Curtis, 35 Conn. 374, 382.

2. First Nat. Bank v. Hubbard, 49 Vt. 1; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 97; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 912. See also Ordway v.

Central Nat. Bank, 47 Md. 217; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 455; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 559.

3. Adams v. Daunis, 29 La. An. 315; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 510; Bank of Bethel v. Pahquioque Bank, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 383; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 77.

4. See Crocker v. Marine Nat. Bank, 101 Mass. 240; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 575; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 336. Consult also Cadle v. Tracey, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 101; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 230.

5. See Crocker v. Marine Nat. Bank, 101 Mass. 240; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 575; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 336. See also, as to jurisdiction over receiver, Adams v. Daunis, 29 La. An. 315; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 510. But compare New Orleans Banking Assoc. v. Adams, 3 Woods (U. S.) 21; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 207. The doctrine of the text is inapplicable to a change of the place of trial. Kinser v. Farmers' Nat. Bank, 58 Iowa 728.

6. Cooke v. State Nat. Bank, 52 N. Y. 96; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 667; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 698; Robinson v. National Bank, 81 N. Y. 385; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 319; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 508; Holmes v. Nat. Bank, 18 S. Car. 31; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 558.

7. Talmage v. Third Nat. Bank, 91 N. Y. 531; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 148.

8. National Park Bank v. Gunst, 1 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 292; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 797.

Distinction Between Local and Transitory Actions.—The Supreme Court of the United States does not adopt either view, but applies to this matter the old distinction between local and transitory actions. It holds that a national bank can be sued in a State court in a local action, in contradistinction from one of a transitory character, in a county or city other than that where the bank is located.¹

4. Attachment Against National Bank in Another State—Conflict of Decisions.—There has been considerable conflict in the decisions upon the question whether an attachment may ordinarily issue out of a State court against the property of a national bank which is located in another State.

Ruling by United States Supreme Court.—This conflict may, however, doubtless be regarded as set at rest by a recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, based upon a full consideration of the provisions on the subject and the amendments thereof. This decision comprehensively holds that the effect of the act of congress is to deny altogether the remedy by attachment so far as national banks are concerned, whether in federal courts or in those of the States, without restriction to cases of actual or contemplated insolvency,² and the view thus taken has been followed as obligatory by the New York supreme court.³

5. Suits for Recovery of Interest Penalties.—The decisions of the different State courts are not entirely uniform upon the question, whether or not such courts have jurisdiction of actions against

1. Casey v. Adams, 102 U. S. 66; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 102. But this view is regarded by the Supreme Court of Georgia as an unwarranted construction of the pertinent provisions of the National Bank act in Continental Nat. Bank v. Folsom, 78 Ga. 449; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 350, which holds that a national bank giving an attachment bond in one State may be sued thereon in that State, though located in another State; and the decision under due consideration has been distinguished by the New York court of appeals upon the ground that the question there was a local question, and the plea was to the jurisdiction, and that the effect of the statute on transitory actions was not expounded. Talmage v. Third Nat. Bank, 91 N. Y. 531; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 148.

2. Butler v. Coleman, 124 U. S. 721. For a previous ruling adverse to the validity of an attachment against the property and credits of an extra-State national bank, see Chesapeake Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 40 Md. 269; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 531; s. c., 17 Am. Rep. 601. But compare contra, Southwick

v. First Nat. Bank, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 96; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 789.

3. Bank of Montreal v. Fidelity Nat. Bank, 1 N. Y. Supp. 852, and First Nat. Bank v. La Due, 39 Minn. 415. A different position had been taken in Robinson v. National Bank, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 477; s. c., 81 N. Y. 385, or 37 Am. Rep. 508, or 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 319, followed in National Shoe etc. Bank v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 89 N. Y. 467, s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 601; and Peoples' Bank v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 422, disapproving Central Nat. Bank v. Richland Nat. Bank, 52 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 136, s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 801, and Rhoner v. First Nat. Bank, 14 Hun (N. Y.) 126; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 331. And this view had been adopted in Holmes v. National Bank, 18 S. Car. 31; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 558. It was not considered necessary to decide the question in McCracken v. Covington City Nat. Bank, 4 Fed. Rep. 602. Concerning the prohibition of attachment against national banks which are insolvent or on the eve of insolvency, see National Shoe etc. Bank v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 89 N.

national banks for penalties and forfeitures, prescribed by the act of congress for exacting and receiving usurious interest.¹ Various cases may be found which are either directly or indirectly adverse to the existence of such jurisdiction.² The decided weight of the more recent decisions, however, seems to be in favor of sustaining such jurisdiction, especially where the actions are by private persons for the recovery of the penalty of twice the amount of interest prescribed by the congressional statute.³

III. NATIONAL CONTROL—1. In General—Scope of.—It has been well said of the national banks organized under the act of congress, that they are instruments designed to be used to aid the government in the administration of an important branch of the public service; that they are means appropriate to that end; that congress is the sole judge of the necessity which existed for creating them; and that being such means the States can exercise no control over them, nor in any wise affect their operation, except so far as congress may see proper to permit.⁴

Supervision by National Officers.—The national banks are located in different parts of the United States, most of them at a great distance from the city of Washington and from each other, and all under the supervision of officers residing in that city.⁵

Y. 467; Raynor v. Pacific Nat. Bank, 93 N. Y. 371.

1. Lynch v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 22 W. Va. 554; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 520.

2. See Newell v. National Bank, 12 Bush (Ky.) 57; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 501; Missouri R. Tel. Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 74 Ill. 217; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 401. Compare also State v. Puller, 34 Conn. 280; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 375.

3. Lynch v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 22 W. Va. 554; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 520. See the following cases supporting this view: First Nat. Bank v. Overman, 22 Neb. 116; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 556; Schuyler Nat. Bank v. Bollong, 24 Neb. 821; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 558; Bletz v. Columbia Nat. Bank, 87 Pa. St. 87; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 366; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 343. Followed in Gruber v. First Nat. Bank, 87 Pa. St. 465; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 395; Pitckett v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 32 Ark. 346; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 209; Hade v. McVay, 31 Ohio St. 231; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 353; Dow v. Irasburgh Nat. Bank, 50 Vt. 112; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 493; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 421; Ordway v. Central Nat. Bank, 47 Md. 217; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 455; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 559.

Waiver of Exemption.—The statutory exemption of national banks from suits in State courts, in counties other than those in which the association is located, is a personal privilege which is waived by appearing and making defence without claiming the immunity granted by congress. Charlotte Nat. Bank v. Morgan, 132 U. S. 141.

4. Farmers' etc. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 117. See also as to regulation of currency by congress, Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 533; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 22.

A State statute prohibiting the establishment of banking companies without authority of the legislature does not apply to banking corporations like national banks, created by authority of congress. Stetson v. Bangor, 56 Me. 274; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 520, 521, concerning right to sue in federal courts; First Nat. Bank v. Douglass Co., 3 Dill. (U. S.) 298; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 267; Foss v. First Nat. Bank, 5 Fed. Rep. 185; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 104; Fifth Nat. Bank v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 1 Fed. Rep. 190; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 190. But compare St. Louis Nat. Bank v. Brinkman, 1 Fed. Rep. 45; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 141.

5. Platt v. Beebe, 57 N. Y. 339; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 725.

Comptroller of the Currency.—Chief among these officers is the comptroller of the currency who, for the purpose of protecting the public, particularly those confiding in the solvency of the banks and having business with them, is under the necessity of taking the management from such of them as fail to comply with the law, and confiding them to the care of a receiver. Platt v. Beebe, just cited. Consult, further, concerning suspended national banks, National Bank v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 94 U. S. 437; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 133; Chemical Nat. Bank v. Bailey, 12 Blatchf. (U. S.) 480; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 260.

2. Jurisdiction of Federal Courts—Concurrent Jurisdiction Taken Away by Act of 1882.—After the act of 1882, to enable national banks to continue their corporate existence, took effect, the concurrent jurisdiction of the federal courts over suits by and against national banks, as such, was taken away, and a suit by or against a national bank could not be removed from a State court to a circuit court of the United States,¹ unless a similar suit by or against a State bank in like situation with the national bank could be so removed.²

National Bank Examiner.—A national bank examiner, however, is not an officer or agent of the bank, but of the government, and has no authority, as such examiner, to act for the bank in any binding manner. Witters v. Sowles, 32 Fed. Rep. 762.

Internal Revenue Officers.—The law under which national banks are incorporated does not exempt them from examination by internal revenue officers. United States v. Rhawn, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 521; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 358. See also United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 154.

United States Treasurer.—Concerning disposition of redemption fund by United States Treasurer, see Jackson v. United States, 20 Ct. of Cl. 298.

Jurisdictional Questions Concerning Such Officers.—As to want of jurisdiction of United States circuit court to entertain suit in control of comptroller and treasurer, as to bonds deposited with latter, see Van Antwerp v. Hubbard, 7 Blatchf. (U. S.) 426; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 208, relying, as to power of circuit courts over United States officers, upon Kendall v. United States, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 524, and following cases therein cited: Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 137; McIntire v. Wood, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 504; M'Clung v. Silliman, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 598; Reeside v. Walker, 11 How. (U. S.) 272; United States v. Guthrie, 17 How. (U. S.) 284; and United States v. Edmunds, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 563. See also reference to same view in Van Antwerp v. Hubbard, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 282; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 219.

Receiver of suspended national bank cannot subject the government to the jurisdiction of the courts, nor can comptroller do so to determine the conflicting claims of the United States and other creditors. Case v. Terrell, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 99. But receiver is an officer of the United States so as to give the federal court jurisdiction of an action at common law brought by him to collect a claim which was due to the bank at the time of his appointment. Platt v. Beech, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 303; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 182.

1. As to when removal justifiable and in time, see Davies v. Marine Nat. Bank, 24 Fed. Rep. 194, 195; Richards v. Rock Rapids, 31 Fed. Rep. 505.

2. Leather Manufacturers' Bank v. Cooper, 120 U. S. 778; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 208.

Prior to that act it was held by inferior federal courts that a bank organized under the national banking law is not authorized to sue outside of the district in which it is located, in a circuit court of the United States, independently of any question of citizenship. St. Louis Nat. Bank v. Allen, 2 McCrary (U. S.) 92. Or when the amount in controversy does not exceed $500. St. Louis Nat. Bank v. Brinkham, 1 McCrary (U. S.) 9; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 141.

But on the other hand it was held by a court of like character that national banks may, by reason of their character as such, sue in the federal courts, in First Nat. Bank v. Douglas Co., 3 Dill. (U. S.) 330; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 267. See also White v. Com. Nat. Bank, 4 Brewst. (Pa.) 234; First Nat. Bank v. Bohne, 8 Fed. Rep. 115; Foss v. First Nat. Bank, 3 Fed. Rep. 185; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 104; and by the Supreme

Nor could a national bank, after such act, sue in the federal courts in virtue of a mere corporate right, nor unless, as in the case of other banks and citizens, the subject-matter of litigation involved some other element of federal jurisdiction.¹

But the provisions of the act are inapplicable to an action brought against private persons by a receiver of a national bank.²

Effect of Act of 1888.—Nor is jurisdiction of the federal courts over suits to which national banks are a party so far taken away by the act of 1888 as to deprive such courts of jurisdiction of an action between a national bank located in one State and a citizen of another State, because the provision of the act making such banks, for purposes of litigation, citizens of the States in which they are located, is followed by a provision that the circuit and district courts of the United States shall not have in such cases "jurisdiction over them, except such as they would have in cases between individual citizens of the same State."³

3. Functions of Comptroller of Currency—In General.—The comptroller of the currency has certain supervisory powers and duties in relation to national banks, designed to keep the officers within the limits of the law, in conducting their legitimate business, and, as far as lies within the province of official supervision by the government, to protect the creditors and stockholders against fraud, negligence and mismanagement.⁴ Among the functions of the comptroller of the currency are the filling of

Court of the United States that the circuit courts had jurisdiction of suits brought by or against national banks (in the district of their location) without regard to the citizenship of the parties. Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 498; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 17; Wilson Co. v. National Bank, 103 U. S. 770. See also Mitchell v. Butler, 25 Int. Rev. Rec. 185; s. c., 8 Reporter 232; s. c. (apparently), as Mitchell v. Walker, 25 Int. Rev. Rec. 64, or 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 180.

The fact that one of the parties to a suit is a national bank was held to be no ground for removal from a State to a federal court, in Wilder v. Union Nat. Bank, 9 Biss. (U. S.) 178; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 124, discussing requisites to authorize a removal on the ground that the controversy involves a question arising under the constitution and laws of the United States.

The National Bank act and not the Judiciary act was held to control the power and right of national banks to sue in the federal courts in the district of their location, in Commercial Nat. Bank v. Simmons, 1 Flip. (U. S.) 449; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 294.

1. Union Nat. Bank v. Miller, 15 Fed. Rep. 703, 704.

Against right of a national bank to institute and maintain a suit against residents of its own State and judicial district, since act of 1882, see National Bank v. Fore, 25 Fed. Rep. 209.

2. Price v. Abbott, 17 Fed. Rep. 506.

3. First Nat. Bank v. Forrest, 40 Fed. Rep. 705, objecting to the literal construction that would make one clause nullify the other, and holding the design of the qualifying clause to be that the federal courts should have no other or different jurisdiction, where the suits concerned national banks, than they would have in case the suits were pending between individual citizens.

Jurisdiction of United States Supreme Court.—The Supreme Court of the United States has jurisdiction to re-examine the judgment of a State court involving the right of a national bank to purchase a promissory note secured by a deed of trust upon real estate; but a motion to affirm will be granted where that is the only federal question in the case and the decision below is in recognition of the right. Swope v. Leffingwell, 105 U. S. 3.

4. Branch v. United States, 12 Ct.

requisitions for currency from States and Territories,¹ and the issuance of a certificate of approval of the increase of the capital stock of a national bank.²

Power to Enforce Stockholder's Liability.—It has been repeatedly decided that the comptroller of the currency is vested with authority to determine the extent to which the individual liability of stockholders is to be enforced.³ The conclusive character of this authority is upheld by some of the decisions;⁴ but it is apparently denied by others, which hold that the authority is not made exclusive in character, particularly in view of supplementary legislation by congress on the subject.⁵

Should the comptroller, however, attempt to enforce an assessment clearly and palpably contrary to the provisions of the national bank act, a court of equity, if its aid were invoked, would promptly restrain him by injunction.⁶

The comptroller of the currency has also no power to discontinue a suit against a stockholder to enforce his individual liability for the debts of a national bank, though the comptroller might, perhaps, direct the receiver of the bank to make such discontinuance.⁷

Comptroller's Certificate of Organization.—Under the construction generally given to the provisions of the national bank act concerning the comptroller's certificate of organization,⁸ the comptroller is clothed with jurisdiction to decide as to the completeness of the organization of a national bank, and his certificate is conclusive upon the subject for all the purposes of a litigation to enforce the individual liability of a stockholder for the debts of the association;⁹ and so the production of such certificate has been regarded of Cl. 281; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 363.

1. As to priority permitted among requisitions arriving at about the same time, see Nat. Banks, 14 Op. Atty. Gen. 414, 417.

2. National Bank act, § 13; 13 U. S. Stat. at Large 99, 103. See Keyser v. Hitz, below, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 473; or 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 340. Concerning taxation of new shares upon which a dividend was declared as of a date prior to such approval and certificate, see Charleston v. People's Nat. Bank, 5 S. Car. 103; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 1; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 898, 901.

3. Stanton v. Wilkeson, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 357. See to such effect, Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 498; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 17; Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S. 56; Strong v. Southworth, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 331; Bailey v. Sanger, 4 Dill. (U. S.) 463; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 356; Casey v. Galli, 94 U. S. 673; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 142; Germania Nat. Bank v. Case, 99 U. S.

628. Consult also National Bank v. Kennedy, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 19; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 87; Bowden v. Morris, 1 Hughes (U. S.) 378.

4. Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 498; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 17, followed in Strong v. Southworth, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 331; Bailey v. Sawyer, 4 Dill. (U. S.) 463; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 156; Casey v. Galli, 94 U. S. 673, 677; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 142. See also Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S. 56; Germania Nat. Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628.

5. Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27; s. c., 17 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 71; Irons v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 301. See also Hawes v. Lord, 11 Biss. (U. S.) 144; s. c., 10 Fed. Rep. 236.

6. United States v. Knox, 102 U. S. 422.

7. Case v. Small, 4 Woods (U. S.) 78; s. c., 10 Fed. Rep. 722.

8. National Bank act, §§ 18, 44; 13 U. S. Stat. at Large 101, 113.

9. Casey v. Galli, 94 U. S. 673, rely-as sufficiently proving the incorporation of the bank,¹ and as conclusive in regard to the regularity of the proceedings by which any bank has been converted into a national bank.² Some cases, however, seem to go no further than to hold that the comptroller's certificate is competent evidence, which may aid in making out a prima facie case.³

Comptroller's Appointment of Receiver.—The action of the comptroller of the currency in making the appointment of a receiver is conclusive upon debtors⁴ until set aside on the application of the bank;⁵ and a certificate of the comptroller, approved and concurred in by the secretary of the treasury, and reciting the existence of the facts of which the former is required to be satisfied under the national bank act,⁶ is sufficient evidence of the validity of the appointment of the receiver in an action brought by him as such.⁷

Comptroller's Relation to Bank in Liquidation.—Under the construction given to provisions of the original national bank act, in regard to the receiver's action under the direction of the comptroller, in assuming charge of national banks under certain circumstances, and enforcing the liability of stockholders, etc., the receiver is the instrument of the comptroller by whom he is appointed, and it is therefore considered to be for the comptroller to decide when it is necessary to institute proceedings against the stockholders to enforce their personal liability, and to determine how much, if only a part, shall be collected.⁸

Comptroller's Suit for Dissolution of Bank.—A forfeiture of the rights and privileges of a national banking association must be determined and adjudged in a suit instituted by the comptroller of ing, concerning conclusiveness of certificate, upon Thacher v. West River Bank, 19 Mich. 196.

1. National Bank v. Phoenix Warehousing Co., 6 Hun (N. Y.) 71, citing also as to estoppel by dealing with the bank as a corporation, Palmer v. Lawrence, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 161; Steam Nav. Co. v. Weed, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 378; White v. Coventry, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 305; and White v. Ross, 15 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 661.

2. Keyser v. Hitz, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 473; s. c., 3. Nat. Bank Cas. 340.

3. Mix v. National Bank, 91 Ill. 20; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 44. See also Tapley v. Martin, 116 Mass. 275; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 611.

4. See Platt v. Crawford, 8 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 297, 305-6.

5. Cadle v. Baker, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 650, holding that the bank and not the debtor may move in that behalf.

6. National Bank act, § 50; 13 U. S. Stat. at Large 99.

7. Platt v. Beebe, 57 N. Y. 339, taking the position that there is nothing in the act to indicate a design that the appointment should be upon legal proof or evidence of the facts as to violation of the law in the management of the bank, but that the act is framed to meet the emergency of want of time to get legal evidence of this character.

8. Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 498; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 17, construing act of June 3rd, 1864, § 50, quoted in Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S. 56, and as authoritative in Strong v. Southworth, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 331, followed in Bailey v. Sawyer, 4 Dill. (U. S.) 463; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 356, and in Cassey v. Galli, 94 U. S. 673; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 142; treated as stating established doctrine in Germania Nat. Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628; distinguished in Bank v. Kennedy, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 922; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 87, and in Bowden v. Morris, 1 Hughes (U. S.) 378. Compare Irons v. Manufacturers' Nat.

the currency in his own name;¹ and such an association must stand until dissolved in that way.² Nor can any person, by a conspiracy to evade its regulations, escape the liability for borrowed money, loaned by a bank whose forfeiture has not been determined, upon personal security, in the manner authorized.³

IV. POWERS—1. General and Incidental Powers—Provision Concerning.—As from the date of its organization certificate, a national banking association becomes a body corporate.⁴ As such it has power to adopt and use a corporate seal, to have succession for the period of twenty years, unless sooner dissolved or suffering forfeiture of its franchise; to make contracts, to sue and be sued,⁵ to elect or appoint directors, and by its board of directors to appoint a president and other officers; and to exercise all such incidental powers as shall be necessary to carry on the business of banking, by discounting and negotiating promissory notes, drafts, bills of exchange, and other evidences of debt,⁶ by buying and Bank, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 301; and see as to supplementary enactment concerning involuntary liquidation by act of June 30th, 1876 (19 U. S. Stat. at Large 63; supplement to Rev. Stat. 216). See Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27; s. c., 17 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 71; Hawey v. Lord, 11 Biss. (U. S.) 144; s. c., 10 Fed. Rep. 236.

1. National Bank act, § 53; 13 U. S. Stat. at Large 99.

2. Union Gold Min. Co. v. Rocky Mountain Nat. Bank, 1 Colo. 531.

3. Stephens v. Monongahela Nat. Bank, 88 Pa. St. 157; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 438; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 398. But a decree of forfeiture at the instance of the comptroller abates a suit against a national bank to enforce the collection of a demand. First Nat. Bank v. Colby, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 609, 614.

4. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5, 36.

5. See Main v. Second Nat. Bank, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 26; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 200.

6. This clause (which is also liberally construed in Shinkle v. First Nat. Bank, 22 Ohio St. 517; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 824) does not exclude authority to guaranty the payment of a note at maturity. Peoples' Bank v. National Bank, 101 U. S. 181; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 97. But a national bank has no power to guaranty a contract between other persons for the delivery of building materials. Norton v. Derry Nat. Bank, 61 N. H. 509; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 334; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 568. As to right to take railway aid coupons, see Town of Lyons v. Lyons

Nat. Bank, 19 Blatchf. (U. S.) 279; First Nat. Bank v. Town of Bennington, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 53; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 437.

"To receive deposits is among the powers specifically delegated to national banks." Eastern Townships' Bank v. Vermont Nat. Bank, 22 Blatchf. (U. S.) 498; s. c., 22 Fed. Rep. 186.

Special Deposits.—It seems now to be settled that a national bank may receive special deposits. National Bank v. Graham, 100 U. S. 699; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 64.

But there was formerly much conflict in the decisions as to whether this clause, or perhaps any other provision of the National Bank act, conferred such authority. The view adverse to the existence of such authority was sustained mainly by Whitney v. First Nat. Bank, 50 Vt. 388; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 503, and Wiley v. First Nat. Bank, 47 Vt. 546; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 122; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 905. Support to the same position is given by First Nat. Bank v. Ocean Nat. Bank, 60 N. Y. 278; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 181; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 728, and Third Nat. Bank v. Boyd, 47 Md. 47; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 35; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 445. See also Weckler v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Md. 581; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 545. The contrary view upholding the authority to take special deposits was sustained by Pattison v. Syracuse Nat. Bank, 80 N. Y. 82; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 582. The question was waived in De Haven v. Kensington Nat. Bank, 81 Pa. St. 95; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 882.

selling exchange, coin,¹

Other authorities bearing upon same phase of the subject are reviewed in the above cited case of Whitney v. First Nat. Bank, 50 Vt. 388; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 503, which case is reported on other points in 55 Vt. 154; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 266, and the judgment wherein is reversed in 1 Morr. Trans. 263, upon the authority of the before cited case of First Nat. Bank v. Graham, 100 U. S. 699; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 64. These reviewed authorities comprise Fowler v. Scully, 72 Pa. St. 456; s. c., 14 Am. Rep. 699; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 854; First Bank v. Graham, 79 Pa. St. 106; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 49; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 875; Foster v. Essex Bank, 17 Mass. 479; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 168; Coffey v. National Bank, 46 Mo. 140; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 488; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 644; Leach v. Hale, 31 Iowa 69; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 112; Scott v. National Bank, 72 Pa. St. 471; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 711; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 864; Chattahoochee Nat. Bank v. Schley, 58 Ga. 369; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 379; Pearce v. Madison etc. R. Co., 21 How. (U. S.) 441; Vermont etc. R. Co. v. Vermont Cent. R. Co., 34 Vt. 47; Bullard v. National Eagle Bank, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 589; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 93, and Head v. Providence Ins. Co., 2 Cranch (U. S.) 467. Additional cases reviewed or noted in Pattison v. Syracuse Nat. Bank, 80 N. Y. 82; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 582. Relevant to the discussion of the matter are Lloyd v. West Branch Bank, 15 Pa. St. 172; Lancaster Co. Nat. Bank v. Smith, 62 Pa. St. 47; Turner v. First Nat. Bank, 26 Iowa 562; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 154; Smith v. First Nat. Bank, 99 Mass. 605; s. c., 97 Am. Dec. 59; and Giblin v. McMullen, 2 L. R., P. C. 317.

The doctrine of the Supreme Court of the United States, which may be regarded as establishing the law upon this subject, is that it would undoubtedly be competent for a national bank to receive a special deposit of such securities or bonds, "written on a contract of hiring or without reward," and that "it would be liable for a greater or less degree of negligence accordingly." First Nat. Bank v. Graham, 100 U. S. 699; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 64. This proposition is spoken of as "decided," in the case just cited, in Mylie v. Northampton Bank, 119 U. S. 361; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 188. And the case is also treated as authority upon the liability of a national bank, in Whitney v. National Bank, 1 Morr. Trans. 263, and cited in regard to the scope of such liability in Prather v. Kean, 29 Fed. Rep. 498.

The "proper construction" of the National Bank act is said to have been "conclusively determined" by this case in Bank v. Zent, 39 Ohio St. 105, 108; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 698, 700.

The view thus taken is based upon the provision of the National Bank act, as to delivery of special deposits by national banks after they have stopped business (U. S. Rev. Stats., § 5228, act of 1864, § 46), which is considered to imply clearly and as effectually as by virtue of an express declaration (upon the authority of United States v. Babbitt, 1 Black (U. S.) 55) that a national bank may receive such special deposits as a part of its legitimate business. The connected subject of the liability of national banks for loss of special deposits, to which many of the foregoing authorities really relate, is considered in Lancaster Co. Nat. Bank v. Smith, 62 Pa. St. 47; Scott v. National Bank, 72 Pa. St. 471; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 711; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 864; De Haven v. Kensington Nat. Bank, 81 Pa. St. 95; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 882; First Nat. Bank v. Graham, 85 Pa. St. 91; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 628; First Nat. Bank v. Rex, 89 Pa. St. 308; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 767; note to Foster v. Essex Bank, 9 Am. Dec. 183; Smith v. First Nat. Bank, 99 Mass. 605; s. c., 97 Am. Dec. 59; Dearborn v. Union Nat. Bank, 58 Me. 273; s. c., 61 Me. 369; Jenkins v. National Village Bank, 58 Me. 275; Whitney v. First Nat. Bank, 55 Vt. 154; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 266; Yorkes v. National Bank, 69 N. Y. 383; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 208; Third Nat. Bank v. Boyd, 44 Md. 47; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 35; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 45; Leach v. Hale, 31 Iowa 69; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 112; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 466; Coffey v. National Bank, 46 Mo. 140; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 488; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 644; Second Nat. Bank v. Ocean Nat. Bank, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 362; Prather v. Kean, 29 Fed. Rep. 498; Mylie v. Northampton Bank, 119 U. S. 361; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 188; Bank v. Zent, 39 Ohio St. 105, 108; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 698.

1. See Merchants' Bank v. State Bank, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 604; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 47.

and bullion;¹ by loaning money on personal security,² and by issuing, etc., circulating notes.³

Construction of Provision.—The provision as to the incidental powers of national banks is sometimes strictly construed as limiting and defining the kind of banking they may conduct, instead of leaving the scope of their business to implication;⁴ but a more liberal construction is sometimes adopted, which regards the provision as containing five distinct grants of power, none of which is a limitation upon any other.⁵

Agency in Purchase of Bonds or Stocks.—A national bank has no inherent power to act as broker or agent in the purchase of bonds or stocks, and its president cannot bind it by an agreement so to act, without special authority.⁶

Seeking to Recover Lost Property.—But it certainly would be competent for a national bank to take measures for the recovery of its own property lost through a burglary, and to act for others jointly concerned with itself.⁷

Collecting Commercial Paper.—The business of collecting commercial paper is part of the regular business of banking when carried on under national as well as under other bank charters.⁸

2. Prescribing By-laws—Authority For.—A national banking association is empowered by statute to prescribe, by its board of directors, by-laws not inconsistent with law, regulating the manner

1. Neither this clause nor that concerning the discounting of promissory notes, etc., authorize the selling of railroad bonds on commission by a national bank. Weckler v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Md. 581; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 95; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 533. Under the express authority to buy and sell exchange, a national bank may lawfully purchase a draft drawn in its favor by a seller of goods upon a buyer, with a bill of lading attached. Union Nat. Bank v. Rowan, 23 S. Car. 339; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 26.

As to right to take railway aid coupons, see Town of Lyons v. Lyons Nat. Bank, 19 Blatchf. (U. S.) 79, 289.

2. This clause does not exclude the power of national banks to take a pledge of stock as collateral security for notes or bills of exchange cashed by them. Shoemaker v. National Mechanics' Bank, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 416; s. c., 1 Hughes (U. S.) 101 (quoting, as to restrictions upon powers of banks and corporations in general, the doctrine of Bank of United States v. Dandridge, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 68, from Head v. Providence Ins. Co., 2 Cranch (U. S.) 127; Steam Nav. Co. v. Dandridge, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 318, 319).

See also Lockwood v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 9 R. I. 308; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 253; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 895. Nor does it preclude a national bank from making a loan on a note and taking a warehouse receipt as collateral security therefor. Cleveland v. Shoeman, 40 Ohio St. 176; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 140; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 701.

3. Nat. Bank act of June 3rd, 1864, § 8; 13 Stats. at Large 101; U. S. Rev. Stats., § 5136.

4. Weckler v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Md. 581; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 95; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 533.

5. Shoemaker v. National Mechanics' Bank, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 416; s. c., 1 Hughes (U. S.) 101.

6. First Nat. Bank v. Hoch, 89 Pa. St. 324; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 769; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 375.

7. Mylie v. Northampton Nat. Bank, 119 U. S. 361; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 188.

8. Mound City Paint etc. Co. v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 4 Utah 353. This would appear to be assumed in Exchange Nat. Bank v. Third Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 276, et seq., and in Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Goodman, 109 Pa. St. 422.

in which its stock shall be transferred,¹ its directors elected and appointed, its officers appointed, its property transferred, its general business conducted, and the privileges granted to it by law exercised and enjoyed.²

Adoption of By-law by Quorum of Board.—A by-law of a national bank must, as a prerequisite to its validity, be adopted by a majority of all the directors, or by a quorum of the board;³ and, accordingly, a by-law of a national bank is invalid where it is adopted at a meeting of six ad interim directors of a national bank which had twelve directors before its conversion from a State bank.⁴

Validity of By-law Giving Bank a Lien, etc.—The validity of a by-law giving the bank a lien upon the stock as against the stockholders, and restricting their transfer of the same, has been the subject of conflicting decisions, though it would seem that the later and more authoritative rulings are opposed to sustaining such a by-law.⁵

1. See Knight v. Old Nat. Bank, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 429, 431, 432; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 929.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5136. See quotation of language of act of 1864, § 8, and act of 1863, § 11, in Lockwood v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 9 R. I. 308; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 253; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 895.

3. As to status of affairs if bank has never legally adopted any by-laws, see Taylor v. Hutton, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 195; s. c., 18 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 16; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 755.

4. Lockwood v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 9 R. I. 308; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 253; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 895. This view is based upon the familiar principle applicable to the proceedings of corporations in general, as developed in 2 Kent Com. 293; Cahill v. Kalamazoo Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Doug. (Mich.) 124; note to Ex parte Wilcocks, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 401; King v. Bellringer, 4 Term. Rep. 810, and King v. Miller, 6 Term. Rep. 268. An objection has been dismissed as untenable and inapplicable to the particular case, that seven only of the eight directors of a national bank were present at a meeting when a by-law was adopted, in Knight v. Old Nat. Bank, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 429; s. c., noted, 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 929.

5. The view favorable to the validity of such a by-law is taken in Lockwood v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 9 R. I. 308; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 895; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 253; Knight v. Old Nat. Bank, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 429; s. c., noted 1 Nat.

Bank Cas. 929; In re Dunkerson, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 227. The adverse view is maintained in Feckhimer v. Nat. Exch. Bank, 79 Va. 80; s. c., 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 156; First Nat. Bank v. Lainer, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 369; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 93; Bullard v. National Eagle Bank, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 589; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 93; Evansville Nat. Bank v. Metropolitan Nat. Bank, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 527; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank 189. The controversy turns largely upon the intention of congress in prohibiting national banking associations from making loans upon shares of their stock (U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5201; Nat. Bank act, § 35), and upon a change in the provisions of the act, which left out a section providing for a lien of the bank upon the stock. (§ 36 of act of 1863, omitted in act of 1864.)

The discussion of the question involved a consideration of by-laws relating to transfer of stock in general, upon which matter the above cited case of Lockwood v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 9 R. I. 308; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 253; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 895, reviews Child v. Hudson Bay Co., 2 P. Wms. 207; Cunningham v. Alabama L. Ins. Co., 4 Ala. 652; St. Louis etc. Ins. Co. v. Goodfellow, 9 Mo. 149; Waln v. Bank of North America, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 73; Brent v. Bank of Washington, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 615, and McDowell v. Bank of Wilmington, 1 Har. (Del.) 27. The same case also reviews under New York act identical in this matter with the national act of 1863, Bank of Attica v. Manufacturers' etc.

3. Acts Ultra Vires—What Acts Not Ultra Vires.—An agreement by a national bank to procure a release of a mortgage held by a third person upon lands on which the bank also had a mortgage, is not ultra vires as foreign to the purposes of the corporation or beyond its powers;¹ and where a national bank, in order to secure its indebtedness, takes possession, by its cashier, of goods under a chattel mortgage and disposes of them, it cannot claim immunity from liability for any surplus remaining after payment in full of its claims, on the ground that its cashier, being an officer of a national bank, exceeded his powers and acted ultra vires.²

Voidable by Government Only.—If a national bank has entered into a contract not authorized by its charter, it is held by the Supreme Court of the United States that the bank cannot repudiate the contract and at the same time retain the fruits of such con-

Bank, 20 N. Y. 501, and Leggett v. Bank of Sing Sing, 24 N. Y. 283, and cites, in regard to the effect of a by-law requiring a transfer of stock to be made on the books of the corporation, Union Bank v. Laird, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 293; Stebbins v. Phoenix F. Ins. Co., 3 Paige (N. Y.) 361; Bank of Attica v. Manufacturers' etc. Bank, 20 N. Y. 512, Vansands v. Middlesex Co. Bank, 26 Conn. 144; Mechanics' Bank v. New Haven etc. R. Co., 13 N. Y. 622; Fisher v. Essex Bank, 5 Gray (Mass.) 373. The Supreme Court of the United States, through MR. JUSTICE STRONG, in the above cited case of Bullard v. Nat. Eagle Bank, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 589; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 93, sustains and follows the prior decision of the same tribunal in First Nat. Bank v. Lanier, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 369; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 70, which is also followed in Evansville Nat. Bank v. Metropolitan Nat. Bank, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 527; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 189. But MR. JUSTICE CLIFFORD dissented for the reasons assigned by him in his opinion in Knight v. Old Nat. Bank, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 429. As the only other federal case of like tenor with that last cited, is In re Dunkerson, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 227, the preponderance of federal authority is clearly against the validity of a by-law of the character in question, and the only antagonism on the authorities so far considered is between the Supreme Courts of Rhode Island and Virginia, respectively. The decision of the Supreme Court of the United States has been followed or recognized as to the lien of a national bank on its own stock, in New York (Conklin v. Second Nat. Bank, 45 N.

Y. 655; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 693). Maine (Hagar v. Union Nat. Bank, 63 Me. 509, making special distinctions). Kentucky (Second Nat. Bank v. National Bank, 10 Bush (Ky.) 367, where a claim under articles of association or by-laws was repudiated), and Minnesota (Nicollet Nat. Bank v. City Bank, 38 Minn. 85; s. c., 8 Am. St. Rep. 643; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 423, where a by-law ran counter to a State law copied from the National Bank act). A like view as to a lien created by a by-law had, prior to the national rulings, been favored in New York, in Rosenback v. Salt Springs Nat. Bank, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 495. In New Jersey it seems to have been considered in one case that a by-law of a national bank is reasonable, and authorized by the act of congress, where it declares that no shares shall be transferred while the holder is indebted to the bank. Young v. Vough, 23 N. J. Eq. 325. But in a subsequent case the court refused to pass upon the question whether a like by-law was legal under the act of congress, and said that the matter must be considered as unsettled in that court. Mattison v. Young, 24 N. J. Eq. 535.

1. McCraith v. National Mohawk Valley Bank, 104 N. Y. 414.

2. Cooper v. First Nat. Bank, 40 Kan. 5. A national bank can take from contractors an assignment of the money due and to become due from a city of the second class on a contract for paving a street, to secure an existing bona fide indebtedness by the contractor to the bank. First Nat. Bank v. Ottawa (Kan. 1890), 23 Pac. Rep. 485.

tract;¹ and in general it is the doctrine of the later cases that various acts of a national bank which are ultra vires, such as the taking of a mortgage upon real estate to secure a contemporaneous loan or future advances, are not void, but merely voidable at the instance of the government.²

Certification of Check, etc.—The provision of the National Bank act prohibiting a national bank from certifying a check, except under certain circumstances, does not render the contract of certification illegal and void, but expressly affirms the validity of such contract, and impliedly limits the penalty for the violation of the provision to a forfeiture of the bank's charter and the winding up of its affairs.³ Nor is a certified check illegal as being in violation of the provision of the National Bank act which forbids national banks to issue any other notes to circulate as money than such as are authorized by the provisions of the act.⁴

Receiving Deposit as Collateral for Contract.—It has been considered that a national bank has power to receive a deposit of money as collateral security for the performance of a contract of sale; but that, even if the undertaking of the bank was ultra vires, yet, as it was not illegal, the bank was estopped from setting up that defence, as it would be a fraud upon the seller to allow it to do so, after he had entered into the contract relying thereon.⁵

Taking Possession of Warehouse as Security.—Where a national bank takes possession of a public warehouse containing grain in store for which warehouse receipts had been issued, and conveyed to it by the owner by deed of trust to secure a debt due to the bank, the bank cannot refuse to redeliver the grain merely because the conducting of a warehouse business is not within its corporate powers.⁶

1. Casey v. La Societi etc., 2 Woods (U. S.) 77; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 285. See also Norton v. Derry Nat. Bank, 61 N. H. 589; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 334; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 568; First Nat. Bank v. Stewart, 107 U. S. 676; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 138; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 96.

2. Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 12; Howard Nat. Bank v. Loomis, 51 Vt. 349; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 424; Warner v. De Witt Co. Nat. Bank, 4 Ill. App. 305; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 222; Wroten v. Armat, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 228; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 426; First Nat. Bank v. Elmore, 52 Iowa 541; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 237; Graham v. National Bank, 32 N. J. Eq. 804; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 293; Thompson v. St. Nicholas Nat. Bank, 113 N. Y. 325; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 663; Gloversville Nat. Bank v. Burr, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 109. See also First Nat. Bank v. Stewart, 107 U. S. 676; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp.

Cas. 138; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 96; Union Nat. Bank v. Roman, 23 S. Car. 339; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 26; Town of Lyons v. Lyons Nat. Bank, 19 Blatchf. (U. S.) 279.

3. Thompson v. St. Nicholas Nat. Bank, 113 N. Y. 325; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 663.

4. Hunt's Appeal, 141 Mass. 515; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 474. See also Merchants' Bank v. State Bank, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 604; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 47. And as to certificates of deposit, Riddle v. First Nat. Bank, 27 Fed. Rep. 503.

The National Bank act does not invalidate an oral or conditional acceptance or promise to pay a check when the drawer has sufficient funds in the bank. National Bank v. National Bank, 7 W. Va. 544.

5. Bushnell v. Chatauqua Nat. Bank, 10 Hun (N. Y.) 378.

6. German Nat. Bank v. Meadowcroft, 95 Ill. 124.

4. Loans Which Are Ultra Vires—Loaning Credit.—It seems to be ultra vires of a national bank to loan its credit for a compensation, and become an accommodation endorser of a promissory note, so as to procure the discounting of the paper of its customers by another bank, thereby evading the restraints imposed by the usury clauses in the National Bank act.¹

Loans in Excess of Prescribed Proportion of Capital Stock.—But loans made to any person by a national bank in excess of one-tenth of its capital stock, though illegal and ultra vires, are not void;² and in an action to recover such loans the defendant cannot interpose the defence that they are in violation of the National Bank act, and not recoverable beyond the proportions specified.³ Nor can such defence be urged to defeat securities given for a loan made by a national bank.⁴

5. Powers Concerning Personal Property—Taking Pledge or Mortgage of Chattels.—The words “loans on personal security,” in the National Bank act, are not used in any such restricted sense as to preclude a national bank from taking a pledge of personal chattels, such as a locomotive;⁵ and so a national bank has implied authority to take, hold, and enforce a chattel mortgage given as security for a previously contracted debt.⁶

Taking Stocks or Bonds as Security.—It is also within the incidental powers of a national bank to accept bonds as collateral se-

1. Groversville Nat. Bank v. Wells, 79 N. Y. 498; reversing 15 Hun (N. Y.) 51, or 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 333. But compare Groversville Nat. Bank v. Burr, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 109. A national bank may lend money on personal security, but not its credit. Seligman v. Charlottesville Nat. Bank, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 647; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 195, 198. See also Johnston v. Charlottesville Nat. Bank, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 657; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 199.

2. Gold Min. Co. v. National Bank, 96 U. S. 640; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 151; Union Gold Min. Co. v. Rocky Mountain Nat. Bank, 1 Colo. 531. See reference in Bowditch v. New England Mut. L. Ins. Co., 141 Mass. 292.

3. Gold Min. Co. v. National Bank, 96 U. S. 640; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 151, 152. See also to like effect O'Hare v. Second Nat. Bank, 77 Pa. St. 96; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 869; Bly v. Second Nat. Bank, 79 Pa. St. 453; Shoemaker v. Nat. Mechanics' Bank, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 416; s. c., 1 Hughes (U. S.) 101; Stewart v. Nat. Union Bank, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 424; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 175, 177; Shoemaker v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 31 Md. 396; s. c., 100 Am. Dec. 73; Corcoran v. Batchelder, 147 Mass. 541; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 491. Compare, as to injunction against bank, Elder v. First Nat. Bank, 12 Kan. 238; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 488. And as to taking of notes from State bank, Allen v. First Nat. Bank, 23 Ohio St. 97; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 828.

4. Mills Co. Nat. Bank v. Perry, 72 Iowa 15; s. c., 2 Am. St. Rep. 228. See also Wyman v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 29 Fed. Rep. 734.

5. Pittsburgh Locomotive Works v. State Nat. Bank, 2 Cent. L. J. 692; s. c., 21 Int. Rev. Rec. 349; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 315. Nor is it beyond the power of a national bank to take a warehouse receipt as collateral security for the note of a borrower. Cleveland v. Shoeman, 40 Ohio St. 176; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 140, 144; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 701. As to right to take note of third party, and other collaterals, see Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Mears, 8 Biss. (U. S.) 158; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 353. As to pledge of gold certificates, see Merchants' Bank v. State Bank, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 604; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 47.

6. Spofford v. First Nat. Bank, 37 Iowa 181; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 68; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 486. See also Gaar

curity for existing debts and for future loans and discounts;¹ and a national bank does not exceed its powers by taking stock in a corporation as security for a loan;² nor is the transfer to a national bank, as security for a loan, of stock of a corporation whose property consists of real estate invalid as a loan upon mortgage security, which it is incompetent for a national bank to make;³ and even where a national bank makes a loan upon the security of shares of its own stock, such as it is prohibited from making, yet if the prohibition can be urged against the validity of the transaction by any one except the government, this can only be done before the contract is executed.⁴

Taking Personal Property in Payment for Real Estate.—So, conceding that national banks have no power to engage generally in buying and selling personal property, nevertheless they have the power to sell real estate which they have lawfully acquired, and to take personal property in payment therefor.⁵

Holding Dividends as Security for Stockholder's Debt.—A national bank has also the right to hold a cash dividend as pledged for the indebtedness of the shareholder to the bank, despite the restrictions relating to lien on its own stock, etc.⁶

6. Powers Concerning Negotiable Instruments, Stocks, etc.—Purchase of Negotiable Paper.—In the business of banking, the purchasing and discounting of paper is only “a mode of loaning money,”⁷ and a national bank is authorized thus to acquire not only notes and bills⁸ which are perfect and available in the hands of the borrower,⁹ but also his own paper made directly to the bank. Nor, according to the latest view of the matter, is it material whether the transaction through which the bank acquires notes is a purchase of the notes in the ordinary sense of the word “pur-

v. First Nat. Bank, 20 Ill. App. 611.

1. Third Nat. Bank v. Boyd, 44 Md. 47; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 545.

2. Canfield v. State Nat. Bank, reported in 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 312, 314, as from 1 N. W. Rep. 173. See also Shoemaker v. Nat. Mechanics' Bank, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 416; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 169; National Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628.

3. Baldwin v. Canfield, 26 Minn. 43; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 278.

4. First Nat. Bank v. Stewart, 107 U. S. 676; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 138, 139; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 96; relied upon, as to its principle, in Thompson v. St. Nicholas Nat. Bank, 113 N. Y. 325; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 663.

5. First Nat. Bank v. Reno, 73 Iowa 145.

6. Hagar v. Union Nat. Bank, 63 Me. 509.

7. See Niagara Co. Bank v. Baker, 15 Ohio St. 68; Fleckner v. Bank of United States, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 338; National Bank v. Johnson, 104 U. S. 271; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 25; First Nat. Bank v. Sherburne, 14 Ill. App. 566.

8. As to right to take railway aid coupons, see First Nat. Bank v. Town of Bennington, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 53; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 437, 438; Town of Lyons v. Lyons Nat. Bank, 19 Blatchf. (U. S.) 279.

9. A national bank cannot make a loan upon a note containing a stipulation for attorney's fees. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Levier, 14 Fed. Rep. 662; Smith v. Exchange Bank, 26 Ohio St. 141; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 836, 840. Compare like view as to former United States bank in Fleckner v. Bank of United States, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 338, 351. The power to buy a draft with bill of lading attached is sustained in chase," or a discount of the notes¹ as a loan to the payee,² for the plea of ultra vires is not available to defeat a recovery by a national bank upon negotiable paper purchased by it, even though the bank acquired such paper not as security but as its absolute property.³

Dealing in Stocks, etc.—Though dealing in stocks by national banks is not expressly prohibited, yet such a prohibition is implied from the failure to grant the power;⁴ and so the selling of railroad bonds on commission is not within the authorized business of a national bank, and therefore it may set up the defence of ultra vires to escape liability for any false representations of its teller which might have induced the purchase of such bonds.⁵ But there may be instances where the bank is precluded from setting up the defence of ultra vires, as where it refuses to carry out its agreement to resell bonds to the vendor at the same price or Union Nat. Bank v. Rowan, 23 S. Car. 339; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 26; and the power to buy a check in First Nat. Bank v. Harris, 108 Mass. 514.

1. As to when it is a necessary part of an agreement that the bank, on discounting a draft, should become the owner of it, see Mechanics' Nat. Bank v. Robins, 134 Mass. 331; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 244. A savings bank empowered to discount notes has power to purchase notes. Pope v. Capitol Bank, 20 Kan. 440; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 183, 187-89; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 238, 243-44.

2. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Hanson, 33 Minn. 40; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 5; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 509. This conclusion is also supported by First Nat. Bank v. Sherburne, 14 Ill. App. 566. See to like effect as to State banks, Atlantic State Bank v. Lavery, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 36. Contra, formerly First Nat. Bank v. Pierson, 24 Minn. 140; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 341; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 637; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 506 (distinguishing Smith v. Exchange Bank, 26 Ohio St. 141; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 836, and relying upon Farmers' etc. Bank v. Baldwin, 23 Minn. 198; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 683). Also Lazear v. Nat. Union Bank, 52 Md. 78, 123; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 355; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 261.

3. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Hanson, 33 Minn. 40; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 5; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 509, 510, overruling First Nat. Bank v. Pierson, 24 Minn. 140; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 341; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 637; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 506. Upon the authority of Union

Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621, s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 12, and National Bank v. Whitney, 103 U. S. 99; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 5. It has been held in Massachusetts that a national bank which purchases a promissory note from an endorser may maintain an action thereon in its own name against a prior party thereto, without regard to the question whether the purchase was ultra vires or was one which the bank was authorized by law to make. Nat. Pemberton Bank v. Porter, 125 Mass. 333; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 235; distinguishing, as decided under a special statute, Farmers' etc. Bank v. Baldwin, 23 Minn. 198; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 683, and First Nat. Bank v. Pierson, 24 Minn. 140; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 637; and itself followed in Atlas Nat. Bank v. Savery, 127 Mass. 75; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 273. The question of the power of a national bank to purchase promissory notes was held not to arise in Attleborough Nat. Bank v. Rogers, 125 Mass. 339. But its authority to buy checks, whether payable to bearer or to order, was distinctly upheld in First Nat. Bank v. Harris, 108 Mass. 514.

4. First Nat. Bank v. Nat. Exch. Bank, 92 U. S. 122; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 124. See also First Nat. Bank v. Hoch, 89 Pa. St. 324; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 769; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 375. But see contra, as to power to sell stocks, Williams v. Mason, 12 Hun (N. Y.) 97.

5. Weckler v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Md. 581; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 95; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 533; relying upon analogy of Talmage v. Pell, 7 N. Y. 328.

less;¹ and so the taking of stocks may be justified when it is done in compromising a debt due the bank or a claim against it.² The authority of national banks to exchange or deal in government bonds or securities seems to be sustained by some of the decisions;³ but the question appears to be interwoven with that concerning the power to receive special deposits in general.⁴

7. Powers Concerning Real Estate—To Take Mortgage of Real Estate.—A national banking association may purchase, hold and convey real estate only for purposes specified in the National Bank act;⁵ and these give such authority as to real estate mortgaged to it in good faith by way of security for debts previously contracted.⁶ Accordingly, in general, the loaning of money upon mortgage or other real estate security is ultra vires, as being forbidden by the act of congress;⁷ but this does not apply to the case where a bank has in good faith taken a mortgage by way of security for a previously existing debt, which comes within one of the express exceptions in the act;⁸ though a mortgage of real estate to a national bank to secure a contemporaneous⁹ or fu-

1. Logan Co. Nat. Bank v. Townsend (Ky. 1887), 3 S. W. Rep. 122; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 448.

2. First Nat. Bank v. National Exch. Bank, 92 U. S. 122; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 124; relying upon Fleckner v. Bank of United States, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 351.

3. Caldwell v. Nat. Mohawk Valley Bank, 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 333; Van Leuven v. First Nat. Bank, 54 N. Y. 671; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 724; Leach v. Hale, 31 Iowa 69; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 112; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 466; Yerkes v. National Bank, 69 N. Y. 382; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 208; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 296.

4. See First Nat. Bank v. Ocean Nat. Bank, 60 N. Y. 278; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 728; commenting on Van Leuven v. First Nat. Bank, just cited. But compare Yerkes v. National Bank, just cited.

5. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5137.

6. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5137.

7. Fowler v. Scully, 72 Pa. St. 456; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 854; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 699; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Mears, 8 Biss. (U. S.) 158; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 353, 355; Crocker v. Whitney, 71 N. Y. 161; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 745. But compare Wroten v. Armat, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 228; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 426.

8. Woods v. People's Nat. Bank, 83 Pa. St. 57; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 888; Allen v. First Nat. Bank, 23 Ohio St. 97; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 828; Kansas

Valley Nat. Bank v. Rowell, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 371; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 264; Worcester Nat. Bank v. Cheeney, 87 Ill. 602; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 227; Reynolds v. Crawfordsville First Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 405; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 131; Farmers' etc. Nat. Bank v. Wallace, 45 Ohio St. 152. So of deed of trust, Warner v. DeWitt Co. Nat. Bank, 4 Ill. App. 305; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 222.

9. Kansas Valley Nat. Bank v. Rowell, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 371; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 264; Fridley v. Bowen, 87 Ill. 151; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 224. But see Warner v. DeWitt Co. Nat. Bank, 4 Ill. App. 305; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 222, 223. So of a deed of trust, Matthews v. Skinker, 62 Mo. 329; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 425; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 647. But compare Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 12; Thornton v. National Exch. Bank, 71 Mo. 221; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 513. For mortgage held not to have been given as security for a debt concurrently created, see Orms v. Merchants Nat. Bank, 16 Kan. 341; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 490. Compare also First Nat. Bank v. Haire, 36 Iowa 443; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 480; Richards v. Kuntze, 4 Neb. 201; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 652; Upton v. National Bank, 120 Mass. 153; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 618; Howard Nat. Bank v. Loomis, 51 Vt. 349; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 424; Ripley v. Harris, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 199, regarding point as not made.

ture¹ loan is invalid,² or, rather, according to the distinction drawn by the later cases, voidable at the instance of the government.³

To Purchase Real Estate.—The national bank act authorizes a bank established under it to purchase, hold and convey such real estate as it shall purchase under judgments, decrees or mortgages held by it, or to secure debts due it,⁴ and under this provision a national bank may purchase such real estate as may be necessary in order to secure a debt due to it,⁵ although of greater amount than such debt, if the security of the debt is the real object of the purchase;⁶ nor is it forbidden, by either the letter or the spirit of the law, to make a purchase, for such purpose, of real estate which is encumbered;⁷ nor is it material that the title to the land, for which considerably more than the debt is paid, is taken in the name of the president of the bank, if this is done for the use of the bank.⁸ But conveyances to a national bank must for all purposes, according to the later authorities, be regarded as valid until called in question by a direct proceeding instituted for that purpose by the government.⁹

1. Fowler v. Scully, 72 Pa. St. 456; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 854; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 699; Kansas Valley Nat. Bank v. Rowell, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 371; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 264; Crocker v. Whitney, 71 N. Y. 161; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 745.

2. Kansas Valley Nat. Bank v. Rowell, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 371; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 264.

3. Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 12; National Bank v. Whitney, 103 U. S. 99, 100, 103; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 5; Fortier v. New Orleans Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 439; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 140; Howard Nat. Bank v. Loomis, 51 Vt. 349; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 424; Warner v. DeWitt Co. Nat. Bank, 4 Ill. App. 305; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 222. Relating to deed of trust and discrediting authority of Fridley v. Bowen, 87 Ill. 151; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 224 (But compare comments of MULKEY, J., in Penn v. Bornman, 102 Ill. 523); Wroten v. Armat, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 228; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 426; First Nat. Bank v. Elmore, 52 Iowa 541; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 237; Graham v. National Bank, 32 N. J. Eq. 804; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 293; Simons v. First Nat. Bank, 93 N. Y. 269; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 622; Oldham v. Wilmington Bank 85 N. Car. 240; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 688. See also, as to deed of trust, Thornton v. National Exch. Bank, 71 Mo. 221; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 513. And as to transfer of mortgage by re-organized State bank, Scofield v. State Nat. Bank, 9 Neb. 316; s. c., 31 Am. Rep.

412; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 280. Reference to the doctrine is made in Bowditch v. New England Mut. L. Ins. Co., 141 Mass. 292.

4. U. S. Stat. 1864, ch. 106. See Heath v. Second Nat. Bank, 70 Ind. 106; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 406; Wherry v. Hale, 77 Mo. 20; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 521. A national bank which has loaned money on timber land may, to protect itself and collect the debt, purchase the land at foreclosure sale, and cut and sell the timber. Roebeling v. First Nat. Bank, 30 Fed. Rep. 744, 746.

5. See as to acquisition in discharge of debt previously contracted, Turner v. First Nat. Bank, 78 Ind. 19; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 408.

6. Upton v. National Bank, 120 Mass. 153; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 618.

7. Mapes v. Scott, 88 Ill. 352; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 228. See reference to this case in Mapes v. Scott, 94 Ill. 379.

8. Libbey v. Union Nat. Bank, 99 Ill. 622; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 358. As to bank causing conveyance to individual which creates a trust, see Wherry v. Hale, 77 Mo. 20; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 521, 523.

9. Mapes v. Scott, 94 Ill. 380; Reynolds v. Crawfordsville First Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 405; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 131; Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 12; Wherry v. Hale, 77 Mo. 20; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 521. See also Turner v. First Nat. Bank, 78 Ind. 19; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 408.

Acquiring Additional Property as Further Security.—The fact that a national bank, in order to secure a debt, purchases additional property to that mortgaged to it and which it had the right to acquire, does not affect the validity of the transaction, so as to render it assailable by the debtor or by any party except the government;¹ nor is there any reason why such a bank may not thus purchase a prior mortgage,² or take a new mortgage incorporating a note and mortgage against the same party, which it has purchased from a third person.³

Security for Advances.—A loan of money made by a national bank on the security of a mortgage may be enforced; objection to the bank's taking a mortgage lien, as security for future advances, can only be made by the United States.⁴

Power to Sell Real Estate.—There is, in the National Bank act, no restriction upon the power "to convey" real estate; and a national bank may sell its real estate on terms of credit and reserve a mortgage to secure the price.⁵

V. LIABILITIES IN GENERAL—Not Imposed Upon Government.—National banks are private corporations, organized for private gain, and managed by officers of their own selection, so that they constitute no part of the government; and though the comptroller of the currency has supervisory powers over them, yet this does not involve the government in any liability for their acts, except the statute liability for the final redemption of their circulating notes.⁶ Nor does designating a national bank as a national depository of public moneys⁷ change the character of its organization, or convert its managers into public officers, or render the government liable for its acts.⁸

For Undertaking of Individual, Dependent on Ratification.—A written promise signed by an individual as commissioner for a national bank, to give stock thereof when it is fully organized, and a designated sum of money when it is in operation, in consideration of expenditures for the institution and services rendered it, is not the contract of the bank upon which it is liable,

1. Reynolds v. Crawfordsville First Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 405; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 131. And see Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 12; National Bank v. Whitney, 103 U. S. 99; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 5; Swope v. Leffingwell, 105 U. S. 3.

2. Holmes v. Boyd, 90 Ind. 332; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 414.

3. Oldham v. Wilmington Bank, 85 N. Car. 240; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 688.

4. Fortier v. New Orleans Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 439; Nat. Bank v. Whitney, 103 U. S. 99; Winton v. Little, 94 Pa. St. 64; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 725. See also Reynolds v. Bank, 112 U. S. 405.

5. New Orleans Nat. Bank v. Raymond, 29 La. An. 355; s. c., 29 Am. Rep. 335.

6. Branch v. United States, 12 Ct. of Cl. 281. As to limits of doctrine exempting national banks from State legislation as instrumentalities of the federal government. see First Nat. Bank v. Com., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 353, 361.

7. As is done under the National Bank act, § 45; 13 Stat. at Large 113; Rev. Stat. U. S., § 5153.

8. Branch v. United States, 12 Ct. of Cl. 28.

unless so made by the bank, by its approval and adoption after its organization.¹

Where Reorganized Out of State Bank.—A State bank does not relieve itself from any liabilities by reorganizing as a national bank;² and accordingly the national bank is properly sued for a reward offered while the bank was a State institution.³

Liability for Losses by Theft.—A national bank is liable for the loss of United States bonds, where, while they were in its hands, its cashier agreed to exchange them for registered bonds, but the bank neglected to do so, and the bonds were stolen;⁴ but such a bank is not liable for the theft by an absconding teller of bonds deposited by a gratuitous bailee, where the teller's accounts turned out to be false, and it appeared that he had been abstracting the funds of the bank for two years, merely because the bank failed to examine his accounts.⁵

VI. INTEREST AND USURY—1. Interest in General—State Rate Followed.—National banks, under the liberal construction given to the act of congress, may take the rate of interest allowed by the State to lenders generally,⁶ and may take a higher rate, if State banks of issue are authorized by the laws of the State to reserve more,⁷ whether such authorization be by general statute or by special charter.⁸

1. McDonough v. Bank of Houston, 34 Tex. 309.

2. Coffey v. National Bank, 46 Mo. 140; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 488. See also, Kelsey v. National Bank, 69 Pa. St. 426; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 847. As to liability for debts of transformed bank, see Thorpe v. Wegfarth, 56 Pa. St. 82; s. c., 93 Am. Dec. 789. Consult further as to status of reorganized bank, City Nat. Bank v. Phelps, 97 N. Y. 44; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 513; Scofield v. State Nat. Bank, 9 Neb. 316; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 412; Grocers' Nat. Bank v. Clark, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 26.

3. Kelsey v. National Bank, 69 Pa. St. 426; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 847.

4. Yerkes v. National Bank, 69 N. Y. 382; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 208. See also as to liability of bank for cashier's hypothecation of stocks entrusted for sale by a distant customer, Williamson v. Mason, 12 Hun (N. Y.) 97, 100.

5. Scott v. National Bank, 72 Pa. St. 471; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 864.

6. Tiffany v. National Bank, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 409; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 90, construing Nat. Bank act, § 30; U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5197; Wiley v. Starbuck, 44 Ind. 298; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 436. Accordingly, in California, national banks may charge and receive such rates of interest as may be agreed upon. Hines v. Marmolejo, 60 Cal. 229; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 338, noted in Farmers' Nat. Gold Bank v. Stover, 60 Cal. 387, 393. To the same effect is National Bank v. Bruhn, 64 Tex. 571; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 771.

7. Tiffany v. National Bank, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 409, 411; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 90.

See also National Bank v. Johnson, 104 U. S. 271; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 25; and, generally, Farmers' etc. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 117; Wiley v. Starbuck, 44 Ind. 298; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 436.

But in Ohio it is held that if the rate allowed for banks of issue is lower than that for other persons, the former rate must be followed. Shunk v. First Nat. Bank, 22 Ohio St. 508; s. c., 10 Am. Rep. 762; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 820, distinguishing the federal case of Parks v. First Nat. Bank, cited from Banker's Mag. for Dec., 1870, p. 416 (which we do not find regularly reported). Compare also as to higher rate for a few banks of issue, Duncan v. First Nat. Bank, 11 Bank. Mag. 787; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 360, 361.

8. First Nat. Bank v. Duncan, 24 Int. Rev. Rec. 206 (apparently reversing case between same parties in 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 360). But the charter must be put

Special State Rate.—Where, by the statute law of a State, parties are allowed to contract for a rate of interest higher than the ordinary legal rate, if such contract be evidenced by a memorandum in writing, signed by the party to be charged, a national bank located in the State may, without liability for usury, discount notes and charge such higher rate in advance without other memorandum than the notes.¹ But it has been held, though it may well be doubted if such is the law, that national banks are not authorized to take the rate of interest allowed by special statutes of a State to a few banks of issue, where such rate is higher than that allowed to banks of issue generally.²

Addition of Current Rate of Exchange.—It is not usurious but expressly allowable for a national bank to receive the current rate of exchange, as well as legal interest, on the discounting of a draft; and to enforce a forfeiture against the bank for excessive interest, it must affirmatively appear that the exchange charged exceeded the current rate.³

Legal Rate Where No State Rate.—If no rate of interest is fixed by the laws of the State wherein the national bank is located, it is provided by the act of congress that seven per cent. is the highest limit of the allowed rate.⁴ And this rule applies, so as to make a higher rate of interest a cause of forfeiture, where a State statute forbids a corporation to interpose the defence of usury, and this statute has been construed to the effect that the rate of interest which a corporation may pay is not fixed or limited.⁵

State Usury Laws Superseded.—It is within the constitutional power of congress to fix the rate of interest which a national bank might take upon a loan of money, and to determine the penalty to be imposed for taking a greater rate;⁶ and this power, when exercised, is exclusive of State legislation,⁷ so that the provisions of the national bank act imposing penalties upon national in proof, or judicial notice will not be taken of the banking institution. First Nat. Bank v. Gruber, 86 Pa. Stat. 468; s. c., with title reversed, 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 382, 386-87.

Usury in General.—Concerning conflict of State laws as to usury, see National Bank v. Smoot, 2 McArthur (U. S.) 371; Hackettstown Nat. Bank v. Rea, 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 175. A surety cannot avail himself of usury paid by his principal. Lamoille Co. Nat. Bank v. Bingham, 50 Vt. 105; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 105. As to requisites of answer setting up usury, see National Bank v. Orcutt, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 256, 257.

1. Newell v. National Bank, 12 Bush (Ky.) 57, 60; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 501. As to effect of a like statute in Indiana, see Wiley v. Starbuck, 44 Ind. 298; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 436.

2. Duncan v. First Nat. Bank, 11 Bank. Mag. 787; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 360. But see First Nat. Bank v. Tinstman, 36 Leg. Int. 182; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 182, and compare Lebanon Nat. Bank v. Karmany, 98 Pa. St. 65; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 746.

3. Wheeler v. National Bank, 96 U. S. 268; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 9.

4. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5197.

5. In re Wild, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 243; s. c., 1 National Bank Cas. 246.

6. Central Nat. Bank v. Pratt, 115 Mass. 539; s. c., 15 Am. Rep. 138; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 595.

7. Central Nat. Bank v. Pratt, as just cited; Wiley v. Starbuck, 44 Ind. 298; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 436; Higley v. First Nat. Bank, 26 Ohio St. 75; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 833.

banks for taking usury, supersede the State laws upon that subject.¹

2. Penalty for Taking Excessive Interest—Only Penalty Prescribed.—Under the national bank act the only penalty for the taking of usurious interest is the forfeiture of all interest stipulated for, and, where the interest has been paid, the recovery back of twice the amount of such interest;² and the act does not declare void the contract under which the usurious interest is paid.³

Jurisdiction of State Courts.—The decided weight of the more recent decisions is in favor of sustaining the jurisdiction of the State courts in actions against national banks for penalties and forfeitures for exacting and receiving usurious interest.⁴

Forfeiture of Entire Interest.—The provision of the federal statute to the effect that the reserving, etc., of usury upon a note shall be held a forfeiture of the entire interest which the note carries with it, applies to a discount of the note at a usurious rate;⁵ and also to interest accruing by law upon nonpayment after maturity.⁶ The forfeiture, under the later phraseology of the act, is of the interest stipulated for, but not of the debt itself;⁷ and it is the doctrine of the authorities in general that this

1. Davis v. Randall, 115 Mass. 547; s. c., 15 Am. Rep. 146; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 600; First Nat. Bank v. Childs, 133 Mass. 248; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 509; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 469; Farmers' etc. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 117; First Nat. Bank v. Childs, 130 Mass. 519; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 474; Hambricht v. Cleveland Nat. Bank, 3 Lea (U. S.) 40; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 629; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 419, overruling Steadman v. Redfield, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 337.

See also First Nat. Bank v. Garlinghouse, 22 Ohio St. 492; s. c., 10 Am. Rep. 751; Merchants' etc. Nat. Bank v. Myers, 74 N. Car. 514.

Contra, see First Nat. Bank v. Lamb, 50 N. Y. 95; s. c., 10 Am. Rep. 438, overruled with Farmers' Bank v. Hale, 59 N. Y. 53, in Hintermister v. First Nat. Bank, 64 N. Y. 212; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 741.

Compare also In re Wild, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 243; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 246.

2. Farmers' etc. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 117; Barnet v. Muncie Nat. Bank, 98 U. S. 555; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 18 (discussed in First Nat. Bank v. Childs, 133 Mass. 248; s. c. 43 Am. Rep. 509); Lebanon Nat. Bank v. Karmany, 98 Pa. St. 65; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 746.

See also Schuyler Nat. Bank v. Bulong, 24 Neb. 825; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 561; Merchants' etc. Nat. Bank v.

Myers, 74 N. Car. 514; Wiley v. Starbuck, 44 Ind. 298; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 436; National Bank v. Eyre, 52 Iowa 114; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 234; National Exch. Bank v. Moore, 2 Bond (U. S.) 170; National Bank v. Davis, 8 Biss. (U. S.) 100; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 350; Hill v. National Bank, 15 Fed. Rep. 432. The provisions of the act of 1864 are quoted in Hade v. McVay, 31 Ohio St. 231; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 353.

3. Oates v. First Nat. Bank, 100 U. S. 239; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 35. See also Lazar v. National Union Bank, 52 Md. 78; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 355; and as to fraud on creditors, Appeal of Second Nat. Bank, 96 Pa. St. 460; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 739.

4. SNYDER, J., in Lynch v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 22 W. Va. 554; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 520. The authorities upon this subject will be given later in discussing the forfeiture and penalty prescribed by the act of congress.

5. National Bank v. Lewis, 81 N. Y. 15; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 587.

6. Alves v. Henderson Nat. Bank (Ky. 1888), 9 S. W. Rep. 504; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 452; First Nat. Bank v. Stauffer, 1 Fed. Rep. 187; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 178.

7. Farmers' etc. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 117; First Nat. Bank v. Garlinghouse, 22 Ohio St. 492; s. c., 10 Am. Rep. 751.

forfeiture, relating only to interest reserved and not to that received, refers to the enforcement of the contract by judicial process, in which case the ground of forfeiture may be set up as a defence and the bank can recover only the sum actually loaned or advanced without any interest at all;¹ but the later view holds that the forfeiture is not available by way of set-off or counterclaim to an action on the note;² nor, in Pennsylvania, where there is a series of renewal notes, bearing usurious interest, given for the continuation of the same original loan or advance, is the defendant, sued upon one of them, entitled to defalk the usurious interest on another which is not in suit;³ and in Ohio the penalty for receiving usurious interest on other and independent loans is also held not available as a set-off.⁴ The party with whom the bank had the usurious transaction is the party to whom the forfeiture of interest is to be adjudged, and the rights and liabilities of other parties are not affected.⁵ The forfeiture of the interest can be invoked, according to the great preponderance of authority, in an action in the State court, as well as in the United States court;⁶ and the bank will be charged with the knowledge

National Exch. Bank v. Moore, 2 Bond (U. S.) 170; Wiley v. Starbuck, 44 Ind. 298; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 436, merely quoting this point at p. 445; Malone v. Falls, noted in report of Cheek v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 618 (which does not pass upon question); Hade v. McVay, 31 Ohio St. 231; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 353; Bank of Cadiz v. Slemmons, 34 Ohio St. 142; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 364; SHARSWOOD, J., in Overholt v. National Bank, 82 Pa. St. 490; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 883; Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Leming, 8 Int. Rev. Rec. 132; National Bank v. Davis, 8 Biss. (U. S.) 100; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 350; First Nat. Bank v. Gish, 72 Pa. St. 13.

1. SHARSWOOD, J., in Brown v. Second Nat. Bank, 72 Pa. St. 209; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 849. See also Overholt v. National Bank, 82 Pa. St. 490; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 883; Lucas v. Government Nat. Bank, 78 Pa. St. 228; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 17; Third Nat. Bank v. Miller, 90 Pa. St. 241; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 378; Guthrie v. Reid, 107 Pa. St. 251; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 751; First Nat. Bank v. Childs, 130 Mass. 519, 522; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 474; Hintermister v. First Nat. Bank, 64 N. Y. 212; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 741.

2. National Bank v. Lewis, 81 N. Y. 15; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 588; overruling on this point National Bank v. Lewis, 75 N. Y. 516; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank

Cas. 305; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 484. See also Barnet v. Muncie Nat. Bank, 98 U. S. 555; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 18; First Nat. Bank v. Gruber, 91 Pa. St. 377; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 395; First Nat. Bank v. Childs, 133 Mass. 248; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 509.

3. Overholt v. National Bank, 82 Pa. St. 490; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 883, distinguishing Brown v. Second Nat. Bank, 72 Pa. St. 209; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 849, and Lucas v. Government Nat. Bank, 78 Pa. St. 228; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 17.

4. Hade v. McVay, 31 Ohio St. 231; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 353.

5. Smith v. Exchange Bank, 26 Ohio St. 141; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 836. See also Lazier v. Nat. Union Bank, 53 Md. 78; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 355. But compare Guthrie v. Reid, 107 Pa. St. 251; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 751.

6. First Nat. Bank v. Childs, 130 Mass. 519; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 474; Pickett v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 32 Ark. 346; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 209; Lynch v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 22 W. Va. 554; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 520. See also National Bank v. Eyre, 52 Iowa 114; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 234. Contra, Newell v. National Bank, 12 Bush (Ky.) 37; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 501. As to what constitutes usurious transactions so as to be a subject of forfeiture, and who may set up the usury, see Pickett v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 32 Ark. 346; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 209.

of its president.¹

Recovery of Double Interest.—It is almost uniformly held that in an action against a national bank which has received usurious interest for twice the interest paid, the recovery is of twice the entire interest paid and not merely of double the excess of interest over the legal rate,² and it is now quite as well settled that a claim for such double interest cannot be made by way of set-off or counter-claim to an action brought by the national bank,³ but that the remedy given by the statute is a penal suit, and that redress can be had in no other mode or form of procedure,⁴ nor does a bill in equity lie to recover usury against a national bank pursuant to a State law.⁵ The person paying usurious interest may recover twice its amount, although the principal is not paid,⁶ and the bank cannot set off a judgment held by it against the plaintiff,⁷ nor can it successfully defend against a party who obtains from it, by endorsement, a discount of paper of other parties, even though such transaction would not be usurious, as between natural persons in the State in which the bank is located.⁸ It is necessary to allege in the petition that the act was knowingly done.⁹

3. Action to Recover Double Interest—Who May Bring.—Not

1. Newport Nat. Bank v. Tweed, 4 Houst. (Del.) 225.

2. Crocker v. First Nat. Bank, 4 Dill. (U. S.) 358; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 317; National Bank v. Davis, 8 Biss. (U. S.) 100; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 310; Hill v. National Bank, 15 Fed. Rep. 432; Lebanon Nat. Bank v. Karmany, 98 Pa. St. 65; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 746; National Bank v. Trimble, 40 Ohio St. 629; Schuyler Nat. Bank v. Bullong, 24 Neb. 825; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 561. Contra, Hintermister v. First Nat. Bank, 64 N. Y. 212; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 741. There was a recovery of twice the excess only—though the point is not discussed, in Johnson v. National Bank, 74 N. Y. 329; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 302; affirmed in National Bank v. Johnson, 104 U. S. 271; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 25.

3. Barnet v. Muncie Nat. Bank, 98 U. S. 555; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 18; Ellis v. First Nat. Bank, 11 Ill. App. 275; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 378; First Nat. Bank v. Gruber, 91 Pa. St. 377; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 395; National Bank v. Dushane, 96 Pa. St. 340; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 739 (overruling in this regard Lucas v. Government Nat. Bank, 78 Pa. St. 228; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 17, and Overholt v. National Bank, 82 Pa. St. 490; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 883); First Nat. Bank v. Childs, 133 Mass. 248; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 509; Old- ham v. Wilmington Bank, 85 N. Car. 240; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 688; Fraker v. Cullum, 24 Kan. 679.

4. Barnet v. Muncie Nat. Bank, 98 U. S. 555; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 18. See also Oldham v. Wilmington Bank, 85 N. Car. 240; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 688.

5. Hambright v. Cleveland Nat. Bank, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 40; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 629, overruling Steadman v. Redfield, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 337, and followed in Barrett v. National Bank, 85 Tenn. 426. As to want of standing in court of equity before waiver of penalty, see Oldham v. Wilmington Bank, 85 N. Car. 240; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 688.

6. Lebanon Nat. Bank v. Karmany, 98 Pa. St. 65; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 746; Monongahela Nat. Bank v. Overholt, 96 Pa. St. 327; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 735; Stout v. Ennis Nat. Bank, 69 Tex. 384.

7. Lebanon Nat. Bank v. Karmany, 98 Pa. St. 65; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 746. As to agreement constituting good defence to action, see Morehouse v. Second Nat. Bank, 98 N. Y. 503; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 631; reversing 30 Hun (N. Y.) 628.

8. National Bank v. Johnson, 104 U. S. 271; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 25.

9. Schuyler Nat. Bank v. Bullong, 24 Neb. 821; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 558.

only may the person paying the interest bring suit to recover double the amount paid, but also his legal representatives, such as an assignee in bankruptcy of the borrower,¹ or the receiver of an insolvent national bank,² but a judgment creditor of the borrower cannot maintain such an action, as he is in no sense the debtor's legal representative.³

Jurisdiction of State Courts.—State courts, according to the view generally maintained, have jurisdiction in actions against national banks to recover back the penalty imposed upon such banks for taking usurious interest.⁴

Time to Commence.—The allowance of a recovery of double interest, under the national bank act, is subject to the proviso that the action be commenced within two years from the time the usurious transaction occurred.⁵

When Limitation Begins to Run.—This limitation of two years, within which an action for such penalty must be brought, commences to run from the actual payment of the usury,⁶ and each payment of illegal interest must be regarded as a "transaction" within the intent of the statute, so that the limitation begins to run from the time such payment is actually made, and so on for each successive payment on renewals of the same loan;⁷ but it has been held that where the usurious interest is reserved by way of discount, the period of limitation does not begin to run until

1. Crocker v. First Nat. Bank, 4 Dill. (U. S.) 358; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 317; Wright v. First Nat. Bank, 8 Biss. (U. S.) 243; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 138; National Bank v. Trimble, 40 Ohio St. 629; Monongahela Nat. Bank v. Overholt, 96 Pa. St. 327, 330; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 735, 737.

2. Barbour v. National Exch. Bank, 45 Ohio St. 133; s. c., 17 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 134.

3. Barrett v. National Bank, 85 Tenn. 426.

4. Lebanon Nat. Bank v. Karmany, 98 Pa. St. 65; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 746; Gruber v. First Nat. Bank, 87 Pa. St. 465; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 382; Bletz v. Columbia Nat. Bank, 87 Pa. St. 87; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 343; Dow v. Irasburgh Nat. Bank, 50 Vt. 112; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 493, drawing distinction that action brought only for excess over illegal interest. Ordway v. Central Nat. Bank, 47 Md. 217; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 455; Lynch v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 22 W. Va. 554; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 520; Hade v. McVay, 31 Ohio St. 231; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 353; Kinser v. Farmers' Nat. Bank, 58 Iowa 728; Pickett v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 32 Ark. 346; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 209; Schuyler Nat. Bank v.

Bullong, 24 Neb. 825; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 561; Schuyler Nat. Bank v. Bollong, 24 Neb. 821; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 558; First Nat. Bank v. Overman, 22 Neb. 116; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 556. Contra, Newell v. National Bank, 12 Bush (Ky.) 57; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 501. Compare Missouri R. Tel. Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 74 Ill. 217; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 401.

5. Higley v. First Nat. Bank, 26 Ohio St. 75; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 833; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 759; National Bank v. Davis, 8 Biss. (U. S.) 100; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 350. See also Nat. State Bank v. Boylan, 2 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 216; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 798.

6. Brown v. Second Nat. Bank, 72 Pa. St. 209; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 849, 853; Stephens v. Monongahela Nat. Bank, 88 Pa. St. 157; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 438; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 398; Shinkle v. First Nat. Bank, 22 Ohio St. 516; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 824, 828; Hintermister v. First Nat. Bank, 64 N. Y. 212; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 741, 744.

7. Lynch v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 22 W. Va. 554; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 520. See also Hintermister v. First Nat. Bank, 64 N. Y. 212; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 741.

the principal has been paid or a judgment entered for the full amount thereof.¹

4. Usurious Interest on Series of Renewal Notes—Credit for Interest Paid from Beginning.—It is the doctrine declared by various authorities that where there has been a series of renewal notes given for the continuation of the same original loan, a taint of usury in the first transaction follows down through the whole,² and in an action by a national bank, on the last of the series, the borrower is entitled to credit for all the interest he has paid from the beginning.³

No Set-Off of Interest on Prior Notes.—But later cases hold that usurious interest paid a national bank on successive renewals of a series of notes cannot be set-off in an action by the bank on the last of them.⁴

Renewal Without Additional Usury.—It is also settled⁵ that the receipt of usurious interest on a note by a national bank works a forfeiture of the interest accruing after the maturity of the note as well as before maturity,⁶ and that such forfeiture and usury are not purged by settlements and renewal notes without additional usury.⁷

Limitation Inapplicable to Defence of Usury.—Nor does the limitation of two years, provided by the statute for the recovery of forfeitures for usury, apply to the defence of usury.⁸

1. Duncan v. First Nat. Bank, 11 Bank. Mag. 787; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 360. But see against any limitation in such cases First Nat. Bank v. Childs, 133 Mass. 248; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 509; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 469.

2. See Farmers' & Mechanics' Bank v. Hoagland, 7 Fed. Rep. 159, 161.

3. SNYDER, J., in Lynch v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 22 W. Va. 554; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 520; Cake v. First Nat. Bank, 86 Pa. St. 303; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 890; Overholt v. National Bank, 82 Pa. St. 490; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 883; Stephens v. Monongahela Nat. Bank, 88 Pa. St. 157; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 438; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 398. See also National Bank v. Lewis, 75 N. Y. 516; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 305; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 484; Moniteau Nat. Bank v. Miller, 73 Mo. 187; National Bank v. Davis, 8 Biss. (U. S.) 100; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 350.

4. Driesbach v. National Bank, 104 U. S. 52; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 19; Barnet v. Muncie Nat. Bank, 98 U. S. 555; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 18; Farmers' etc. Bank v. Hoagland, 7 Fed. Rep. 159, 161; National Exch. Bank v. Boylen, 26 W. Va. 554; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 113; First Nat. Bank v. Childs, 133 Mass. 248; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 509;

s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 469; National Bank v. Lewis, 81 N. Y. 15; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 587; modifying same case in 75 N. Y. 516, or 31 Am. Rep. 484, or 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 305; National Bank v. Dushane, 96 Pa. St. 340; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 739; First Nat. Bank v. Gruber, 91 Pa. St. 377; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 395 (which last two cases must be regarded as overruling Overholt v. National Bank, 82 Pa. St. 490; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 883); Oldham v. Wilmington Bank, 85 N. Car. 240; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 688.

5. Lynch v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 22 W. Va. 554; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 520.

6. See Moniteau Nat. Bank v. Miller, 73 Mo. 187, 191.

7. Pickett v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 32 Ark. 346; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 209. See also National Bank v. Eyre, 52 Iowa 114; s. c., on other points, 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 234; Farmers' etc. Bank v. Hoagland, 7 Fed. Rep. 159.

8. Pickett v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 32 Ark. 346; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 209, 215; Lynch v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 22 W. Va. 554; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 520; First Nat. Bank v. Childs, 133 Mass. 248; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 509; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 469; First Nat. Bank v. Childs, 130 Mass. 519; s. c., 39

VII. TAXATION—1. Taxation in General.—Design of Provision Concerning.—The provision of the national bank act, which authorizes the taxation by State authority of the shares of stock in a national bank,¹ was not intended to curtail the power of the States on the subject of taxation, but to protect the corporations formed under its authority from unfriendly discrimination by the States in the exercise of their taxing power,² nor was it intended to prohibit the exemption of particular kinds of property or particular classes of persons.³

Imposed Only Upon Shares.—Ordinarily, the capital of a bank is its property, and is liable to taxation, unless specially exempted;⁴ but the view of the federal legislation, which has been adopted, is, that congress has limited the States to taxation upon the shares in national banks, as distinguished from taxation of the banks eo nomine upon their property or capital.⁵

When Capital Invested in Federal Securities.—And the stockholders of a national bank may be taxed on their stock or shares by the States, although all the capital of the bank be invested in federal securities, provided the taxation does not violate the rule

Am. Rep. 474; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 465; Ellis v. First Nat. Bank, 11 Ill. App. 275; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 378; Moniteau Nat. Bank v. Miller, 73 Mo. 187.

1. See statement of original provision in Frazer v. Siebern, 16 Ohio St. 614, 617; s. c. noted on other points, 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 936. This provision is contained in 13 U. S. Stat. at Large 99; Rev. Stat. U. S., § 5219. Of change therein in Richmond v. Scott, 48 Ind. 568; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 445.

2. Adams v. Nashville, 95 U. S. 19; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 148.

3. Adams v. Nashville, 95 U. S. 19; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 148. Compare Hepburn v. School Directors, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 480, 485; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 213, 116. And see comments on these cases in Boyer v. Boyer, 113 U. S. 689; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 151.

For Internal Revenue Purposes.—National banks were not exempt from examination by internal revenue officers. United States v. Rhawn, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 521; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 358. Interest paid and dividends declared were held taxable in Blake v. National Banks, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 307. See also United States v. Central Nat. Bank, 24 Fed. Rep. 577, reversing 15 Fed. Rep. 222; United States v. State Nat. Bank, 1 McCrary (U. S.) 183.

4. New Orleans v. Peoples' Bank, 27 La. An. 646. See as to doctrine that a tax on shares of bank stock is merely a mode of taxing the property of the bank, Wright v. Stiltz, 27 Ind. 338.

5. St. Louis Nat. Bank v. Papin, 4 Dill. (U. S.) 29; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 326; Collins v. Chicago, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 472; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 191; Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 573, 585-88; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 1, 6-8; Bradley v. People, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 459, 462; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 14; Nat. Commercial Bank v. Mayor etc. of Mobile, 62 Ala. 284; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 15; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 440; Sumner Co. v. Gainesville Bank, 62 Ala. 464; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 30; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 449, 450; Maguire v. Board of Revenue, 71 Ala. 401; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 452. See also Frederick Co. v. Farmers' etc. Nat. Bank, 48 Md. 117; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 252, 253; Stetson v. Bangor, 56 Me. 274; s. c., on other points, 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 520; First Nat. Bank v. Com., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 353; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 34; First Nat. Bank v. Smith, 65 Ill. 44, 47; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 390, 391 (referring to status of Utica v. Churchill, 33 N. Y. 161, and People v. Bradley, 39 Ill. 130, under the rulings of the United States Supreme Court); Carthage v. First Nat. Bank, 71 Mo. 503; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 494; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 279; Hubbard v. Johnson Co., 23 Iowa 130, 144; s. c., noted, 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 932; Morseman v. Younkin, 27 Iowa 350, et seq.; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 460, 461, that it shall not exceed the rate imposed upon the shares of State banks established where the national bank is located;¹ and it is immaterial that the tax is collected from the bank through its cashier, instead of directly from the individual shareholders.²

Real Estate.—Real estate owned by a national bank is taxable by State authority³ in the township where it is situated.⁴

2. Authority of State to Tax—Provision Giving Such Authority.—The National Bank act provides that the shares of stock in national banks may be subjected to taxation under the laws of the State,⁵ with other personal property, subject only to the two restrictions that the taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such State, and that the shares of any national banking association owned by nonresidents of any State shall be taxed in the city or town where the bank is located, and not elsewhere.⁶

Congressional Basis of Authority.—It is said to have been many times held, by the Supreme Court of the United States, that the authority of the States to tax the shares of national bank stock is derived wholly from the act of congress, and that without the consent of congress these bank stock shares could not be taxed et seq.; Smith v. First Nat. Bank, 17 Mich. 479; Curtis v. Ward, 58 Mo. 295; First Nat. Bank v. Meredith, 44 Mo. 500; Lionberger v. Rowse, 43 Mo. 67; Pittsburgh v. First Nat. Bank, 55 Pa. St. 45; McLaughlin v. Chadwell, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 389; Packard v. Lewiston, 55 Me. 456; People v. Nat. Gold Bank, 51 Cal. 508; Salt Lake City Bank v. Golding, 2 Utah 100; Waco Nat. Bank v. Rogers, 51 Tex. 606; Harrison v. Vines, 46 Tex. 15.

1. MILLER, J., in First Nat. Bank v. Com., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 353; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 34. See Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 573, s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 1; People v. Commissioners of Taxes etc., 4 Wall. (U. S.) 244; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 9; Wright v. Stiltz, 27 Ind. 338; reversing Whitney v. Madison, 23 Ind. 331. Consult also Stetson v. Bangor, 56 Me. 274; s. c., on other points, 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 520, 521; Williams v. Weaver, 75 N. Y. 30; Hubbard v. Johnson Co., 23 Iowa 130; First Nat. Bank v. Board of Reviewers, 41 La. An. 181; McLaughlin v. Chadwell, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 389; Exchange Nat. Bank v. Miller, 19 Fed. Rep. 372; First Nat. Bank v. Farwell, 10 Biss. (U. S.) 270; People v. Commissioners of Taxes etc., 8 Hun (N. Y.) 536; Harrison v. Vines, 46 Tex. 15. Compare Salt Lake Bank v. Golding, 2 Utah 1; State v. Hart, 31 N. J. L. 434.

2. First Nat. Bank v. Com., 9 Wall.

(U. S.) 353; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 36.

3. National Commercial Bank v. Mayor etc. of Mobile, 62 Ala. 284; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 15; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 440; Second Nat. Bank v. Caldwell, 13 Fed. Rep. 429, 432. But see Rosenberg v. Weeks, 67 Tex. 578; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 140.

4. Loftin v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 85 Ind. 341. But against assessment of banking-office and lot as real estate eo nomine, see Rice Co. v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 23 Minn. 280, 281; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 629, 630. As to taxing banking-house by tax on shares, see Lackawanna Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 94 Pa. St. 221.

5. This authority was held not exercised in Minnesota in County Treasurer v. Webb, 11 Minn. 500, 502; s. c., noted 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 935.

6. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5219. Almost identical limitations upon the taxation of national bank shares are imposed by the Indiana statute (Rev. Stat. 1881, §§ 6306, 6307). Wasson v. First Nat. Bank, 107 Ind. 206; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 419. The authority of the States to tax national bank shares is treated as settled in Packard v. Lewiston, 55 Me. 456; McIver v. Robinson, 53 Ala. 456; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 372, discussing grounds for not exempting such shares; Hubbard v. Johnson Co., 23 Iowa 130. See also Mintzer v. Montgomery Co., 54 Pa. St. 139.

by State authorities at all;¹ but such authority on the part of the States has sometimes been upheld as existing prior to the enactment of the foregoing provision.²

Congressional Control of Taxation.—The power possessed by the States to tax national banks can be exercised only in the manner and on the conditions prescribed by congress.³

State Bank Converted Into National Bank.—An enabling act is valid which required a State bank to pay all taxes imposed upon it by State laws up to the date of its becoming a national bank.⁴

3. Discrimination as Compared with Other Moneyed Capital.—In General.—National bank shares may not be subjected to State taxation, where a very material relative part of other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens within the same jurisdiction or taxing district is exempted from such taxation.⁵

Credits Are "Moneyed Capital."—And all credits of whatever nature, including the credits from which the taxpayer may deduct his bona fide debts, whether interest bearing or not,⁶ are "moneyed capital" in the sense in which that term is used in the act of congress.⁷

Deduction of Bona Fide Debts.—Accordingly, State statutes

1. ZOLLARS, J., in Wasson v. First Nat. Bank, 107 Ind. 206; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 419. See People v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 57, 61, and cases there cited, which arose prior to the present National Bank act; also Austin v. Aldermen, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 694; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 15; Rich v. Packard Nat. Bank, 138 Mass. 527; Bressler v. Wayne Co., 25 Neb. 468; s. c., 25 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 301; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 564; Maguire v. Board of Revenue, 71 Ala. 401; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 452; State v. Haight, 31 N. J. L. 399; Carthage v. First Nat. Bank, 71 Mo. 508; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 494; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 279; Pittsburgh v. First Nat. Bank, 55 Pa. St. 45; First Nat. Bank v. St. Joseph, 46 Mich. 526. But compare Pollard v. State, 65 Ala. 628; Raffin v. Board of Commrs., 69 N. Car. 498; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 806.

2. Stetson v. City of Bangor, 56 Me. 274, 282-283; s. c., on other points, 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 520, 521.

3. Pollard v. State, 65 Ala. 628; Maguire v. Board of Revenue, 71 Ala. 401; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 452. See also National Commercial Bank v. Mayor etc. of Mobile, 62 Ala. 284; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 15; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 440; Sumter Co. v. Gainesville Nat. Bank, 62 Ala. 464; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 30; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 449; Pittsburgh v. First Nat. Bank, 55 Pa. St.

45; Com. v. Girard Bank, 1 Pearson (Pa.) 323.

4. Manufacturers' etc. Bank v. Com., 72 Pa. St. 70; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 937; affirming 2 Pa. (Pearson's Dec.) 386, 389. Enabling act held to apply only to banks which availed themselves of its provisions. Mintzer v. Montgomery Co., 54 Pa. St. 139; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 936. As to bonus which, after reorganization of State bank, could only be exacted as a tax, which the State had no right to impose, see State v. National Bank, 33 Md. 75; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 527.

5. Boyer v. Boyer, 113 U. S. 689; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 151. What constitutes discrimination as compared with other moneyed capital is discussed in Providence Inst. v. Boston, 101 Mass. 575; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 407; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 578; in Lemley v. Forsyth Co., 85 N. Car. 379; in First Nat. Bank v. Richmond, 25 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 298, note; in Mercantile Nat. Bank v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 121 U. S. 138; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 92; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 243; and in the note to Nat. Newark Banking Co. v. Mayor etc. of Newark, 121 U. S. 163; 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 116, 120.

6. See Hepburn v. School Directors, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 480, 484; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 113, 115.

7. Wasson v. First Nat. Bank, 107 Ind. 206; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 419.

which allow the taxpayer to deduct his debts from such moneyed capital and deny this right to the holders of shares of national bank stock, must yield to the paramount act of congress, which inhibits such discrimination.¹ But where the statute makes no provision for deducting debts from the assessed value of shares of national bank stock, and yet allows such deduction from a portion of other moneyed capital, thereby discriminating against national bank stock, the question whether that discrimination is so material and serious that the owners of such shares of stock are entitled to deduct their debts, notwithstanding the statute, depends upon the amount of the moneyed capital from which the debts of the taxpayer may be deducted, as compared with the whole of the moneyed capital of the State.²

"No Incorporated Banks" Not Standard of Comparison.—Nor does the act of congress, which protects national banks from injurious discrimination, limit the standard of comparison to the "moneyed capital" invested in the "incorporated banks" of a State, but it extends to all moneyed capital "in the hands of individual citizens," and to equalize the shares of national banks as to a part only of that moneyed capital is not to equalize them as to the whole, which is necessary to comply with the federal statute.³

Equality Between State and National Banks Not Required.—Indeed, the provision of the national bank act respecting the taxation of national banks, does not require perfect equality between State and national banks, but only that the system of taxation in a State shall not work a discrimination favorable to its own citizens and corporations and unfavorable to holders of shares in national banks.⁴

Where Shares of Various Companies Escape Taxation.—It seems, furthermore, that a State statute taxing national bank shares is not necessarily subject to the objection that it discriminates unfavorably against national banks, even if there be no law of the State imposing a tax upon shares of transportation, insurance, trading and other miscellaneous companies or upon deposits in savings banks,⁵ for investments in such companies are distin-

1. Wasson v. First Nat. Bank, as just cited. See Bressler v. Wayne Co., 25 Neb. 468, 472; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 564, 567; s. c., 25 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 301. Compare Maguire v. Board of Revenue, 71 Ala. 401, 415; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 452.

2. See concerning extent of discrimination Wasson v. First Nat. Bank, 107 Ind. 206; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 419; Boyer v. Boyer, 113 U. S. 689; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 151; People v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 57; City Nat. Bank v. Paducah, 2 Flip. (U. S.) 61; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 300.

3. First Nat. Bank v. Lucas Co., 25 Fed. Rep. 749.

4. Davenport Nat. Bank v. Davenport Board of Equalization, 123 U. S. 83; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 285; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 154, ruling that there is no case to hold a State statute unconstitutional if the system of taxation created by it does not, on the face of the statute, in the necessary usual or probable effect of the system, discriminate against national banks, and no evidence is given of the intention of the legislature to make such a discrimination, nor any proof that it works an actual and material discrimination.

5. McMahon v. Palmer, 102 N. Y. 176; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 636; s. c., guishable from moneyed capital in the hands of individuals.¹

Uniformity Among Municipalities Not Required.—So the uniformity required has been considered not to be between different municipalities of States or Territories, but to merely exact that wherever the shares of national banks are taxed, whether for State, territorial, county, school, town or city purposes, the assessment should not be at a greater rate than is assessed on other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such State.²

4. Exemption of Portion of Other Moneyed Capital—Partial Exemption for Local Purposes.—It has been held, in effect, that a partial exemption by a State, for local purposes, of moneyed capital in the hands of individuals, does not of itself, and without reference to the aggregate amount of moneyed capital, not so exempted, establish the right to a similar exemption³ in favor of national bank shares held by persons within the same jurisdiction.⁴

Exemption of Relatively Material Part of Other Moneyed Capital.—But national bank shares may not be subjected to local taxation when a very material part, relatively, of other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens within the jurisdiction or taxing district is exempt from such taxation.⁵

Exemption of Mortgages, Judgments, etc.—And where the State of Pennsylvania had exempted from local taxation, for county

55 Am. Rep. 796; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 297.

1. McMahon v. Palmer, just cited. Nor is the New York act declaring that the stockholders in banks organized under the authority of the State, or of the United States, shall be assessed for the value of their share of stock (Act of July 1st, 1882, § 312) inconsistent with the provision of the National Bank act, forbidding the taxes on national bank shares to be higher than those assessed on other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of the State (U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5219), although the assessment rolls showed that taxation was virtually escaped by the securities of life insurance companies, the stock of locally incorporated companies and corporations of extra-State incorporations owned in the State, the stock of trust companies, and the deposits of savings banks. Mercantile Nat. Bank v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 121 U. S. 138, 145; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 92; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 243, fully discussing scope of restriction in National Bank act, and purporting to reconcile rule of decision in Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. (U.

S.) 573; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 1, with that in People v. Commrs., 4 Wall. (U. S.) 244; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 9, and followed in National Newark Banking Co. v. Mayor etc. of Newark, 121 U. S. 163, 165; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 114; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 265. See also Maguire v. Board of Revenue, 71 Ala. 401; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 452; Silver Bow Co. v. Davis, 6 Mont. 306; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 546; First Nat. Bank v. Waters, 19 Blatchf. (U. S.) 242.

2. People v. Moore, 1 Idaho (U. S.) 504.

3. As to tax not amounting to an entire exemption of National Bank shares, see Lackawanna Co. v. First Nat. Bank of Scranton, 94 Pa. St. 221, 224.

4. Hepburn v. School Directors, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 480, 485; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 113. See also McLaughlin v. Chadwell, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 389; s. c., noted, 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 938; Gorgas's Appeal, 79 Pa. St. 149; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 937; Everett's Appeal, 71 Pa. St. 216; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 1937.

5. Boyer v. Boyer, 113 U. S. 689; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 151.

purposes, mortgages, judgments, etc., and imposed such local taxes upon the shares of national bank stock, it was held¹ that the result was a material inequality, and that the bank stock could not be taxed for such local purposes.²

Savings Banks Deposits.—Yet, however much the amount of moneyed capital in the hands of individuals in the shape of deposits in savings banks, which the policy of the State exempts for its own purposes, that exemption cannot affect the validity of the rule for the taxation of shares in national banks, provided they are taxed at a rate not greater than other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens, otherwise subject to taxation.³

5. Deduction of Bona Fide Debts—From "No Credits," etc., Includes National Bank Shares.—In the assessment and taxation of shares of national bank stock, the owners thereof, if they have no other credits or moneyed capital from which to deduct their bona fide debts, are entitled to deduct them from the assessed value of such shares of stock where the State statute provides that in the assessment and taxation of what is denominated credits, the individual taxpayer, as owner thereof, may deduct therefrom his bona fide debts, except debts of certain designated classes.⁴ So where the State statute provides that the taxpayer's permitted deduction of indebtedness may be from his "credits or money at interest," from "all other demands against persons or bodies corporate," and from the "total amount of all credits," the shares in a national bank are covered by these terms so as to allow a deduction of indebtedness therefrom.⁵

General Doctrine.—Indeed, in general, a State law which permits individual citizens to deduct their just debts from the valuation of their personal property of every kind, other than national bank shares, or which permits the taxpayer to deduct from the sum of his credits, money at interest or other demands to the extent of his bona fide indebtedness, leaving the remainder to be taxed, while it denies the same right of deduction from the cash value of bank shares, operates to tax the latter at a greater rate than other moneyed capital.⁶

1. Hepburn v. School Directors, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 485.

2. Wasson v. First Nat. Bank, 107 Ind. 206; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 419.

3. Mercantile Nat. Bank v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 121 U. S. 135, 161; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 243, 264; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 92, 112. See also as following this case, Davenport Nat. Bank v. Davenport Board of Equalization, 123 U. S. 83; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 154; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 285; National Bank v. Boston, 125 U. S. 60; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 300; s. c., 20 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 572. Consult further, Richards v. Rock Rapids, 31 Fed. Rep. 505; Davenport Nat. Bank v. Mittelbuscher, 15 Fed. Rep. 225.

4. Wasson v. First Nat. Bank, 107 Ind. 206; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 419.

5. Evansville Nat. Bank v. Britton, 105 U. S. 322; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 48.

6. Boyer v. Boyer, 113 U. S. 689; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 151. See also People v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 57; Bressler v. Wayne Co., 25 Neb. 468; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 564; s. c., 25 Am. & Eng. Corp.

Rulings Under Doctrine.—To conform to this doctrine the value of stock in a national bank must be considered part of the “debts due or to become due” a taxpayer, from which he is entitled, by a State statute, to deduct the amount of his bona fide and unconditional indebtedness, in listing his property for taxation.¹ Pursuant, also, to such doctrine, where a statute provides that in assessing solvent debts not secured by mortgage or trust deed, a deduction therefrom shall be made of “debts due to bona fide residents of the State,” but does not allow a like deduction from the assessed value of national bank stock, such statute, so far as it denies the deduction to the holders of national bank stock, is in conflict with the act of congress.²

6. Deductions in General—Value of Real Estate.—The National Bank act, while authorizing taxation of national bank shares, does not permit taxation of any property belonging to the bank except its real estate,³ and under the laws of the States, there is a want of uniformity in a tax against a national bank, if no provision is made for the deduction of the value of the real estate from the aggregate value of the shares.⁴

Investments in United States Bonds, etc.—But a statutory rule fixing the true money value of shares in national banks, which does not permit a deduction therefrom for the amount of United States bonds or other nontaxable securities held by the bank, has been sustained as not in conflict with the constitution of Ohio, nor with the law of congress authorizing taxation on such shares.⁵

Cas. 301; McAden v. Mecklenberg Co., 97 N. Car. 355; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 694. Consult and compare Hills v. National Albany Exch. Bank, 105 U. S. 319; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 45; reversing National Albany Exch. Bank v. Hills, 5 Fed. Rep. 248; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 456*; Stanley v. Albany Co., 121 U. S. 535; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 268; Rosenberg v. Weekes, 67 Tex. 578; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 140; Whitbeck v. Mercantile Nat. Bank, 127 U. S. 193; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 309; s. c., 20 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 582, 587; City Nat. Bank v. Paducah, 2 Flip. (U. S.) 61; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 300; Maguire v. Board of Revenue, 71 Ala. 401; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 452; First Nat. Bank v. St. Joseph, 46 Mich. 526; McVeagh v. Chicago, 49 Ill. 318; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 381; Richards v. Rock Rapids, 31 Fed. Rep. 505; National Albany Exch. Bank v. Wells, 18 Blatchf. (U. S.) 478; People v. Ryan, 88 N. Y. 142.

1. Ruggles v. Fond du Lac, 53 Wis. 436.

2. Miller v. Heilbron, 58 Cal. 133; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 330.

As to assessor's refusal to allow such deductions, see Indianapolis v. Vajen, 111 Ind. 240; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 146, 150. As to selectmen's like refusal, see Peavey v. Town of Greenfield, 64 N. H. 284; citing Weston v. Manchester, 62 N. H.

3. Covington City Nat. Bank v. Covington, 21 Fed. Rep. 484.

4. City Nat. Bank v. Paducah, 2 Flip. 61; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 300, holding that there is double taxation in such a case. See also Rice Co. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 23 Minn. 280; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 629, 630; Lancaster Co. v. Lancaster Co. Nat. Bank, 7 W. N. C. (Pa.) 29, 31; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 415; People v. Commrs. of Taxes, 69 N. Y. 91; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 752, 753; Matter of Farmers' Nat. Bank, 1 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 383; People v. Commrs. of Taxes, 80 N. Y. 573.

5. Exchange Nat. Bank v. Miller, 19 Fed. Rep. 372. See also People v. Commrs. of Taxes etc., 4 Wall. (U. S.) 244; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 9.

7. Inequalities in Valuation, etc.—Where Fixed Percentage the Same.—The words, “at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens,” used in the National Bank act, refer to the entire process of assessment, which, in the case of national bank shares, includes both their valuation and the rate of percentage on such valuation,¹ so that the act of congress is violated² if in connection with a fixed percentage applicable to the valuation alike of national bank shares and of other moneyed investments of capital, the State law establishes or permits a mode of assessment by which such shares are valued higher in proportion to their real value than is other moneyed capital.³

Relief in Equity Against Discrimination.—When the inequality of valuation is the result of a State statute which is designed to discriminate injuriously against any class of persons or species of property, a court of equity will give appropriate relief.⁴

Inequality in Rule of Valuation.—So the court will give relief where, though the law itself is unobjectionable, the officers who are appointed to make assessments combine together and establish a rule or principle of valuation, the necessary result of which is to tax one species of property higher than others, and higher than the average rate.⁵ But the rule must be applied not solely to one individual but to a large class of individuals or corporations,⁶ and no relief will be granted where the bill alleges no such agreement or common action of assessors, and no general rule or discriminating rate adopted by a single assessor, but relies on numerous instances of partial and unequal valuations which establish no rule on the subject.⁷

Adoption of Most Practicable Mode of Valuation.—Nor is the assessment invalid merely because all bank shares were assessed at par, where any discrimination that may have existed arose from the difficulty of devising any other mode of assessment which would work out greater equality and uniformity in the valuation of different kinds of moneyed capital.⁸

Inequalities Must Indicate Intentional Discrimination.—Indeed, inequalities in valuation afford no ground for relief, unless it be

1. See People v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 57.

2. See Pelton v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 143; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 85.

3. Boyer v. Boyer, 113 U. S. 689; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 151. As to statute not objectionable for want of proportion, see Providence Inst. v. Boston, 101 Mass. 575; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 407; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 578. As to imposition of higher percentage on national banks, see First Nat. Bank v. Lucas Co., 25 Fed. Rep. 749.

4. German Nat. Bank v. Kimball,

103 U. S. 732; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 9.

5. German Nat. Bank v. Kimball, 103 U. S. 732; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 9, 12.

6. Cummings v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 153; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 74, 78.

7. German Nat. Bank v. Kimball, just cited. See also Hills v. National Albany Exch. Bank, 105 U. S. 319; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 45; Wagoner v. Loomis, 37 Ohio St. 571.

8. Williams v. Albany Co., 122 U. S. 154; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 133; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 278; affirming 21 Fed. Rep. 99.

made to appear that they result not merely from error in judgment on the part of the assessing officer, but that there was intentional discrimination, which may be established by proof of inequalities so gross as to lead the court to the conclusion that they were designed.¹

8. Place of Taxation—Place of Location of Bank.—Soon after the passage of the National Bank act, a controversy arose as to the true meaning of the clause which permitted shares to be taxed under State authority “at the place where the bank is located and not elsewhere.” In some of the States it was held² that the restriction confined the exercise of the taxing power to the town or district in which the corporation conducted its business. But in others it was decided that the clause in question applied to the State and not to any of its territorial divisions, and that such tax could be assessed upon a resident stockholder at the place of his residence³ wherever it might be within the State.⁴ The controversy was solved by an amendatory act, passed in 1868, declaring the word “place” to mean the “State” wherein the bank is located.⁵ The only restraints imposed upon a State, under the altered wording of the enactment in the exercise of its taxing power over shares in national banks, have been considered to be: (1) That such tax shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of the individual citizens of the State. (2) That the tax on shares of nonresident owners shall be imposed in the city or town⁶ where the bank is located.⁷ Subject to these limitations, it is left to the legislature of a State to “determine and direct the manner and place of taxing all the shares” of banking associations within its

1. Exchange Nat. Bank v. Miller, 19 Fed. Rep. 372. Compare First Nat. Bank v. Lucas Co., 25 Fed. Rep. 749.

Inequalities in General.—Valuation alleged to be made with regard to wrong date. McVeagh v. Chicago, 49 Ill. 318; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 381.

2. See Opinion of the Justices, 53 Me. 594; Abbott v. Bangor, 54 Me. 540; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 933; Packard v. Lewiston, 55 Me. 456; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 933 (affirmed in Abbott v. Bangor, 56 Me. 310; s. c., noted, 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 934). Consult also reference in Austin v. Board of Aldermen, 14 Allen (Mass.) 359, to a ruling in New Hampshire in the case of First Nat. Bank v. Portsmouth. Compare further Utica v. Churchill, 33 N. Y. 161; State v. Haight, 31 N. J. L. 399; State v. Hart, 31 N. J. L. 434.

3. Austin v. Board of Aldermen, 14 Allen (Mass.) 359; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 934; s. c., affirmed on other grounds in Austin v. Aldermen, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 694, or 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 15, 16; Clapp v. Burlington, 42 Vt. 579; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 938; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 355; Markoe v. Hartranft, 6 Am. L. Reg., N. S. 487, 490.

4. SMITH, C. J., in Buie v. Fayetteville, 79 N. Car. 267; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 343. But the State could not tax shares owned by its residents in a national bank located in another State. Flint v. Board of Aldermen, 99 Mass. 141; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 571, 572; s. c., 96 Am. Dec. 713.

5. See First Nat. Bank v. Smith, 65 Ill. 44; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 390; City Nat. Bank v. Paducah, 2 Flip. (U. S.) 61; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 300.

6. See People v. Moore, 1 Idaho (U. S.) 504.

7. See Kyle v. Mayor of etc. Fayetteville, 75 N. Car. 445; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 808. Compare First Nat. Bank v. Smith, 65 Ill. 44; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 390.

limits.¹ It follows, therefore, that a State may, under the restraints mentioned, prescribe and regulate as well the place as the manner of making its assessments upon this kind of property according to its own discretion.²

Owner's Residence Immaterial.—Indeed, a State legislature may provide for the taxation of the owners of national bank shares at the particular place within the State where the bank is located,³ without regard to the places of residence of the owners,⁴ whether at such place, or elsewhere within the State, or entirely outside of the State.⁵ But an assessment of a tax on the stock of a national banking association in New Jersey, which stock is owned by a stockholder residing in the city in which the association is located, cannot be sustained by the presumption that the stockholder resided in the ward in which the association was located.⁶

1. U. S. Rev. Stats., § 5219.

2. SMITH, C. J., in Buile v. Fayetteville, 79 N. Car. 267; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 343.

3. See Providence Inst. v. Boston, 101 Mass. 575; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 407; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 578.

4. See McIver v. Robinson, 53 Ala. 456; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 372; State v. Cook, 32 N. J. L. 347.

5. Tappan v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 490; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 100. The ruling in this case is referred to in Williams v. Weaver, 75 N. Y. 30. See to same effect, First Nat. Bank v. Smith, 65 Ill. 54; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 390; Baker v. First Nat. Bank, 67 Ill. 297; Curtis v. Ward, 58 Mo. 295; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 935. Compare Whitney v. Ragsdale, 33 Ind. 107; s. c., 5 Am. Rep. 185; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 429. Contra, Union Nat. Bank v. Chicago, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 82.

Extra-State National Bank as Owner.—It is immaterial that the owner of national bank shares subjected to taxation in one State is a national bank and not an individual located in another State. National Bank v. Boston, 125 U. S. 60; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 300; s. c., 20 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 572.

6. State v. Newark, 40 N. J. L. 558; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 290, reversing same case, 39 N. J. L. 380, or 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 672.

Mistake as to Town of Owner's Residence.—An owner of national bank shares is, in Massachusetts, rightfully taxed upon them in the town in which she resides, although in a statement made under the local statute, she has by an honest mistake notified the cashier of the bank that her residence is in a different town. Goldsbury v. Warwick, 112 Mass. 384; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 592.

Legislation as to Township of Taxation.—The legislation of Michigan is valid, which provides for the taxation of national bank stock in the township where the bank is located, except that where a stockholder resides in another township in the same county, he is taxable in his own township. Howell v. Cassopolis, 35 Mich. 471; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 627.

Changes in Tennessee Statute.—In Tennessee, before the act of March 1st, 1869, bank stocks, whether in national or other banks, were taxable only in the county of the owner's residence. Mayor of Nashville v. Thomas, 5 Coldw. 600; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 935; Union Bank v. State, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 490. But section 9 of that act changed the law in this regard, and made them taxable at the place where the bank might be situated. McLaughlin v. Chadwell, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 389; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 938.

In General.—Mode of assessment in New York where owner does not reside in ward where bank is located. McMahon v. Palmer, 102 N. Y. 176; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 796; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 297; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 636, 638-39. Taxation for fire, district purposes, in Massachusetts. Rich v. Packard Nat. Bank, 138 Mass. 527. For school district purposes. Little v. Little, 131 Mass. 367. Question concerning validity of statute for taxing elsewhere than at place of location of bank, held not raised in Wait v. Dowley, 94 U. S. 527; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 137.

9. Limits of Taxation—Shares Taxable Above Par Value.—National bank shares may be taxed at an amount above their par value.¹

On Shares in Name.—The tax imposed must, however, be upon the shares in name.²

No Assessment on Personal Property as Such.—But no revenue can be collected by a State, county, or municipality from national banks, except by assessments upon their shares and real estate;³ and an assessment on personal property, apparently based on the capital stock, is illegal.⁴

Shares of National Bank Located in a Territory Are Taxable.—The shares of national banks located and doing business in a Territory are subject to taxation as well as those of like banks established in a State.⁵

Taxation of Surplus Capital.—And where the shares of national banks are by statute required to be taxed at their par value, the surplus fund of such banks, in excess of the amount they are required by law to keep on hand, has been held taxable by the States in which the banks are located.⁶

New Shares Before Comptroller's Approval of Increase of Capital Stock.—But new shares of a national bank are not the subject of taxation before the comptroller of the currency has approved the increase of the capital stock.⁷

Conducting Business in Another State.—A national bank located in New Jersey, which kept a clerk in Philadelphia to receive deposits for the convenience of persons in that city, did not become located in Pennsylvania so as to be taxable there. National State Bank v. Pierce, 18 Abb. L. J. 16; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 177.

1. Hepburn v. School Directors, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 480; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 113; People v. Commrs. of Taxes, 94 U. S. 415; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 130. Contra, Union Nat. Bank v. Chicago, 3 Biss. U. S. 82.

2. People v. Moore, 1 Idaho (U. S.) 504.

3. See National Commercial Bank v. Mayor etc. of Mobile, 62 Ala. 284; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 15; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 440.

4. National State Bank v. Young, 25 Iowa 311; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 451, 452.

Nor can a tax on shares of national banks be authorized by a State statute where the laws of the State merely provide for the taxation of the capital stock of its own banks, and not of the shares held therein. Hubbard v. Johnson Co., 23 Iowa 130. As to new statute with valid provisions for taxing national banks, see Morseman v. Younkin, 27 Iowa 350, 352; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 460.

In Texas, under the revised statutes of 1879, the real estate of national banks could not be taxed. Rosenberg v. Weekes, 67 Tex. 578; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 140. In Maryland, a tax not only on the shares of a national bank but also on the banking house, lot and furniture is illegal. Frederick Co. v. Farmers' etc. Nat. Bank, 48 Md. 117-119, et seq.; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 252, et seq.

5. Silver Bow. Co. v. Davis, 6 Mont. 306; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 546; Salt Lake City Bank v. Golding, 2 Utah 1; People v. Moore, 1 Idaho (U. S.) 504.

6. First Nat. Bank v. Peterborough, 56 N. H. 38; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 416; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 658. See also Strafford Nat. Bank v. Dover, 58 N. H. 316; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 296; Concord Bank v. Concord, 59 N. H. 75; State v. Newark, 39 N. J. L. 380; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 672 (s. c., on appeal, 40 N. J. L. 558, or 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 290). But see Covington City Nat. Bank v. Covington, 21 Fed. Rep. 484.

7. Charleston v. Peoples' Nat. Bank, 5 S. Car. 103; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 1, 4; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 898.

10. Exemptions from Taxation in General—Under Proviso Requiring Like Taxation of State Banks.—The proviso, in the National Bank act, that the tax imposed by State laws on shares in national banks "shall not exceed the rate imposed upon the shares in any of the banks organized under the authority of the State where such association is located," which has reference to State banks of issue, did not exempt national bank shares from taxation, if the State complied with the proviso so far as it had the ability to do so.¹

Where City Banks Exempted Under Abrogated Ordinance.—And an asserted exemption of interest bearing bonds of a city from municipal taxation, under an ordinance of the city which was abrogated by subsequent legislation, does not operate to exempt from like taxation the shares in a national bank located in the same city.²

Personal Property of Insolvent National Bank.—The personal property of an insolvent national bank, in the hands of a receiver, under the provision of National Bank act, is, however, exempt from taxation under State laws.³

Where Corporation Required to List Property for Taxation.—A statutory exemption of "all shares of the capital stock of any company or corporation which is required to list its property for taxation," has been held inapplicable to national bank shares.⁴

Circulating Notes.—The circulating notes of national banks, known as "national currency," are likewise not exempt from taxation by a State.⁵

1. Lionberger v. Rouse, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 468; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 41; explained in Boyer v. Boyer, 113 U. S. 689; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 151. See further concerning this former proviso of the act, Mercantile Nat. Bank v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 121 U. S. 138; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 243; Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 573, 581; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 1, 2; Richmond v. Scott, 48 Ind. 568; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 445; Van Slyke v. State, 23 Wis. 655; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 939; affirmed in Bagnall v. State, 25 Wis. 112; Frazer v. Siebern, 16 Ohio St. 614; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 936; Smith v. Webb, 11 Minn. 500; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 935; Hubbard v. Johnson Co., 23 Iowa 130; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 932.

2. Adams v. Nashville, 95 U. S. 19; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 148; stated in Boyer v. Boyer, 113 U. S. 689; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 151.

3. Rosenblatt v. Johnson, 104 U. S. 462; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 32. See also as to levy subsequently to insolvency of bank, Woodward v. Ellsworth, 4 Colo. 580; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 216; and further as to taxation of insolvent national bank, Jackson v. United States, 20 Ct. of Cl. 208.

4. McIver v. Robinson, 53 Ala. 456; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 372.

5. Montgomery Co. v. Elston, 32 Ind. 27; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 327; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 425. See also Lilly v. Commrs., 69 N. Car. 300; Ruffin v. Board of Commrs., 69 N. Car. 498; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 806. Contra, Horne v. Green, 52 Miss. 452; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 643.

Tax on Municipal Notes Paid Out.—The provision of the Revised Statutes is not unconstitutional whereby it is enacted that every national banking association . . . shall pay a tax of ten per centum on the amount of notes of any town, city, or municipal corporation paid out by them." Merchants' Nat. Bank v. United States, 101 U. S. 1; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 439; following Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 533; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 22.

11. Restrictions Upon Municipal Taxation—Municipal Officers Must Have State Law as Authority.—Before municipal officers can rightly assess a tax upon the shares of national banks, they must be authorized to do so by some law of the State.¹

Where No Like Tax Imposed on State Banks.—And as the act of congress forbids any discrimination against the shares of national banks in taxation, such shares cannot be taxed by a State for municipal purposes or otherwise, where no such tax is imposed upon the State bank or upon other banks organized under the authority of the State.²

No Tax Upon Business, etc.—National banks are not liable to a privilege tax imposed by a city ordinance;³ nor, in view of the fact that the shares alone are taxable, to any tax upon their business, imposed by the municipal authorities of the city where the bank is located.⁴

12. Mode of Assessment—Without Personal Examination by Assessor.—Where a party was assessed upon national bank shares, the number and estimated value of which was furnished by him, to the assessment officers, and such officers, upon the information thus obtained, with that derived from other sources, appraised the shares at their actual value, it was held that personal examination by the officers was not necessary, under the New York statute, as the requirement of such examination under that statute applied to real estate only.⁵

Entry on Separate List or Book.—Nor is the assessment rendered void because it is entered upon a list or book separate from other assessments for personal property against individuals in the same city.⁶

1. Stetson v. Bangor, 56 Me. 274; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 320. But municipal taxes were held to be imposed by State authority on national bank shares in McLaughlin v. Chadwell, 7 Helsk. (Tenn.) 389; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 938. As to tax—held not levied for municipal purposes, in Indiana. See Root v. Erdelmeyer, 37 Ind. 225; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 432.

2. Craft v. Tuttle, 27 Ind., 332; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 932; Wright v. Stiltz, 27 Ind. 338. See also Evansville v. Bayard, 39 Ind. 450; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 932. But compare Richmond v. Scott, 48 Ind. 568; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 445, followed in Stilz v. Tutewiler, 48 Ind. 600; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 932.

3. National Bank of Chattanooga v. Mayor etc., 8 Helsk. (Tenn.) 814, 815, 816.

4. Mayor etc. of Macon v. First Nat. Bank, 59 Ga. 648. See also Pittsburgh v. First Nat. Bank, 55 Pa. St. 45; s. c., noted 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 936. A city, therefore, has no power to exact a licence fee from a national bank. Carthage v. First Nat. Bank, 71 Mo. 508; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 494; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 279. But the ordinance, though unconstitutional, may not give a right to equitable relief by injunction. Second Nat. Bank v. Caldwell, 13 Fed. Rep. 429. As to exemption of furniture and real estate of a national bank from taxation in Kentucky, see Covington City Nat. Bank v. Covington, 21 Fed. Rep. 484. And as to invalidity, in same State, of ad valorem taxes levied on the banking-house and lot of a national bank, see City Nat. Bank v. Paducah (Ky. 1888), 9 S. W. Rep. 218; s. c., 27 Cent. L. J. 398.

5. McMahon v. Palmer, 102 N. Y. 176, 182; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 636, 638; s. c., on other points, 55 Am. Rep. 796; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 297, 298-99, affirming 11 Daly (N. Y.) 214, and treating this view of the statute as assumed in Brevoort v. Brooklyn, 89 N. Y. 128.

6. McMahon v. Palmer, 102 N. Y.

Curing Irregularities.—Irregularities, in the mode of assessment, may be cured by a validating act.¹

Listing of Shares.—But there is no authority in the statutes of Ohio nor of the United States for listing and valuing the shares in a national bank in the aggregate, and placing such aggregate on the tax list in the name of the bank.²

13. Inspecting Powers of State Authorities, etc.—Production of Books by National Bank.—Neither restrictions upon visitorial power, contained in the National Bank act, nor other considerations as to the exposure of private business, etc., preclude the enforcement by the State courts of an order for the production of its books by a national bank, to determine whether any deposits therein are liable to escape taxation.³

Refusal to Furnish List of Shareholders, etc.—But the fact that the officers of a national bank violate the law by refusing to furnish the assessor with a list of the shareholders, does not authorize him to make an assessment otherwise than against the stockholders personally.⁴

14. Collection of Taxes on Shares—Seizure of Property of Bank.—An assessment against a shareholder in a national bank does not, in Iowa, authorize the seizure of the property of the bank to satisfy such assessment;⁵ but the statute of Nebraska expressly 176; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 636; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 796; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 297, holding (102 N. Y. 184) that such mode of registering the assessment does not contravene the provision of the U. S. Rev. Stat. which permits the inclusion, for purposes of State assessment of taxes, of shares of national banks in the valuation of the owner's personal property.

The opinion distinguishes Albany City Nat. Bank v. Maher, 19 Blatchf. (U. S.) 175, as applicable only to cases where the assessment of both real and personal property is required by statute to be made on the same book or roll; and relies upon Foster v. Van Wyck, 2 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 167, which relates to the judicial character of the action of the assessing officers; and upon Williams v. Weaver, 75 N. Y. 30, which considers an assessment of national bank shares not invalid because their valuation was placed in a separate item, and itself relies upon People v. Dolan, 36 N. Y. 59 (by PARKER, J., whose opinion is not given in 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 684).

1. Williams v. Albany Co., 122 U. S. 154; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 133; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 278, affirming 21 Fed. Rep. 99. For validating act held void, see Albany City Nat. Bank v. Maher, 20 Blatchf. (U. S.) 341

2. Miller v. First Nat. Bank, 46 Ohio St. 424; s. c., 25 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 289; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 711.

Irregularities in Mode of Assessment.—See First Nat. Bank v. St. Joseph, 46 Mich. 526; McVeagh v. Chicago, 49 Ill. 318; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 381; Nickerson v. Kimball, 1 Chic. Law. J. 42; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 409.

Jurisdiction of Assessors, etc.—See National Bank v. Elmira, 53 N. Y. 49; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 715.

3. First Nat. Bank v. Hughes, 6 Fed. Rep. 737; s. c., otherwise noted, 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 176.

4. Springfield v. First Nat. Bank, 87 Mo. 441; s. c., 14 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 342; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 524. See also, as to validity of State statute requiring list of shareholders to be furnished, Waite v. Dowley, 94 U. S. 527; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 137.

As to defective declaration against national bank cashier for refusing to permit collector of proper district to examine bank checks, see United States v. Mann, 95 U. S. 580; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 154.

5. First Nat. Bank v. Hershire, 31 Iowa 18; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 465.

Under the statute of that State, a national bank is not liable for the tax assessed against a shareholder unless it provides that the taxes on the shares "shall be paid by the bank," and their collection by distraint is upheld by the federal court.¹

Remedy Where Collection Enforced Against Bank.—In Missouri it is held that, under the National Bank act, the county collector should make the assessment against the shareholders personally, and has no right to collect the tax by selling the property of the bank or the shares or other property of nondelinquent shareholders;² but that, if he does so, the proper remedy is not an injunction on behalf of the bank.³ In New York, however, it is ruled that an assessment upon the capital stock of a national bank and a tax against the bank, in violation of the State statute, which prohibits the assessment of a tax upon such capital stock, is void, and that an action will lie on behalf of the bank against a municipal corporation to recover the amount collected by it upon such an assessment for municipal taxes.⁴

VIII. STOCK AND STOCKHOLDERS—1. Stockholders in General—Of Bank Which Has Gone Into Liquidation.—Where a national bank has gone into voluntary liquidation, in pursuance of the vote of all its stockholders, and all but one of them have united in organizing a new national bank under a different name, and the omitted stockholder has accepted dividends from the proceeds of nearly the entire assets of the new bank, he cannot claim to be a stockholder in the new bank nor a right to share in its earnings.⁵

Appraisal of Shares, etc.—A committee appointed under the provisions of the act of congress of July 12th, 1882, to appraise the value of the shares of stockholders of a national bank who do have under its control dividends or property belonging to such shareholder. Hershire v. First Nat. Bank, 35 Iowa 272; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 476.

1. First Nat. Bank v. Douglas Co., 3 Dill. (U. S.) 330; s. c. 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 268, 271.

A statute of Kentucky, requiring the cashier of a bank whose stock is taxed to pay the amount of the tax due, was held valid as a tax on the shares, in First Nat. Bank v. Com., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 353; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 34. Apparently affirming, Com. v. First Nat. Bank, 4 Bush (Ky.) 98; s. c., 96 Am. Dec. 285; and followed as to a less exacting statute of Vermont in Waite v. Dowley, 94 U. S. 527; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 137. See also, as to requirement that tax be paid by the corporations instead of by the shareholders, Lionberger v. Rouse, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 468; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 41, and as to N. Y. doctrine, First Nat. Bank v. Fancher, 48 N. Y. 524; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 697.

2. First Nat. Bank v. Meredith, 44

Mo. 500. See also Springfield v. First Nat. Bank, 87 Mo. 441; s. c., 14 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 342, 344-45; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 524, holding that the refusal of the officers of the bank to furnish the assessor with a list of shareholders does not justify making and enforcing the assessment against the property of the bank. See Cook on Stock, § 572a.

3. First Nat. Bank v. Meredith, 44 Mo. 500.

4. National Bank v. Elmira, 53 N. Y. 49 et seq.; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 715 et seq.

Irregularities in Collection.—See First Nat. Bank v. St. Joseph, 46 Mich. 526; McVeagh v. Chicago, 49 Ill. 318; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 381; Weld v. Bangor, 59 Me. 416; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 521.

Lien on Shares.—As to lien on national bank shares, continuing until taxes paid, under Wisconsin law, see Simmons v. Aldrich, 41 Wis. 241; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 921.

5. First Nat. Bank v. Marshall, 26 Ill. App. 440.

not assent to amendments to the articles of association, and who have signified their intention to withdraw, may amend a mere clerical error in their award, at any time before appeal therefrom to the comptroller of the currency, although the shareholder has been notified of the award, and has accepted it in its original form.¹

2. Rights of Stockholders—Inspection of Books and Papers.—The Alabama statute giving to the stockholders of private corporations reasonable access to the books and papers of such corporations, and inspection and examination thereof, applies to national banks located within the State, and is not in conflict with the federal provision restricting visitorial powers over national banks.²

Right of Action.—A stockholder in a national bank cannot maintain an action against the president and directors for their neglect and mismanagement of the affairs of the bank, whereby insolvency ensued and the stock became worthless.³

3. Stockholder's Right to Vote—Only Stockholders of Record at Time of Proceeding to Wind Up.—Shares of stock in a national bank cease to be transferable as such upon its proceeding, at the end of the original period for which it was organized, to wind up its affairs under the statutory provision therefor;⁴ and only stockholders of record at that time have the right to vote for directors to settle its affairs, or are eligible for election as such.⁵

Liability Disqualifying from Voting.—The past due and unpaid liability of a shareholder, which, under the National Bank act, disqualifies him from voting at an election of directors of a national bank, is limited to his liability for unpaid subscriptions to stock.⁶

4. Liabilities of Stockholders—For Costs.—In proceedings against the stockholders of a national bank that has gone into liquidation to ascertain and recover assessments for indebtedness, the stockholders are liable for costs as if they were codefendants in any ordinary action.⁷

1. First Nat. Bank v. Brenneman, 114 Pa. St. 315.

Suits Concerning.—As to bill in equity against stockholders, see Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 211. As to want of authority for suit by receiver at same time, see Harvey v. Lord, 11 Bliss. (U. S.) 144. As to bill by stockholder against president and directors, see Ackerman v. Halsey, 37 N. J. Eq. 356; s. c. 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 239.

2. Winter v. Baldwin, 89 Ala. 483.

3. Conway v. Halsey, 44 N. J. L. 462; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 571. But a stockholder of a national bank was held to have legal capacity to sue the corporation for misappropriation of the stockholder's funds, as in Wilson v. First Nat. Bank, 1 Wyoming 108; and a stockholder who has been forced to meet his individual liability may maintain an action on behalf of the stockholders in general against the directors for losses resulting in the insolvency of the bank, and due to their negligence and misconduct, if the receiver refuses to bring such action and the comptroller of the currency refuses to sanction the action. Nelson v. Burrows, 9 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 280.

4. U. S. Stat. of July 12th, 1882, § 7.

5. Richards v. Attleborough Nat. Bank, 148 Mass. 187; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 495.

6. United States v. Barry, 36 Fed. Rep. 246.

7. Irons v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 36 Fed. Rep. 843.

Married Women.—Nor does the fact that a person was a married woman at the time of the transfer of her stock in a savings bank to a national bank created therefrom, and also at the time the bank failed, exempt her from liability as a shareholder in the national bank.¹

Attachment of Shares.—A national bank may attach the shares of a stockholder therein for his debt due the bank.²

5. Individual Liability of Stockholders—Extent of, etc.—Under the National Bank act, in case of the insolvency of a national bank and a deficit, each stockholder may be assessed such sum (not exceeding an amount equal to the par value of his stock) as will bear the same proportion to the whole amount of the deficit as his stock bears to the whole amount of the capital stock of the bank, at its par value, and the inability of some of the stockholders to contribute to the assessment will not increase the amount of his liability.³

Where Shares Held as Collateral Security.—It is also immaterial, in regard to the individual liability of the stockholder of a national bank for his proportionate share of its debts, that he holds the shares as collateral security for a loan.⁴

1. Keyser v. Hitz, 133 U. S. 138, affirming 2 Mackey (D. C.) 473; 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 340. See also, in favor of married woman's liability as stockholder of a national bank, Witters v. Sowles, 32 Fed. Rep. 767; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 318, followed in 36 Fed. Rep. 640; Anderson v. Line, 14 Fed. Rep. 405; Bundy v. Cocke, 128 U. S. 185; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 316.

In an action against a married woman to enforce her liability as a stockholder of a national bank, the question of fraud in procuring transfers, etc., has been held immaterial, and so have the facts that the proceeds went to her husband as consul general and the failure to issue new certificates to her on the change from a savings bank. Keyser v. Hitz, 133 U. S. 138.

2. Hagar v. Union Nat. Bank, 63 Me. 509; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 523.

3. United States v. Knox, 102 U. S. 422; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 1.

Cessation of.—Upon a reasonable construction of the statute imposing liability upon shareholders for the debts of national banks, and in view of the objects thereby intended to be accomplished, it was held that the responsibility of the defendants ceased upon the surrender of certain stock certificates to the bank and the delivery to its president of a power of attorney sufficient to effect, and intended to effect, as that officer knew, a transfer of the stock on the books of the association to the purchaser, although such transfer was not in fact made. Whitney v. Butler, 118 U. S. 655; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 177.

Nature of.—The individual liability of a stockholder in a national bank is not such a "bad or doubtful debt" as the court can order to be "sold or compounded." Price v. Yates, 7 W. N. C. (Pa.) 51, 52; s. c., 19 Alb. L. J. 295; s. c., 25 Int. Rev. Rec. 113; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 204.

4. Hale v. Walker, 31 Iowa 344; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 137; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 471; Wheelock v. Kost, 77 Ill. 296; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 406; Magruder v. Colston, 44 Md. 349; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 47; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 554, 556-57; Bowdell v. Farmers' etc. Nat. Bank, 14 Bank Mag. 387; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 146. See also Germania Nat. Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 25; Moore v. Jones, 3 Woods (U. S.) 53; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 144; also PLEDGE AND COLLATERAL SECURITY.

As to brokers' implied authority to pledge stocks, etc., see Talmage v. Third Nat. Bank, 91 N. Y. 531; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 603.

As to validity of sale by national bank to its directors of corporate stock held as collateral for loans, see Hayward v. Eliot Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 611; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 1.

Preference to Creditor Illegal.—The act of congress, of 1876,¹ provides that the individual liability of shareholders of an insolvent national bank, fixed by the revised statutes,² "may be enforced by any creditor of such association by bill in equity, in the nature of a creditor's bill, brought by such creditor on behalf of himself and all other creditors;" and as the liability is enforceable only in behalf of all creditors, any voluntary discharge or security given for the payment thereof should likewise be for the equal benefit of all the creditors, and any effort to give a preference should be deemed illegal.³

Liability of Representatives or Estates of Decedents.—So under the provision of the revised statutes of the United States rendering shareholders individually responsible for the liabilities of a national bank to the value of their stock, and the further provision that the estate of a shareholder in the hands of the executor shall be liable in like manner and to the same extent that the testator would be if living,⁴ assets which have been transferred to devisees or legatees cannot be subjected to liabilities of the bank accruing after the transfer.⁵

Enforcement Where Bank in Voluntary Liquidation.—A national bank in voluntary liquidation may still sue and be sued by its name for the purpose of closing its business, and a creditor may maintain a suit upon a disputed claim although he has filed a bill to enforce the individual liability of stockholders.⁶

6. Assessment Upon Stockholders—Receiver's Right of Suit for.—The receiver, appointed by the comptroller of the currency, for a national bank located in another State, is not to be treated as a foreign receiver, and may sue in the courts of New York for an assessment levied on the shareholders of the bank, independently of the doctrine of comity.⁷

Voluntary Assessment.—An assessment upon national bank stockholders by their own vote, to restore their lost capital, so as to continue in business and avoid liquidation,⁸ will not satisfy the requirement of the statute,⁹ that they shall individually discharge their proportion of the bank's liabilities.¹⁰

1. Act June 30th, 1876, 19 Stat. at Large, p. 63.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5151.

3. Gatch v. Fitch, 34 Fed. Rep. 566.

4. U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 5151, 5152. See also as to construction of latter section, Irons v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 21 Fed. Rep. 197; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 333; and consult Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27, s. c., 17 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 71, s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 211. As to word "trustees" in latter section, see Welles v. Larrabee, 36 Fed. Rep. 866, Davis v. Essex Baptist Soc., 44 Conn. 582, s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 110.

5. Witters v. Sowles, 32 Fed. Rep.

130. But see in favor of liability of administrator after distribution of estate, Davis v. Weed, 44 Conn. 569, s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 115, 119, distinguished in preceding case.

6. Central Nat. Bank v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 104 U. S. 54, s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 20.

7. Peters v. Foster 10 N. Y. Supp. 389. As to concurrent jurisdiction of federal courts, see Price v. Abbott, 17 Fed. Rep. 506, and cases cited.

8. Under U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5205.

9. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5151.

10. Delano v. Butler 118 U. S. 634; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 343; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 163.

7 Recovery of Assessments—Necessary Allegations.—In an action by the receiver of a national bank against a shareholder, to recover an assessment ordered by the comptroller, it must be averred in the petition, in terms or in effect, that the comptroller decides that necessity existed for the enforcement of the liability of the shareholder, and it must similarly be alleged that the amount of the assessment has not been paid.¹

Right of Set-Off, etc.—The right of set-off in such an action may be allowed if the facts pleaded show that the claim sought to be set off is of such a nature that the holder thereof is entitled to receive the full amount thereof from the receiver before distribution in the way of dividends can be made to the general creditors.²

8. Specifications of Capital Stock, etc., at Formation of Bank.—For the formation of a national bank it is necessary that a certificate should be prepared and filed with the comptroller of the currency at Washington, which should contain, among other things, a specification of the amount of its capital stock, and the number of shares into which it was to be divided. This is the evidence of the amount of its capital stock and its distribution into shares, and these last are then fixed, designated and known at the bureau of currency by the record preserved in the proper office thereof.³

9. Increase of Capital Stock—Provision Concerning.—The National Bank act provides that "no increase of capital stock shall be valid until the whole amount of such increase is paid in, and notice thereof has been transmitted to the comptroller of the currency, and his certificate obtained, specifying the amount."⁴

Reduction of Increase.—This provision is not violated where the proposed increase is reduced to the amount actually paid in, and the latter is the amount of increase specified in the notice.⁵

Comptroller's Approval of Increase.—But there can be no increase of the capital stock, so as to subject the new shares to taxation, until the prescribed approval by the comptroller of the currency and the issuance of his certificate.⁶

Subscriptions to Increase.—Where a shareholder of a national bank subscribes to a certain increase of stock and pays for the

1. Welles v. Stout, 38 Fed. Rep. 67.

2. Welles v. Stout, 38 Fed. Rep. 807. Against set-off of individual claim of stockholder against association, see Hobart v. Gould, 8 Fed. Rep. 57. As to when neither the statute of frauds nor the statute of limitations can be interposed as a defence to the action, see Baily v. Schroyer, 1 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 717, 718.

3. Charleston v. Peoples' Nat. Bank, 5 S. Car. 103; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 1; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 898. The terms of the National Bank act as to division into shares, etc., are quoted in Weyer

v. Second Nat. Bank, 57 Ind. 198.

4. U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5142. The requisites of the section are analyzed in Delano v. Butler, 118 U. S. 634; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 343; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 163, which is quoted in Winters v. Armstrong, 37 Fed. Rep. 508.

5. Aspinwall v. Butler, 133 U. S. 595. See also Delano v. Butler, 118 U. S. 634; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 343; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 163.

6. Charleston v. People's Nat. Bank, 5 S. Car. 103; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 1; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 898

same, and the bank afterwards reduces the amount of the increase, and he pays on his new stock an assessment declared by the bank, after it has become insolvent, to prevent its business being closed under the prescribed notice of the comptroller of the currency,¹ such shareholder is estopped to deny his liability as a subscriber to the reduced amount.² But where an increase is attempted to be made without obtaining the consent of the holders of two-thirds of the stock, the payment in full of the amount of such increase, and the certificate and approval of the comptroller of the currency, as required by the federal statutes, the proceedings are invalid, and preliminary subscriptions to such increase cannot be enforced.³

10. Reduction of Capital Stock—In General.—A national banking association may, within limits, reduce its capital stock.⁴

In Order to Avoid Threatened Assessment.—And where the stockholders in a national banking association, the capital of which has become impaired by reason of past due and suspended claims, in order to avoid a threatened assessment by the comptroller upon the stock to make good the deficiency, lawfully reduce the capital stock in an amount equal thereto, a stockholder cannot, in case the suspended claims are subsequently realized upon and carried into the account as assets, compel the bank to distribute a share of the money so realized in proportion to the amount of stock surrendered by him.⁵

11. Transfer of Stock in General—Assignment Without Transfer on Books.—The assignment of national bank shares, without a transfer on the books of the bank, does not constitute a complete transfer in merely legal contemplation, so as to effect an actual substitution of shareholders binding upon the corporation.⁶ But as between the immediate parties to the transaction, the assignment is effectual, and would be recognized and enforced, at least in equity, as against all parties not showing a superior right.⁷

1. Provided for in U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5205.

2. Delano v. Butler, 118 U. S. 634; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 343; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 163. See also Aspinwall v. Butler, 133 U. S. 595. Compare Eaton v. Pacific Nat. Bank, 144 Mass. 260; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 483; Schierenberg v. Stephens, 32 Mo. App. 314, et seq.; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 528, et seq.; followed in Nichols v. Stephens, 32 Mo. App. 330, or 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 539.

3. Winters v. Armstrong, 37 Fed. Rep. 508.

4. McCann v. First Nat. Bank, 112 Ind. 354; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 365; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 434.

5. McCann v. First Nat. Bank, 112 Ind. 354; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 365; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 434; followed in Wools v. First Nat Bank, 112 Ind. 600, and distinguishing Seeley v. New York Nat. Exchange Bank, 8 Daly (N. Y.) 400; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 804.

6. Nicollet Nat. Bank v. City Bank, 38 Minn. 85; s. c., 8 Am. St. Rep. 643. See also Koons v. First Nat. Bank, 89 Ind. 178; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 176, 180; Brown v. Adams, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 181, where stock, by its terms, transferable only on the books of the company. Dickinson v. Central Nat. Bank, 129 Mass. 279; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 351; Moore v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 111 U. S. 156; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 110, as to stock transferable on books only on surrender of certificate where false representations by cashier.

7. Nicollet Nat. Bank v. City Bank, 38 Minn. 85; s. c., 8 Am. St. Rep. 643.

Transfer Not Illegal as Made to Bank.—Nor can a sale of national bank shares to a broker be impeached as in violation of the provision forbidding the purchase by a national bank of its own shares, because the broker purchased the shares for the president of the bank, who was secretly acting in its behalf, and the latter filled in the blank power of attorney with the name of his aiding clerk, who then transferred the shares to the president, as trustee, on the bank's official stock register.¹

Transfer by Foreign Executor.—In the absence of any provision in the by-laws or articles of association of a national bank to the contrary, such a bank is bound, under the laws of Pennsylvania, to recognize a transfer of its stock by a foreign executor duly appointed in another State.²

Specific Performance of Contract to Sell.—Specific performance of a contract to sell national bank shares will not be enforced where it appears that the shares were desired to give control of the bank.³

Pledged Stock.—A stockholder's indebtedness against a national bank cannot be set off against the claims of a pledgee of the stock of the former, who received it in pledge to secure the payment of a loan made on the faith of such pledge, without knowledge of the claims of the bank, or that it was insolvent.⁴

12. Failure to Make Transfer on Books—As Preventing Change in Stockholder's Individual Liability.—In nearly all the cases relating to national banks, announcing the general principles which govern where the issue was between the receiver representing the creditors and the person standing on the register of the bank as a shareholder, it is said generally⁵ that the creditors of a national bank are entitled to know who, as shareholders, have pledged their individual liability as security for its debts, engagements and contracts; that if a person permits his name to appear and

See also Johnston v. Laffin, 103 U. S. 800; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 13; Continental Nat. Bank v. Eliot Nat. Bank, 7 Fed. Rep. 369.

1. Johnston v. Laffin, 103 U. S. 800, 803-4; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 13, affirming same case, 5 Dill. (U. S.) 65; or 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 331; Scott v. Pequonnock Nat. Bank, 15 Fed. Rep. 494, 499, 501, discussing like preceding case and next two cases, unrecorded transfer as against attaching creditor. Berney Nat. Bank v. Pinckard, 87 Ala. 577; Hazard v. National Exchange Bank, 26 Fed. Rep. 94.

As to right of national bank to obtain transfer of stock of private bank, see National Bank v. Watontown Bank, 105 U. S. 217; and as to right of national banks to restrain transfer of stocks by one indebted to the bank, see Lee v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 2

Cin. Super. Ct. 298; s. c., noted and discredited, 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 936.

2. Hobbs v. Western Nat. Bank, 8 W. N. C. (Pa.) 131; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 187.

3. Falls Appeal, 91 Pa. St. 434; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 671 et seq.; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 411.

4. McConville v. Means, 22 W. L. Bull. 193.

As to rights of pledgee of national bank shares to have a transfer on the books, etc., see Dayton Nat. Bank v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 37 Ohio St. 208; and as to compelling access to books of bank to transfer stock sold on execution, see State v. First Nat. Bank, 89 Ind. 302.

5. According to HARLAN, J., in Whitney v. Butler, 118 U. S. 655; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 177.

remain in its outstanding certificates of stock, and on its register, as a shareholder, he is estopped, as between himself and the creditors of the bank, to deny that he is a shareholder; and that his individual liability continues until there is a transfer of the stock on the books of the bank, even where he has in good faith previously sold it, and delivered to the buyer the certificate of stock, with a power of attorney in such form as to enable the transfer to be made.¹

Buyer's Fraudulent or Negligent Failure.—Some of the cases hold² that the seller is liable as a shareholder even where the buyer agreed to have the transfer made on the books of the bank, but fraudulently or negligently failed to do so.

Surrender of Certificates with Power of Attorney.—But in none of them does it appear that the precaution was taken, after the sale of the stock, to surrender the certificates therefor to the bank itself, accompanied (where such surrender was not by the shareholder in person) by a power of attorney, which would enable its officers to make the transfer on the register.³

Bank's Failure to Observe Its By-laws.—Yet a party will not escape his individual liability as a stockholder where he takes and holds shares, the certificates of which were issued to him by a national bank in lieu of the certificates of the prior owner and seller, because the bank failed to observe its by-laws in regard to a transfer on the books.⁴

13. Evasive or Colorable Transfers—Invalidity as to Creditors.—It is well settled that while one who allows himself to appear on the books of a national bank as an owner of its stock is liable to creditors as a shareholder,⁵ whether he be an absolute owner or a pledgee only, yet the transaction is void as to creditors⁶ if a regis-

1. The cases referred to in this connection, and which bear out the text in various particulars, comprise Davis v. Essex Baptist Soc., 44 Conn. 582; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 110; Adderly v. Storm, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 624. Relating to corporate stock in general. Bowden v. Farmers' etc. Nat. Bank, 1 Hughes (U. S.) 307; s. c., 14 Bank Mag. 387, s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 146, 147, 148; Anderson v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co., 111 U. S. 479; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 122; Johnson v. Laffin, 103 U. S. 800; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 13. Making qualifications as to other cases. Turnbull v. Payson, 95 U. S. 418, which also relates to corporate stock in general. Brown v. Adams, 5 Blss. (U. S.) 181; Davis v. Stevens, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 259; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 158; and Irons v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 27 Fed. Rep. 591 (reversed on other points in Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27; s. c., 17 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 71; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 211). See also Moore v. Jones, 3 Woods (U. S.) 53; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 144, 145.

Concerning the transfer of stock to a director without his knowledge, and his failure to repudiate the transaction, etc., see Brown v. Finn, 34 Fed. Rep. 124.

2. HARLAN, J., in Whitney v. Butler, 118 U. S. 655, 661; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 177, 182.

3. Whitney v. Butler, 118 U. S. 655, s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 177. See also Hayes v. Shoemaker, 39 Fed. Rep. 319. But compare Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27; s. c., 17 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 71, 94; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 211.

4. Laing v. Burley, 101 Ill. 591; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 369.

5. See Whitney v. Butler, 118 U. S. 655, 660; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 177, 181.

6. See Anderson v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co., 111 U. S. 479; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 122.

tered owner, acting in bad faith, transfers his stock in a failing national bank to an irresponsible person for the purpose of escaping liability,¹ or if his transfer is colorable only,² or is not an out and out transfer, but made with the understanding that there shall be a retransfer on request.³

Stock Taken in Name of Irresponsible Party.—It is also undoubtedly true that the beneficial owner of stock registered in the name of an irresponsible owner may, under some circumstances, be liable as the real shareholder; but a mere pledgee of stock in a national bank is not chargeable where he is not registered as owner, and exercises none of the rights or powers of a stockholder, if he takes the security for his benefit in the name of an irresponsible trustee in good faith and with no fraudulent intent, though for the avowed purpose of avoiding individual liability as shareholder.⁴

14. Loans by Bank on Its Stock, or Purchase Thereof.—The National Bank act imposes special restrictions upon national banks in regard to making loans upon the security of shares of their own stock or purchasing such stock;⁵ and it is generally held that the by-laws of the bank cannot be so worded as to contravene such prohibition.⁶

15. Lien by Bank on Its Stock.—A national bank cannot, according to what seems to be the present preponderating doctrine, even by provisions framed with a direct view to that effect in its articles of association and by-laws, acquire a lien on its own stock held by persons who are its debtors.⁷

IX. OFFICERS—1. Officers in General—Compensation, Removal, etc.—The officers of a national bank are not, in the absence of special

1. Bowden v. Johnson, 107 U. S. 251; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 630, 640; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 55, 64; Davis v. Stevens, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 259, 260, et seq.; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 158, 160. See also Bowden v. Santos, 1 Hughes (U. S.) 158; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 271.

2. Germania Nat. Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 25. See Davis v. Stevens, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 259, Witters v. Sowles, 25 Fed. Rep. 168, 169; s. c., 32 Fed. Rep. 130, 136; Case v. Small, 4 Woods (U. S.) 78, 80, 81.

3. Germania Nat. Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 25. See also as to sale of stock in a national bank while it is a going concern, Lesassier v. Kennedy, 36 La. An. 539, 542; s. c. on other points, 123 U. S. 521; or 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 288.

4. Anderson v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co., 111 U. S. 479; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 122. See also Welles v. Larrabee, 36 Fed. Rep. 866.

As to when national bank cannot be charged as owner of stock purchased by its president, see Prosser v. First Nat. Bank, 106 N. Y. 677; s. c., more fully stated, 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 646. As to estoppel of shareholder placing parts of his shares in the hands of a third party to hold for him, under a secret declaration of trust, see Young v. Yough, 23 N. J. Eq. 325.

5. Nat. Bank act, § 36; U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5201.

6. See Fechheimer v. National Exchange Bank, 79 Va. 80; s. c., 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 156; Nicollet Nat. Bank v. City Bank, 38 Minn. 85; s. c., 8 Am. St. Rep. 643.

As to fictitious sale of stock purchased in violation of such restrictions, see Bundy v. Jackson, 24 Fed. Rep. 628.

7. Bullard v. National Eagle Bank, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 589; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 93; Nicollet Nat. Bank v. City Bank, 38 Minn. 85; s. c., 8 Am. St. Rep. 643. But see contra, Lockwood v.

agreement, entitled to compensation for their ordinary services;¹ and are subject to removal if they fail to perform the duties required of them.²

Liabilities Imposed or Incurred by.—A national bank is liable for its officers' misrepresentations made to depositors concerning the character or scope of written instruments,³ but the officers of an insolvent national bank cannot be held personally responsible on loans and discounts merely because they turn out to be injudicious.⁴

Criminal Liabilities.—The National Bank act, whose interpretation in this respect has been the subject of much judicial consideration, makes special provision for such criminal offences by officers of national banks as false entries⁵ and embezzlement, either alone⁶ or in conjunction with kindred offences,⁷ such as misapplication of funds.⁸ But there is a conflict in the authori-

Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 9 R. I. 308; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 253; In re Bigelow, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 469. Consult further supra, PRESCRIBING BY-LAWS.

1. See Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Elliott, 55 Iowa 104. Compare First Nat. Bank v. Drake, 29 Kan. 311; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 210.

2. Harrington v. First Nat. Bank, 1 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 361; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 760, sustaining such removal though salary for balance of unexpired term unpaid. See also Taylor v. Hutton, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 195; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 755, sustaining removal before by-laws legally adopted.

Proceedings by.—As to requisites of verification of complaint by national bank officers, see Commercial Nat. Bank v. Hutchison, 87 N. Car. 22; s. c., 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 288; and to objections to depositions by national bank officers, see First Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 114 Pa. St. 1, 7.

3. Steckel v. First Nat. Bank, 93 Pa. St. 376; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 758-60; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 719; Ziegler v. First Nat. Bank, 93 Pa. St. 393; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 721; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 758. See also Resh v. First Nat. Bank, 93 Pa. St. 397; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 724; West v. First Nat. Bank, 20 Hun (N. Y.) 408. But compare First Nat. Bank v. Williams, 100 Pa. St. 123.

4. Witters v. Sowles, 31 Fed. Rep. 12; s. c., 24 Blatchf. (U. S.) 332. See also Movius v. Lee, 30 Fed. Rep. 298, 303; s. c., 24 Blatchf. (U. S.) 291; United States v. Harper, 33 Fed. Rep. 471; Clews v. Bardon, 36 Fed. Rep. 617. Compare United States v. Fish, 24 Fed. Rep. 585, 588; s. c., 10 Am. &

Eng. Corp. Cas. 283. Consult also in favor of right of officer of national bank to borrow money therefrom, Blair v. First National Bank of Mansfield, 10 Ohio Leg. News 84; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 173, 175.

5. See United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 76, 83; United States v. Crecilius, 34 Fed. Rep. 30; In re Van Campen, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 419; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 185, 188; United States v. Patterson, 29 Fed. Rep. 775. Concerning a false declaration or statement in a report concerning the affairs of the bank, see United States v. Curtis, 107 U. S. 671; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 91. Compare United States v. Barton, 20 Blatchf. (U. S.) 351. See also United States v. Allen, 10 Biss. (U. S.) 90.

6. See United States v. Conant, 9 Cent. L. J. 129; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 148. As to embezzlement by corporate officers in general, see 6 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 477.

7. See United States v. Northway, 120 U. S. 327; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 199; United States v. Harper, 33 Fed. Rep. 471; United States v. Taintor, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 374; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 256; United States v. Lee, 12 Fed. Rep. 816; United States v. Voorhees, 9 Fed. Rep. 143; In re Van Campen, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 419; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas.

8. See, concerning this offence, United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 655; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 76; United States v. Britton, 108 U. S. 193; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 99; United States v. Fish, 24 Fed. Rep. 585; s. c., 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 283.

ties, largely affected by changes in the National Bank act and the nature of the particular offence charged, as to whether the State as well as the federal courts have jurisdiction in such cases.¹

2. President.—The president of a national or other bank must, like other agents, act within the scope of his authority, in order to bind his principal in the absence of ratification;² but the president may perform such known and approved managerial functions as to justify him, without special authority in the by-laws, in purchasing real estate in satisfaction of suspended paper or a doubtful debt due a national bank;³ and such bank may be bound by his acts, within the apparent scope of his authority, although performed away from the place where the bank is situated.⁴

3. Cashier—Authority.—The extent of the authority of a cashier of a national bank may not, under certain circumstances, be questioned by the bank.⁵ The decisions upon the question of the authority of such a cashier or other officer to receive special deposits, have already been cited in discussing the powers of national banks, and their liability for the loss of such deposits.⁶

Functions, etc.—The functions of a cashier of a national bank, his rights and duties, and the liabilities incurred by or imposed upon him under various circumstances, are considered in the cases cited in the note below.⁷

1. See, in favor of State jurisdiction, Hoke v. People, 122 Ill. 511; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 372; State v. Cross, 101 N. Car. 770; Com. v. Luberg, 94 Pa. St. 85; s. c., probably, 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 408; State v. Tuller, 34 Conn. 280; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 375; Com. v. Tenny, 97 Mass. 50; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 568. Contra, see People v. Fonda, 62 Mich. 401; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 501; United States v. Buskey, 38 Fed. Rep. 99, discussing Com. v. Felton, 101 Mass. 204; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 573, and Com. v. Barry, 116 Mass. 1; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 605. Compare as to passing counterfeit bank notes, Ex parte Houghton, 8 Fed. Rep. 897.

2. Kennedy v. Otoe Co. Nat. Bank, 7 Neb. 59.

3. Libby v. Union Nat. Bank, 99 Ill. 622, s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 358. Concerning unauthorized sale of national bank's property by president, see First Nat. Bank v. Lucas, 21 Neb. 280, 285. As to effect of long acquiescence by bank in acts of its president binding it to his release of a judgment lien, see Winton v. Little, 94 Pa. St. 64; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 725. As to bank's right to profit on resale to himself by president of property purchased for it by him, see National Bank v. Seward, 106 Ind. 264.

In favor of right of president to borrow from bank, see Blair v. First Nat. Bank, 10 Chic. Legal News 84; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 173.

4. Burton v. Burley, 9 Biss. (U. S.) 253; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 134. For circumstances under which a loan was held to be a loan to a national bank, and not to its president, individually, see Eastern Townships Bank v. Vermont Nat. Bank, 22 Fed. Rep. 186. As to when national bank, reorganized out of State bank, may maintain an action against the president for money had and received, see Atlantic Nat. Bank v. Harris, 118 Mass. 147; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 454. As to application to president of a national bank of Texas, statute requiring sworn statement as to shares, see Downs v. State, 22 Tex. App. 393.

Vice President.—As to liability of national bank on guaranty by its vice president, see Peoples' Bank v. Manufacturer's Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 181, s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 97.

5. See Cocheco Nat. Bank v. Haskell, 51 N. H. 116; s. c., 12 Am. Rep. 67; Cooper v. First Nat. Bank, 40 Kan. 5.

6. See paragraph on GENERAL AND INCIDENTAL POWERS.

7. See Parkhurst v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 61 Md. 254; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank

Bond.—Sureties on the official bond of a national bank cashier are not liable where they were induced to become such sureties through a statement published by the directors, according to law, which showed the affairs of the bank to be well managed.¹

4. Teller.—In regard to the teller of a national bank, the decisions have dealt with his bond,² his criminal liability,³ and the liability of the bank for the teller's acts.⁴

5. Directors—Action as Board.—To bind a national bank, the directors must act together as a board; and their separate individual assent is insufficient.⁵

Eligibility.—A transferee of stock in a national bank, which decides not to extend its corporate existence, is not eligible as a director during the period while the bank is winding up its existence.⁶

Authority.—The powers of the directors of a national bank are not regulated by the strict principles of a special trust; for though they act in a fiduciary capacity, yet they are clothed by the federal statute with a power to manage the affairs of the bank, and this implies a considerable element of discretion.⁷

Cas. 463; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 346; Second Nat. Bank v. Burt, 93 N. Y. 233; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 609; Norton v. Derry Nat. Bank, 61 N. H. 589; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 334; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 568; Holmes v. Boyd, 90 Ind. 332; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 414; Allen v. First Nat. Bank, 127 Pa. St. 51; Clews v. Bardon, 36 Fed. Rep. (17; Wilson v. Second Nat. Bank (Pa.), 7 Atl. Rep. 145; Crystal Plate Glass Co. v. Livingston Bank, 6 Mont. 303; Cooke v. State Nat. Bank, 52 N. Y. 96; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 667; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 698; Fisher v. National Bank, 48 N. J. L. 390; Fishkill Sav. Inst. v. National Bank, 80 N. Y. 162; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 595; First Nat. Bank v. Dunbar, 118 Ill. 625; First Nat. Bank v. Brooks, 22 Ill. App. 238; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 387; Houghton v. First Nat. Bank, 26 Wis. 663; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 107; Allen's Appeal, 119 Pa. St. 192, following Com. v. Ketner, 92 Pa. St. 372, or 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 404; United States v. Taintor, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 374; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 256; Pepper v. Planters' Nat. Bank (Ky.), 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 252; First Nat. Bank v. Drake, 29 Kan. 311; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 210; Second Nat. Bank v. Burt, 93 N. Y. 233; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 315.

1. Graves v. Lebanon Nat. Bank, 10 Bush (Ky.) 23; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 50; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 493. But against discharge of surety because cashier was a defaulter at time of giving of bond, and bank neglected to ascertain that fact, see Bowne v. Mount Holly Nat. Bank, 45 N. J. L. 360; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 339; Tapley v. Martin, 116 Mass. 275; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 611. See also, as to teller or officers in general, Wayne v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 52 Pa. St. 343.

2. See New Orleans Nat. Bank v. Wells, 28 La. An. 736; s. c., 26 Am. Rep. 107; Wayne v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 52 Pa. St. 343.

3. See State v. Tuller, 34 Conn. 280; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 375.

4. See Steckel v. First Nat. Bank, 93 Pa. St. 376; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 319; Weckler v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Md. 581; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 95; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 533.

5. First Nat. Bank v. Drake, 35 Kan. 564; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 193; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 445.

6. Richards v. Attleborough Nat. Bank, 148 Mass. 187; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 495. As to ad interim directors, pending conversion of State into National bank, see Lockwood v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 9 R. I. 308; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 253; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 895.

7. Keyser v. Hitz, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 513; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 231. As to power to submit claim to arbitration, see Richards v. Attleborough Nat. Bank, 148 Mass. 187; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 497.

Compensation.—Where the directors of a national bank appoint one of their number to act as a ministerial officer of the corporation, he is prima facie entitled to reasonable compensation for his services as such officer; but an express contract to perform the services without any direct compensation in money controls.¹

Liabilities, etc.—The directors of a national bank or other corporation are bound only to use reasonable diligence, such as men usually exercise in the management of their own affairs of a similar nature; but they are personally liable if they suffer the corporate funds or property to be wasted by gross negligence and inattention to the duties of their trust.²

X. CIRCULATION—Bonds Deposited as Security for.—The ordinary priority of the United States government over other creditors does not apply to bonds or funds designed for the redemption of the circulation of national banks.³

National Bank Currency.—The notes or bills issued by the national banks are included in the phrase, "United States currency."⁴

Certificates of Deposit.—But certificates of deposit in the ordinary form, issued by a national bank to depositors, are not "post-notes" designed or adapted to circulate as money, so as to come within the prohibition of the National Bank act.⁵

1. First Nat. Bank v. Drake, 29 Kan. 311; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 210. On validity of agreement by national bank president to give stock to a person becoming a director, see Rich v. State Nat. Bank, 7 Neb. 201; s. c. 29 Am. Rep. 382; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 284.

2. Ackerman v. Halsey, 37 N. J. Eq. 356; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 239. See also Brinckerhoff v. Bostwick, 88 N. Y. 52; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 591; s. c., on other points, 105 N. Y. 567; Hand v. Atlantic Nat. Bank, 55 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 231; Conway v. Halsey, 44 N. J. L. 462. Consult further concerning liabilities of national bank directors, Clews v. Bardon, 36 Fed. Rep. 617; Movius v. Lee, 24 Blatchf. (U. S.) 291; Witters v. Sowles, 24 Blatchf. (U. S.) 332; United States v. Neale, 14 Fed. Rep. 767.

Conduct in General.—See Mayor etc. of New York v. Tenth Nat. Bank, 111 N. Y. 446; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 655; Hayward v. Eliot Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 611; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 1.

Knowledge.—First Nat. Bank v. Christopher, 40 N. L. 435; s. c., 29 Am. Rep. 262. See also Third Nat. Bank v. Harrison, 3 McCrary (U. S.) 316; Brown v. Firm, 34 Fed. Rep. 124; First Nat. Bank v. Drake, 29 Kan. 311; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 210.

3. See Cook Co. Nat. Bank v. United States, 107 U. S. 445; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 68; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 533; Jackson v. United States, 20 Ct. of Cl. 298. See also, as to conflicting claims to surplus of proceeds of such bonds, Van Antwerp v. Hulburd, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 282, 283; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 219. As to priority of government over attaching creditor, see Schmidt v. First Nat. Bank, 22 La. An. 314; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 505.

4. State v. Gasting, 23 La. An. 609; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 508. See also, as to nature of such notes or bills, Horne v. Greene, 52 Miss. 452; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 643 (opinion of PEYTON, J., before reargument). As to right of congress to restrain the circulation of any notes not issued under its authority, Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 533; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 22. And as to validity of circulating notes of national banks without the treasury seal, United States v. Bennett, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 357. The taxation of such currency has already been treated under EXEMPTION FROM TAXATION IN GENERAL.

5. Riddle v. First Nat. Bank, 27 Fed. Rep. 503. See also Hunt's Appeal, 141 Mass. 515; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 474.

XI. DEPOSITS—National Bank as Depository of Public Moneys.—Designating a national bank as a depository of public moneys does not constitute it an agent of the government, or render the government liable for moneys lost by a failure of such bank.¹

Demand and Interest.—Where, however, a national bank which holds deposits, refuses to pay the same on demand, and thereafter a receiver is appointed, the depositor is entitled to interest on his deposits from the date of the demand.²

Set-off by Depositor.—But there is a conflict in the authorities upon the question whether a depositor in a national bank which has failed and passed into the hands of a receiver, may set off the amount of his deposit against his debt to the bank.³

Application of Deposits.—A national bank which has received money from a depositor and credited him with it on its books, and thereby engaged to honor his checks, is estopped from alleging that the money belonged to another,⁴ and cannot apply it to another's account.⁵

Loss of Special Deposits.—So a national bank which has been accustomed to receive United States bonds or other valuables as special deposits gratuitously, is, according to the doctrine now prevalent, liable for any loss thereof occurring through the want of that degree of care which good business men would expect in keeping property of such value.⁶

1. Branch v. United States, 12 Ct. of Cl. 281; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 363. See also, as to deposit of trust funds with national banks, State Nat. Bank v. Reilly, 124 Ill. 464; Central Nat. Bank v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 104 U. S. 54; Third Nat. Bank v. Stillwater Gas Co., 36 Minn. 75.

2. National Bank v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 94 U. S. 437; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 133. But see, as to when demand not a pre-requisite to recovery, Chemical Nat. Bank v. Bailey, 12 Blatchf. (U. S.) 480; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 260. And further concerning demand, Humphrey v. County Nat. Bank, 113 Pa. St. 417; Viets v. Union Nat. Bank, 101 N. Y. 563; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 743.

3. See, in favor of such set-off, Platt v. Bentley, 11 Am. L. Reg., N. S. 171; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 758, and also as to savings bank, New Amsterdam Sav. Bank v. Tartter, 54 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 385. Against such set-off, see Venango Nat. Bank v. Taylor, 56 Pa. St. 14; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 842, and compare also, as to savings bank, Osborn v. Byrne, 43 Conn. 155; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 641. Concerning want of right of set-off upon dishonor of check given in payment to national bank by a holder of a note, see Union Nat. Bank v. Can- onsburg Iron Co., 6 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 577.

4. First Nat. Bank v. Mason, 95 Pa. St. 113.

5. Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Alexander, 120 Pa. St. 476. See further, concerning application of deposits in various cases, Flournoy v. First Nat. Bank, 78 Ga. 222; Continental Nat. Bank v. Weems, 69 Tex. 489; s. c., 5 Am. St. Rep. 85; Drovers' Nat. Bank v. O'Hare, 119 Ill. 646; Neff v. Green Co. Nat. Bank, 89 Mo. 581; National Bank v. Indiana Banking Co., 114 Ill. 483. Concerning note payable at bank, see Grisson v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 87 Tenn. 350, 354; s. c., 10 Am. St. Rep. 669. As to paying out deposits on checks, see Lynch v. First Nat. Bank, 107 N. Y. 179; s. c., 1 Am. St. Rep. 803. Also Etna Nat. Bank v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 46 N. Y. 82; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 314; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Nat. Bank, 139 Mass. 513. And as to paying forged check, see Weinstein v. Jefferson Bank, 69 Tex. 38; s. c., 5 Am. St. Rep. 23. But compare First Nat. Bank v. State Bank, 22 Neb. 769; s. c., 3 Am. St. Rep. 294; Commercial etc. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 30 Md. 11; s. c., 96 Am. Dec. 554; Atlanta Nat. Bank v. Burke, 81 Ga. 597.

6. Bank v. Zent, 39 Ohio St. 105;

Certifying Checks, etc.—The provision of the National Bank act declaring it to be unlawful for national banks to certify any check unless the drawer has the amount thereof on deposit, does not affect the validity of a check certified in violation thereof.¹

XII. COLLECTIONS—Liability of National Bank Concerning.—Collecting commercial paper is a part of the regular business of banking, when carried on under national or under other bank charters;² and a national bank will be liable for negligence or misconduct therein, the same as any other bank, or agent.³

Receipt for Collection Only or Otherwise.—In the case of national as of other banks, there is a difference in liability, etc., according as negotiable paper is received for collection only, or for collection and credit, etc.⁴

In Cash Only.—A national or other bank, to which a check is entrusted for collection, has no right to accept anything in lieu of money, and if it accepts a cashier's check, or other obligation, in place of cash, its liability to the depositor becomes fixed.⁵

XIII. PAYMENTS—In General.—In the case of national as well as other banks, various questions have arisen out of payment of checks by national banks, and cognate matters.⁶

s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 698. The authorities on this subject have been cited under GENERAL AND INCIDENTAL POWERS. See also White v. Commonwealth Nat. Bank, 4 Brewst. (Pa.) 234; First Nat. Bank v. Citizens' Bank, 21 Int. Rev. Rec. 382. Consult further, for liability in various cases, Anderkerk v. Central Nat. Bank, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 1; Saly v. Hibernia Nat. Bank, 39 La. An. 90; Cutler v. American Exchange Nat. Bank, 113 N. Y. 593; Fisk v. Germania Nat. Bank, 40 La. An. 820; Hughes v. First Nat. Bank, 110 Pa. St. 428.

1. Thompson v. St. Nicholas Nat. Bank, 113 N. Y. 325; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 663.

Certificates of Deposit.—As to right to issue, see under CIRCULATION. As to effect and transfer of certificate of deposit on national bank, see First Nat. Bank v. Clark, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 16.

2. Mound City Paint & Color Co. v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 4 Utah 353.

3. Mound City Paint & Color Co. v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 4 Utah 353. See, for implied recognition of such liability, Exchange Nat. Bank v. Third Nat. 112 U. S. 276; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Goodman, 109 Pa. St. 422; s. c., 58 Am. Rep. 728. As to liability in various cases, see Power v. First Nat. Bank, 6 Mont. 251; Harvey v. Girard Nat. Bank, 119 Pa. St. 212; Drovers' Nat. Bank v. Anglo-Ameri- can Packing etc. Co., 117 Ill. 100; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 855; First Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 114 Pa. St. 1.

4. Concerning rights of bank where receipt for collection only, see Freeman v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 78 Iowa 150. But compare Averell v. Second Nat. Bank, 6 Mackey (D. C.) 358; Stark v. United States Nat. Bank, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 506. As to holding national bank as garnishee, see First Nat. Bank v. Leppel, 9 Colo. 594. And as to proceeds of collection, see City Nat. Bank v. Martin, 70 Tex. 643; Manufacturers' Nat. Bank v. Continental Bank, 148 Mass. 553. But compare with latter case, First Nat. Bank v. Armstrong, 39 Fed. Rep. 231.

Concerning "collection and return," see Continental Bank v. Weems, 69 Tex. 489; s. c., 5 Am. St. Rep. 85. And consult Philadelphia Nat. Bank v. Dowd, 38 Fed. Rep. 172. Compare as to special endorsement for collection, First Nat. Bank v. Armstrong, 36 Fed. Rep. 59; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Armstrong, 39 Fed. Rep. 684; Fifth Nat. Bank v. Armstrong, 40 Fed. Rep. 46. As to "collection and credit," see First Nat. Bank v. Bank of Monroe, 33 Fed. Rep. 408; German Nat. Bank v. Burns, 12 Colo. 539.

5. Fifth Nat. Bank v. Ashworth, 123 Pa. St. 212.

6. See generally, as to payment of checks, Brennan v. Merchants' Nat.

Paying One of a Set of Checks.—Payment by a national bank of one of a set of checks, as well as drafts, is a discharge of the whole set.¹

XIV. LOANS AND DISCOUNTS.—Most matters concerning this topic have been already considered. Some miscellaneous decisions are cited in the note below.²

XV. WINDING UP AND LIQUIDATION—1. Winding Up—How Far Provisions of National Bank Act Exclusive.—National banks, if insolvent, can be wound up only in the mode provided by the National Bank act, and were not subject to the late National Bankrupt act;³ but in cases not within the special provisions of the National Bank act, a national bank may be proceeded against in the same manner as any other debtor or corporation, and a receiver appointed when such a course is proper.⁴

Effect of Appointment of Receiver.—The appointment of a receiver under the National Bank act does not, however, work an absolute dissolution of the corporation, or prevent it from being subjected to suits,⁵ or cause its property, outside of its shares, to Bank, 62 Mich. 343; Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Importers' etc. Nat. Bank, 44 Hun (N. Y.) 386; Canonsburg Iron Co. v. Union Nat. Bank (Pa.), 6 Atl. Rep. 574; Armstrong v. Second Nat. Bank, 38 Fed. Rep. 883. As to payment of raised draft by national bank through mistake, see Nat. Park Bank v. Seaboard Bank, 114 N. Y. 28. As to settlements through clearing houses in which national banks are concerned, see National City Bank v. New York Exchange Bank, 101 N. Y. 595. As to effect of taking certified check, see Borne v. First Nat. Bank (Ind. 1890), 24 N. E. Rep. 173.

1. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Ritzinger, 118 Ill. 484.

2. Concerning the scope of a guaranty of the "full and ultimate payment of all loans," see National Exchange Bank v. Gay, 57 Conn. 224. As to transaction which may be discount of paper or deposit of money, see First Nat. Bank v. Bank of Monroe, 33 Fed. Rep. 408. As to admissibility of proof of local custom of bankers to show that borrowing money was within the scope of the customary business of a national bank, see Crain v. First Nat. Bank, 114 Ill. 516, 523. As to when bank holds money as pledge for discounts of customer, see Humphrey v. County Nat. Bank, 113 Pa. St. 417.

As to loan or discount of negotiable paper, see subdivision of POWERS CONCERNING NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS, STOCKS, ETC.

Concerning the authority of national banks to loan money on mortgages of real property, see subdivision on POWERS CONCERNING REAL ESTATE.

Concerning loans exceeding one-tenth of capital stock, see subdivision on LOANS WHICH ARE ULTRA VIRES.

As to general power of a national bank to take stocks or bonds as security, see subdivision on POWERS CONCERNING PERSONAL PROPERTY. And see same subdivision for power of a national bank to take pledges or mortgages of chattels.

3. In re Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 499; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 192. So the dissolution of a national bank can be declared only in the mode prescribed by the National Bank act. Union Gold Mining Co. v. Rocky Mountain Nat. Bank, 1 Colo. 531; s. c., on other points, 90 U. S. 640, or 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 151.

4. Irons v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 301; s. c., 3 Myer's Fed. Dec. 201; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 403.

5. Bank of Bethel v. Pahquioque Bank, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 383; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 77; affirming 36 Conn. 325, or 4 Am. Rep. 80; Green v. Walkill Nat. Bank, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 63; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 786. See also Security Bank v. National Bank, 4 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 518; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 774; Chemical Nat. Bank v. Bailey, 12 Blatchf (U. S.) 480; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 260.

cease to be exempt from taxation.¹

Interest on Claims Pending Administration.—Under that act, where a national bank is declared in default by the comptroller of the currency, he is authorized to appoint a receiver of its affairs, and to place such receiver in possession of its assets; and if a sufficient fund is realized from the assets to pay all claims against the bank, and to leave a surplus, the comptroller ought to allow interest on the claims, during the period of administration, before appropriating the surplus to the shareholders of the bank.²

Voluntary Liquidation.—Not only does such involuntary liquidation of a national bank fail to dissolve the corporation or render it free from liability to suit, but the same is true of the voluntary liquidation authorized by the National Bank act.³

Forfeiture of Rights and Privileges.—So a forfeiture of the rights and privileges of a national banking association, for violation of the provisions of the National Bank act, can be determined only in a suit instituted by the comptroller of the currency in his own name; and the association must stand until dissolved in that way.⁴

Dissolution by Federal Court.—Nor does dissolution of a national bank by a federal court affect rights of a creditor whose action against the bank was pending at the time in a State court.⁵

2. Receiver—Relation to Government.—A receiver appointed to wind up a national bank is an officer of the United States, so as to bring an action brought by him within the jurisdiction of a federal court;⁶ but he does not represent the government so that Rosenblatt v. Johnston, 104 U. S. 462; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 32.

2. Chemical Nat. Bank v. Bailey, 12 Blatchf. (U. S.) 480; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 260.

3. Ordway v. Central Nat. Bank, 47 Md. 217; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 559; Central Nat. Bank v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 104 U. S. 54; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 20. Concerning creditor's remedy against national bank in voluntary liquidation, see Merchants' etc. Nat. Bank v. Trustees of Masonic Hall, 65 Ga. 603. Concerning amendment to act providing for suit to enforce individual liability of stockholders in cases of voluntary liquidation, see Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27; s. c., 17 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 71; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 211; Harvey v. Lord, 11 Biss. (U. S.) 144; s. c., 10 Fed. Rep. 236; Central Nat. Bank v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 104 U. S. 54; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 20. Concerning the powers of officers after the bank has gone into liquidation, see Shrader v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 133 U. S.

67. Concerning officers or trustees chosen to effect the liquidation, see Richards v. Attleborough Nat. Bank, 148 Mass. 187; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 495; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Gaslin, 41 Minn. 552. Concerning successorship to a national bank which has gone into liquidation, see First Nat. Bank v. Marshall, 26 Ill. App. 440; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 401; Eaus v. Exchange Bank, 79 Mo. 182.

4. Union Gold Mining Co. v. Rocky Mountain Nat. Bank, 1 Colo. 531; s. c., on other points, 96 U. S. 640, or 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 151. See also Stevens v. Monongahela Nat. Bank, 88 Pa. St. 157; s. c., 32 Am. Rep. 438. As to the nature of the violation required to cause forfeiture, see Brinckerhoff v. Bostwick, 88 N. Y. 52; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 591.

5. Bank of Montreal v. Fidelity Nat. Bank, 1 N. Y. Supp. 852; s. c., mem, 49 Hun (N. Y.) 607.

6. Platt v. Beach, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 303; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 182; Staunton v. Wilkeson, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 357; s. c., 2

a judgment can be rendered against it, because suit is brought against the receiver and the comptroller of the currency.¹

Suits by.—The receiver so appointed may sue for demands due the bank, either in his own name as receiver, or in the name of the bank,² and in order to sue for an ordinary debt or claim, he need not obtain the order of the comptroller of the currency;³ nor can the debtors, when sued by the receiver, enquire into the legality of his appointment;⁴ but in determining to bring suit against the stockholders of the bank, to enforce their individual liability, the receiver is required to act under the direction of the comptroller, and subject to his decision of the matter.⁵

Appointment.—The ordinary appointment of a receiver, at the instance of the comptroller of the currency, to wind up the affairs of a national bank in default, and the effect of such appointment have already been indicated. So where a national bank is insolvent and in process of voluntary liquidation, and its affairs are being greatly mismanaged by its managing agents to the injury of its creditors and stockholders, some of whom are being favored at the expense of others, a receiver may be appointed at the instance of one of the stockholders not favored; and a provisional receiver may be appointed in such a case, even where the bank only has been made a defendant.⁶

Nat. Bank Cas. 162; Frelinghuysen v. Baldwin, 12 Fed. Rep. 395, 397, 398; Price v. Abbott, 17 Fed. Rep. 506; Armstrong v. Ettleshon, 56 Fed. Rep. 209. See also Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 498; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 17, 21.

1. Case v. Terrell, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 199; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 67, holding that the receiver represents merely the bank, its stockholders and creditors. It is further ruled that such receiver holds only the estate and title of the bank in its assets, and has no greater rights in enforcing their collection than the bank itself would have had. Casey v. La Société Credit Mobilier, 2 Wood (U. S.) 77, 84; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 285.

2. National Bank v. Kennedy, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 19; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 87, 89; Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 198; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 17; Movius v. Lee, 30 Fed. Rep. 295; Staunton v. Wilkeson, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 357, 359; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 162, 164; Bank of Bethel v. Pahquioque Bank, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 383; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 77; Case v. Berwin, 22 La. An. 321.

Set-off must have existed at time bank passed into hands of receiver. Balch v. Wilson, 25 Minn. 299; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 457; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 274; Steph- ens v. Schuchmann, 32 Mo. App. 333; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 540. And see, as to right to plead set-off in general, Hade v. McVay, 31 Ohio St. 231; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 353.

3. National Bank v. Kennedy, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 19; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 87.

4. Cadle v. Baker, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 650; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank.

5. Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 498; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 17, 20. The conclusiveness of the comptroller's determination is sustained in Casey v. Galli, 94 U. S. 673; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 142; Bailey v. Sawyer, 4 Dill. (U. S.) 463; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 356. As to exemption from bond on bringing writ of error or appeal to United States Supreme Court, see Pacific Bank v. Mixer, 114 U. S. 463, 464.

6. Elwood v. First Nat. Bank, 41 Kan. 475. See further, as to when a receiver will be appointed, Merchants' etc. Nat. Bank v. Trustees of Mechanic's Hall, 63 Ga. 549; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 220, upholding power of State court to try and reach assets before appointment by federal court. Irons v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 301; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 203; Wright v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 1 Flipp. (U. S.) 568; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank

Functions.—The receiver of a national bank, appointed by the comptroller of the currency, is the agent of the United States, and is limited as to his functions by the object of the receivership, and the duties which it involves.¹

3. Insolvency—Effect of.—When an association, organized under the National Bank act, becomes insolvent, and passes into the hands of a receiver under the provisions of that act, the respective rights and liabilities then existing between the bank and its creditors and debtors become fixed;² and all its property and assets thereupon become subject, after satisfying the prior claim, if any, of the government on account of its notes, to disposal and ratable distribution among all its general creditors upon the principle of equality;³ nor can any subsequent lien be created, or right or preference obtained, in respect to any of the assets or property of the bank, which did not exist at that time.⁴

What Constitutes.—The term "act of insolvency," used in the National Bank act, has been considered to mean any act which would be an act of insolvency on the part of an individual banker, Cas. 321. As to agent displacing receiver, see McConville v. Gilmour, 36 Fed. Rep. 277.

1. Ellis v. Little, 27 Kan. 707; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 434; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 440. See Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 498; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 17, 19, 20.

Powers Concerning Property in General.—Not to exchange instead of selling property. Ellis v. Little, 27 Kan. 707; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 434; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 440. Nor to withhold from owner property in custody of bank. Corn Exchange Bank v. Blye, 101 N. Y. 303; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 634.

Power to Compromise a Debt.—The receiver may compromise doubtful debts on the order of a court of record of competent jurisdiction, such as a district court. In re Platt, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 534; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 181, 182. As to when compromise will not be opened, see Henderson v. Myers, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 616; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 759. As to want of authority to order composition of debts not bad nor doubtful, see Pierce v. Yates, 19 Alb. L. J. 295; s. c., 25 Int. Rev. Rec. 113; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 204.

Control over bonds deposited to secure circulation lacking. Van Antwerp v. Hulburd, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 282; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 219.

Title to assets same as that of bank, so that receiver cannot avoid a pledge which the bank itself could not avoid. Casey v. La Société de Credit Mobilier,

2 Wood (U. S.) 77, 84; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 285.

Sale by, under order of court when not set aside. In re Third Nat. Bank, 9 Biss. (U. S.) 535.

Claim Upon Proceeds of Collections.—See First Nat. Bank v. Armstrong, 39 Fed. Rep. 231.

Relation to Courts.—Control of State court over. Ocean Nat. Bank v. Carll, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 237; s. c., with opinion, 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 792. Right of removal to federal court. Bird v. Cockrem, 2 Wood (U. S.) 32; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 284. Application to federal court. Harvey v. Allen, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 29; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. *439, relying upon First Nat. Bank v. Colby, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 609; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 109. Rights where not a party to action, People's Bank v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 422, 424, 425; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 670; Tracy v. First Nat. Bank, 37 N. Y. 523.

2. Balch v. Wilson, 25 Minn. 299; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 467; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 274.

3. See First Nat. Bank v. Colby, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 609; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 109.

4. Balch v. Wilson, 25 Minn. 299; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 467; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 274. As to transfer of property to indemnify sureties, before insolvency, see Price v. Coleman, 22 Fed. Rep. 694, 696, 697. As to effect of insolvency on collections, see Manu-

and not simply such an act as authorizes the comptroller to appoint a receiver.¹

Remedies After.—The property of a national bank, attached at the suit of an individual creditor after the bank has become insolvent, cannot be subjected to sale for the payment of his demand against the claim for the property by a receiver of the bank subsequently appointed.² Nor can an injunction issue before judgment against the receiver of a national bank.³ And a tax levied on the property of a national bank subsequent to its insolvency is subordinate to the rights of a receiver appointed after such levy.⁴

4. Preferences—In General.—The provision of the National Bank act which prohibits all transfers by any national banking association made after the commission of an act of insolvency, or in contemplation thereof, with a view to the preference of one creditor to another, is directed to a preference,⁵ and not to the giving of security when a debt is created;⁶ and if the transaction be free from fraud in fact, and is intended merely to adequately protect a loan made at the time, the creditor can retain property transferred to secure a loan until the debt is paid, though the debtor is insolvent, and the creditor has reason at the time to believe that to be the fact.⁷ But it is sufficient to invalidate such a transfer, that it facturers' Nat. Bank v. Continental Bank, 148 Mass. 553. Also Philadelphia Nat. Bank v. Dowd, 38 Fed. Rep. 172.

1. Irons v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 301; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 203. See also to the effect that the word "insolvency," in such connection, is synonymous with the same word as used in the bankrupt act, Case v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 2 Wood (U. S.) 23; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 276. As to what is sufficient evidence of insolvency, see Wheelock v. Kost, 77 Ill. 296; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 406.

2. First Nat. Bank v. Colby, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 609; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 109. See also Harvey v. Allen, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 29; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 439.

Attachment.—Indeed, according to a recent ruling of the Supreme Court of the United States, it seems that there can be no attachment of a national bank before judgment, whether it be insolvent or otherwise. Pacific Nat. Bank v. Mixter, 124 U. S. 721; s. c., as Butler v. Coleman, 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 291. Compare previous rulings in Market Nat. Bank v. Pacific Nat. Bank, 30 Hun (N. Y.) 50; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 672; National Shoe etc. Bank v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 89 N. Y. 467; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 601; Raynor v.

Pacific Nat. Bank, 93 N. Y. 371; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 624.

3. Warner v. Armstrong (Cin. Super. Ct.), 21 W. L. Bull. 124.

4. Woodward v. Ellsworth, 4 Colo. 580.

No Priority to United States.—See Cook Co. Nat. Bank v. United States, 107 U. S. 445; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 533; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 68; reversing 9 Biss. (U. S.) 55, or 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 128. Consult also Jackson v. United States, 20 Ct. of Cl. 298. But compare Schmidt v. First Nat. Bank, 22 La. An. 314; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 505.

Set-off of Deposits.—See under DEPOSITS.

Control of Insolvent National Bank.—See Jackson v. United States, 20 Ct. of Cl. 298, 305.

5. The object sought to be accomplished by the provision is the distribution of the assets of the bank fairly and without preferences. Corn Exchange Bank v. Blye, 101 N. Y. 303; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 634. See Robinson v. National Bank, 81 N. Y. 385; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 508.

6. See Casey v. La Société de Credit Mobilier, 2 Wood (U. S.) 77; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 285.

7. Armstrong v. Chemical Nat. Bank, 41 Fed. Rep. 234, 238-39.

is made in contemplation of insolvency, and either with a view to prevent the application of the assets of the bank in the manner prescribed by the statute, or with a view to the preference of one creditor to another.¹

Party Who Must Know or Contemplate Insolvency.—Yet to make transfers, assignments, deposits and payments void, under the National Bank act, it is only necessary that the insolvency should be in the contemplation of the bank making the transfers, etc., and not that it should also be known to or contemplated by the party to whom they are made.²

5. Claims Against Suspended Bank—Not Confined to Strict Debts.—The claims against an insolvent national bank on which a dividend may be declared, are not limited to debts in any strict sense, but include the claim of a person who has left United States bonds on special deposit for safekeeping, and has not been able to obtain them again.³

Amount Paid on Claim.—The payment of a creditor of an insolvent national bank by the comptroller must be based on the amount due on the adjudicated claim at the date of the failure, and not on the amount due when the claim is adjudicated.⁴

XVI. SUITS AND REMEDIES—1. Jurisdiction Over Suits or Proceedings.—The jurisdiction of the federal courts over actions concerning national bank, has been upheld in the case of a suit to quiet title to land brought by such a bank,⁵ but not in an action brought by assignors of national bank against a receiver of the bank, because they had been compelled to contribute as owners of such

As to cashier's transfer of securities held a bona fide purchase and not a preference, see Tuttle v. Frelinghuysen, 38 N. J. Eq. 12; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 576.

1. National Security Bank v. Butler, 129 U. S. 223; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 320. As to transfers to national bank by its insolvent cashier by way of preference, see Witters v. Sowles, 32 Fed. Rep. 762. One creditor held not entitled to preference over the rest, where fraudulent wrecking of bank by its officers. Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Dowd, 35 Fed. Rep. 340. As to when depositor of draft with national bank which becomes insolvent may recover proceeds from collecting agent of bank, see Craigie v. Smith, 14 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 409. Mortgage of all his property by cashier and stockholder of insolvent national bank to secure a depositor, as amounting to a preference. Gatch v. Fitch, 34 Fed. Rep. 566, 569-70. As to allegations concerning transfers by bank, not open to objection as stating merely conclusions of law, see Brown v. Carbonate Bank of Leadville, 34

Fed. Rep. 776, 778. As to set-off by depositor's assignee, as amounting to a preference, see Venango Nat. Bank v. Taylor, 56 Pa. St. 14; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 842.

2. Case v. Citizens' Bank, 2 Woods (U. S.) 23; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 276. But compare Roberts v. Hill, 24 Fed. Rep. 571.

3. Turner v. First Nat. Bank, 26 Iowa 562, 565; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 454, 457-8.

As to when action lies against receiver of suspended national bank by pledgee of stock for refusal to transfer it on books of bank, see Case v. Bank, 100 U. S. 446, 456; s. c., 3 Meyers' Fed. Dec. 231, 236; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 47, 56.

4. White v. Knox, 111 U. S. 784; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 128, 129. Concerning interest on claims, see National Bank v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 94 U. S. 437; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 133; Chemical Nat. Bank v. Bailey, 12 Blatchf. (U. S.) 480; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 260.

5. Reynolds v. Crawfordville First Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 405; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 131.

stock toward the liabilities of the bank, on account of the failure to fill in the name of the assignee in the transfer book of the bank.¹

2. Parties and Pleadings—Parties.—In regard to actions by and against national banks, as in the case of other actions, the courts have been concerned with questions, not generally involving matters peculiar to the present subject, respecting necessary and proper parties,² real and nominal parties,³ and joinder of parties.⁴

Pleadings.—Similarly in regard to pleadings in actions by and against national banks, the courts have passed upon the sufficiency of the allegations of the complaint,⁵ the mode of making such allegations,⁶ the denials in the answer⁷ and the right of set-off or counterclaim.⁸

3. Maintenance of Actions—In General.—A State statute is not in conflict with the National Banking act where it authorizes the State banking institutions to become national banks and to continue to use their corporate names for the purpose of protecting and defending suits instituted by and against it.⁹

Actions by National Banks.—And a national bank may maintain an action in its own name against an endorser of a promissory note of which it is the purchaser or holder, irrespective of the question whether it was authorized to acquire title to notes by purchase or not.¹⁰

Actions Against National Banks.—But an assignee in bankruptcy cannot maintain an action against a national bank for the

1. Le Sassier v. Kennedy, 123 U. S. 521; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 288.

Against National Bank Officers.—For note of the conflicting decisions in regard to the jurisdiction of State or Federal courts over offences committed by, see under OFFICERS IN GENERAL, discussion of their criminal liabilities.

As to jurisdiction of State court over an indictment for forgery against a book-keeper in a national bank, see Hoke v. People, 122 Ill. 511; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 372.

Receiver's Relation to.—The receiver of a national bank in process of liquidation, is an officer of the United States, so as to be entitled to sue in the federal courts. Armstrong v. Ettlesohn, 36 Fed. Rep. 209. Nor does a receiver of a national bank estop himself from questioning the jurisdiction of the court by causing himself to be substituted as defendant in an action against the bank. Cadle v. Tracy, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 101. s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 230.

2. See Cleveland v. Shoeman, 40 Ohio St. 176; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 701; Brinckerhoff v. Bostwick, 88 N. Y. 52; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 591; Tur- ner v. First Nat. Bank, 26 Iowa 562; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 458.

3. Foss v. First Nat. Bank, 1 McCrary (U. S.) 474; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 104.

4. Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 408; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 17.

5. Farmers & Mechanics' Nat. Bank v. Rogers, 17 N. Y. St. Rep. 381; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 683; Bunday v. Cocke, 128 U. S. 185; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 316; Movius v. Lee, 30 Fed. Rep. 298; Third Nat. Bank v. Teal, 5 Fed. Rep. 503.

6. Schuyler Nat. Bank v. Bullong, 24 Neb. 821; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 555.

7. National Bank v. Orcutt, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 256.

8. Welles v. Stout, 38 Fed. Rep. 807; Louis Snyder's Sons Co. v. Armstrong, 37 Fed. Rep. 18; Armstrong v. Warner, 21 W. L. Bull. (Cin. Super. Ct.) 136.

9. Thomas v. Farmers' Bank, 46 Md. 43; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 248. See also Atlantic Nat. Bank v. Harris, 118 Mass. 147; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 454.

10. National Pemberton Bank v. Porter, 125 Mass. 333; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 235; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 266. Com- value of shares of its stock belonging to the bankrupt, which the bank, under claim of lien against the bankrupt, refused to transfer to the assignee.¹

Abatement of Actions.—A suit against a national bank to enforce the collection of a demand is abated by a decree dissolving the corporation, and forfeiting its rights and privileges.²

Removal of Causes.—This subject has already been considered in discussing location and citizenship, and other topics.³

4. Trials.—The litigated matters concerning trials of action by and against national banks include dismissal,⁴ verdict,⁵ the attorney conducting the suit,⁶ and the proof of the bank's corporate existence.⁷

5. Appeals.—In order to give the United States supreme court jurisdiction on appeal from a State supreme court, under the National Banking act, the "title, right, privilege or immunity specially set up or claimed," must be claimed by the plaintiff in error for himself, and not for a third person, in whose title he has no interest.⁸

6. Remedies By and Against.—The remedies by and against national banks, which have been the subject of adjudication in pare Ticonic Nat. Bank v. Bagley, 68 Me. 249; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 245.

1. Meyers v. Valley Nat. Bank, 18 Bankr. Reg. 34; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 156. But compare generally, as to litigation by such assignee. See In re Duryea, 17 Bankr. Reg. 495; s. c., 2 Nat. Bank Cas. 170. The right of a borrower's assignee in bankruptcy to sue for double interest where usury is taken, has already been considered in discussing interest. As to right to maintain action against national bank on claim disallowed by receiver, see Bank of Bethel v. Pahquiloque Nat. Bank, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 383; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 77.

2. First Nat. Bank v. Colby, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 609; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 109.

3. Against right of removal to federal court, of action against United States court commissioners for alleged illegal costs and fees, see Berchley v. Gilbert, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 147.

4. Reynolds v. Crawfordsville First Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 405; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 131.

5. Logan Co. Nat. Bank v. Townsend (Ky. 1887), 3 S. W. Rep. 122; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 448.

6. Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 498; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 17, 19.

7. Hungerford Nat. Bank v. Van Nostrand, 106 Mass. 559, 560. As to want of power of court to grant to receiver order compelling bank to pay money into court, see Balestier v. Metropolitan Nat. Bank, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 564.

8. Miller v. National Bank, 106 U. S. 542; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 52, relying, in support of general principle, upon Owings v. Norwood, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 344; Montgomery v. Hernandez, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 129; Henderson v. Tennessee, 10 How. (U. S.) 323; Wynn v. Morris, 20 How. (U. S.) 5; Hale v. Gaines, 22 How. (U. S.) 160; Verden v. Coleman, 1 Black (U. S.) 472, and Long v. Converse, 91 U. S. 105.

Certificate of Division of Opinion.—Concerning requisites for certificate of division of opinion to United States supreme court, see Williamsport Nat. Bank v. Knapp, 119 U. S. 357, 360; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 184 (s. c., reported below, 15 Fed. Rep. 333), citing Saunders v. Gould, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 392; United States v. Bailey, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 267; Weeth v. New England Mortgage Security Co., 106 U. S. 605; California Cut Stone Paving Co. v. Monitor, 113 U. S. 609, and Waterville v. Van Slyke, 116 U. S. 699. For a question held too vague and general to be answered, see United States v. Northway, 120 U. S. 327; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 199, 201.

Review on Appeal.—See Prosser v. First Nat. Bank, 106 N. Y. 677; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 646, 648; Stanley v.

Definition.

NATIONAL CORPORATIONS.

Definition.

the courts, include those arising on mistake in payment,¹ on information for forfeiture of charter,² or in case of voluntary liquidation,³ or concerning garnishment⁴ or injunction.⁵

7. Attachment—Against National Banks.—There has been much conflict upon the question of the right to the remedy by attachment against national banks, but the latest view, adopted by the Supreme Court of the United States and so likely to prevail, is that such remedy, since the act of 1873, cannot be invoked in the federal courts any more than in the State courts, and that its denial is not confined to cases of actual or contemplated insolvency on the part of the bank.⁶

By National Banks.—A national bank has been held entitled to attach the shares of a stockholder therein for his debt due the bank.⁷

NATIONAL CORPORATIONS—(See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 184; FOREIGN CORPORATIONS, vol. 8, p. 329; FRANCHISES, vol. 8, p. 584; NATIONAL BANKS; TAXATION)—Creation.—Corporations may be created by act of congress, and, in order to distinguish these from the corporations existing under the laws of the States, the term national corporations has recently come into use. The constitution of the United States confers no direct power on congress to create corporations, but the power is conceded to exist whenever it is deemed an appropriate measure to carry into effect any of the powers expressly given by the constitution.⁸ This power has been exercised in the creation

Albany Co., 121 U. S. 535; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 268, 273.

Point First Taken on Appeal.—See Fostier v. New Orleans Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 439; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 140, 145.

1. See Manufacturers' Nat. Bank v. Swift, 70 Md. 515; s. c., 14 Am. St. Rep. 381, and note 387. Consult also Oddie v. National City Bank, 45 N. Y. 735; s. c., 6 Am. Rep. 160; National Park Bank v. Seaboard Bank, 114 N. Y. 28. But compare Merchants' Nat. Bank v. National Eagle Bank, 101 Mass. 281; s. c., 100 Am. Dec. 120.

2. Trenholm v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 38 Fed. Rep. 323.

3. Merchants' etc. Nat. Bank v. Trustees of Masonic Hall, 65 Ga. 603.

4. Havens v. National City Bank, 6 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 346; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 783.

5. Shoemaker v. National Mechanics' Bank, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 416; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 169, 170.

6. Pacific Nat. Bank v. Mixter, 124 U. S. 721; s. c., as Butler v. Coleman, 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 291 (1888), followed in Safford v. First Nat. Bank, 61 Vt.

373, and in Bank of Montreal v. Fidelity Nat. Bank, 49 Hun (N. Y.) 607 mem.; s. c., 1 N. Y. Supp. 852. But compare contra, previously, Continental Nat. Bank v. Folsom, 78 Ga. 449; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 350; Peoples' Bank v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 422; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 672; Raynor v. Pacific Nat. Bank, 93 N. Y. 371; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 624; National Shoe etc. Bank v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 89 N. Y. 467; s. c., 3 Nat. Bank Cas. 601. The constitutionality of the statutory provision on the subject is upheld in Chesapeake Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 40 Md. 269; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 531.

7. Hagar v. Union Nat. Bank, 63 Me. 509, 513; s. c., 1 Nat. Bank Cas. 523.

8. 1 Kent Comm. 248; Story Const., § 1259; Hare Am. Const. Law 115.

This principle was maintained in the discussions relating to the granting of charters by congress to the national banks, first in 1791 and again in 1816, and was established by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in construing the later of the above acts of incorporation. The earlier act was of corporations intended to operate either within the United States generally,¹ or within the District of Columbia² and the Territories³ alone, or outside the United States.⁴ The power to passed by the two houses of congress, and its constitutionality was earnestly objected to in the cabinet, but the act was approved by President Washington. The charter of the first bank of the United States having expired, the second was established by act of 1816, and in 1819 the constitutionality of the legislation came before the supreme court for decision in M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 316. The powers of congress were considered by CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL, in delivering the opinion of the court, and it was held that the power of creating a corporation, though appertaining to sovereignty, was not an independent power, but merely a means by which other objects are accomplished; that the absence of a grant of the power to create a corporation did not mean a withholding of the power; that such power might be implied as a necessary means for the execution of the general powers of congress; that congress was to determine the necessity of the use of such means, and that the court, finding that the act was an appropriate measure and not prohibited, would not enquire into the degree of its necessity. In Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 738, it was admitted that congress could not create a corporation for its own sake or for private purposes; it could be created for national purposes only, though it would undoubtedly be capable of transacting private as well as public business. The charter of the second bank of the United States expired by limitation in 1836. The system of national banks under the general law was established in 1863. See NATIONAL BANKS. The subject has been repeatedly settled and the power sustained. Story Const., § 1271.

1. These are the national banks, railroads, telegraph companies, and corporations not created for profit. An example of such a railroad is the Union Pacific Railway Company. See Pacific Railroad Removal Cases, 115 U. S. 1; California v. Railroad Co.'s, 127 U. S. 1. The Northern Pacific Railroad Company was incorporated by act of congress of July 2nd, 1864, which provided that the previous consent of the legislature of each State should be required before constructing the road in that State. 13 Stat. at L. 365, 372. The Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Co. was chartered by act of congress of July 27th, 1866. 14 Stat. at L. 292. And the Texas Pacific Railroad Co. was chartered by act of congress of March 3rd, 1871. 16 Stat. at L. 573. Powers to extend their lines over the public domain, post roads and navigable waters are conferred upon telegraph companies organized under State laws by Rev. Stat., §§ 5263, 5269. Congress has chartered such corporations as the Freedman's Saving and Trust Co. (13 Stat. at L. 510); National Asylum for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers (14 Stat. at L. 10); Centennial Board of Finance (17 Stat. at L. 203).

2. The right to exercise exclusive legislation is given by the Constitution, art. 1, § 8, cl. 18. This includes the granting of charters to corporations, and instances of such charters may be found in various statutes passed by congress relating to the District of Columbia.

3. "The congress shall have the power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States." Const. U. S., art. 3, § 3, cl. 2. The legislative assemblies of the Territories cannot grant special charters, but may by general laws permit corporations to be formed for mining, manufacturing and other industrial pursuits, or the construction or operation of railroads, wagon roads, irrigating ditches and the colonization and improvement of lands in connection therewith, or for colleges, seminaries, churches, libraries or any benevolent, charitable or scientific association. Rev. St., § 1889. A corporation created by a territorial legislature becomes, after the admission of the Territory as a State, a corporation of the State. Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Atchison etc. R. Co., 112 U. S. 414.

4. In 1889 the Maritime Canal Co. of Nicaragua was incorporated for constructing and operating a ship canal between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans through the territory of the Republics of Nicaragua and Costa Rica, with its principal office in the city of New York. Act of February 20th, 1889; 25 Stat. at L. 673.

grant many of these franchises is referred to the power to regulate commerce among the several States as well as to provide for postal accommodations and military exigencies.¹

Powers.—In granting franchises to be exercised in the District of Columbia and the Territories, congress may probably confer powers on a corporation coextensive with those which it may confer on a natural person; but franchises which may be conferred on a corporation, to be exercised within the States, are limited to those which are the appropriate means to carry into execution the express powers of the general government.²

Taxation.—National corporations depending for their existence upon the fact that they are agencies of the federal government must be free to discharge the duties which they have undertaken to perform. Therefore, the question whether they are exempted from taxation by the States, depends upon the effect of the tax. A tax upon their property does not have the necessary effect of depriving them of the power to serve the government as they were intended to serve it, or hinder the efficient exercise of their power, and may be imposed by the States. But not so a tax upon their operations, which is a direct obstruction to the exercise of federal powers.³ It follows that their franchises cannot be

1. California v. Central Pac. Railroad Co., 127 U. S. 1, in which BLATCHFORD, J., says: "The power to construct or to authorize individuals or corporations to construct national highways and bridges from State to State, is essential to the complete control and regulation of interstate commerce. Without authority in congress to establish and maintain such highways and bridges, it would be without authority to regulate one of the most important adjuncts of commerce. This power in former times was exerted to a very limited extent, the Cumberland or national road being the most notable instance. Its exertion was but little called for, as commerce was then mostly conducted by water, and many of our statesmen entertained doubts as to the existence of the power to establish ways of communication by land. But since, in consequence of the expansion of the country, the multiplication of its products and the institution of railroads and locomotion by steam, land transportation has so vastly increased a sounder consideration of the subject has prevailed and led to the conclusion that congress has plenary power over the whole subject. Of course the authority of congress over the Territories of the United States, and its power to grant franchises exercisable therein, are, and ever have been undoubted. But the wider power was very freely exercised, and much to the general satisfaction, in the creation of the vast system of railroads connecting the East with the Pacific, traversing States as well as Territories, and employing the agency of State as well as federal corporations."

2. Curtis' Note on National Corporations; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 21; 21 Am. Law Rev. 258.

3. In M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 316, the tax imposed by the State of Maryland upon the notes of the Bank of the United States was held to be unconstitutional. "The institution was prohibited from issuing notes at all except upon stamped paper furnished by the State, and to be paid for on delivery, the stamp upon each note being proportioned to its denomination. The tax, therefore, was not upon any property of the bank, but upon one of its operations—in fact, upon its right to exist as created. It was a direct impediment in the way of a governmental operation performed through the bank as an agent. It was a very different thing, both in its nature and effect, from a tax on the property of the bank. No wonder, then, that it was held illegal. But even in that case the court carefully limited the effect of the decision. It does not extend, said the Chief Justice, to a tax paid by the real property of the bank in common taxed by the States in which they may operate.¹

Jurisdiction in Suits.—Except in the case of national banks, a suit by or against a corporation of the United States is a suit arising under the laws of the United States within the Jurisdiction act, and, therefore, is within the jurisdiction of the federal courts and removable thereto when brought originally in a State court.²

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT.—A “national government” is the government of the people of a single State, or nation, united as a community by what is termed the social compact, and possessing complete and perfect supremacy over persons and things so far as they can be made the lawful objects of civil government.³

NATIONS, LAW OF.—See INTERNATIONAL LAW, II Am. and Eng. Encyc. of Law 431; MILITARY LAW.

NATURE; NATURAL.—Are employed with little or no deviation from the vernacular meaning.⁴

with the other real property in the State, nor to a tax imposed on the interest which the citizens of Maryland may hold in the institution in common with the other property of the same description throughout the State.” And see Union Pac. R. Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 5. The same distinction was made in the case of Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 738, in which the State of Ohio laid a tax on the operations of the bank. Where the tax is not imposed upon the franchise or right of the corporation to exist and perform the functions for which it was brought into being, but is exclusively upon its real and personal property, taxed in common with all other property in the State of a similar character, such property is not exempt. Thompson v. Union Pac. R. Co., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 579; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 5. A company incorporated by an act of congress is not a “foreign corporation,” within the meaning of the revenue act of Pennsylvania, and is not obliged to take out a licence and pay a tax for doing business in that State. Commonwealth v. Texas etc. R. Co., 98 Pa. St. 90. The property of a telegraph company, chartered by a State but operating under Rev. Stat., §§ 5263–5269 (ante 2), is subject to taxation by a State as an individual’s would be; but an injunction restraining it from operating its lines over post roads until the tax is paid is void. Telegraph Co. v. Atty. Gen., 125 U. S. 530.

1. The franchise is given for a public purpose, and to suffer a State to tax it would be a concession of the power to destroy it. This would be not only derogatory to the dignity, but subversive of the powers of the government and repugnant to its paramount sovereignty. California v. Central Pac. Railroad Co., 127 U. S. 1.

2. The exception in the case of national banks was made by U. S. act July 12th, 1882, since incorporated in the Jurisdiction and Removal acts of 1887 and 1888. The legal proposition on which the statement in the text is founded was announced by the U. S. Supreme Court in the Pacific Railroad Removal Cases, 115 U. S. 1. This decision was founded on Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 738, but the court was divided, WAITE, C. J., and MILLER, J., dissenting on the ground that the words “arising under the constitution or laws of the United States,” in the Jurisdiction act, should not have given them the broad meaning they had when used by Chief Justice Marshall in Osborn v. Bank of the United States.

Eminent Domain.—The right of eminent domain exists in the government of the United States, and may be exercised by it within the States, so far as is necessary to the enjoyment of the powers conferred upon it by the constitution. Kohl v. United States, 91 U. S. 367. It seems to follow that this power may be delegated to national corporations; it has been so delegated to be exercised within the Territories. Curtis’ Notes, 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 25; 21 Am. Law Rev. 262.

3. Piqua Bank v. Knoup, 6 Ohio St. 342–393.

A federal government is distinguished from a national government by its being the government of a community of independent and sovereign states united by compact. Piqua Bank v. Knoup, 6 Ohio St. 342–393.

4. And. L. Dict.

NATURAL ALLEGIANCE.—See also ALLEGIANCE, Vol. 1, p. 490. That allegiance which is due from one in view of his birth within a country, as distinguished from local allegiance.¹

NATURAL AND ARTIFICIAL PERSON (Distinguished).—See also PERSON. See note 2.

NATURAL CHILDREN.—See BASTARDY, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 129; CHILDREN, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 230.

NATURAL GAS—I. NATURE AND CHARACTER.—Inflammable gas is formed in great abundance within the earth in connection with

The words "without knowledge of the nature transaction," may be very ambiguous when embodied within an instruction to a jury. King v. Ward, 74 Me. 349.

"Natural lives" was construed to be equal to joint lives and the life of the survivor in Douglas v. Parsons, 22 Ohio St. 526. See also ANNUITY, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 592.

Natural Presumptions.—See PRESUMPTIONS.

"Natural and Reasonable Wear and Tear Excepted."—In an article of agreement for the sale of real estate, by which the vendor stipulates to deliver possession of the premises at a future day, in as good repair as they were at the time of the execution of the contract, "natural and reasonable wear and tear excepted," the exception covers only such decay or depreciation in value of the property as may arise from ordinary and reasonable use. An injury to the property by a freshet is not within the exception. Green v. Kelly, 20 N. J. L. 544.

1. Abbott's L. Dict.

2 Semble.—That the words "natural persons," in a statute, indicated a legislative intent not to include moneyed institutions or other than municipal corporations. Wagenhurst v. Delaware Township, 4 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 533.

Natural Law.—A rule which so necessarily agrees with the nature and state of man that, without observing its maxims, the peace and happiness of society can never be preserved. Borden v. State, 11 Ark. 527.

"Natural rights of property" must be rights which attach to property in its primitive state, and cannot, without contradiction in terms, be applied to an artificial subject matter like a house. Angus v. Dalton, 4 Q. B. D. 161.

"Nature, substance and quality of the article demanded." § 6, Sale of Food and Drugs act, 1875, 38 & 39 V. C. 63, means the nature or quality according as the article is ordinarily understood in the trade dealing with it; therefore when tincture of opium was demanded and a tincture was supplied one-third less in strength than the article according to the recognized standard (i. e., the British Pharmacopœia), held that the article supplied was not of the "nature or quality" demanded (White v. Bywater, 19 Q. B. D. 582; 51 J. P. 821; 3 Times Rep. 631); but skimmed milk is a good supply for a demand of "milk" within this section. Lane v. Collins, 54 L. J. M. C. 76; 14 Q. B. D. 193.

Nature of the Offence.—Where by statute a sentence awarding punishment shall set forth the "nature of the offence," this does not mean that merely the name of the offence shall be given. "It means clearly a setting forth of the facts, shortly but intelligently, by which the offence was committed." Soutar v. Stirling, 25 Sc. L. Rep. 499.

"Natural Oyster Bed."—A natural, as distinguished from an artificial, oyster-bed is one not planted by man, and in any shoal, reef or bottom where oysters are to be found growing, not sparsely, or at intervals, but in a mass or stratum, and in sufficient quantities to be valuable to the public. State v. Willis, 104 N. Car. 764.

"Natural State of a Stream.—The natural state of a stream is that in which the stream is under the ordinary operation of the physical laws which affect it. This may be different at different seasons of the year and yet be ordinary by the recurrence of the same condition about the same season every year. It may ordinarily be high a portion of the season and low at another portion; yet as these are ordinary by reason of their annual or frequent occurrence, so that a variance therefrom is an exception, they are the natural condition of the stream. Dorman v. Ames, 12 Minn. 451.

"Natural stream" properly signifies a river flowing from its source to the ocean, or an outlet between one interior

carbonaceous deposits, such as coal and petroleum; and similar accumulations not unfrequently occur in connection with deposits of rock salt. The gases from any of these sources, escaping by means of fissures or seams to the open air, may be collected and burned in suitable arrangements, and are commonly called "natural gas."¹ Though gas is a mineral, it is subject to the decisions governing ordinary minerals, with many qualifications; and is governed by rules analogous to those governing water percolating beneath the surface. Water, oil, and still more strongly, gas may be classed by themselves, and have been not inaptly termed minerals feræ naturæ.²

II. PROPERTY IN NATURAL GAS.—Natural gas is not subject to absolute ownership; it belongs to the owner of the land, and forms a part of it, so long as it is on the land, and subject to his control, but when it escapes and goes into other land, or comes under the control of another, his title is lost. Possession of the land is not necessarily possession of the gas. If an adjoining owner drills a well and taps your gas, so that it comes under his control, it is no longer yours, but his. From the nature of gas and gas operations, the grant of well rights is necessarily exclusive.³ sea or lake and another. The Young American, Newb. Adm. 106. See also SURFACE WATERS.

1. "Gas and gas lighting." Encyclopædia Britannica.

2. See Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law; Westmoreland etc. Nat. Gas Co. v. De Witt, 130 Pa. St. 235; Wood Co. Petroleum Co. v. West Virginia Transp. Co., 28 W. Va. 210; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 659.

By a conveyance of "mines and minerals" the grant does not embrace everything in the mineral kingdom, as distinguished from what belongs to the animal and vegetable; nor is such a grant confined to any one of the subordinate divisions into which the mineral kingdom is subdivided by chemists. Hartwell v. Camman, 10 N. J. Eq. 128.

As to whether natural gas is included in the words "other valuable volatile substance" when used in a lease in connection with the words petroleum, rock, or carbon oil, the court should order the issue tried by jury, as the words have no well-defined meaning and are ambiguous. Ford v. Buchanan, 111 Pa. St. 31.

Distinguished from Oil.—"Oil" is not synonymous with gas when used in a lease; accordingly the production of gas alone will not satisfy the conditions of the lease. Truby v. Palmer (Pa. 1886), 6 Atl. Rep. 74.

Distinguished from Heat.—Natural gas is not heat. Nor can a company, incorporated under a statute providing for the creation of companies for supplying heat, furnish natural gas. Emerson v. Com., 108 Pa. St. 126.

A Commercial Commodity.—"Natural gas is as much an article of commerce as iron ore, coal, petroleum, or any other of the like products of the earth. It is a commodity which may be transported, and it is an article which may be bought and sold in the markets of the country." And, therefore, a statute forbidding the transportation of the gas from the State is void, as it is in conflict with the constitution of the United States, which provides that the regulation of interstate commerce shall be with congress. State v. Indiana etc. Oil, Gas & Min. Co., 120 Ind. 579; Carothers v. Philadelphia Co., 118 Pa. St. 468.

Less common than wood or oil, it is nevertheless, a fuel. Citizens' Gas etc. Min. Co. v. Elwood, 114 Ind. 338. See also Emerson v. Com., 108 Pa. St. 126.

3. Westmoreland etc. Nat. Gas Co. v. Dewitt, 130 Pa. St. 235; Wood Co. Petroleum Co. v. West Virginia Transp. Co., 28 W. Va. 210; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 659.

A landlord leased premises for the express and sole purpose of mining and taking carbon oil therefrom at a fixed royalty. The tenant opened a well which produced both oil and hydrocarbon gas, the latter in large quantities, issuing by its own force from the well. The tenant separated the gas from the oil, and by pipes conducted it beyond the leased premises, where he sold or appropriated it to his own use. Held, that the tenant was not accountable to the landlord for the gas or its value. The court said: "By analogy it seems to me the rule and principles, which pertain to air and water and other subjects of the same nature, must be applied to the natural or hydrocarbon gas involved in this suit. Neither the developments of science nor the evidence in this cause establish that such gas is likely to be exhausted by its use and consumption. That such may ultimately be the case is possible, but the fact, if it is such, is not sufficiently certain or apparent to be the basis of a judicial decision. The appellant therefore could not certainly be guilty of either legal or equitable waste in the use of said gas. . . . If no oil was or ever had been obtained from the well the case might be different. . . . If the gas did not escape from the well of its own force, it is possible the lessee would not, against the consent of the lessors, be permitted to pump it from the well. But in this case, as it is essential that the well shall be kept open in order that the oil may be pumped from it, and as the gas issues of its own accord from the well so necessarily and rightfully kept open, it is clear that the lessee, in the absence of any stipulation for compensation, has the right to use and appropriate the gas in any proper manner he may choose without accounting therefor to the lessors." Wood Co. Petroleum Co. v. West Virginia Transp. Co., 28 W. Va. 210; 8. c., 57 Am. Rep. 659.

NATURAL GAS COMPANIES—(See GAS COMPANIES, vol. 8, p. 1268).—A natural gas company, being for a public use, may receive the right of eminent domain from the legislature.¹

A gas company which has leased and is using natural gas wells is entitled to an injunction against the lessor restraining him from interfering, since such interference is likely to result in irreparable injury. Citizens' Nat. Gas Co. v. Shenango Nat. Gas. Co. (Pa. 1890), 20 Atl. Rep. 947.

Drilling Gas Wells.—One undertaking to drill a gas well to a certain depth and of a certain size must comply literally with the contract, even though no gas be found and a well of a smaller bore is just as effective in determining that no gas can be found there at that depth. 30 Cent. Law J. 503; Gillespie Tool Co. v. Wilson, 123 Pa. St. 19.

In the Jefferson common pleas court it was sought by the owners of a coal mine to enjoin the owner of the surface from boring a gas well through their strata of coal, on the ground that it was a trespass attended with great danger to the lives of the miners and property of the mine, owing to the fact that the gas could not be controlled. This was in 1885. The court at first denied an injunction, upon the ground that the act of the defendant would be a mere trespass, for which an adequate remedy was afforded in an action at law. But on the succeeding day the court, at the trial, reversed its former ruling, placing it chiefly upon the probable danger of driving a gas well through a mine, although it was the court's opinion that it would be some day possible to dig such a well in such a place. The court also held that the surface owner had no right of way of necessity through the vein of coal to his land beneath it, a reservation of such a way not having been made. 30 Cent. Law J. 503; Jefferson Iron Works v. Gill Bros., 14 W. L. Bull. 2.

1. Bloomfield etc. Nat. Gas Light Co. v. Richardson, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 437; State v. Indiana etc. Gas, Oil & Min. Co., 120 Ind. 581; Pittsburgh's Appeal, 115 Pa. St. 4; Johnston v. Peoples' Nat. Gas Co., 5 Cent. R. 564.

Corporations having the power to deal in natural gas organized before the passage of the Pennsylvania Natural Gas act of 1885, received by that act the power to condemn rights of way for their pipe lines, whether they had such power before or not, under that provision of the act which confers the right and prescribes the proceedings of eminent domain as to all corporations then engaged or thereafter to be engaged in the business. Carothers v. Philadelphia Co., 118 Pa. St. 468.

As to compensating the holder of the fee for laying gas mains under a highway, see Bloomfield etc. Nat. Gas Light Co. v. Richardson, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 437; Bloomfield etc. Nat. Gas Light Co. v. Calkins, 62 N. Y. 386; Sterling's Appeal, 111 Pa. St. 35; McDevitt's Appeal (Pa.), 7 Atl. Rep. 588.

Pennsylvania Natural Gas Act of 1885.

NATURAL HEIRS—NATURALIZATION.

NATURAL HEIRS—(See also ISSUE, 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 869).—The words “natural heirs” and “heirs of the body” in a will, and by way of executory devise, are considered as of the same legal import.¹

NATURALIZATION—(See also CITIZENSHIP, vol. 3. p. 242; ALIEN, vol. 1, p. 456).

I Definition, 224.

II. In Whom the Power Is Vested, 224.

1. United States, 224.

2. States, 224.

III. Who May be Naturalized, 225.

1. In General, 225.

2. Privileged Classes, 225.

(a) Minors, 225.

(b) Wives of Citizens, Native or Naturalized, 227.

(c) Widow and Children of One Who Has Made Preliminary Declaration but Dies Before His Admission, 227.

—A corporation whose charter enables it to engage in “any work or works, public or private, which may tend, or be designed to improve, increase, facilitate or develop” trade, can engage in the business of producing and supplying natural gas under the Pennsylvania Natural Gas act of 1885, whose preamble declares that natural gas has become a “prime necessity for use as a fuel, and otherwise in the development of trade.” Carothers v. Philadelphia Co., 118 Pa. St. 468.

Where a natural gas company had been incorporated under a law that did not authorize the incorporation of such a company, and under it had begun to supply natural gas within a city, and had laid pipes therein—having supplied one mill within the city, it was held to be within the provisions of an act subsequently enacted, authorizing the incorporation of such a company, and providing that such a company could accept the provisions of such subsequent act, and organize thereunder, and that the provision of the act should not apply to a corporation accepting it, which “had to some extent prior to the passage” “begun supplying natural gas within such city borough, or had laid pipes for such purpose therein.” But a city cannot sustain a bill for perpetual injunction against a natural gas fuel company, organized under such act, on the ground that the corporation has laid its pipes in the streets without permission, and that such pipes are defective and cause injury to the persons and property and citizens, where the averments of the bill are denied, and the court upon examination finds the matter complained of is not a public nuisance. 30 Cent. Law J. 501; Appeal of Borough of Butler (Pa.), 6 Atl. Rep. 708. See also Allegheny v. Chartier's Valley Gas Co., 10 Cent. Rep. 281.

The powers of the councils of cities and boroughs to legislate in regard to natural gas companies are only such as are delegated to them by the act of May 29th, 1885, P. L. 29. They are authorized to give or withhold their assent without more. They have no power to couple their assent with any condition or restriction not imposed by said act, unless the company agrees to accept the same, and be bound thereby; and even the conditions or restrictions so accepted by the company must harmonize and in no wise conflict with the provisions of said act. The assent of councils being given, the regulations they are authorized to adopt are such only as relate to the manner of laying pipes, altering, inspecting and repairing the sewers, and the character thereof with respect to safety and public convenience. These regulations must also be reasonable and not in conflict with any of the provisions of the act. In all other respects the power of such companies are clearly defined and their duties and liabilities prescribed by the act under which they are incorporated. Pittsburgh's Appeal, 115 Pa. St. 4.

1. Smith v. Pendell, 19 Conn. 107.

The words “natural heirs” in a legacy were held to mean children, issue, in distinction from collateral heirs, in Miller v. Churchill, 78 N. Car. 372.

The words “natural heirs” in a will have been held to be synonymous with “heirs.” Re Sinzheimer, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 321. And see Miller v. Churchill, 78 N. Car. 372; Ludlum v. Otis, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 410.

- | | |
|--|--|
| (d) Aliens in Military Service of United States 228. (e) Seamen, 228. IV. Procedure, 229. 1. Preliminary Declaration of Intention, 229. 2. Application to be Admitted to | Citizenship, 230. (a) Before What Courts, 230. (b) Declaration and Renunciations, 230. (c) Proof, 230. (d) Judgment and Effect Thereof, 231. V. Certificate and Record, 232. |
|--|--|

I. DEFINITION.—Naturalization is the act by which an alien is made a citizen of the United States of America. It is the act of adopting a foreigner and clothing him with all the privileges of a native born citizen.¹

II. IN WHOM THE POWER IS VESTED—1. United States—The power of naturalization is vested exclusively in congress and cannot be exercised by any of the States.²

2. States.—The States, however, may confer such of the privileges of their own citizens upon aliens, with regard to the ownership of land or the participation in the State government, as each may think fit within its own limits, and, in short, as to the State government, can place them on an equal footing with a citizen, but cannot make them citizens of the United States.³

1. 1 Bouv. L. Dict.; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 827; 9 Op. Att. Gen. 359.

A nation, or the sovereign who represents it, may grant to a stranger the quality of a citizen by admitting him into the body of the political society. This is called naturalization. Vattel Law of Nat., bk. 1, ch. 19, §§ 212-214. See also Morse on Citizenship 66, and Re Wehlitz, 16 Wis. 443; s. c., 84 Am. Dec. 700.

2. 1 Minor's Inst. 139; United States v. Vellato, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 373; Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 1, 48; Thurlow v. Massachusetts, 5 How. 504; Smith v. Turner, 7 How. (U. S.) 283; 1 Kent, § 424.

The power of naturalization is exclusively in congress, but the treaty of amity and commerce between the United States and France of 1778, art. 11, enabled the subjects of France to purchase and hold lands in the United States. Chirac v. Chirac, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 259. See also CITIZENSHIP, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 246, note 1. Contra, Collet v. Collet, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 294, which case, however, was subsequently overruled by the cases above cited, and was said by CHANCELLOR KENT to have been "hastily and inconsiderately declared." 1 Kent, § 224.

3. 1 Minor's Inst. 139; Barzizas v. Hopkins, 2 Rand. (Va.) 276; Dred

Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. (U. S.) 393. Each State being sovereign, except as to matters referred to the general government, may, as the result of that sovereignty, confer the rights of citizenship on whomsoever it pleases, so far as to make him a citizen of that State, though he will not thereby become a citizen of the United States. Re Wehlitz, 16 Wis. 443; s. c., 84 Am. Dec. 700.

"No less than twelve of the States also permit aliens, after a short residence therein, and after declaring their intention to become citizens, to exercise the elective franchise. When an alien is thus given the privilege permanently to reside within a State, and to hold property of all kinds therein, and to exercise the privilege of suffrage, the distinction in right and privilege and immunity between him and a citizen is not very plain. Indeed, as the suffrage would seem peculiarly to belong to citizens, and as the voter for representatives in the State legislature may vote for representatives in congress also, it would seem that there might be some question whether a State could confer upon an alien this high privilege. It is a question, however, which has never been made. One privilege, at least, the State could not confer upon an alien. Without the power of naturalization she could not give him as a citizen a title to those privileges and immunities

III. WHO MAY BE NATURALIZED—1. In General.—Any alien friend,¹ who is a free white person, or a person of African nativity or descent,² who has made the preliminary declaration prescribed by law,³ who has resided for the five years next preceding his application in the United States,⁴ and for one year next preceding such application in the State or Territory in which the court sits to whom he makes application, and who, during that time, has been of good moral character, attached to the principles of the constitution of the United States and well disposed to the good order of the same, may become a citizen of the United States,⁵ in the manner to be described, and no other.⁶ A married woman may be naturalized without the concurrence of her husband.⁷

2. Privileged Classes—(a) Minors.—The children of naturalized citizens of the United States, being under the age of twenty-one at the time of their parents naturalization, shall, if dwelling in this country, be deemed citizens thereof.⁸ Any alien who has reof citizens of the several States which the federal constitution guaranties and secures." Cooley on Prin. of Con. L. 77. See also ELECTIONS, 6 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 267.

1. No alien who is a native citizen or subject, or a denizen of any country, state or sovereignty with which the United States are at war at the time of his application, shall be then admitted to become a citizen of the United States. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2171. See also The Frances, 8 Cranch (U. S.) 335; Ex parte Newman, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 11.

2. Rev. Stat., § 2169. The naturalization laws apply only to foreigners, subjects of another allegiance. They do not include Indians. 7 Atty. Gen. Op. 746. See also CITIZENSHIP, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 245: "White persons" here does not include persons of the Mongolian race. Re Ah Yup, 5 Sawyer (U. S.) 155. Or those of half white and half Indian blood. Re Camille, 6 Sawyer (U. S.) 541; 6 Fed. Rep. 256; 2 Kent Com. 72; Lynch v. Clarke, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 583; 9 Atty. Gen. Op. 373; 7 id. 746; Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94.

Rev. Stat. U. S. 1878, § 2169, which allows only persons of the white or African races to become citizens, is not modified by 22 St. at Large, p. 61, § 14, providing that no court shall naturalize Chinese, and repealing all laws in conflict therewith, as the latter act was only intended to remove doubts as to the eligibility of Chinese to citizenship, and hence a native of the Hawaiian islands cannot be naturalized, as he belongs to neither of the races mentioned. In re

Kanaka Nian (Utah), 21 Pac. Rep. 993.

3. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2165. See also PRELIMINARY DECLARATION IV, 1. An alien who emigrated to the United States after June 18th, 1812, and who was not a minor on his arrival, was held not entitled to take the oath of naturalization on five years' residence, without having made the declaration of his intention to become a citizen, required by act of May 26th, 1824, two years before his application to take the oath of naturalization. Ex parte Brownlee, 9 Ark. 191. Compare Ex parte Paul, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 56.

4. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2170; Spratt v. Spratt, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 393; Ex parte Walton, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 186; Ex parte Saunderson, 1 Cranch. (U. S.) 219; Ex parte Pasqualt, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 243; Anonymous, Pet. (C. C.) 457; Matter of Hawley, 1 Daly (N. Y.) 351.

5. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2165.

6. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2165; Priest v. Cummings, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 617; Shanks v. Dupont, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 248.

7. 1 Minor's Inst. 139. The act of congress of 1802, ch. 28, does not exclude females from the rights of citizenship by naturalization. Brown v. Shilling, 9 Md. 7.

8. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2172; State v. Penney, 10 Ark. 621; Campbell v. Gordon, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 177.

Minor children of foreign parents, whose mother, after the death of the father, marries a citizen, become citizens. Kreitz v. Behrensmeyer, 125 Ill. 741.

A was born abroad and came to the sided in the United States for five years, of which three were the years next preceding his arriving at the age of twenty-one, and who has continued to reside therein up to the time of his application for admission as a citizen, may become a citizen without having made the preliminary declaration of intention¹ required in the first condition of § 2168 of U. S. Rev. Stat., provided, that he shall make the declaration required therein at the time of his admission, and furnish proof and declare on oath that for two years it has been his intention to become a citizen of the United States, and in all other respects comply with the laws in regard to naturalization.²

United States when an infant with his alien parents. His father died when he was eight. His mother married an alien resident, who was naturalized when A (then sixteen) and his mother were living with him. Held, that as, under U. S. Rev. Stat., § 1994, this made A's mother a citizen, it made A one under section 2172, which declares that children under age of persons naturalized shall be deemed citizens. People v. Newell, 38 Hun (N. Y.) 78.

The Naturalization act, in providing that the children of persons naturalized shall be citizens, operates prospectively, and makes citizens of those who, residing within the United States at the time of the naturalization of their parents, were born of alien parents in a foreign country. State v. Andriano, 92 Mo. 70; O'Connor v. State, 9 Fla. 215; West v. West, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 433; United States v. Kellar, 13 Fed. Rep. 82; People v. Newell, 1 How. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 8; United States v. Hirshfield, 13 Blatchf. (U. S.) 330; 15 Atty. Gen. Op. 114.

Evidence.—Where a person asking to be registered claims to be a citizen by virtue of the naturalization of his parents, the best evidence of the naturalization of the parent would be the original certificate of naturalization, or a duplicate thereof, when it can be obtained. But a party may, in the matter of proving his citizenship, resort to secondary evidence when preliminary evidence cannot be obtained. People v. McNally, 59 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 500.

Children born in foreign countries of parents who were then aliens, but who subsequently emigrated to this country, and became naturalized during the time such children were minors, are citizens of this country. 10 Atty. Gen. Op. 329. But a child born out of the country after his father has renounced his allegiance to the United States, is not a citizen norentitled to registration as a voter. Browne v. Dexter, 66 Cal. 39; In re Look Tin Sing, 10 Sawyer (U. S.) 353; Gould & Tucker Notes on Rev. Stat., § 2772.

Children of citizens of the United States, who are born abroad, are United States citizens, of the United States. Wolff v. Archibald, 14 Fed. Rep. 369; 15 Atty. Gen. Op. 114; 10 Atty. Gen. Op. 328; People v. Newell, 38 Hun 78. See also CITIZENSHIP, 3 Am. Eng. & Encyc. of Law 244.

1. See post, IV, 1.

2. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2167.

An alien, who has resided in the United States five years, of which three were the last years of his minority, is entitled to be admitted to citizenship under Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2167, which relates to the admission of aliens who have resided in the United States during the last three years of their minority, without having made the preliminary declaration of intention required in section 2165. Schutz's Petition, 64 N. H. 241.

A minor who has neither declared his intention to become a citizen as required by the statute, nor proved a residence of five years, is not entitled to be admitted to citizenship. Ex parte Merry, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 212.

It is not necessary that two of the five years' residence here required in the case of a minor alien should occur after the applicant has attained his majority. Schultz's Petition, 64 N. H. 241; Ex parte Merry, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 212. Ex parte Randall, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 224.

U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2167, relating to naturalization, provides that an alien, applying for citizenship under said section, may "be admitted a citizen of the United States without having made the declaration (of intention) required in the first condition of section 2165; but such alien shall make the declaration required therein at the time of his admission." Held, that the declaration last mentioned relates, not to the declaration of intention required in the first condition of section 2165, but to the declaration of allegiance required, in the second condition of said section, to be made "at the time of his application to be admitted." State v. Macdonald, 24 Minn. 48. And the declaration must be under oath. United States v. Walsh, 22 Fed. Rep. 644.

(b) Wives of citizens, native or naturalized, if capable of naturalization, are to be deemed citizens.¹

(c) Widow and Children of One Who Has Made the Preliminary Declarations, but Dies Before His Admission.—When an alien, who has made the preliminary declaration required in § 2165 Rev. Stat., dies before his admission as a citizen, his widow and children, upon taking the oaths prescribed by law, shall be deemed citizens.²

1. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 1994.

Under U. S. Rev. Stat., § 1994, an alien woman of the race or class of persons that are entitled to be naturalized under existing laws, who is married to a citizen of the United States, becomes by that act a citizen thereof; and such admission to citizenship has the same force and effect as if such woman had been naturalized by the judgment of a competent court. Leonard v. Grant, 6 Sawyer (U. S.) 603. See also CITIZENSHIP, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 243.

Nonresident Wife of Citizen.—The clause in said statute, "might herself be lawfully naturalized," does not require that the woman shall have the qualifications of residence, good character, etc., as in case of admission to citizenship in a judicial proceeding, but it is sufficient if she is of the class or race of persons who may be naturalized under existing laws. Leonard v. Grant, 6 Sawyer (U. S.) 603.

Under the naturalization laws, a woman who is an alien acquires citizenship whenever her husband becomes a citizen. It makes no difference that she is not twenty-one years of age. The common and statute law of New York, as to the ability of aliens to take lands by descent—considered. Renner v. Muller, 44 N. Y. Super. Ct. 535.

An alien woman, whose husband becomes a naturalized citizen of the United States, is, under section 2 of the act of congress of 1855, thereby made a citizen, though she may live at a distance from her husband for years, and never come to the United States until after his death. Headman v. Rose, 63 Ga. 458. See also Burton v. Burton, 1 Keyes (N. Y.) 359; Kane v. McCarthy, 63 N. Car. 299; Luhrs v. Eimer, 16 Fed. Rep. 215; 14 Atty. Gen. Op. 402. Contra, in 1 Minn. Ins. 141, the learned author seems to incline to the contrary opinion, viz., that the wife must be a resident of the United States in the lifetime of her husband, citing Kelly v. Owen, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 498, and Burton v. Burton, 26 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 474.

But the former case is cited on both sides of the controversy, and the point does not seem to have been well considered, while the latter was overruled in Burton v. Burton, 1 Keyes (N. Y.) 350.

2. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2168.

When a foreign subject, after residing here the proper time, declares his intention to become a citizen, but dies before he has been here long enough to receive his certificate of citizenship, his children, born abroad, who came here under 17 years of age with him, take an estate of inheritance in his lands, and, on attaining 21 years of age, become citizens of the United States and of the State of Texas. Schrimpf v. Settegast, 38 Tex. 96.

The proviso in the act of April 14th, 1802, which excludes from citizenship aliens whose country should be, at the time of the application, at war with the United States, was held to extend to the supplementary act of March, 1804, authorizing the naturalization of the widow and children of persons, who, having pursued the directions of the original act, might die before they became naturalized. Therefore the minor son of an alien, who had made report of himself conformably to the act, but who had died two years thereafter, was held not to be admissible to the rights of citizenship, the country from which he emigrated being, at the time of the application of the son, at war with the United States. Ex parte Overington, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 371. See also

(d) Aliens in the Military Service of the United States.—Any alien of the age of twenty-one years or more, who has been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States, may be admitted to become a citizen without the preliminary declaration of intention; and shall only be required to prove one year's residence previous to his application; "and the court admitting such alien shall, in addition to such proof of residence and good moral character as now provided by law, be satisfied by competent proof of such person's having been honorably discharged from the service of the United States."¹

(e) Seamen.—Every seaman, being a foreigner, who declares his intention of becoming a citizen of the United States in any competent court, and shall have served three years on board of a merchant vessel of the United States subsequent to the date of such declaration, may, on his application to any competent court, and the production of his certificate of discharge and good conduct during that time, together with the certificate of his declaration of intention to become a citizen, be admitted a citizen of the United States; and every seaman, being a foreigner, shall, after his declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States, and after he shall have served such three years, be deemed a citizen of the United States for the purpose of manning and serving on board any merchant vessel of the United States, anything to the contrary in any act of congress notwithstanding; but such seaman shall, for all purposes of protection as an American citizen, be deemed such, after the filing of his declaration of intention to become such citizen.²

ELECTIONS, 6 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 267.

1. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2166.

This has been held to include the navy as well as the army. Re Stewart, 7 Robt. (N. Y.) 635. But see In re Bailey, 2 Sawyer (U. S.) 200, where it was held not to apply to marines. In re Bye, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 525.

Satisfactory proof by a person applying to be naturalized that he is of good moral character, that he has resided one year within the United States previous to the application, that he is of the age of twenty-one years and upwards, that he was regularly enlisted in the United States navy, where he served as an enlisted man, and that he was honorably discharged from service, entitle him to naturalization under the provisions of section 21 of the act of congress of July 17th, 1862. Re Stewart, 7 Robt. (N. Y.) 635.

No Qualification as to Race Required.

—From the words, "the court admitting shall, in addition to such proof of residence and good moral character as now provided by law, be satisfied by competent proof of such person's having been honorably discharged from the service of the United States," it might well be thought that no qualification as to race is required under this section. Such is the conclusion of Dr. Minor, who states very emphatically (1 Min. Inst. 141) that the discharged soldier or sailor may be admitted to citizenship without qualification as to race.

2. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2174.

Stat. June 9th, 1874, ch. 260 (18 St. 64) provides that none of the provisions of the cited act of 1872, "shall apply to sail or steam vessels engaged in the coastwise trade, except the coastwise trade between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, or in the lake going trade touching at foreign ports or otherwise, or in the trade between the United States and the British North American possessions, or in any case where the seamen are by custom or agreement entitled to participate in the profits or result of a cruise, or voyage."

U. S. Rev. Stat., § 2174, conferring

IV. PROCEDURE—1. Preliminary Declaration of Intention.—The alien seeking admission to citizenship must declare upon oath, before a circuit or district court of the United States, or a district or supreme court of the Territories, or a court of record of any of the States having common law jurisdiction, and a seal and a clerk, at least two years prior to his admission to citizenship, that it is his bona fide intention to become a citizen,¹ and to renounce his allegiance to any prince, potentate, or state, and particularly by name to the prince or state whereof he is at the time a subject or citizen.²

upon seamen who have served on board merchant vessels of the United States the right to citizenship, upon application to the court, does not extend to the naval service. Ex parte Gormly, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 211.

1. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2167. See also ELECTIONS, 6 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 267.

The declaration of intention must be under oath. United States v. Walsh, 22 Fed. Rep. 644.

The intention must be declared in such form as to show the time when it was actually formed. Ex parte Randall, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 224.

The probate court of Shelby county, Tennessee, has no common law jurisdiction, and cannot take this declaration. Ex parte Tweedy, 22 Fed. Rep. 85. City, police and county courts in various States, when courts of record, and having a clerk, have been held entitled to take it. United States v. Power, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 223; Ex parte Gladhill, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 168; Ex parte Cregg, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 98; State v. Whittemore, 50 N. H. 245; s. c., 9 Am. Rep. 196; In re Conner, 39 Cal. 98; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 427; Levy's Case, 14 Atty. Gen. Op. 509; State v. Webster, 7 Neb. 469; Morgan v. Dudley, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 693; People v. McGowan, 77 Ill. 649; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 254. State courts, in admitting aliens, act as United States courts. In re Christern, 43 N. Y. Super. Ct. 523; G. & T. Notes on Rev. Stat., § 2167.

Declaration Made Before a Clerk.—Under Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2165, relating to naturalization, which provides that an alien's declaration of intention to become a citizen may be made before the clerk of the courts therein named as well as before the court, it is not necessary that such declaration should be made in the office of the clerk. Andres v. Judge of Circuit Court, 77 Mich. 85.

The clerk of the United States circuit court has no authority to take from an alien a declaration of his intention to become a citizen of the United States at the private residence of the party, and for that purpose to carry the records of the court from the clerk's office to such residence. In re Langtry, 31 Fed. Rep. 879.

A court whose judge acts as its only clerk is not a court having a clerk within U. S. Rev. Stat. 469—providing for naturalization of aliens—and is not competent to naturalize. 1878, State v. Webster, 7 Neb. 469. See also ELECTIONS, 6 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 367.

2. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2167; Stat. February, 1876, ch. 5 (19 St. 2), provides "that the declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States, required by Rev. Stat., § 2165, may be made by an alien before the clerk of any of the courts named in section 2165; and all such declarations heretofore made before any such clerk are hereby declared as legal and valid as if they had been made before one of the clerks named in said section." See also Butterworth's Case, 1 Woodb. & M. 323.

The declaration of an alien of his intention to become a citizen of the United States, stated that it was bona fide his intention to become a citizen of the United States of America, and to renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to every foreign prince, state, potentate and sovereignty whatever, and particularly to the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, according to the several acts of congress in such cases made and provided. Held, that the declaration was not objectionable because the name of the queen was not stated. Ex parte Smith, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 395.

Effect of the Declaration.—A mere "declaration of intention" by a foreigner to become a citizen does not de-

The declaration must be recorded.¹

2. Application to be Admitted to Citizenship—(a) Before What Courts.—Proceedings may be had for the admission of an alien to citizenship before any of the courts before which he might have made his preliminary declaration of intent;² and the court, in admitting the alien to citizenship, acts judicially.³

(b) Declaration and Renunciations.—The alien shall declare, on oath, that he will support the constitution of the United States, that he renounces and abjures all allegiance and fidelity to every foreign prince, potentate, or state; particularly by name to the prince, potentate, or state of which he was before a citizen or subject;⁴ and, if he has borne any hereditary title or has been a member of any order of nobility, he shall make an express renunciation of such title or order, which proceedings must be recorded.⁵

(c) Proof.—The alien must prove that he has made the preliminary declaration required, which must be proved by the record,⁶ that he has resided within the United States five years at least, and within the State or Territory where the court sits for one year,⁷ and that during that time he has behaved as a man of good prive a court of the United States of jurisdiction over a suit to which he is a party, as a suit against a foreign citizen or subject. The final renunciation of his foreign allegiance is necessary. 1854, Baird v. Byrne, 3 Wall. Jr. 1.

After a foreigner by birth has duly declared his intention to become a citizen, he must be regarded as having secured to himself and his children, who are minors, the right of a naturalized citizen, except so far as pertains to the exercise of the elective franchise. Settegast v. Schrimpf, 35 Tex. 344.

1. Rev. Stat., § 2165, cl. 4; State v. Barrett, 40 Minn. 65; In re Christern, 56 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 5.

Where the record of the previous declaration made by the party omitted to state that it was made on oath, and that it included a renunciation of allegiance to foreign princes, etc., such omission does not invalidate the subsequent act of naturalization founded on such previous declaration. Towle's Case, 5 Leigh (Va.) 743.

The original affidavit of a declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States, or a copy, properly certified by the clerk or deputy clerk of a district court of Minnesota, attested by its seal, is competent evidence of the declaration of intention. State v. Barrett, 40 Minn. 65.

2. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2165. See also IV, 1.

State courts in admitting aliens to citizenship under naturalization laws act as United States courts. Matter of Christern, 43 N. Y. Super. Ct. 523.

State courts have a competent and constitutional power to naturalize. Matter of Ramsden, 13 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 429; People v. Sweetman, 3 Park Cr. L. 358.

3. 1 Min. Ins. 140; Spratt v. Spratt, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 406; Ex parte Knowles, 5 Cal. 302; In re Clark, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 444; McCarthy v. Marsh, 5 N. Y. 279; In re An Alien, 57 Hill (N. Y.) 138; In re Christern, 43 N. Y. Super. Ct. 523.

4. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2165, cl. 2.

5. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2165, cl. 4.

The Oath.—The oath of naturalization, when taken, confers the rights of citizen, and it is not necessary that there should be an order of court admitting him to become a citizen. Campbell v. Gordon, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 176.

Under this act, an alien must take the required oaths at the time of his admission to citizenship. And it is not sufficient that he took the oaths at the time of his giving notice to become a citizen. Richards v. M'Daniel, 2 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 351.

6. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2165; 1 Min. Inst. 140.

7. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2165.

moral character, attached to the principles of the constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same; but the oath of the applicant shall in no case be allowed to prove his residence.¹

(d) The Judgment and the Effect Thereof.—The admission of an alien to citizenship by a court of competent jurisdiction has the effect and force of a judgment of such court. The court's action must be recorded as its judgment, and the record is conclusive evidence of the facts which it recites.² The naturalization of an alien confers upon him the privileges of a native citizen save only such as are withheld from him by the constitution of the United States.³

1. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2165, cl. 3.

Where an alien, during his residence in the United States, had been convicted of perjury, it was held that he had not behaved as a man of good moral character, so as to entitle him to admission to citizenship, and that the fact that he had received a pardon did not alter the case. In re Spencer, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 195.

In proceedings instituted for naturalizing an alien, his residence cannot be established by affidavit, but must be proved in court by the testimony of witnesses. Nor are affidavits admissible to establish the alien's good moral character, or his attachment to the principle of our government; though on these points his own oath is admissible. But it seems that the oath of the alien should be corroborated by other evidence. In re —, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 137.

An alien cannot vouch for a person petitioning to be naturalized. State v. Papen, 1 Brewst. (Pa.) 263.

The Revised Statutes of the United States, § 2165, relating to the naturalization of aliens, which provide that it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court admitting such alien that he has resided within the United States five years at least, and within the State or territory where such court is at the time held one year at least, but that the oath of the applicant shall be in no case allowed to prove his residence, forbid the taking of the oath of the applicant himself as proof of his residence, and do not merely render the oath of the applicant insufficient. Such an oath is extrajudicial, and perjury cannot be assigned thereon. United States v. Grottkau, 30 Fed. Rep. 672.

2. 14 Atty. Gen. Op. 509; Spratt v. Spratt, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 406; Charles Green's Son v. Salas, 31 Fed. Rep.

106; Stark v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 7 Cranch (U. S.) 420. See also In re Coleman, 15 Blatchf. (U. S.) 420; 1 Min. Ins., 141; Towle's Case 5 Leigh (Va.) 743; In re Christern, 43 N. Y. Super. Ct. 523.

The validity and efficacy of a judgment admitting a person to citizenship are not impaired by an inaccurate statement in its recitals; they constitute no part of the judgment. Accordingly, where the record of naturalization of an applicant for citizenship of the United States was perfect, but inaccurately recited that the applicant had resided within the United States for three years preceding his arrival at the age of twenty-one years, no deception being intended, the applicant being entitled to be admitted on other grounds, and these facts appearing on an application for renaturalization—held, that there was no occasion for further proceedings, and the application was denied. In re McCoppen, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 630. See also V.

The judgment of the tribunal or court, to whom the power to grant naturalization is confided by the supreme power in the State, is conclusive as to law and fact everywhere and upon all the world. 18 Am. L. Reg., N. S. 674; In re Acorn, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 443; People v. McGowan, 77 Ill. 644; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 254. See also pt. V.

3. Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 738, 827; Const. U. S., art. 1, § ii, 2, and iii, 3.

Effect of Naturalization on Alien's Suit Before Court of Claims.—Under § 1068 of Rev. Stat. of United States, which provides that aliens who are citizens are subjects of any government which accords to the citizens of the United States the right to prosecute claims against such government, shall

V. CERTIFICATE AND RECORD.—The federal statute requires that a record should be kept of the naturalization proceedings.¹ This record or a certificate thereof is the sole evidence admissible to prove the fact of an alien's naturalization.² It is not necessary that have the privilege of prosecuting claims against the United States in the court of claims. An alien who was naturalized before this section was enacted is entitled to prosecute an action begun before he was naturalized. Bulwinkle v. United States, 4 Ct. of Cl. 395; Mentz v. United States, 4 Ct. of Cl. —. And he may prosecute an action begun before this statute was enacted, if he was not an alien when the plea of alienage was put in. Wagner v. United States, 5 Ct. of Cl. 637; Gould & Tucker's Notes on R. S. 1068.

As to when naturalized citizen may vote, see ELECTIONS, 6 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 269.

A rule to vacate a decree of naturalization will not be granted at the instance of a private citizen in the courts of Pennsylvania. State v. Papen, 1 Brewst. (Pa.) 263.

Retroactive Effect of Naturalization.—Naturalization, before office found, relates back, and confirms the title to land purchased during alienage. Jackson v. Beach, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 399. Compare Jackson v. Green, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 67; Priest v. Cummings, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 338. But it does not retrospectively confirm a title claimed by descent. Vaux v. Nesbit, 1 McCord Ch. (S. Car.) 370. Naturalization does not have such a retroactive operation as to vest or confirm in the person naturalized an estate which, but for his being an alien, would have descended to him in fee at the death of the person last seised. The New York statute of 1843, providing that any naturalized citizen, to whom an estate would have descended if he had been a citizen at the death of the person last seised, might hold the same as though he had been a citizen at the time of the descent cast, applied only to persons already naturalized at the time the act was passed, and had no reference to the future. Heney v. Brooklyn Benevolent Soc., 39 N. Y. 333; affirming 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 360.

No court has any power or authority in naturalizing an alien to declare in its order that such alien shall be held to be a citizen from a time preceding the making of the order; and if it makes such declaration its act is unauthorized and void, so far as this declaration is concerned, and he is a citizen only from the time when such order was made. Dryden v. Swinburne, 20 W. Va. 89.

1. Rev. Stat. U. S., § 2165; Charles Green's Sons v. Salas, 31 Fed. Rep. 106.

2. In the absence of evidence of naturalization by the court records, parol evidence is inadmissible to prove the fact. Dryden v. Swinburne, 20 W. Va. 89; Matter of Desty, 8 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 250; People v. McNally, 59 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 500; The Acorn, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 435; In re Coleman, 15 Blatchf. (U. S.) 406; Slade v. Minor, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 139.

A certificate of naturalization in these words, namely: "I, A B, Clerk, etc., hereby certify that at a superior court, held at Savannah, etc., before X Y, Judge, etc., on a certain day, C D, an alien, petitioned the court to be admitted a citizen, and having in all things complied with the law in such case, etc., the said C D was accordingly admitted a citizen of the United States, having first taken and subscribed in open court the oath of naturalization. Given under my hand and seal of the said court, etc." Held, to be insufficient to show that C D was naturalized. Miller v. Reinhart, 18 Ga. 239.

A certificate of the clerk of the district court, reciting that the applicant has been duly admitted to citizenship, but failing to show any extract from the record, or minute of the action of the court, is not competent to show naturalization. Naturalization cannot be proved by parol. Charles Green's Son v. Salas, 31 Fed. Rep. 106.

In the absence of proof that an alien has become a citizen of the United States, his original status is presumed to continue. Hauenstein v. Lynham, 100 U. S. 483. See also Charles Green's Son v. Salas, 31 Fed. Rep. 106.

But when records of naturalization are destroyed, secondary evidence of their contents is admissible, as of the contents of other records. Kreitz v. Beyrensmeyer, 125 Ill. 141.

The court cannot make up a record of naturalization proceedings and issue a certificate nunc pro tunc, when no the record should show that all the legal prerequisites were complied with; the judgment being conclusive of such compliance,¹ and the record cannot be attacked in a collateral proceeding, by showing that these prerequisites have not, in fact, been complied with.² It has been held that the United States may sue in a federal court for the cancellation of a certificate of naturalization, obtained by fraud in a State court. But in such a suit the bill must show facts from which fraud may be inferred; it is not sufficient to show that the decree is erroneous.³

NATURAL LAW.—That rule of conduct deducible from reason and conscience as distinguished from divine law on the one hand and record has been made of the steps taken antecedent to the issuing of the certificate. It cannot be supposed that things have been done in respect to the naturalization of persons which do not appear of record. Matter v. Desly, 8 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 250.

As to what has been held to constitute a sufficient record of naturalization, see In re Christern, 56 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 5; In re Coleman, 15 Blatchf. (U. S.) 406.

1. Ritchie v. Putnam, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 524; McDaniel v. Richards, 1 McCord L. (S. Car.) 187; In re Christern, 56 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 5; People v. McGowan, 77 Ill. 646; Charles Green's Son v. Salas, 31 Fed. Rep. 106; United States v. Walsh, 22 Fed. Rep. 644; Stark v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 7 Cranch (U. S.) 420; Spratt v. Spratt, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 393. Hence it is not necessary that it should appear in the certificate granted by the court that the person naturalized "had behaved as a man of good moral character," etc., as the granting of a certificate by a competent court raises the presumption that the court was satisfied as to the moral character of the alien. Campbell v. Gordon, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 176.

A certificate of naturalization stated that the party "took the oath in such case required by the act of congress." Held, that this imported that he took the oath required in the very words prescribed by the statute, and so the act of naturalization was good. Towles' Case, 5 Leigh (Va.) 743.

2. It seems clear, both on principle and authority, a record of naturalization, made by a court of competent jurisdiction, cannot be impeached, in a collateral proceeding, by showing that the preliminary steps required by law have not, in fact, been taken. It is upon the principle such a record, like any other judgment of a court, affords complete evidence of its own validity. In proceedings of naturalization matters are submitted to the decision of the court, and the presumption will be indulged the court heard evidence, was satisfied the applicant had complied with the law, and its findings must be held conclusive as to all facts recited in the record. Spratt v. Spratt, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 393; People v. Pease, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 588; Campbell v. Gordon, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 176; McCarthy v. Marsh, 5 N. Y. 263; People v. McGowan, 77 Ill. 646; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 254; State v. Macdonald, 24 Minn. 59; McCarthy v. Marsh, 5 N. Y. 263; Banks v. Walker, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) Ch. 438.

It is a universal principle that, where power or jurisdiction is delegated to any public officer or tribunal over a subject matter, and its exercise is confided to his or their discretion, the acts so done are binding and valid as to the subject matter; and individual rights will not be disturbed collaterally for anything done in the exercise of that discretion within the authority and power conferred. The only questions which can arise between an individual claiming a right under the acts done and the public, or any person denying its validity are power in the officer and fraud in the party. All other questions are settled by the decision made or the act done by the tribunal or officer, whether executive (1 Cr. 170-171), legislative (4 Wh. 423; 2 Pet. 412; 4 Pet. 563), judicial (11 Mass. 227; 11 S. & R. 429, adopted in 2 Pet. 167, 168), or special (20 J. R. 739, 740; 2 Dow. P. Cas. 521), etc., unless an appeal is provided for, or other revision, by some appellate or supervisory tribunal, is prescribed by law." United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 729.

3. United States v. Norsch, 42 Fed. Rep. 417.

One who has been improperly naturalized may surrender his certificate and present a new petition. State v. Papen, 1 Brewst. (Pa.) 623.

Definition. NATURAL LOVE AND AFFECTION. Definition.

enacted or formulated law on the other.¹

NATURAL LOVE AND AFFECTION—1. Definition.—Natural love and affection is defined to be that affection which a husband, a father, a brother, or other near relative naturally feels toward those who are so nearly allied to him.² As to what degree of relationship will warrant such natural love and affection as will constitute a consideration, it seems that it must be that which exists between a parent and his legitimate child, brother and sister, or husband and wife.³ A consideration of natural love and affection constitutes a sufficient consideration to support a deed,⁴ but not an executory contract.⁵ This distinction is due to the entire dif-

1. Abbott's L. Dict.

2. 2 Bouv. Law. Dict., Natural Affection; 2 Steph. Com. 61.

3. Parent and Child.—See Pierson v. Armstrong, 1 Iowa 282; Kirkpatrick v. Taylor, 43 Ill. 207; Ford v. Ellingwood, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 359; Knowles v. Erwin, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 150.

A consideration of "love and affection" will support a gift of an inheritance to a daughter. Pierson v. Armstrong, 1 Iowa 282.

A conveyance to the widow of the grantor's deceased son, of property left by the son, may be based on a consideration of love and affection, which will support it as between the parties. Beith v. Beith, 76 Iowa 601.

Natural love and affection for an illegitimate child does not constitute a consideration. Blount v. Blount, 2 Law Repos. (N. Car.) 587. See also Cains v. Jones, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 249.

The relationship between a grandparent and his or her grandchild, will warrant the natural love and affection which will constitute a consideration. Hanson v. Buckner, 5 Dana (Ky.) 251; Stovall v. Barnett, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 207.

In other cases, however, it is held that a deed of land to a legitimate or illegitimate grandchild is voluntary, and must yield to a subsequent deed, executed bona fide, in consideration of money or marriage. Cains v. Jones, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 249; Borum v. King, 37 Ala. 606.

Brother and Sister.—Bouv. Law Dict., Natural Affection.

Husband and Wife.—9 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, HUSBAND AND WIFE, 791, 793.

Collateral Consanguinity.—Collateral consanguinity is not a meritorious consideration upon which a court of equity will specifically enforce an executory covenant or agreement. Hayes v. Kershow, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 251.

A contract for sale for value, which had been entered into by a vendor upwards of ninety years of age, was upon his death resisted by his devisee, on the ground that the vendor had, by a deed executed by him before the date of the contract, conveyed the property in fee to the devisee, his great nephew. The deed was expressed to be in consideration of natural love and affection, and contained a covenant by the grantee to "commence" a house upon the property according to plans to be furnished by the grantor; and that if the grantor failed to furnish such plans, then the grantee "would build such a house as he, the grantee, should think fit." No house was ever commenced, and the deed contained no proviso for re-entry or other penalties for breach of covenant. Upon a bill by the purchaser for specific performance, it was held that the deed was purely voluntary, there being an absence of any consideration by way of payment or benefit moving from the grantee to the grantor, and specific performance was decreed accordingly. Roshur v. Williams, 44 L. J. Ch. 419; 20 L. R., Eq. 210; 23 W. R. 561.

4. Kirkpatrick v. Taylor, 43 Ill. 207; Stovall v. Barnett, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 207; Hanson v. Buckner, 4 Dana (Ky.) 251; Blackerby v. Holton, 5 Dana (Ky.) 520; Beith v. Beith, 76 Iowa 601; Hayes v. Kershow, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 258; Pennington v. Gittings, 2 Gill & J. (Md.) 208; Duvoll v. Wilson, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 487; Marling v. Marling, 9 W. Va. 89; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 543.

Where a father made this writing: "James, I expect to marry soon, and if you will settle yourself on the Grayer farm, you may have it," it was considered by the court that the relation of a father and son is a good consideration to uphold the promise; and it is not indispensable that it should be expressed in terms in the writing of gift, in order to make such writing operative. Ford v. Ellingwood, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 359.

5. Kirkpatrick v. Taylor, 45 Ill. 207.

ference, as regards the consideration requisite, between deeds (being instruments under seal, and, therefore, a consideration often unnecessary) and other contracts which are without the presumption of a valuable consideration afforded by a seal.¹ Where a deed purports to have been executed for a valuable consideration, and is impeached by proving that no such consideration was paid, it cannot be sustained by showing that it was executed in consideration of natural love and affection.² If a deed recites that it was made in consideration of "natural love and affection" and for the further consideration of "one dollar" (or any other sum), parol proof is admissible to prove other considerations.³ An instrument in any form cannot operate as a covenant to stand seized for the benefit of another when not founded on the consideration of blood or marriage for want of the requisite consideration.⁴ As to the application of the consideration of love and affection as applied to uses, see that title.⁵

NATURALLY.—In the usual course of things.⁶

Hayes v. Kershow, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 258; Duvoll v. Wilson, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 487; 1 Parsons on Notes, 178, 197; Holliday v. Atkinson, 5 B. & C. (E. C. L.) 501; Smith v. Kittridge, 21 Vt. 238; Fink v. Cox, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 145. Compare Marling v. Marling, 9 W. Va. 89; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 543, where an unsealed instrument running thus: "I sine all my interest and claim unto Mary Marling and Elizabeth Marling, the farm they now live on, coled the Harsty farm, as witness my hand and sel. Elijah Marling," was supported upon a consideration of natural love and affection. Compare also Hayes v. Kershow, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 258.

A promissory note cannot be supported on the consideration of blood, or of natural love and affection; something more is necessary—some valuable consideration—or it cannot be enforced at law or in equity. Pennington v. Gittings, 2 Gill & J. (Md.) 208; Duvoll v. Wilson, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 487.

Mere blood relationship is not a sufficient consideration in law to support an assumpsit. A stranger to the consideration cannot sue on a contract, although there is privity by blood between him and the contracting parties, and the contract was made for his benefit. Tweddle v. Atkinson, 1 B. & S. 393; 8 Jur., N. S. 332; 30 L. J., Q. B. 265; 9 W. R. 781; 4 L. T., N. S. 468.

Where a note, expressed to be for value received, was made in favor of an infant aged nine, and in an action against the executors of the maker, no evidence of consideration being given, the judge told the jury that the note being for value received, imported that a good consideration existed, and that gratitude to the infant's father, or affection to the child, would suffice. Held, that although the jury might have presumed that a good consideration was given, yet that those pointed out were insufficient. Holliday v. Atkinson, 8 D. & R. 163; 5 B. & C. 501.

The defendant's father owed the plaintiff money for goods sold; and for the price of these goods the defendant made his note in his own name, and gave it to the plaintiff, who was cognizant of all the facts, and that the defendant had received no consideration for the note. Held, that the circumstances could not be given in evidence under a plea of accommodation bill, and that there was in this case an original liability on the part of the defendant, and that for a good consideration, viz, family affection. Cook v. Long, Car. & M. (41 E. C. L.) 510.

1. See DEEDS, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 435, where the matter of the consideration necessary in deeds is treated.

2. Burrage v. Beardsley, 16 Ohio 438.

3. Harvey v. Alexander, 1 Rand. (Va.) 219; Scott v. Scott, 1 Mass. 527.

4. Lossee v. Ellis, 13 Hun (N. Y.) 638; Corwin v. Corwin, 6 N. Y. 342; Schott v. Burton, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 173; Rogers v. Eagle Fire Co., 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 611.

5. Consult in this connection, 2 Minor's Insts. (3rd ed.) 210, et seq.

6. Smeed v. Foord, 1 El. & E. 613;

NAUGHTY.—See note 1.

NAVIGABLE WATERS—(See ACCRETION, vol. 1, p. 136; ADMIRALTY, vol. 1, p. 193; BOOM COMPANIES, vol. 2, p. 469; BOUNDARIES, vol. 2, p. 495; BRIDGES, vol. 2, p. 540; DAM, vol. 4, p. 971; FERRIES, vol. 7, p. 941; FISH AND FISHERIES, vol. 8, p. 23; HIGHWAY, vol. 9, p. 362; ICE AND ICE COMPANIES, vol. 9, p. 852; INTERNATIONAL LAW, vol. 11, p. 431; LAKES AND PONDS, vol. 12, p. 610; LOGS AND LUMBER, vol. 13, p. 1018; MILLS, vol. 15, p. 482; NAVIGATION; RIPARIAN RIGHTS; SHIPPING; WATER AND WATERCOURSES; WHARVES).

- I. Definition, 236.
 1. In America, 236.
 - (a) Commerce Carried on Over Such Waters Must be Valuable, 241.
 - (b) Streams Merely Floatable Are Highways, 242.
 - (c) Navigability Need Not be Perennial, 243.
 - (d) Navigability Need Not be Continuous, 244.
 - (e) Waters Artificially Navigable, 244.
 - (f) Other Tests of Navigability, 244.
 - (g) Proof of Navigability, 245.
 2. At Common Law, 245.
 - (a) The Tidal Test Only a Prima Facie One, 246.
 - (b) Departures from the Common Law Doctrine, 246.
 3. By the Civil Law, 246.
- II. Classes, 246.
 1. Public, 246.
 - (a) Tidal, 247.
 - (1) National Dominion Over, 247.
 - (2) Ownership, 248.
 - (a) Right to Bathe in the Sea, 248.
 - (b) Nontidal, 249.
 - (1) Rivers, 249.
 - (2) Semi-public, 253.
- III. Jurisdiction, 257.
 1. Over Intra-state Waters, 257.
 2. Over Inter-state Waters, 258.
- IV. The Public Easement of Passage, 259.
 1. Definition and Nature, 259.
 2. How Acquired, 260.
 3. Use of Banks and Shores, 261.
 - (a) By the Civil Law, 261.
 - (b) Under the Common Law, 261.
 - (1) Landing, etc., 261.
 - (2) Mooring, etc., 262.
 - (3) Towing, etc., 262.
 4. Exercise of the Right, 263.
 5. How Lost, 264.
- V. Improvements, 264.
 1. Legislative Power Over, 264.
 2. Right of Riparian Owner to Compensation, 265.
- VI. Obstructions, 267.
 1. What Are, 267.
 - (a) In General, 267.
 - (b) By Boats and Vessels, 268.
 - (c) By Rafts and Logs, 269.
 2. From Detention and Diversion (See WATERS AND WATERCOURSES), 270.
 3. Remedies (See NUISANCE; INJUNCTION), 270.

I. DEFINITION—1. In America.—In the most approved modern sense of the term in this country, navigable waters include all s.c., 102 E.C.L. 612; Mitchell v. Clarke, 71 Cal. 164; Kuhn v. Jewett, 32 N. J. Eq. 649; Parke v. Frank, 75 Cal. 370.

1. In Merivale v. Carson, 36 W. R. 231, LORD ESHER, M. R., said: "For the defendant it was contended . . . that the words 'naughty wife,' as there applied (in the newspaper criticism of a play), did not necessarily mean an adulterous woman. It might be a question for the judge at the trial whether, in this particular play, the word 'naughty' could imply 'adultery,' and the court might come to the conclusion that it could not, by any reasonable person, be taken to mean 'adulterous.' But unless it was held that there was no evidence to go to the jury upon such a point, the jury were right in putting their interpretation upon the words, and I am inclined to agree that such was the meaning of the critic."

those which afford a channel for useful commerce. Such waters are public highways of common right.¹

1. American Definition—Waters Navigable in Fact Are Public Highways.—

Alabama.—Bullock v. Wilson, 2 Port. (Ala.) 436; State v. Bell, 5 Port. (Ala.) 365; Rhodes v. Otis, 33 Ala. 578; Peters v. New Orleans etc. R. Co., 56 Ala. 528; Walker v. Allen, 72 Ala. 456; Lewis v. Coffee Co., 77 Ala. 190; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 55; Sullivan v. Spotswood, 82 Ala. 163; Olive v. State, 86 Ala. 88, 93.

Arkansas.—Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Brooks, 39 Ark. 403; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Ramsey (Ark.), 13 S. W. Rep. 931; s. c., 8 L. R., A. 559.

California.—Gunter v. Geary, 1 Cal. 462; American River Water Co. v. Amsden, 6 Cal. 443; People v. Gold Run Ditch Min. Co., 66 Cal. 138, 146; s. c., 56 Am. Rep. 80.

Connecticut.—Adams v. Pease, 2 Conn. 481; Chapman v. Kimball, 9 Conn. 38, 41; s. c., 21 Am. Dec. 707; Hollister v. Union Co., 9 Conn. 436; s. c., 25 Am. Dec. 36.

Georgia.—Young v. Harrison, 6 Ga. 130, 141; Code of Georgia, 1882, § 2229.

Illinois.—Middleton v. Pritchard, 4 Ill. 510; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 112; Godfrey v. Alton, 12 Ill. 510; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 476; Illinois River Packet Co. v. Peoria Bridge Assoc., 38 Ill. 467; Ensinger v. People, 47 Ill. 384; s. c., 95 Am. Dec. 495; Chicago v. McGinn, 51 Ill. 266; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 295; Healy v. Joliet etc. R. Co., 2 Ill. App. 435; Washington Ice Co. v. Shortall, 101 Ill. 46, 52; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 196; McCartney v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 112 Ill. 611, 634.

Indiana.—Cox v. State, 3 Blackt. (Ind.) 193; Martin v. Bliss, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 35; s. c., 32 Am. Dec. 52; Depew v. Trustees of Wabash etc. Canal, 5 Ind. 9; St. Joseph Co. v. Pidge, 5 Ind. 13; Neaderhouser v. State, 28 Ind. 257; Bainbridge v. Sherlock, 29 Ind. 364; s. c., 95 Am. Dec. 644; Sherlock v. Bainbridge, 41 Ind. 35; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 302; Ross v. Faust, 54 Ind. 471; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 655.

Iowa.—McManus v. Carmichael, 3 Iowa 1; Steamboat "Globe" v. Kurtz, 4 G. Greene (Iowa) 433; Tomlin v. Dubuque etc. R. Co., 32 Iowa 106; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 176; Wood v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 60 Iowa 456.

Kansas.—Wood v. Fowler, 26 Kan. 682; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 330.

Kentucky.—Green & Barren River Nav. Co. v. Palmer, 83 Ky. 646; Kentucky Lumber Co. v. Green, 87 Ky. 257, 258.

Louisiana.—Boykin v. Shaffer, 13 La. An. 129; Ingram v. Police Jury of St. Tammany, 20 La. An. 226; Goodwill v. Bossier Police Jury, 38 La. An. 752, 755.

Maine.—Berry v. Carle, 3 Me. 269; Spring v. Russell, 7 Me. 290; Moor v. Veazie, 31 Me. 360; Brown v. Chadbourne, 31 Me. 9, 21; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 641; Treat v. Lord, 42 Me. 552; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 298; Parsons v. Clark, 76 Me. 476.

Maryland.—2 Public Gen. Laws 1888, art. 54, § 44; art. 98, § 21; Albert v. State, 66 Md. 325, 366; s. c., 59 Am. Rep. 159.

Massachusetts.—Commonwealth v. Chapin, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 199; Ingraham v. Wilkinson, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 268; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 342; Commonwealth v. Alger, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 53, 82; Blood v. Nashua etc. R. Co., 2 Gray (Mass.) 137, 139; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 444.

Michigan.—La Plaisance Bay Harbor Co. v. Monroe, Walk. (Mich.) 155; Lorman v. Benson, 8 Mich. 18; s. c., 77 Am. Dec. 435; Tyler v. People, 8 Mich. 320; Ryan v. Brown, 18 Mich. 195, 207; Thunder Bay River Booming Co. v. Speechly, 31 Mich. 336; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 184; Butterfield v. Gilchrist, 53 Mich. 22; Turner v. Holland, 54 Mich. 300; 65 Mich. 453.

Minnesota.—Castner v. The Steamboat Dr. Franklin, 1 Minn. 73; Schurmeier v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 10 Minn. 82; s. c., 88 Am. Dec. 59; Swanson v. Mississippi etc. Boom Co., 42 Minn. 532.

Mississippi.—Morgan v. Reading, 3 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 366; Comm. of Homochitto River v. Withers, 29 Miss. 21, 37; Smith v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 62 Miss. 510, 512; Smith v. Fonda, 64 Miss. 551.

Missouri.—O'Fallon v. Daggett, 4 Mo. 343, 347; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 640; Benson v. Morrow, 61 Mo. 345; Meyers v. St. Louis, 8 Mo. App. 266, 272.

New Hampshire.—Carter v. Thurston, 58 N. H. 104; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 584; Thompson v. Androscoggen River Imp. Co., 58 N. H. 108.

New Jersey.—Attorney General v. Delaware etc. R. Co., 27 N. J. Eq. 1, 7;

Lister v. Newark Plank Road Co., 36 N. J. Eq. 477.

New York.—Palmer v. Mulligan, 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 308; s. c., 2 Am. Dec. 270; Hooker v. Cummings, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 90; s. c., 11 Am. Dec. 249; People v. Canal Appraisers, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 355; People v. Canal Appraisers, 33 N. Y. 461; Chenango Bridge Co. v. Paige, 83 N. Y. 178; Morgan v. King, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 277, 283; s. c., 35 N. Y. 454, 459; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 58; Roberts v. Baumgarten, 110 N. Y. 380, 383.

North Carolina.—Wilson v. Forbes, 2 Dev. (N. Car.) 30, 34; Ingram v. Threadgill, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) 59, 61; Collins v. Benbury, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 118; s. c., 42 Am. Dec. 155; Fagan v. Armistead, 11 Ired. (N. Car.) 433; State v. Dibble, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 107, 110; Davis v. Jerkins, 5 Jones (N. Car.) 290, 292; Broadnax v. Baker, 94 N. Car. 675, 681; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 633; Hodges v. Williams, 95 N. Car. 331, 335; s. c., 59 Am. Rep. 242; State v. Narrows Island Club, 100 N. Car. 477, 481.

Ohio.—Gavit v. Chambers, 3 Ohio 495, 498; Lamb v. Rickets, 11 Ohio 311, 315; Walker v. Board of Public Works, 16 Ohio 540, 544; Hickok v. Hine, 23 Ohio St. 523, 527; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 255.

Oregon.—Weise v. Smith, 3 Oregon 445; Haines v. Welch, 14 Oregon 319.

Pennsylvania.—Carson v. Blazer, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 475; s. c., 4 Am. Dec. 463; Shrunk v. Schuylkill Nav. Co., 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 71, Bird v. Smith, 8 Watts (Pa.) 434, s. c., 34 Am. Dec. 483; Johns v. Davidson, 16 Pa. St. 512, 522; Barclay R. & Coal Co. v. Ingham, 36 Pa. St. 194, 200; Com. v. Fisher, 1 P. & W. (Pa.) 462; Flanagan v. Philadelphia, 42 Pa. St. 219; Monongahela Bridge Co. v. Kirk, 46 Pa. St. 112, 120; s. c., 84 Am. Dec. 527; McKeon v. Delaware Division Canal Co., 49 Pa. St. 424, 433; Stover v. Jack, 60 Pa. St. 339; Wainwright v. McCullough, 63 Pa. St. 66, 73; Poor v. McClure, 77 Pa. St. 214; Pursell v. Stover, 110 Pa. St. 43, 46; Fulmer v. Williams, 122 Pa. St. 191.

South Carolina.—Cates v. Wadlington, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 580; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 699. But see McCullough v. Wall, 4 Rich. (S. Car.) 68; Shands v. Triplet, 5 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 76, 79.

Tennessee.—Elder v. Burrus, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 358; Stuart v. Clark, 2 Swan. (Tenn.) 1; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 49; Sigler v. State, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 493; Holbert v. Endens, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 204, 207; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 26; Goodwin v. Thompson, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 209; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 410.

Texas.—Selman v. Wolfe, 27 Tex. 68.

West Virginia.—Ravenswood v. Flemings, 22 W. Va. 52; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 485; Barre v. Fleming, 29 W. Va. 314; Gaston v. Mace, 33 W. Va. 14.

Wisconsin.—Walker v. Shepardson, 4 Wis. 486; s. c., 2 Wis. 384; s. c., 60 Am. Dec. 423; Boorman v. Sunnuchs, 42 Wis. 233; Diedrich v. Northwestern R. Co., 42 Wis. 248, 263; Black River Flooding Dam Assoc. v. Ketchum, 54 Wis. 313; Norcross v. Griffiths, 65 Wis. 599; 56 Am. Rep. 642.

United States.—Ordinance of 1787, art. 4; Georgetown v. Alexandria Canal Co., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 91, 97; Bowman v. Wathen, 2 McLean (U. S.) 376, 382; The Genesee Chief v. Fitzhugh, 12 How. (U. S.) 443; Railroad Co. v. Schurmeir, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 272; Rundle v. Delaware etc. Canal Co., 14 How. (U. S.) 79; The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 557; The Montello, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 430; Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324, 338; Pound v. Teurck, 95 U. S. 459.

It will be noticed that, in some of the earlier of these cases, the term "navigable" is used in its common law sense (see infra), but they nevertheless confirmed the general principle stated in the text. There is a marked unanimity in the later authorities from almost every State in support of the American rule. A few excerpts from leading opinions will serve to illustrate the development of the law on this subject and the trend of late decisions.

TILGHMAN, C. J.: It is said, however, that some of the cases assert, that by navigable waters are meant, rivers in which there is no [a?] flow or reflow of the tide. This definition may be very proper in England, where there is no river of considerable importance as to navigation, which has not a flow of the tide; but it would be highly unreasonable when applied to our large rivers, such as the Ohio, Alleghany, Delaware, Schuylkill, or Susquehanna, and its branches. Carson v. Blazer, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 475, 478; s. c., 4 Am. Dec. 463.

TURLEY, J.: All laws are or ought to be, an adaptation of principles of action to the state and condition of a country, and to its moral and social position. . . . The insular position of Great Britain, the short courses of her rivers, and the well known fact that there are none of them navigable above tide-water but for very small craft, well warrants the distinction there drawn by the common law. But very different is the situation of the continental powers of Europe in this particular. Their streams are many of them large and long, and navigable to a great extent above tide water, and accordingly we find that the civil law which regulates and governs those countries has adopted a very different rule as to what are or are not navigable streams, and by it all rivers, even above tide-water, provided they are navigable for ships or boats, are considered as public property. Now, these principles of the common and civil law are not in conflict with one another; they are both right and proper for the countries to which they are made to apply. In England there are no streams navigable above tide-water; but the reverse is true of the continent, and the end designed to be effected, both by the common and civil law upon this subject, is identical—viz, that navigable waters shall not become private property, but shall belong to the community at large. If the local situation of the continent of Europe required an extension of the construction of what was necessary to constitute a navigable river, and prevented its restriction to tide-water much more so does that of our own country, and particularly the valley of the Mississippi. Elder v. Burrus, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 358, 366-7 (1845).

WELLS, J.: If a stream could be subject to public servitude by long use only, many large rivers in newly settled States, and some in the interior of this State, would be altogether under the control and dominion of the owners of their beds, and the community would be deprived of the use of those rivers, which nature has plainly declared to be public highways. The true test, therefore, to be applied in such cases, is, whether a stream is inherently and in its nature, capable of being used for the purposes of commerce, for the floating of vessels, boats, rafts or logs. Brown v. Chadbourne, 31 Me. 9, 21; s. c., 50. Am. Dec. 641.

WOODWARD, J.: It is navigability in fact, which forms the foundation for navigability in law; and from the fact follows the appropriation to public use, and hence its publicity and legal navigability. . . . It is impossible to bring the mind to an approval, when we attempt to apply to the rivers of this country, stretching up to three thousand miles of extent—flowing through or between numerous and independent States, and bearing a commerce which competes with that of the oceans—a test which might be applicable to an island not so large as some two of our States; and to streams whose utmost length was less than three hundred miles, and whose outlet and fountain, at the same time, could be within the same State jurisdiction. In England or in Great Britain, the chief rivers are the Severn, Thames, Kent, Humber, and Mersey; the latter of which is about fifty, and the first about three hundred miles in length, and of this (the Severn) about one hundred miles consist of the Bristol Channel. The world renowned Thames has the diminutive proportion of two hundred miles. And of even these lengths, not the whole is navigable. Thus it will be seen that these chief rivers of good old England, range in extent with our Connecticut, Merrimac, Hudson, Alleghany, Monongahela, Cedar, Iowa, and Des Moines, and bear a proportion of one to twenty, when compared with the greater rivers of this continent. McManus v. Carmichael, 3 Iowa 1, 30-1 (1856).

READ, J.: We are aware by the common law of England, such streams as the Mississippi, the Missouri, the rivers Amazon and Plate, the Rhine, the Danube, the Po, the Nile, the Euphrates, the Ganges and the Indus, were not navigable rivers, but were the subject of private property, whilst an insignificant creek in a small island was elevated to the dignity of a public river, because it was so near the ocean that the tide ebbed and flowed up the whole of its petty course. The Roman law, which has pervaded continental Europe, and which took its rise in a country where there was a tideless sea, recognized all rivers as navigable which were really so, and this common-sense view was adopted by the early founders of Pennsylvania, whose province was intersected by large and valuable streams, some of which are a mile in breadth. Monongahela Bridge Co. v. Kirk, 46 Pa. St. 112, 120-1; s. c., 85 Am. Dec. 527.

UPTON, J.: It may be considered the settled law of the United States, that so much of the doctrine of the common law of England, as made the ebb and flow of the tide a test of navigability, is not now applicable in the United States. On the contrary, the maxim of Lord Mansfield, "out of the fact arises the right," is applied by the courts of this country, citing Morgan v. King, 35 N. Y. 454; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 58; Jones v. Pettibone, 2 Wis. 308; Weise v. Smith, 3 Oreg. 435, 448.

FIELD, J.: The doctrine of the common law as to the navigability of waters has no application in this country. Here the ebb and flow of the tide do not constitute the usual test, as in England, or any test at all of the navigability of waters. There, no waters are navigable in fact, or at least to any considerable extent, which are not subject to the tide, and from this circumstance tide water and navigable water there signify substantially the same thing. But in this country the case is widely different. Some of our rivers are as navigable for many hundreds of miles above as they are below the limits of tide water, and some of them are navigable for great distances by large vessels, which are not even affected by the tide at any point during their entire length. A different test must, therefore, be applied to determine the navigability of our rivers, and that is found in their navigable capacity. Those rivers must be regarded as public navigable rivers in law which are navigable in fact. And they are navigable in fact when they are used, or are susceptible of being used, in their ordinary condition, as highways for commerce, over which trade and travel are or may be conducted in the customary modes of trade and travel on water. The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 557, 563.

DAY, J.: A river is regarded as navigable which is capable of floating to market the products of the country through which it passes, or upon which commerce may be conducted; and, from the fact of its being so, navigable, it becomes in law a public river or highway. The character of a river, as such highway, is not so much determined by the frequency of its use for that purpose as it is by its capacity of being used by the public for purposes of transportation and commerce. Hickok v. Hine, 23 Ohio St. 523, 527; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 255.

DAVIS, J.: It would be a narrow rule to hold that in this country, unless a river was capable of being navigated by steam or sail vessels, it could not be treated as a public highway. The capability of use by the public for purposes of transportation and commerce affords the true criterion of the navigability of a river, rather than the extent and manner of that use. If it be capable in its natural state of being used for purposes of commerce, no matter in what mode the commerce may be conducted, it is navigable in fact, and becomes in law a public river or highway. The Montello, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 430, 441-2.

FOSTER, J.: The public easement is not, as was formerly inferred by our courts (Scott v. Willson, 3 N. H. 321, 325), founded upon usage, custom or prescription. Any stream capable of being generally and commonly useful for some purpose of trade, and the transportation of property, whether by steamers, or sailing vessels, or oar-boats, or rafts, is a public stream. Carter v. Thurston, 58 N. H. 104, 106-7; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 584.

RYAN, C. J.: Waters at the common law were called navigable, only when affected by the ebb and flow of the tide. Of course in this State, bounded on one side by a great freshwater sea, and on another by a great river, which, with its confluent, constitutes perhaps the most extensive inland navigation in the world, and having within it many streams and bodies of water capable of navigation and actually navigated, there is no water subject to the ebb and flow of the tide, or called navigable at the common law. Here, therefore, the restricted sense of the word navigable, at the common law, is wholly inappropriate to the actual conditions of things. Waters are here held navigable when capable of navigation in fact, without other condition. And when we use the terms navigable or unnavigable, we mean capable or incapable of actual navigation. Diedrich v. Northwestern R. Co., 42 Wis. 248, 268.

BAILEY, J.: It may be remarked that none of the streams or water-courses within this State are navigable in the sense of the common law. No rivers, by the common law, are navigable above the ebb and flow of the tide; and as this State is situated many hundred miles above the highest point at which the tide ebbs and flows in the Mississippi and St. Lawrence, to which all our waters are tributary, it is manifest that the classification of waters into navigable and non-navigable by the common law rule, at least so far as relates to the public easement, can have no application here. Healy v. Joliet etc. R. Co., 2 Ill. App. 435, 439.

(a) Commerce Carried on Over Such Waters Must be Valuable.
—In order that waters may be navigable in the legal sense, commerce must be carried on over them which is of an essentially valuable character.¹

BRICKELL, C. J.: It is not the ebb and flow of the tide which, as in England, constitutes the usual, or, it may be said, any test at all of the navigability of waters, by which we mean their subjection to public use. The test is the adaptability of the waters to the purposes of navigation; whether they are, or in fact have been, used by the public, or are capable of being used, in their natural condition, as highways for commerce; for trade and travel; for the transportation of the products of the country, of its industries, of its fields, forests or mines, in the customary modes of such transportation. Walker v. Allen, 72 Ala. 456, 457-8.

SMITH, C. J.: Navigable waters, constituting highways, are not ascertained here, as they are in England, an island accessible to ocean tides, by the extent of their ebb and flow, but by a more practical test of their capacity to float boats used as instruments of commerce, in the interchange of commodities, and large enough for the purpose. Broadnax v. Baker, 94 N. Car. 675, 681; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 633.

GREEN, J.: The great mass of the commerce of the United States is transported on waters in which the tide does not ebb and flow. And even when it is moved upon streams on which the tide does ebb and flow it is only for a comparatively short distance, while, for nearly the whole distance, it has been moved from above the tide-water section of the country. Indeed, this is the case in many States of the Union that carry on a large commerce, and in which there is no tide water—our own State for instance. But in none of these States has it ever been held that these are not navigable streams, simply because there was no ebb or flow of the tide. Gaston v. Mace, 33 W. Va. 14, 20.

BATTLE, J.: The ebb and flow of the tide is merely an arbitrary test, since many waters where the tide flows are not in fact navigable, and many, especially on the continent, where it does not flow, are navigable. . . . While in England the ebb and flow of the tide is the most convenient, certain and usual test of the navigability of rivers, as the tide does in fact ebb and flow in all its navigable rivers, it is wholly inapplicable in this country, where there are large fresh water rivers thousands of miles long, flowing almost across the entire continent, bearing upon their bosom the commerce of the outside world in part, as well as of the continent. St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Ramsey (Ark.), 13 S. W. Rep. 931; s. c., 8 L. R., A. 559, 561.

1. Burrows v. Gallup, 32 Conn. 493, 501; s. c., 87 Am. Dec. 186; Neaderhouse v. State, 28 Ind. 257; Woodman v. Pittman, 79 Me. 456; Charleston v. Middlesex Co., 3 Metc. (Mass.) 202; Murdock v. Stickney, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 113, 115; Rowe v. Granite Bridge Corp., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 344.

"But this language is applied to the capacity of the stream, and is not intended to be a strict enumeration of the uses to which it must be actually applied in order to give it this character. Navigable streams are highways; and a traveller for pleasure is as fully entitled to protection in using a public highway, whether by land or by water, as a traveller for business." Per CHAPMAN, C. J., in Attorney General v. Woods, 108 Mass. 436, 439.

But it was held in Burrows v. Whitwam, 59 Mich. 279, that "The fact that the public have used a river after a dam was built across it, for pleasure boating or fishing, has no tendency whatever to prove it navigable."

Town of Wethersfield v. Humphrey, 20 Conn. 217, was a proceeding against certain parties for obstructing navigation. In order to furnish access to a ferry, they had laid out a highway across the mouth of Keeney's Cove, an inlet from the Connecticut River, in which the tide ebbed and flowed. The court held that the obstruction complained of did not constitute a public nuisance, and in the course of the opinion said (p. 227): "This cove cannot be said to be navigable by any craft whatever, though at times a fish boat or skiff or Indian canoe may be pushed through its waters; or, in the winter months occasionally, a small sea boat is laid up to avoid the ice of the river. But this is not navigation. That only is such, and those only are navigable waters where the public pass and repass upon them with vessels or boats in the prosecution of useful occupations. There must be some commerce or navigation which is essentially valuable. A hunter or fisherman, by drawing his boat through the waters of a brook or shallow creek, does not create navigation, or constitute their waters channels of commerce."

(b) Streams merely floatable are highways. But such commerce need not be conducted by means of boats and vessels; waters which are capable only of floating rafts and logs are public highways for that purpose.¹

It has also been held that the property which is the subject of such commerce, must be "conducted by the agency of man." Munson v. Hungerford, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 265. But this doctrine was not followed in Morgan v. King, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 227.

1. Lewis v. Coffee Co., 77 Ala. 190; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 55; Sullivan v. Jernigan, 21 Fla. 264; Berry v. Carle, 3 Me. 269; Spring v. Russell, 7 Me. 273; Wadsworth v. Smith, 11 Me. 278; s. c., 26 Am. Dec. 525; Brown v. Chadbourne, 31 Me. 9; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 641; Knox v. Chaloner, 42 Me. 150; Treat v. Lord, 42 Me. 552; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 298; Brown v. Black, 43 Me. 443; Veazie v. Dwinel, 50 Me. 479; Gerrish v. Brown, 51 Me. 256; s. c., 81 Am. Dec. 569; Davis v. Winslow, 51 Me. 264; s. c., 81 Am. Dec. 573; Lancey v. Clifford, 54 Me. 487; s. c., 92 Am. Dec. 561; Moore v. Sanborne, 2 Mich. 520; s. c., 59 Am. Dec. 209; Thunder Bay River Booming Co. v. Speechly, 31 Mich. 336; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 184; Thompson v. Andros-coggin Co., 54 N. H. 545; Carter v. Thurston, 58 N. H. 104; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 584; Shaw v. Crawford, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 236; Brown v. Scofield, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 239; Morgan v. King, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 277, 284; 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 90; 35 N. Y. 454; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 58; Town of Pierrepont v. Loveless, 72 N. Y. 211, 216; Weise v. Smith, 3 Oreg. 445; Felger v. Robinson, 3 Oreg. 455; Shaw v. Oswego Iron Co., 10 Oreg. 371; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 146; Stuart v. Clark, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 16; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 49; Gatson v. Mace, 33 W. Va. 14; Whisler v. Wilkinson, 22 Wis. 572; Sellers v. Union Lumbering Co., 39 Wis. 525; Olson v. Merrill, 42 Wis. 203, 212; Cohn v. Wausau Boom Co., 47 Wis. 324; Weatherby v. Meiklejohn, 56 Wis. 73; Herman v. Beef Slough Mfg. etc. Co., 8 Biss. (U. S.) 334; 1 Fed. Rep. 145; United States v. Mississippi etc. Boom Co., 3 Fed. Rep. 548; Esson v. M'Master, 1 Kerr (N. Brunswick) 501; Rower v. Titus, 1 Allen (N. Brunswick) 326, 333; Boissonault v. Olivia, Stuart (Lower Canada) 564.

"Upon many of our streams, although of sufficient capacity for navigation by boats, they are never seen—whilst rafts of lumber of immense value, and mill logs which are counted by thousands, are annually floated along them to market. Accordingly we find that a capacity to float rafts and logs in those States where the manufacture of lumber is prosecuted as a branch of trade, is recognized as a criterion of the public right of passage and of use, upon the principle already adverted to, that such right is to be ascertained from the public necessity and occasion for such use." Per MARTIN, J., in Moore v. Sanbourne, 2 Mich. 520, 526.

Qualifications of This Rule—(See also next note)—South Carolina. "Although we cannot define by technical terms what constitutes a navigable river in this State, yet I presume we may venture to say that cannot be considered a navigable river, the natural obstructions of which prevent the passage of boats of any description whatever." Per NOTT, J., in Cates v. Wadlington, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 582; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 699.

California.—In American River Water Co. v. Amsden, 6 Cal. 413, it was held that while a stream is navigable which can float rafts of lumber, it is not so if it only have capacity for floating logs and planks.

On the other hand, in Pennsylvania, a stream declared by statute to be a public highway for the passage of "boats and rafts," is open to the public use for floating logs, though not fastened together. Dedrick v. Wood, 15 Pa. St. 9.

Restrictions on the Right of Floatage.—It has been held that streams in which logs cannot be floated without being propelled by persons on the banks, are not navigable. Brown v. Chadbourne, 31 Me. 9; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 60; Treat v. Lord, 42 Me. 552; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 298; Morgan v. King, 35 N. Y. 454; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 58. But this rule has not been adopted in Wisconsin. Olson v. Merrill, 42 Wis. 203, 212. See also Weise v. Smith, 3 Oreg. 445.

(c) Navigability Need Not be Perennial.—It is not necessary that such waters be fit for navigation at all times, but their capacity therefor must recur with regularity.¹

In Michigan, a private stream capable of floatage cannot be used for floating logs not cut near its banks. Koopman v. Blodgett (Mich.), 14 N. W. Rep. 909. And the language of other decisions would seem to limit this right to the transportation of the products of lands adjacent to the banks of the stream. See Smith v. Fonda, 64 Miss. 551, 554; Morgan v. King, 35 N. Y. 454, 459; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 58.

On a stream which is valuable for floatage, but not for navigation in the more enlarged sense, it cannot be said that the right of floatage is so far paramount to the use of the water for machinery as to authorize the sacrifice of the latter for the former interest. Middleton v. Flat River Booming Co., 27 Mich. 533.

At those times when a stream is not naturally floatable, an upper riparian owner has no right to detain the water until a flood can be caused, to the detriment of a lower proprietor, sufficient for floating logs. Thunder Bay River Booming Co. v. Speechly, 31 Mich. 336; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 184; Witheral v. Muskegon Booming Co., 68 Mich. 48.

1. Navigability Need Not be Perennial.—Walker v. Allen, 72 Ala. 456; Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Brooks, 39 Ark. 403, 409; Moore v. Sanborne, 2 Mich. 519; s. c., 59 Am. Dec. 209; Thunder Bay River Booming Co. v. Speechly, 31 Mich. 336; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 184; Hogg v. Zanesville etc. Canal Co., 5 Ohio 410, 422; Olson v. Merrill, 42 Wis. 203, 212.

But It Must be Periodical.—Lewis v. Coffee Co., 77 Ala. 190; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 55; Smith v. Fonda, 64 Miss. 551; Haines v. Hall, 17 Oreg. 165; Olson v. Merrill, 42 Wis. 203.

● Streams Periodically Floatable.—The decisions are not harmonious respecting the right of the public to use streams which are capable only of floatage, and that for but a portion of the year. In States where the lumber industry is important, such streams are held to be subject to the public use during times when they have sufficient capacity. Brown v. Chadbourne, 31 Me. 9; s. c. 50 Am. Dec. 641; Smith v. Fonda, 64 Miss. 551, 559; Weise v. Smith, 3 Oreg. 445; Shaw v. Oswego Iron Co., 10 Oreg. 371. See also the dictum in Barclay R. & Coal Co. v. Ingham, 36 Pa. St. 201, 202.

MARTIN, J.: "It is a valuable, rather than a continual use, which determines the public right." Moore v. Sanborne, 2 Mich. 526; s. c., 59 Am. Dec. 207.

DANFORTH, J.: "In order to make a stream floatable, it is not necessary that it should be so at all seasons of the year. It is sufficient if it have that character at different periods with reasonable certainty and for such a length of time as to make it profitable for that purpose." Holden v. Robinson Mfg. Co., 65 Me. 216.

BOISE, C. J.: "We hold the law to be, that any stream in this State is navigable on whose waters logs or timbers can be floated to market, and that they are public highways for that purpose, and that it is not necessary that they be navigable the whole year for that purpose to constitute them such. If at high water they can be used for floating timber, then they are navigable." Felger v. Robinson, 3 Oreg. 457-8; citing Moor v. Veazie, 32 Me. 343; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 655; Treat v. Lord, 42 Me. 552; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 298; Brown v. Scofield, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 243.

But "however necessary it may be in the great lumbering States of Maine and Michigan, that private rights should yield to the prevailing interest, no such necessity exists in this State." BREESE, J., in Hubbard v. Bell, 54 Ill. 110, 118; s. c., 5 Am. Rep. 98.

And in other States the rule is laid down that small streams capable of floating logs only during a freshet or for a limited portion of the year, are not subject to the public easement of floatage. Rhodes v. Otis, 33 Ala. 578; Lewis v. Coffee Co., 77 Ala. 190; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 55; Cardwell v. Sacramento Co., 79 Cal. 347; Rowe v. Granite Bridge Corp., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 344; Munson v. Hungerford, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 265; Curtis v. Keesler, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 511;

(d) Navigability Need Not be Continuous.—Nor is it essential that waters, in order to be navigable, afford a continuous passage throughout their entire extent for water-craft or logs.¹

(e) Waters Artificially Navigable.—Most of the authorities limit the term navigable to waters having a natural and inherent capacity for navigation.²

(f) Other Tests of Navigability.—In addition to the general criterion of adaptability for the purposes of commerce, which all the American authorities emphasize, other tests of navigability are stated in some of the cases and will be found in the notes.³

Morgan v. King, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 277; 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 9; 35 N. Y. 454; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 58; Haines v. Welch, 14 Oreg. 319; Haines v. Hall, 17 Oreg. 165.

If, however, such stream is so used without objection for twenty years, it is a public thoroughfare. Stump v. McNairy, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 363; s. c., 42 Am. Dec. 437.

On the general subject of streams periodically navigable, see articles in 5 Albany Law Journal, 359 and 407:

1. Walker v. Allen, 72 Ala. 456; Brown v. Chadbourne, 31 Me. 9, 25; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 641; Morgan v. King, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 277; Broadnax v. Baker, 94 N. Car. 675, 681; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 633; The Montello, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 430; Spooner v. McConnell, : McLean (U. S.) 337, 350.

2. Artificial Streams.—See cases cited in foregoing note.

"A stream which can only be made floatable by artificial means, can in no sense be deemed a public highway." MARTIN, J., in Moore v. Sanborne, 2 Mich. 519, 524; s. c., 59 Am. Dec. 209.

Streams not naturally fitted for floating logs do not become public through improvement by the riparian owner. Wadsworth v. Smith, 11 Me. 278; s. c., 26 Am. Dec. 525; Holden v. Robinson Mfg. Co., 65 Me. 215.

In Oregon, an artificial channel opened by an individual for his special use, and capable of floating logs and small boats for a few days in the year and at high water only, is not subject to the public easement. Nutter v. Gallagher (Oregon 1890), 24 Pac. Rep. 250. See also Haines v. Hall, 17 Oreg. 165.

But the public may use for floatage a new channel into which the waters of a navigable stream have been diverted. Dwinel v. Barnard, 28 Me. 554; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 507; Dwinel v. Veazie, 44 Me. 167.

In England, an artificial channel through which the waters of a navigable river flow to the sea, is public. Regina v. Betts, 44 Cox (C. C.) 211; 19 L. J., Q. B. 501.

And the same is true of a new channel created by a break in a dam. Whisler v. Wilkinson, 22 Wis. 572.

And in South Carolina, the court declined to say "that an individual has such an exclusive right to a river which is capable of being made navigable, that the legislature may not declare it to be a public highway, whenever the obstructions are removed and it becomes fit for public use." Cates v. Wadlington, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 583; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 699.

3. The following are laid down in Rhodes v. Otis, 33 Ala. 578: Number of people interested in commerce carried on over the waters; importance of public interests involved; length of time floatable capacity continues; previous use by public; treatment in government surveys.

The existence of a current is not a test of the navigability of a river; it may be navigable with or without such current. Turner v. Holland, 54 Mich. 300; 65 Mich. 453.

In Burroughs v. Whitwam, 59 Mich. 279, the opinion of the majority of the court would seem to make actual use, and not capacity therefor, the test of navigability.

In North Carolina, the test of navigability has been held to be capacity to afford passage for sea going vessels. Wilson v. Forbes, 2 Dev. (N. Car.) 30; Collins v. Benbury, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) 277; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 722; State v. Glenn, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 321. But this rule has been modified by recent decisions. Broadnax v. Baker, 94 N. Car. 675; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 633; Hodges v. Williams, 95 N. Car. 331; s. c., 59 Am. Rep. 242.

Under Tenn. Code, §§ 1439, 1524, providing for the erection of mill dams across waters not navigable in the

(g) Proof of Navigability.—Navigable capacity is generally a question of fact,¹ and the burden of proving it is on the party alleging the same.² But the courts of some States will take judicial notice of the navigability of streams.³

2. At common law a distinction was made between waters navigable in law and those navigable in fact, the former phrase being used interchangeably with tide-waters.⁴ This is the sense in which the term is still used in England,⁵ and in many, especially the earlier, cases in this country.⁶ Under this doctrine the title to proper, legal or ordinary sense, a stream is not navigable which is not of sufficient depth naturally for valuable floatage, such as rafts, flatboats and small vessels. Irwin v. Brown (Tenn. 1889), 12 S. W. Rep. 340.

The Niagara River is a navigable river, notwithstanding the obstruction of the falls. Re State Reservation Comm., 37 Hun (N. Y.) 537.

1. A Question of Fact.—State v. Bell, Port. (Ala.) 365; Rhodes v. Otis, 33 Ala. 578; Olive v. State, 86 Ala. 88; Treat v. Lord, 42 Me. 552; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 298; Smith v. Fonda, 64 Miss. 551; Felger v. Robinson, 3 Oreg. 455; Healey v. Joliet etc. R. Co., 116 U. S. 191. And may be proved by parol. Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Brooks, 39 Ark. 403.

But when facts are ascertained it becomes a question of law. Morgan v. King, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 277; Rhodes v. Otis, 33 Ala. 578; Walker v. Allen, 72 Ala. 456.

2. Burden of Proof.—Walker v. Allen, 77 Ala. 456; Morrison v. Coleman, 87 Ala. 655; Lewis v. Coffee Co., 77 Ala. 190; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 55; Sullivan v. Spotswood, 82 Ala. 163; Alabama S. R. Nav. Co. v. Georgia Pac. R. Co., 87 Ala. 154.

The fact that a stream between two lakes was not meandered by United States surveyors raises a presumption that it is not navigable. Clute v. Briggs, 22 Wis. 607.

But a statute prohibiting obstructions in streams meandered by United States surveyors, does not dispense with proof of their navigability. Jones v. Pettibone, 2 Wis. 308. See also Ross v. Faust, 54 Ind. 471; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 655.

All tide waters are prima facie navigable. See cases cited in foregoing note.

3. Judicial Notice.—Bittle v. Stuart, 34 Ark. 224; Neaderhouser v. State, 28 Ind. 257; Ross v. Faust, 54 Ind. 471;

s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 655; Woods v. Fowler, 26 Kan. 682; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 330; Hodgman v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 23 Minn. 153, 160; State v. Gilmanton, 14 N. H. 467; Thompson v. Androscoggin Co., 54 N. H. 545; Metzger v. Post, 42 N. J. L. 77; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 341; Brown v. Scofield, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 239; Lands v. A Cargo of 227 Tons of Coal, 4 Fed. Rep. 478. See also Walker v. Allen, 72 Ala. 456; Tewksbury v. Schulenberg, 41 Wis. 584.

In England it has been held that instances of persons frequenting a stream for pleasure parties, etc., without consent of one claiming exclusive ownership, is sufficient proof that the stream is public. Miles v. Rose, 1 Marsh 313; 5 Taunt. 705.

4. 3 Kent's Commentaries (13th ed.) 413. And see generally cases cited in foregoing note. This definition was first laid down Royal Fishery in the Banne, 2 Davies (Eng.) 149.

5. See cases cited below.

In England, as is well brought out in the opinions quoted in the foregoing note, the physical conditions of the country rendered the common law definition approximately correct, and the same is largely true of Massachusetts, New Jersey and other States bordering on the ocean.

6. Although the weight of authority, as seen in the foregoing note is to the contrary, there are some well considered American cases in which the common law definition is adhered to. See Middleton v. Pritchard, 4 Ill. 510; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 112; Chicago v. McGinn, 51 Ill. 266, 272; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 295; Binney's Case, 2 Bland Ch (Md.) 124; Browne v. Kennedy, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 196; Day v. Day, 22 Md. 530, 537; Hatch v. Dwight, 17 Mass. 289; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 145; Com. v. Charlestown, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 180; s. c., 11 Am. Dec. 161; Ingraham v. Wilkinson, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 268, 271, 272; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 342; Com. v. Chapin, 5 Pick.

the soil beneath all tide-waters was, in England,¹ in the king, and in this country in the State.²

(a) The Tidal Test Only a Prima Facie One.—But the ebb and flow of the tide was only a prima facie test of navigability even at common law, tidal waters, in many instances, being held non-navigable.³

(b) Departures from the Common Law Definition.—There have been two notable departures in America from the common law in this regard. First—An extension in meaning of the term navigable waters, so as to include all which are such in fact.⁴ Second—In many States a change by which all nontidal waters fit for navigation came to be regarded as public property.⁵

3. By the civil law, waters navigable in fact are such in law; a navigable river being defined as "statio itinere navigio"—a place or way for navigation.⁶ The development of American law on this subject is toward the adoption of the civil law doctrines.⁷

II. CLASSES.—Navigable waters may be divided into two classes,⁸ public and semi-public; the basis of classification being ownership.

1. Public.—The waters of the first class and the soil beneath them are common property. The public not only have the right of navigation, but all other rights incident to ownership. Among these are fishing, gathering ice, sea-weed, sand and gravel,⁹ etc. (See FISH AND FISHERIES, 8 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 852; ICE AND ICE COMPANIES, 9 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 852; To this class belong (a) tide-waters, including the sea and its arms and tidal-rivers; (b) in many of the States all fresh water rivers and lakes which afford capacity for valuable floatage. (See LAKES AND PONDS, 12 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 610.)

(Mass.) 199; Waterman v. Johnson, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 261; Bardwell v. Ames, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 333; Knight v. Wilder, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 199; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 660; Hopkins Academy v. Dickinson, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 544; Attorney General v. Woods, 108 Mass. 436; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 380; Com. v. Vincent, 108 Mass. 441; Morgan v. Reading, 3 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 368; The Steamboat Magnolia v. Marshall, 39 Mich. 110; Scott v. Wilson, 3 N. H. 321, 325; Cobb v. Davenport, 32 N. J. L. 379; Attorney General v. Delaware etc. R. Co., 27 N. J. Eq. 631; Arnold v. Mundy, 6 N. J. L. 1; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 356; Benner v. Platter, 6 Ohio 505, 510, note.

1. See cases cited supra.

2. See cases cited supra.

3. Mayor of Lynn v. Turner, Cowper 86; Miles v. Rose, 6 Taunt. (Eng.) 705; 1 Marsh. 313; McManus v. Carmichael, 3 Iowa 1, 27.

In Rex v. Montague, 6 D. & R. 616 (Eng.) 4 B. & C. 398, it is held that the true criterion is the situation and nature of the channel. See also Woolrych on Waters, pp. 40-41.

Tidal channels are navigable in law only when so in fact. State v. Pacific Guano Co., 22 S. Car. 50, 77.

4. See note supra.

5. See supra.

6. Institutes Just., lib. 2, tit. 1; Digest, lib. 43, tits. 12, 13, 14; Domat Civil Law, Preliminary, bk. 1, tit. 3 § 1, arts. 1, 2; Code Napoleon, bk. 2, tit. 2, ch. 2, arts. 556, 560-63; tit. 1, ch. 3, art. 538.

7. See especially the later case cited in note supra.

8. For other classifications, see Angell on Watercourses (7th ed.) 1; Stuart v. Clark, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 9; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 49; Ross v. Faust, 54 Ind. 471; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 655; Georgia Code 2229; Holbert v. Edens, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 204, 207; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 26.

9. See supra; Solliday v. Johnson, 38 Pa. St. 350.

(a) Tidal—(1) National Dominion Over—(See also ADMIRALTY, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 193; INTERNATIONAL LAW, 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 431).—The open sea is the common property of all nations and cannot be exclusively appropriated.¹ But a nation has dominion over seas adjacent to its coast for a distance equal to the range of cannon, or about three miles.²

1. 1 Wharton's Int. Law Digest, § 26; 1 Kent Com. 26*; Grotius De Jure Belli, bk. 2, ch. 2, § 3; Vattel, Droit des Gens (Chitty's ed.), § 280.

2. The Marine League.—1 Wharton's Int. Law Digest, § 32; Bynckershock De Dominio Maris, ch. 2, p. 257; Vattel, Droit des Gens, § 287, et seq.; Wheaton's Int. Law (Lawrence), pt. 2, ch. 4, §§ 8, 10; 1 Phillimore's Int. Law (2nd ed.), ch. 4; Heffter Pub. Int. Law, § 75; Bluntschle, Das Moderne Volkrecht, §§ 307-9; The Leda Swa. Adm. (Eng.) 40; The Maria, 1 C. Rob. (Eng.) 340, 353; The Twee Gebroeders, 3 C. Rob. (Eng.) 162, 164; Regina v. 49 Casks of Brandy, 3 Hagg. Adm. (Eng.) 257, 289; The Saxonia, 15 Moore (P. C.) 262; Gammel v. Commrs. of Woods, 3 Macq., H. L. 419, 465; Gann v. Whitstable Free Fishers, 11 H. L. Cas. 192; 13 C. B., N. S. 853; 11 C. B., N. S. 387; Church v. Hubbart, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 187, 234; The Ann, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 62; United States v. Smiley, 6 Sawy. (U. S.) 640; Chase v. American Steamboat Co., 9 R. I. 419; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 274. The range of cannon is taken as the measure of distance, on the principle that the dominion of a State extends only so far as it may be maintained by force from the coast. 1 Wharton's Int. Law, § 32, p. 102; Lawrence's Wheaton's Int. Law 846. Hence it seems that this distance may be extended with the increased range of canon. Hall Int. Law 127; Field Int. Code (2nd ed.), § 28; 1 Fiore Int. Law, § 373; Bluntschle, 303. See also an article by Francis Wharton, "The Marine Zone," 32 Albany Law Journal 104.

Qualifications of the Doctrine.—In United States v. Kessler, Baldw. (U. S.) 22, it was said that the principle on which nations claimed this extension was, "to protect their safety, peace and honor from invasion, disturbance and insult," and it was held that the court did not acquire jurisdiction over a crime committed on a foreign vessel, because the latter was within three miles of the shore.

In England, previous dicta and decisions upholding the doctrine of marine extension were overruled in Queen v. Keyn, L. R., 2 Exch. Div. 63 (1876). In that case defendant was commander of a German vessel which negligently collided with and sunk a British ship, causing the death, by drowning, of one of its passengers. The affair took place within three miles of the coast of England, and by the law of that country the facts were such as to constitute manslaughter.

But it was held by a majority of the thirteen judges that low water mark on the coast was the limit of the territory of England, and that its courts had no jurisdiction over the person of defendant. Among the reasons advanced for this holding were: that the doctrine of the marine league was merely a shrinkage of the extravagant claims of early writers on international law (See Gould on Waters, §§ 3, 7; Henry, Adm. Jur., § 89.), and that these claims being no longer maintained as to the whole, could not apply to a limited portion; that it could not be shown that the law relative to the ancient jurisdiction of the admiral had ever been supplanted by the doctrines of the publicists; and that neither the assertions of the latter nor the assent of other nations were sufficient, without an express act of parliament, to extend the territory of England. This decision was binding on the English courts. Harris v. The Franconia, L. R., 2 C. P. Div. 173; Direct U. S. Cable Co. v. Telegraph Co., L. R., 2 App. Cas. 394. But, according to Sir Henry Maine, it rests on an entirely different conception than that which prevails in America, as to the obligatory force of international law on individual States. Maine's Int. Law 39, et seq.

Statutory Extension.—The effect of the decision in Queen v. Keyn was nullified by the Territorial Waters act, passed in 1878, extending the jurisdiction of the admiralty to the three-mile limit.

In the United States the three-mile belt received statutory recognition in the act Congress of 1794 (1 Stat. at Large, p. 384, ch. 50, § 6), providing for the jurisdiction of district courts over captures within the marine league. By the treaty between the United States and Mexico (9 Stat. at Large, 926, art. 5) it was stipulated that the boundary line should commence in the gulf, three leagues from land opposite the mouth of the Rio Grande, and run northward with the middle of the river. The territorial limits of Alabama are extended by the constitution (art. 2, § 1) to six leagues from the gulf shore. California's limits reach three English miles into the Pacific (Const, art. 12). Those of Massachusetts extend one marine league from low-water mark (Gen. Stat. 1882, ch. 1, § 1; of Rhode Island one league from high water mark (Pub. Stat., 1882, ch. 1, § 1). The limits of the Republic of Texas extended three leagues into the gulf, and this boundary was retained by the State after annexation. (Hartley's Digest, §§ 1631, 1634).

Where the coast is indented, this distance is measured from a straight line drawn between the enclosing headlands.¹

(2) Ownership.—The title to all tide-waters and their beds is, in this country, vested in the several States for the use and benefit of the public.² In England it is prima facie in the crown.³

(a) Right to Bathe in the Sea.—But while the public are, in general, entitled to the common enjoyment of such waters and their products,⁴ it has been held that there is no common law right to bathe in the sea.⁵

1. 1 Wharton's Int. Law Dig., § 28; Phillimore's Int. Law (2nd ed.), pt. 3, ch. 8; Lawrence's Wheaton's Int. Law, pt. 2, ch. 4, § 6; Marten's Precis du Droit, § 40; Klüber, Droit des Gens, § 130; Com. v. Peters, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 387; Mahler v. Transportation Co., 35 N. Y. 352; People v. Supervisors, 73 N. Y. 393, 396; United States v. Robinson, 4 Mason (U. S.) 307; De Lovis v. Boit, 2 Gall. 398, 425; United States v. Grush, 5 Mason (U. S.) 290; United States v. New Bedford Bridge, 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 401; Direct U. S. Cable Co. v. Anglo-American Telegraph Co., L. R., 2 App. Cas. 394; Queen v. Cunningham, Bell (C. C.) 86.

2. Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 367; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. (U. S.) 212; Howard v. Ingersoll, 13 How. (U. S.) 381, 421; Bennett v. Boggs, 1 Baldw. (U. S.) 76; Smith v. Maryland, 18 How. (U. S.) 74; Mumford v. Wardwell, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 423, 436; Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324; McCready v. Virginia, 94 U. S. 391, 394; Coburn v. Ames, 52

Cal. 385; Pitkin v. Olmstead, 1 Root (Conn.) 217; Chapman v. Kimball, 9 Conn. 40; s. c., 21 Am. Dec. 707; Simons v. French, 25 Conn. 346; Moulton v. Libbey, 37 Me. 472; s. c., 59 Am. Dec. 57; Browne v. Kennedy, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 195; Lakeman v. Burnham, 7 Gray (Mass.) 437, 440; Boston v. Richardson, 105 Mass. 351; Arnold v. Mundy, 6 N. J. L. 1; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 356; Gough v. Bell, 21 N. J. L. 156; 22 N. J. L. 441; Bell v. Gough, 23 N. J. L. 624; Stevens v. Paterson R. Co., 34 N. J. L. 532; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 269; Paul v. Hazleton, 37 N. J. L. 106; Attorney General v. Stevens, 1 N. J. Eq. 369; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 526; Attorney General v. Hudson Tunnel R. Co., 27 N. J. Eq. 176; Hudson Tunnel Co. v. Attorney General, 27 N. J. L. 573; Roger v. Jones, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 261; Smith v. Levinus, 8 N. Y. 472; People v. Tibbetts, 19 N. Y. 523; Hudson River R. Co. v. Loeb, 7 Robt. (N. Y.) 418; People v. New York etc. Ferry Co., 68 N. Y. 71; Towle v. Remson, 70 N. Y. 303, 308; Providence Steam Engine Co. v. Providence etc. Steamship Co., 12 R. I. 348; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 652.

3. 8 Bacon's Abridgment, title Prerogative, bk. 3; 5 Comyns Digest, Navigation, A. B; Royal Fishery of the Banne, Davies (Eng.) 49; Fitzwalter's Case, 1 Mod. Rep. (Eng.) 105; Carter v. Burcot, 4 Bur. (Eng.) 2162; King v. Smith, 2 Doug. (Eng.) 441; Williams v. Wilcox, 8 Ad. & E. (Eng.) 314; Attorney General v. Chambers, 4 De G. M. & G. (Eng.) 206; Whitstable Free Fishers v. Gann, 11 H. L. Cas. 192; 11 C. B., N. S. 387; 18 C. B., N. S. 553; 19 C. B., N. S. 803; Penryhn v. Holme, L. R., 2 Exch. Div. 328; Mayor of Carlisle v. Graham, L. R., 4 Exch. 361, 368; Murphy v. Ryan, Ir. R., 2 C. L. 143.

4. See supra.

5. Right to Bathe in the Sea.—Blundell v. Catterall, 5 B. & Ald. 268.

And under a statute regulating sea bathing and licensing bathing machines

(b) Nontidal—(1) Rivers—(See also LAKES AND PONDS, 12 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 610).—A river is a body of water with a uniform current.¹ It consists of the alveus or bed, the water, and the banks or shores (ripae or litora), according as the stream is nontidal or tidal.² (See also WATERS AND WATER-COURSES.) In many of the States, inland rivers navigable in the on the seashore, a licensee is not warranted in placing the latter in a portion of the beach which is private property. Mace v. Philcox, 15 C. B., N. S. 600; 10 Jur., N. S. 680; 33 L. J., C. P. 124.

Qualifications of This Doctrine.—"If the decision in Blundell v. Catterall, 5 B. & Ald. 268, relates only to such parts of the shore as are private property, the only practical restraint upon the privilege of sea bathing seems to be that which is imposed by decency and respect for the public morals." Gould on Waters, § 26, citing Rex v. Gunder, 2 Camp. 89.

In McManus v. Carmichael, 3 Iowa 1, WOODWARD, J., says of Blundell v. Catterall: "It is a strange case and much more, it is conceived, has been made of it than it warrants. All that was decided upon the question of the common law right was clearly extra-judicial, and it sets up a doctrine which probably would not be listened to in this country; that is, that there is no common law right to bathe in the sea. The case is doubted and dissented from in many others, and an English writer, Hall, in his treatise on the Rights of the Crown, etc., finds fault with it."

LOWRIE, C. J.: "It has never been considered as a trespass against the State . . . to bathe in the public waters." Solliday v. Johnson, 38 Pa. St. 380, 381.

PEARSON, J.: "We all, by nature, have a right to see by the light of the sun, and to breathe the air of heaven, to bathe in the sea, and to catch fish; but there is no necessity, and nothing from which to imply a right to go over another's land for these purposes." Hetfield v. Baum, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 394, 399; s. c., 57 Am. Dec. 563.

1. Definition.—State v. Gilmanton, 14 N. H. 467. See also Joliet etc. R. Co. v. Healy, 94 Ill. 416. In the former case it is said that this definition must be construed with reference to the particular body of water to which it relates.

"A river has been defined to be a running stream, pent in on either side by walls and banks, and it bears that name as well where the waters flow and reflow as where they have their current one way." Woolrych on Waters, p. 40, citing Callis on Sewers, p. 77.

TENTERDEN, C. J., in construing the phrase flumen vel cursus aquæ, says: "Now if these words be considered to denote water flowing in a channel between banks more or less defined, although such channel may be occasionally dry, a rule will be established of general and easy application." Rex v. Oxfordshire, 1 B. & Ad. (Eng.) 301.

But "to confine those words to a constant stream, or course of water flowing at all times, to the exclusion of flood water, whether rarely or frequently occurring, is not altogether consistent with the doctrine laid down in Rex v. Trafford (1 B. & Ad. 874). In that case the court, in speaking of the ancient course and outlet of flood water, which had been obstructed by fenders or banks, said: 'Now it has been long established that the ordinary course of water cannot be lawfully changed or obstructed for the benefit of one class of persons to the injury of another. Unless, therefore, a sound distinction can be made between the ordinary course of water flowing in a bounded channel at all usual seasons, and the extraordinary course which its superabundant quantity has been accustomed to take at particular seasons, the creation and continuance of those fenders cannot be justified.'" 2 Q. B. 745; 6 Jur. 485.

The chief difference between a river and a lake is in the presence of a current in the former. Callis on Sewers, 82; Woolrych on Sewers, 81; Gould on Waters, § 79; Trustees of Schools v. Schroll, 120 Ill. 509, 521; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 575. But a "lake does not lose its distinctive character because there is a current in it for a certain distance leading toward the outlet." State v. Gilmanton, 14 N. H. 476.

2. Parts.—Haight v. Keokuk, 4 Iowa 199, 212; Angell on Water Courses (7th ed.), § 4; Gould on Waters, §§ 41, 45.

The bed is the soil so occupied by the American sense,¹ are, like tide-waters, public property. Grants of land bordering on them do not extend ad usque filum aquæ, as at common law,² but are limited by the banks, and such streams have the general characteristics of public waters.³

stream as to be wrested from vegetation. Houghton v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 47 Iowa 370.

"The bank of a stream is the continuous margin where vegetation ceases, and the shore is the pebbly, sandy or rocky space between that and low water mark." COULTER, J., in McCullough v. Wainwright, 14 Pa. St. 171, 174.

The banks are those elevations which "contain the river, its natural channel, when there is the greatest flow of water." 1 Bouv. L. Dict.; Howard v. Ingersoll, 13 How. (U. S.) 426.

DARGAN, C. J.: The bank of a river may be said to be that space of rising ground above low water mark, which is usually covered by ordinary high water. We cannot conceive of any other definition more accurate than this, for the rising ground above low water cannot with any propriety be said to be the bed of a river, and therefore it must be the bank. We then see that the term bank of a river is an imperfect, or, rather, an indefinite guide, when we seek by it to fix upon a precise point of locality; for the bank of a river extends, or may extend, over a considerable space; in this respect, therefore, the term is indefinite and indeterminate. Howard v. Ingersoll, 17 Ala. 780, 789.

WALWORTH, CHANCELLOR: The shore of tide water is that portion of the land which is alternately covered by the water and left bare by the flux and reflux of the tide. Properly speaking, therefore, a river in which the tide does not ebb and flow has no shores, in the legal sense of the term. It has ripam but not litus. Child v. Starr, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 369, 375.

COWEN, J.: The bank and the water are correlative. You cannot own one without touching the other. Starr v. Child, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 149, 152.

CURTIS, J.: But neither the line of ordinary high water mark, nor of ordinary low water mark, nor of a middle stage of water, can be assumed as the line dividing the bed from the banks. This line is to be found by examining the bed and banks, and ascertaining where the presence and action of water are so common and usual, and so long continued in all ordinary years, as to mark upon the soil of the bed a character distinct from that of the banks, in respect to vegetation as well as in respect to the nature of the soil itself. Whether this line between the bed and the banks will be found above or below, or at a middle stage of water, must depend upon the character of the stream. Howard v. Ingersoll, 13 How. (U. S.) 380, 427.

1. See supra.

2. See BOUNDARIES, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 495.

3. States in Which Nontidal Navigable Rivers Are Public Property.—Alabama.—Riparian proprietor on navigable streams owns to low water mark. Bullock v. Wilson, 2 Port. (Ala.) 436; Mobile v. Enslava, 9 Port. (Ala.) 577; Williams v. Glover, 66 Ala. 189; Sullivan v. Spotswood, 82 Ala. 163. In the latter case it is held that a lease of "water front and booming facilities" does not carry a lease of the bed.

Arkansas.—St Louis etc. R. Co. v. Ramsey (Ark.), 13 S. W. Rep. 931; s. c., 8 L. R., A. 559.

California.—Packer v. Bird, 71 Cal. 134.

Indiana.—In this State the ownership of the bed of navigable fresh water streams is in doubt. Ross v. Faust, 54 Ind. 471; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 655. See also Stinson v. Butler, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 285; Bainbridge v. Sherlock, 29 Ind. 364; s. c., 95 Am. Dec. 644.

"The Wabash is a navigable stream, the bed of which has neither been surveyed nor sold." Dawson v. James, 64 Ind. 162.

Grants of lands bordering on the Ohio river extend only to low water mark. Stinson v. Butler, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 285; Bainbridge v. Sherlock, 29 Ind. 364; s. c., 95 Am. Dec. 644; Sherlock v. Bainbridge, 41 Ind. 35; Martin v. Evansville, 32 Ind. 85. See also Cox v. State, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 193.

Iowa.—McManus v. Carmichael, 3 Iowa 1, is one of the leading cases on this subject. It was an action of trespass by the owner of an island in the Mississippi river against one who had taken two boat loads of sand from a sand-bar adjoining the island, but situated between high and low water mark.

The court held that the action would not lie, basing its decision on three grounds: First, that the tidal test was not the only one even at common law; second, that in any event such test was not applicable to the Mississippi; and third, that the common law consequences of navigability attach to that river. WOODWARD, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, reviews exhaustively the leading authorities both English and American, and in closing says, p. 57: "When the Mississippi river was declared a public highway, in the solemn instruments before referred to, it was not in any technical sense, but in a high, broad and free understanding; and it was placed upon the same ground with a river navigable at common law. And as we cannot take the medium filum as our line, we think we are obeying the settled rules of law in considering the stream as declared a navigable river in the legal sense, and as subject to the consequences which attach to such waters at common law. The conclusion, therefore, is that plaintiff has not a title to the land between high and low water, so as to enable him to maintain this action for taking the sand. This opinion need not preclude the idea that the adjacent owner may have some rights between high and low water, which are even peculiar to himself and not common. Nor does it necessarily determine the question of the right to make wharves or structures for the convenience of navigation and commerce, and other questions of a similar nature." The doctrine is confirmed in Haight v. Keokuk, 4 Iowa 199; Tomlin v. Dubuque etc. R. Co., 32 Iowa 106; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 176; Musser v. Hershey, 42 Iowa 356; Houghton v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 47 Iowa 370; Renwick v. Davenport etc. R. Co., 49 Iowa 664, 669; Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324.

Kansas.—Wood v. Fowler, 26 Kan. 682; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 330, was an action by the owner of lands bordering on the Kansas river to restrain certain parties from cutting and removing ice formed opposite his land. The stream had once been used for navigation, but had been subsequently declared non-navigable by the legislature; and the court, BREWER, J., delivering the opinion, decided that the act of the legislature did not extend the riparian owner's title to the thread of the stream, and that "the title to the soil being in the State, and the stream being in a public highway, ownership of the ice would rest in the general public, or in the State as the representative of that public."

Minnesota.— "The navigation of large streams has been embarrassed and impeded by individual ownerships and improvements. Lands bounded by navigable rivers have carried, as incidents of this circumstance, the exclusive right to the soil to the middle of the stream, and where they were united in the same person on both sides of the river, such person has exercised the exclusive control of the entire channel adjacent. . . . From the view, however, we have taken of the law in this case, we have not deemed it necessary to declare judicially that the principle of the common law we have been discussing is not applicable to our situation." MEEKER, J., in Castner v. Steamboat Dr. Franklin, 1 Minn. 73. The rule is followed and extended in Schurmeier v. St. Paul R. Co., 10 Minn. 82; s. c., 88 Am. Dec. 596; affirmed 7 Wall. (U. S.) 272; St. Paul etc. R. Co. v. First Division of St. Paul etc. R. Co., 26 Minn. 31.

Missouri.— "The question of the ownership of the soil under the water is one which each State is at liberty to determine for itself; and if it chooses to concede the right of the riparian owner to the center of the stream, it is not for others to raise objection, as is said by the Supreme Court of the United States in Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324. In Missouri the riparian proprietor owns only to the water's edge." BLAKEWELL, J., in Meyers v. St. Louis, 8 Mo. App. 272, citing Benison v. Morrow, 61 Mo. 351.

The rule was first held as to the Missouri river in O'Fallon v. Daggett, 4 Mo. 343, 347; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 640. See also Shelton v. Maupin, 16 Mo. 124; Lamme v. Buse, 70 Mo. 463.

In Jones v. Soulard, 24 How. (U. S.) 41, it was held that the corporation of St. Louis extended to the middle of the Mississippi river.

But private grants do not. St. Louis Public Schools v. Risely, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 91; 40 Mo. 365.

Nevada.—Shoemaker v. Hatch, 13 Nev. 261.

Oregon.—In grants of public lands on a meandered river the stream and not the meandered line is the boundary. Minto v. Delancy, 7 Oreg. 337; Moore v. Willamette Transp. Co., 7 Oreg. 355.

And the rule of the State seems to be that the beds of streams navigable in fact are public. Johnson v. Knott, 13 Oreg. 308, 311; Parker v. West Coast Packing Co., 17 Oreg. 510, 515. The case last cited, however, was in reference to the Columbia river, where it appears to be subject to tidal influence.

But in Shaw v. Oswego Iron Co., 10 Oreg. 371; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 146, it was held in reference to the Tualatin river that, though it was capable of floatage, there were not the same reasons for departing from the common law rule as in the case of the large rivers of the country, and that the bed of the stream was the property of the riparian owners.

Pennsylvania.—The public character of navigable fresh water rivers was recognized in a number of early colonial statutes. See Carson v. Blazer, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 475; s. c., 4 Am. Dec. 463. In 1785 an act was passed excepting from entry islands in the Ohio, Alleghany and Delaware rivers. 2 Sm. Laws 317. Public ownership of the beds of navigable streams was recognized as early as 1810 in Carson v. Blazer, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 475, and confirmed by a long line of authorities. See Shrunk v. Schuylkill Nav. Co., 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 71; Bird v. Smith, 8 Watts (Pa.) 434; s. c., 34 Am. Dec. 453; Hart v. Hill, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 124; Ball v. Slack, 2 Whart. (Pa.) 508; s. c., 30 Am. Dec. 278; Covert v. O'Conner, 8 Watts (Pa.) 470; Jones v. Janney, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 436, 443; s. c., 42 Am. Dec. 309; Johns v. Davidson, 16 Pa. St. 512; Bailey v. Miltenberger, 31 Pa. St. 37; Barclay R. & Coal Co. v. Ingham, 36 Pa. St. 194; Flanagan v. Philadelphia, 42 Pa. St. 219; Monongahela Bridge Co. v. Kirk, 46 Pa. St. 112; s. c., 84 Am. Dec. 527; McKeen v. Delaware Divis. Canal Co., 49 Pa. St. 424; Storer v. Jack, 60 Pa. St. 339; Tinicum Fishing Co. v. Carter, 61 Pa. St. 21; s. c., 100 Am. Dec. 597; Poor v. McClure, 77 Pa. St. 214; Philadelphia v. Scott, 81 Pa. St. 80; Simpson v. Neill, 89 Pa. St. 183; Pursell v. Stover, 110 Pa. St. 43, 46; Fulmer v. Williams, 122 Pa. St. 191; Rundle v. Delaware &c. Canal Co., 14 How. (U. S.) 80.

The wrongful diversion of the waters of a navigable river from its bed does not extinguish the title of the State nor add to that of individuals. Wainwright v. McCullough, 63 Pa. St. 66, cited with approval in Zug v. Com., 70 Pa. St. 138.

A riparian owner is not entitled to damages for the destruction of a spring between high and low water mark on a tidal river. Com. v. Fisher, 1 P. & W. (Pa.) 462. But is, for one similarly situated, on a nontidal river (Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Trone, 28 Pa. St. 206), as low water mark is the boundary of lands bordering a stream of the former class. See also cases above cited.

By a conveyance of lands adjacent to a stream not declared navigable by law, the grantee takes to the thread. Covert v. O'Conner, 8 Watts (Pa.) 470.

Tennessee.—"Shall it be held that the interest of the community of England requires that their navigable streams should belong to the crown as public property, but that in all the States bordering on the Mississippi and its mighty tributaries, these great and important highways, by which such an amount of merchandise of every kind and description is annually sent to market, shall belong to private individuals because the tide does not ebb and flow in them? Surely not, unless we are compelled by positive law so to maintain." TURLEY, J., in Elder v. Burnes, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 358, 367. Doctrine confirmed in Stuart v. Clark, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 1; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 49; Sigler v. State, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 493; Martin v. Nance, 3 Head (Tenn.) 649; Holbert v. Edens, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 204; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 26; Goodwin v. Thompson, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 209; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 410. In those of the above cases in which a definite boundary line of riparian lands is fixed, it is placed at low water mark.

Virginia.—By statutes of 1780 and 1802, re-enacted and affirmed at various times, and still, in their main provisions, in force (Code 1887, §§ 1338-9), the ungranted beds of streams are reserved to the State, and privileges of riparian owners limited to low water mark. The beds of navigable streams (and the term does not seem to be restricted to tide waters), are the property of the commonwealth and cannot be granted. Horne v. Richards, 4 Call (Va.) 441; s. c., 2 Am. Dec. 574; Martin v. Beverly, 5 Call (Va.) 444; Mead v. Haynes, 3 Rand. (Va.) 33; French v. Bankhead, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 136; Norfolk City v. Cooke, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 430.

West Virginia.—Ravenswood v. Flemings, 22 W. Va. 52; s. c., 46

2. Semi-public.—In other States of the Union, as well as in England, the legal status of nontidal navigable waters is midway between that of tide-waters, which are entirely public, and waters unfit for navigation, which are wholly private. Such nontidal waters, and the soil beneath them, are private property, but the owner's interest therein is qualified by being subjected to the public easement of passage.¹

Am. Rep. 485; Barre v. Fleming, 29 W. Va. 314.

Other States.—Decisions upholding the above doctrine have also been made in Kentucky, Michigan, New York and North Carolina, but later cases have departed sufficiently from this holding to warrant the withdrawal of such States from this group, and the classification of their non-tidal navigable streams under the head of SEMI-PUBLIC. See infra.

Federal.—The Supreme Court of the United States, in construing government land grants, has also held this doctrine. "The court does not hesitate to decide that congress, in making a distinction between streams navigable, and those not navigable, intended to provide that the common law rules of riparian ownership should apply to lands bordering on the latter, but that the title to lands bordering on navigable streams should stop at the stream, and that all such streams should be deemed to be, and remain public highways." CLIFFORD, J., in St. Paul etc. R. Co. v. Schurmeir, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 272, 288. See also Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324.

1. States in Which Nontidal Navigable Rivers Are Private Property.—Connecticut.—Adams v. Pease, 2 Conn. 481; Warner v. Southworth, 6 Conn. 471, 474; Chapman v. Kimball, 9 Conn. 38, 41; s. c., 21 Am. Dec. 707; Mill River Woolen Mfg. Co. v. Smith, 34 Conn. 463. In the earlier decisions in this State the term navigable is used in the common law sense, as nearly synonymous with tidal.

Delaware.—Delaney v. Boston, 2 Harr. (Del.) 289.

Georgia.—Hendrick v. Cook, 4 Ga. 241; Young v. Harrison, 6 Ga. 130, 141; Jones v. Water Lot Co., 18 Ga. 539; Stanford v. Mangin, 30 Ga. 355. But in some of these cases it does not seem clear whether or not the term navigable is used in its common law sense. Navigable waters have been the subject of considerable legislative enactment in this State, and a navigable stream is defined as "one capable of bearing upon its bosom, either for the whole or a part of the year, boats laden with freight in regular course of trade." Code 1882, § 2229.

"The beds of streams not navigable belong to the owner of the adjacent land." Code 1882, § 2229.

Land bordering on the Chattahoochee extends to the western bank of the river. Moses v. Eagle etc. Mfg. Co., 62 Ga. 455, and cases above cited. See also note supra.

Illinois.—"The rule that where a stream is not subject to the ebb and flow of the tide its bed shall be deemed the property of the soil bounding upon its border has been too long and firmly settled in this State to be disturbed without unsettling titles and unhinging all faith and respect and confidence in the decisions of the courts." Per THORNTON, J., in Braxon v. Bressler, 64 Ill. 488, 493. See also Ensminger v. People, 47 Ill. 384; s. c., 95 Am. Dec. 495; Chicago v. McGinn, 51 Ill. 266; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 295; Hubbard v. Bell, 54 Ill. 110; s. c., 5 Am. Rep. 98; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Stein, 75 Ill. 41; Cobb v. Lavalley, 89 Ill. 331, 334; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 91; McCartney v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 112 Ill. 611, 634; Trustees of Schools v. Schroll, 120 Ill. 509; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 575; Fuller v. Dauphin, 124 Ill. 542; People v. Madison Co., 125 Ill. 9.

A riparian owner on a navigable river has an exclusive property in the ice. Washington Ice Co. v. Shortall, 101 Ill. 46; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 196.

Government grants of riparian lands convey to the thread of the stream, even on the Mississippi. Middleton v. Pritchard, 4 Ill. 510; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 112; Chicago v. Laflin, 49 Ill. 172.

But a fractional quarter, of which no monuments are established, is bounded by the river. Houck v. Yates, 82 Ill. 179; McCormick v. Huse, 78 Ill. 363.

A conveyance calling for Lake Michigan as a boundary, carries to a line where the water usually stands when free from disturbing causes. Seaman v. Smith, 24 Ill. 521.

The term navigable is used in the common law sense in most of the above cases, but this is departed from in Healy v. Joliet etc. R. Co., 2 Ill. App. 435.

Kentucky.—In this State, the law as to the ownership of navigable streams long remained unsettled. The question was raised but not decided in Louisville v. United States Bank, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 138. In Thurman v. Morrison, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 296, the court inclined to regard such streams as the property of riparian owners. But in Morrison v. Thurman, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 249; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 153, it was said that the owner of land on the bank of a navigable river has no exclusive right to the use of the soil covered by the water. In Berry v. Snyder, 3 Bush (Ky.) 266; s. c., 96 Am. Dec. 619, it was held that a grant of riparian lands on the Ohio conveys to the thread of the stream, unless expressly limited by its terms; and this is now the settled law of the State. Miller Hepburn, 8 Bush (Ky.) 326; Williamsburg Boom Co. v. Smith, 84 Ky. 372; Kentucky Lumber Co. v. Green, 87 Ky. 257. See as to boundaries, Cockrell v. M'Quinn, 4 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 61; Bruce v. Taylor, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 160.

Maine.—Pejepscot Proprietors v. Cushman, 2 Me. 94; Berry v. Carle, 3 Me. 269; Morrison v. Keen, 3 Me. 474; Spring v. Russell, 7 Me. 273, 290; Wadsworth v. Smith, 11 Me. 278; s. c., 26 Am. Dec. 525; Nickerson v. Crawford, 16 Me. 245; Lincoln v. Wilder, 29 Me. 169; Brown v. Chadbourne, 31 Me. 9; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 641; Knox v. Chaloner, 42 Me. 150; Strout v. Millbridge Co., 45 Me. 76; Veazle v. Dwinel, 50 Me. 479; Granger v. Avery, 64 Me. 292.

In the last named case it was held that the owner of lands on both sides of a river above tide water, owned also the islands therein to the extent of the land opposite. See also Holden v. Robinson Mfg. Co., 65 Me. 215.

But grants of land bordering lakes and ponds do not convey to the center. Bradley v. Rice, 13 Me. 198, 201; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 501.

Maryland.—The rule was recognized in Ridgely v. Johnson, 1 Bland Ch. (Md.) 316, note, and Baltimore v. McKim, 3 Bland Ch. (Md.) 453. Also in Binney's Case, 2 Bland Ch. (Md.) 99.

125, where it was held that the Potomac "was not originally deemed a navigable river, but has been made so, in a qualified manner, by law." The doctrine was laid down more definitely in Browne v. Kennedy, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 196, 205; Goodsell v. Lawson, 42 Md. 348, 372.

Massachusetts.—Ordinance of 1641; Storer v. Freeman, 6 Mass. 435, 438; s. c., 4 Am. Dec. 155; Hatch v. Dwight, 17 Mass. 289, 298; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 145; Ingraham v. Wilkinson, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 268; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 342; Com. v. Chapin, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 199; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 386; Waterman v. Johnson, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 261, 265; Bardwell v. Ames, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 333, 354; Knight v. Wilder, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 199; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 660; Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 53, 90, 97; McFarlin v. Essex Co., 10 Cush. (Mass.) 304, 309; Blood v. Nashua R. Co., 2 Gray (Mass.) 137, 139; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 444; Boston v. Richardson, 13 Allen (Mass.) 146, 154.

The rule that the thread of the stream is the boundary applies to grants from the State. Boston v. Richardson, 105 Mass. 351, 355.

In Hopkins Academy v. Dickinson, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 544, it was held that the Connecticut was not a navigable stream, and that when it had changed its channel, the land of the old bed was still divided equally between the riparian owners.

Riparian lands on ponds, natural or artificial, as on rivers, are bounded by the center. Phinney v. Watts, 9 Gray (Mass.) 269, 270; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 288. See also Com. v. Vincent, 108 Mass. 441, 447.

Michigan.—The holding in La Plaisance Bay Harbor Co. v. Monroe, Walk. (Mich.) 155, "that the beds of all meandered streams and navigable waters belong to the State," has been overruled, and the doctrine of the common law as to ownership is now the settled law of the State. Norris v. Hill, 1 Mich. 202; Moore v. Sanborne, 2 Mich. 519; s. c., 59 Am. Dec. 209; Lorman v. Benson, 8 Mich. 18; s. c., 77 Am. Dec. 435; Rice v. Ruddiman, 10 Mich. 125; Ryan v. Brown, 18 Mich. 196; Clark v. Campau, 19 Mich. 325; Attorney General v. Evart Booring Co., 34 Mich. 462, 474; Maxwell v. Bay City Bridge Co., 41 Mich. 453, 456.

In Watson v. Peters, 26 Mich. 508, it was held that city lots on the banks of a stream extended to its center, and the holding was approved in Bay City Gas Light Co. v. Industrial Works, 28 Mich. 182.

In the late case of Carpenter v. Strobel, 64 Mich. 476, it is held that the above rules as to grants on rivers do not apply to lakes.

Mississippi.—The Steamboat Magnolia v. Marshall, 39 Miss. 109, is one of the leading American authorities in support of the common law doctrine. The case involved the ownership of land between high and low water mark on the Mississippi, but the opinion discusses the subject of the ownership of fresh water rivers in general. The leading authorities are reviewed, and those which hold the doctrine that rivers of this class are public, are quite strongly criticised. HARRIS, J., in the course of the opinion, says: "It has been the chief end and policy of civil society to resign to everything capable of ownership a legal and determinate owner; to secure common or public rights so far as the interests of the public require; to furnish a proper line of demarkation between these rights, common to all, and those private rights which belong to each individual as his exclusive property, and thus to promote the general peace and harmony of mankind. Hence the general distinctions, so long declared and recognized by learned judges and law writers, and deemed by them of so much excellence and importance as to be regarded as beyond all question, 'that rivers not navigable (that is, fresh water rivers of what kind soever) do, of common right, belong to the owners of the soil adjacent.'" (p. 116). See also Morgan v. Reading, 3 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 366; New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Frederic, 46 Miss. 1, 9.

New Hampshire.—Proprietors of Claremont v. Carlton, 2 N. H. 369; State v. Gilmanton, 9 N. H. 461; 14 N. H. 467. In the latter case it was held that riparian lands extend only to the margin of lakes. Greenleaf v. Kilton, 11 N. H. 530; Norway Plains Co. v. Bradley, 52 N. H. 86. See also Kimball v. Schoff, 40 N. H. 190.

Title usque ad filum aquæ may be acquired by adverse possession. Nichols v. Suncook Mfg. Co., 34 N. H. 345.

The limits of towns situated on a river, extend to the center thereof. Boscawen v. Canterbury, 23 N. H. 189; State v. Canterbury, 28 N. H. 195, 216.

New Jersey.—Arnold v. Mundy, 6 N. J. L. 1; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 356; Attor- ney General v. Delaware etc. R. Co., 27 N. J. Eq. 1, 8, 631; Society etc. v. Low, 2 C. E. Green (N. J.) 20. The soil of lakes belongs to riparian proprietors. Cobb v. Davenport, 32 N. J. L. 369. But "neither the sovereignty nor propriety of New Jersey on the Delaware extended below low water mark." Gough v. Bell, 22 N. J. L. 441, 489.

New York.—Although doubt has been cast on the doctrine of the text by some of the decisions of this State (e. g., Canal Appraisers v. People, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 423), yet it has always been supported by the weight of authority, and is now the settled law of the State. Palmer v. Mulligan, 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 307; s. c., 2 Am. Dec., 270 (Opinions of KENT, CH. J., and THOMPSON, J.); People v. Platt, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 195; Hooker v. Cummings, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 90; s. c., 11 Am. Dec. 549; People v. Seymour, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 579; Ex parte Jennings, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 551; People v. Canal Appraisers, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 355; 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 571; Luce v. Carley, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 451; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 637; Varick v. Smith, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 137; s. c., 28 Am. Dec. 417; s. c., 9 Paige (N. Y.) 547; Gould v. Hudson River R. Co., 6 N. Y. 522, 547; Lowndes v. Dickerson, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 588, 592; Mott v. Mott, 68 N. Y. 246; Town of Pierrepont v. Loveless, 72 N. Y. 211, 216; Chenango Bridge Co. v. Paige, 83 N. Y. 178; Smith v. Rochester, 92 N. Y. 463; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 393. But the bed of the Mohawk belongs to the State. Canal Appraisers v. People, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 571; Fort Plain Bridge Co. v. Smith, 30 N. Y. 44, 63; People v. Canal Appraisers, 33 N. Y. 461; Crill v. Rome, 47 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 398.

The same is true of that moiety of the bed of the Niagara over which the State has jurisdiction. Kingman v. Sparrow, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 201; Canal Appraisers v. People, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 571, 597.

The Hudson has been held to be navigable and public at Troy, though there was no proof that the river was there ordinarily subject to tidal influence. People v. Tibbetts, 19 (N. Y.) 523, 527.

But the rights of riparian owners upon the Hudson (aside from its tidal character) and the Mohawk are affected by the doctrines of the civil law prevailing in the Netherlands, from whose government they were derived, and are distinguishable from such rights upon other navigable waters of the State. Smith v. Rochester, 92 N. Y. 463; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 393.

The rule as to the ownership of rivers is not applicable to large fresh water lakes. Champlain etc. R. Co. v. Valentine, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 489.

North Carolina.—"The acts of 1715 and 1777, in regulating entries and surveys on which to found a grant, provided that land lying on any navigable water should be surveyed so that the water should form one side of the survey." Ward v. Willis, 6 Jones (N. Car.) 183, 184; s. c., 72 Am. Dec. 570.

Some of the earlier declarations of the supreme court of this State, to the effect that the beds of navigable streams are public, may be traceable to this statute, while other cases may perhaps be explained by the use of the term navigable in its common law sense. See Wilson v. Forbes, 2 Dev. (N. Car.) 30; Ingram v. Threadgill, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) 59; Fagan v. Armistead, 11 Ired. (N. Car.) 433; Skinner v. Hettrick, 73 N. Car. 53. At any rate the later cases adhere to the doctrine stated in the text. Hodges v. Williams, 95 N. Car. 331, 338.

In State v. Narrows Island Club, 100 N. Car. 477, 481, the court said, in speaking of waters: "The public right arises only in case of their navigability. Whether they are navigable or not depends upon their capacity for substantial use, as indicated. They can be so used only for the free passage of vessels; the public have only the right of navigation. The title to the bed of the river, lake or sound in such case, and all special privileges and advantages incident thereto, vest and remain in the owner thereof subject only to the public easement."

Ohio.—Gavit v. Chambers, 3 Ohio, 496; Benner v. Platter, 6 Ohio 504; Lamb v. Rickets, 11 Ohio 311; Walker v. Board of Public Works, 16 Ohio, 540; Hickok v. Hine, 23 Ohio St. 523; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 255; June v. Purcell, 36 Ohio St. 396; Day v. Railroad Co., 44 Ohio St. 406, 419.

Land on the Ohio River between high and low-water mark, belongs to the adjacent proprietor. Blanchard v. Porter, 11 Ohio 138.

A grantee does not take to the thread of the stream where the call is to low water. Hopkins v. Kent, 9 Ohio 13.

Riparian grants on Sandusky Bay and Lake Erie convey only to the line where the water stands free from disturbing causes. Sloan v. Biemiller, 34 Ohio St. 492, 512.

Land covered by a navigable land locked bay or harbor on Lake Erie may be held by private ownership subject to the public rights of navigation and fishery, provided the owner derive title from an express grant made or sanctioned by the United States. Hogg v. Beerman, 41 Ohio St. 81; s. c., 52 Am. Rep. 71.

Rhode Island.—Hughes v. Providence etc. R. Co., 2 R. I. 508, 512; Olney v. Fenner, 2 R. I. 211, 214.

South Carolina.—In Cates v. Wadlington, 1 McCord (S. Car.) 580; 10 Am. Dec. 699, it was held that a river merely capable of being made navigable was private.

In Jackson v. Lewis, Cheves (S. Car.) 259, the law is considered as in doubt.

In Boatwright v. Bookman, 1 Rice (S. Car.) 447, the question was raised but not decided.

Later cases incline to the rule stated in the text. Noble v. Cunningham, McMull. (S. Car.) Ch. 289; McCullough v. Wall, 4 Rich. (S. Car.) 68; Shands v. Triplet, 5 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 76, 79; State v. Columbia, 27 S. Car. 137, 146.

Vermont.—Fletcher v. Phelps, 28 Vt. 257, 262; Newton v. Eddy, 23 Vt. 319. In the latter case, however, no point was raised as to the navigability of the stream.

If lakes and ponds have a definite low water line, riparian lands are bounded thereby. Jakeway v. Barrett, 38 Vt. 316, 323; Austin v. Rutland R. Co., 45 Vt. 215.

Wisconsin.—Jones v. Pettibone, 2 Wis. 308; Walker v. Shepardson, 4 Wis. 486; 2 Wis. 384; s. c., 60 Am. Dec. 423; Arnold v. Elmore, 16 Wis. 509; Yates v. Judd, 18 Wis. 118; Gove v. White, 20 Wis. 425; Wisconsin River Imp. Co. v. Lyons, 30 Wis. 61; Arimond v. Green Bay etc. Canal Co., 31 Wis. 316; Olson v. Merrill, 42 Wis. 203; Delaplaine v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 42 Wis. 214; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 386; Boorman v. Sunnachs, 42 Wis. 233; Diedrich v. Northwestern etc. R. Co., 42 Wis. 248; Stevens Point Boom Co. v. Reilly, 44 Wis. 295, 303; Chandos v. Mack (Wis. 1890), 46 N. W. Rep. 803.

A grantee from the United States takes only to the water's edge. Wright v. Day, 33 Wis. 260.

III. JURISDICTION—(See supra; ADMIRALTY, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 193; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 670; INTERSTATE COMMERCE, 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 539)—1. Over Intrastate Waters.—Over navigable waters entirely within its borders, a State may exercise complete control, subject only to the limitations imposed by virtue of the commercial powers of congress.¹

Lands on navigable lakes and ponds are bounded by low water. Mariner v. Schulte, 13 Wis. 692; Delaplaine v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 42 Wis. 214; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 386; Diedrich v. Northwestern etc. R. Co., 42 Wis. 48.

The navigable waters of this State are especially subject to State control. See Cohn v. Wausau Boom Co., 47 Wis. 314, and cases above cited.

England.—The doctrine laid down by LORD HALE that "fresh rivers of what kind soever do, of common right, belong to the owners of the soil adjacent, so that the owners of the one side have of common right the propriety of the soil, and consequently the right of fishing usque flum aquæ, and the owners of the other side the right of the soil or ownership and fishing unto the flum aquæ on their side" (De Jure Maris Ch. 1) is still the law of England as recognized by the most recent decisions. Marshall v. Ulleswater Navigation Co., 3 B. & S. 742; Bickett v. Morris, 1 H. L. Sc. 47; Orr Ewing v. Colquhoun, L. R., 2 App. Cas. 839; Bristow v. Cormican, L. R., 3 App. Cas. 641, 666; Crossley v. Lightowler, L. R., 3 Eq. Cas. 279; Grant v. Oxford, L. R., 4 Q. B. 9.

The title remains in the riparian owner even after the river has been made public by act of parliament. Hargreaves v. Diddams, L. R., 10 Q. B. 582, 585; Micklethwaite v. Newlay Bridge Co., L. R., 33 Ch. Div. 133. The same doctrine is established in Ireland.—Murphy v. Ryan, Ir. R., 2 C. L. 143.

And the unusual width of a river does not interfere with the application of the rule that the riparian proprietor owns to the center. Dwyer v. Rich, Ir. R., 4 C. L. 424.

But the rule does not apply to large inland lakes. Bloomfield v. Johnston, Ir. R., 8 C. L. 68; Bristow v. Cormican, Ir. R., 10 C. L. 398.

1. Intrastate Jurisdiction.—Gunter v. Geary, 1 Cal. 462; Payne v. English, 79 Cal. 540; Chicago v. McGinn, 51

Ill. 266; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 295; Depew v. Trustees of Wabash etc. Canal, 5 Ind. 8; St. Joseph Co. v. Pidge, 5 Ind. 13; Talbot Co. v. Queen Anne Co., 50 Md. 245; Woodhouse v. Cain, 95 N. Car. 113; Delaware etc. Co. v. Lawrence, 2 Hun (N. Y.) 163; Hoeft v. Seaman, 38 N. Y. Super. Ct. 62; Town of Groton v. Hurlburt, 22 Conn. 178; Livingston v. Van Ingen, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 507; Bedlow v. New York Floating Dry Dock Co., 112 N. Y. 263; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. (U. S.) 212; Texas etc. R. Co. v. New Orleans, 40 Fed. Rep. 111; United States v. Bain, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 593; American Dock & Imp. Co. v. Public School Trustees, 39 N. J. Eq. 409.

Though the acts under which States were admitted provide that their navigable waters shall be "common highways and forever free," the State still retains control. Cardwell v. American River Bridge Co., 19 Fed. Rep. 562; 113 U. S. 205; Scheurer v. Columbia Street Bridge Co. (Oreg.), 27 Fed. Rep. 172; Willamette Iron Bridge Co. v. Hatch, 125 U. S. 1. See Pennsylvania v. Wheeling etc. Bridge, 13 How. (U. S.) 519; Escanaba etc. Trans. Co. v. Chicago, 107 U. S. 678.

The same is true of States having similar constitutional provisions. Wisconsin River Imp. Co. v. Manson, 43 Wis. 255.

The commerce clause of the United States constitution (§ 8, art. 1) does not exclude the enactment by a State of mere police regulations. Craig v. Kline, 65 Pa. St. 399; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 686; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Fuller, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 560.

Accordingly a State may regulate pilotage. Cooley v. Board of Wardens, 12 How. (U. S.) 299; Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 459; Ex parte McNeil, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 236; The Panama, Deady (U. S.) 27.

"Indeed there is quite an extensive field of border legislation on commercial subjects (generally local in character) which may be regulated by State

2. Over Interstate Waters—(See also LAKES AND PONDS, 10 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 610).—Waters which lie within the borders of different States are generally subject to the concurrent jurisdiction of all.¹ The territory of States and nations, when laws until congress interposes and thereby excludes further State legislation. Pilotage is one of the subjects in this category. So far as congress has interposed, its authority is supreme and exclusive; but where it has not done so the matter is still left to the regulation of State laws." BRADLEY, J., in The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 558, 581.

Such regulation does not withdraw the subject from the admiralty jurisdiction of the district courts. Ex parte McNeil, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 236; The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 558, 581.

A State statute providing for a lien in pilotage contracts may be enforced in admiralty. Banta v. McNeil, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 75; The America, 1 Low. (U. S.) 177; The California, 1 Sawy. (U. S.) 463.

A State may fix the compensation of pilots beyond its boundaries. The Nevada, 7 Ben. (U. S.) 386; Horton v. Smith, 6 Ben. (U. S.) 264. See also The Clymene, 24 Alb. Law J. 491.

A State may enact port and harbor regulations. The New York v. Rea, 18 How. (U. S.) 223; The James Gray v. The John Frazier, 21 How. (U. S.) 184; Mobile Co. v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691; Commissioners of Pilots v. Clark, 33 N. Y. 251; Sampson's Appeal, 77 Pa. St. 270.

So a State may regulate the management of vessels. Vanderbilt v. Adams, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 349. And a statute regulating lights on vessels may be operative after similar legislation by congress. Fitch v. Livingston, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 492.

A State may regulate the speed of steamboats in passing wharves. People v. Jenkins, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 469. Fix the fees of port masters and wardens. Master etc. of Port of New Orleans v. Prats, 10 Rob. (La.) 459; Port Wardens of New Orleans v. Ship M. J. Ward, 14 La. An. 289; Port Wardens of New Orleans v. Ship Chas. Morgan, 14 La. An. 595, 602. Enact quarantine and inspection laws. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 203; Peete v. Morgan, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 581. And grant exclusive rights of navigation upon such of its waters as are unsuited to interstate traffic. Veazie v. Moor, 14 How. (U. S.) 568.

1. Interstate Jurisdiction.—Illinois and Missouri have concurrent jurisdiction over the Mississippi river. Wiggins Ferry Co. v. Reddig, 24 Ill. App. 260.

The courts of Indiana have concurrent jurisdiction with those of Kentucky over the Ohio river. Carlisle v. State, 32 Ind. 55; Sherlock v. Alling, 44 Ind. 184; Church v. Chambers, 3 Dana (Ky.) 274; McFall v. Commonwealth, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 394; Commonwealth v. Garner, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 624; Handly v. Anthony, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 374. And the States of Kentucky and Ohio have similar jurisdiction. Blanchard v. Porter, 11 Ohio 138; Booth v. Hubbard, 8 Ohio St. 243.

The Mississippi river is one of the waters of the State of Missouri, within the meaning of a statute, regulating navigation. Swearingen v. The Lynx, 13 Mo. 519.

In Tennessee, the county courts have jurisdiction to licence and establish ferries on the Mississippi river, though the State limits extend only to the thread of the stream. Memphis v. Overton, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 387.

Under their respective constitutions Minnesota and Wisconsin have concurrent jurisdiction over the St. Croix river; but it is no infringement for Minnesota to authorize the construction of booms in the river, even on the Wisconsin side. J. S. Keaton Lumber Co. v. St. Croix Boom Corp., 72 Wis. 62.

But Maryland has exclusive jurisdiction over the Potomac. Binney's Case, 2 Bland Ch. (Md.) 99. As has also New York over the Hudson. State v. Babcock, 30 N. J. L. 29.

So the jurisdiction of the State of Georgia extends entirely over the Chattahoochee, the western bank of the river being the boundary line between Georgia and Alabama. Howard v. Ingersoll, 13 How. (U. S.) 281; Alabama v. Georgia, 23 How. (U. S.) 505.

Pennsylvania has the same jurisdiction over the adjacent waters of Lake Erie as though they had been embraced in the original charter to William Penn. and its legislative powers over them are absolute except when interferred with bounded by rivers, extends to the center of the stream.¹

IV. THE PUBLIC EASEMENT² OF PASSAGE—1. Definition and Nature.—The public have the right of passage over all streams which afford capacity for that purpose.³ The right includes not only navigation in boats and vessels, but also floatage⁴ and travel over the ice.⁵

by congress. Dunlap v. Commonwealth, 108 Pa. St. 607.

All that part of the St. Louis Bridge with its approaches east of the middle line of the main channel of the Mississippi river, is within the jurisdiction of Illinois for the purposes of State and local taxation. Buttemuth v. St. Louis Bridge Co., 123 Ill. 535; St. Louis Bridge Co. v. People, 125 Ill. 226.

The courts of Iowa cannot abate a nuisance established and existing in the Mississippi river, on the Illinois side of the main channel, though the States of Illinois and Iowa have concurrent jurisdiction over cases arising out of the commerce of the river. Gilbert v. Moline Water Power & Mfg. Co., 19 Iowa 319.

Property in transit from one State to another over navigable waters is not taxable by the States through which it passes, nor at a place where it is detained by low water, ice or other cause. Burlington Lumber Co. v. Willetts, 118 Ill. 559.

But a State may provide for the taxation as personalty, in their home port and where their owner's principal office is located, of steamboats plying between different points on an interstate river. Wheeling etc. Transp. Co. v. Wheeling, 99 U. S. 273.

The same rule applies to vessels which make voyages to foreign ports. People v. Commissioners of Taxes, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 157.

And such taxation is not the levy of a tonnage duty within the meaning of the United States constitution. The North Cape, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 505.

1. 1 Wharton's International Law Digest, § 30; 1 Halleck's International Law (Baker) 146; Vattel's Law of Nations, bk. 1, ch. 22, §§ 266, 274; The Schooner Fame, 3 Mason (U. S.) 147; Handly v. Anthony, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 374, 379; The Steamboat Magnolia v. Marshall, 39 Miss. 116, 119. But the territory of Kentucky extends entirely across and includes the Ohio. Handly v. Anthony, supra. See also, as to Georgia, the preceding note.

2. While the term "easement" is used quite generally in the books, it must be understood rather in a popular than in a strictly legal sense. In Barnard v. Hinkley, 10 Mich. 459, CHRISTIANCY, J., says: "Nor do we think the right of navigation in a public river can with propriety be treated as real estate, vested in the public or the State for the benefit of every individual who may have occasion to use it. It is a public right, but we see no reason to call it real estate. It is sometimes called a 'public easement,' but we do not think it comes within the meaning of the term easement as used to designate an incorporeal hereditament, as a right of way belonging to one person or estate over the lands of another."

3. See supra, note.

4. Ibid.

5. Travel on Ice.—French v. Camp, 18 Me. 433; s. c., 36 Am. Dec. 728; State v. Wilson, 42 Me. 9; West Roxbury v. Stoddard, 7 Allen (Mass.) 158.

But the relative legal importance of this form of the right of passage was somewhat qualified in the recent case of Woodman v. Pitman, 79 Me. 456. There the plaintiff brought an action to recover for the loss of a team driven over the frozen surface of the Penobscot river where thick ice had been removed by defendants and only a thin coating had formed, the servant in charge of the team knowing of the dangers. The court held that the plaintiff could not recover, and in the course of the opinion said (p. 461): "It is an error, we think, to invest the right of passing on the ice in all places with the same degree of importance as that which attaches to the right of vessels in navigable waters. It may be an offshoot of the navigable right—something akin to it—but a right of secondary or inferior degree. The idea of roads over the frozen surface of rivers was never broached in the old common law; it has grown up since, and should be the superior right or not according to circumstances." And on page 463: "It is our opinion that any occupation of the Penobscot river within the limits now receiving our attention, for the purpose of

It is paramount to all other rights and interests.¹

2. How Acquired.—At common law the right to navigate waters above the tide was acquired by user or prescription.² It may now be granted by an express act of the legislature,³ but is generally regarded as an inherent public right, needing no legislative sanction.⁴

a winter way, would be at this day of such insignificant importance, so useless and valueless in comparison with other public interests, that it cannot be set up to prevent or abridge the taking of ice within those limits to any extent whatever."

1. Navigation the Paramount Right.—Musser v. Hershey, 42 Iowa 356, 361; Delaware etc. R. Co. v. Stump, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 479, 510; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 561; Post v. Munn, 4 N. J. L. 61; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 570; Davis v. Jenkins, 5 Jones (N. Car.) 290; Hodges v. Williams, 95 N. Car. 331; s. c., 59 Am. Rep. 242; Flanagan v. Philadelphia, 42 Pa. St. 219; Cobb v. Bennett, 75 Pa. St. 326; s. c., 15 Am. Rep. 752.

In England the right is paramount to any right of property in the crown, and the latter cannot make a grant inconsistent with it. Colchester v. Brooke, 7 Q. B. 339; 15 L. J., Q. B., N. S. 59; 9 Jur. 1090; Williams v. Wilcox, 3 N. & P. 606; 8 A. & E. 314.

So the right is superior to that of fishery. Anonymous, 1 Camp. 517, note; Lewis v. Keeling, 1 Jones (N. Car.) 299; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 168; Moulton v. Libbey, 37 Me. 472; 59 Am. Dec. 57. See also Mason v. Mansfield, 4 Cranch (U. S.) 580; The City of Baltimore, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 474; Commonwealth v. Chapin, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 41; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 386.

It is also superior to the enjoyment of property in an oyster bed. Colchester v. Brooke, 7 Q. B. 339; 15 L. J., Q. B., N. S. 59; to ferry privileges. Steamboat "Globe" v. Kurtz, 4 G. Greene (Iowa) 433; Babcock v. Herbert, 3 Ala. 392; s. c., 37 Am. Dec. 695; The Vancouver, 2 Sawyer (U. S.) 381, and to the right to lay pipes in the bed of a river. Milwaukee Gaslight Co. v. Gamecock, 23 Wis. 144.

It has also been held to be paramount to the right to use and maintain bridges. Scott v. Chicago, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 510; Castello v. Landwehr, 28 Wis. 522; Gates v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 64 Wis. 64. But in Illinois River Packet Co. v. Peoria Bridge Assoc., 38 Ill. 467, it is said that the right of navigating a stream and that of bridging it are coexistent. See also Chicago v. McGinn, 51 Ill. 266, s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 295.

2. User or Prescription.—Delaney v. Boston, 2 Harr. (Del.) 489; Brubaker v. Paul, 7 Dana (Ky.) 428; s. c., 32 Am. Dec. 111; Ingram v. Police Jury of St. Tammany, 20 La. An. 126; Berry v. Carle, 3 Me. 269; Binney's Case, 2 Bland Ch. (Md.) 124; Scott v. Wilson, 3 N. H. 321; State v. Gilmanton, 14 N. H. 467, 478; Shaw v. Crawford, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 236; Canal Appraisers v. People, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 423; 444; Pearsall v. Post, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 111; 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 425; Wheeler v. Spinola, 54 N. Y. 377; State v. Thompson, 2 Strobb. (S. Car.) 12; s. c., Stump v. McNairy, 5 Humpn. (Tenn.) 363; s. c., 42 Am. Dec. 437.

But it has been held that user alone is not sufficient to establish the fact of dedication to the public. Munson v. Hungerford, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 265; Curtis v. Keesler, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 511.

In England, prescription is considered to be the true foundation of the right of passage above tidewater. Woolrych on Waters (2nd ed.) 40; and see cases in note supra.

This view is consistent with the holding that nontidal waters are private property, and would seem to be applicable to the States of the Union where that doctrine prevails. See note supra.

3. Rivers Made Navigable by Legislative Enactment.—Ellis v. Carey, 30 Ala. 725; Harold v. Jones, 86 Ala. 274; Minturn v. Lisle, 4 Cal. 180; People v. St. Louis, 10 Ill. 351; Attorney General v. Del. etc. R. Co., 27 N. J. Eq. 1, 7; People v. Gutches, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 656; State v. Dibble, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 107; Walker v. Board of Public Works, 16 Ohio 540, 545; Coovert v. O'Conner, 8 Watts (Pa.) 470; Dedrick v. Wood, 15 Pa. St. 9; Baker v. Lewis, 33 Pa. St. 301; s. c., 75 Am. Dec. 598; Witt v. Jefcoat, 10 Rich. (S. Car.) 389; Selman v. Wolfe, 27 Tex. 68.

4. "Nature is competent to make a navigable river without the help of the legislature." Martin v. Bliss, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 35; s. c., 32 Am. Dec. 52.

3. Use of Banks and Shores—(a) By the civil law the public enjoyed a servitude in the banks and shores of navigable waters as appurtenant to the right of passage,¹ and the same is true of States where the principles of that system prevail.²

(b) But under the common law it seems now³ to be settled that the rights of navigators are limited by high-water mark, and that the easement of passage does not include the use of banks and shores for the general purposes auxiliary to navigation.

(1) Landing, etc.—Accordingly it has been held that the public have no indiscriminate right, as against riparian owners, of landing, embarking, or loading and unloading freight.⁴

"The public easement now depends not so much on actual user as upon the capabilities of a stream for actual use as a public highway." Healy v. Joliet R. Co., 2 Ill. App. 435.

"The first man who used the Connecticut river as a highway, under Indian or English law, had a legal right to use it as the public now has." DOE, J., in Thompson v. Androscoggin Co., 54 N. H. 549. And see generally the cases cited in note supra.

1. Institutes of Justinian, lib. 2, tit. 1.

2. Louisiana.—Civil Code 446; Municipality No. 2 v. New Orleans Cotton Press, 18 La. 122; Hanson v. Lafayette, 18 La. 295; Carrollton R. Co. v. Winthrop, 5 La. An. 36; McKeen v. Kurfust, 10 La. An. 523; New Orleans v. New Orleans etc. R. Co., 27 La. An. 414; Sweeney v. Shakspeare (La.), 7 South. Rep. 729.

Missouri.—O'Fallon v. Daggett, 4 Mo. 343; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 640. This was a case involving title to an early grant under the Spanish law.

3 There are some early decisions which hold the contrary. Middleton v. Pritchard, 4 Ill. 510, 522; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 112; Morrison v. Thurman, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 249; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 153; Morgan v. Reading, 3 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 366, 407; Lewis v. Keeling, 1 Jones (N. Car.) 209; s. c., 32 Am. Dec. 168. See also Dalrymple v. Mead, 1 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 197; Memphis v. Overton, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 387. But the weight of authority is strongly in favor of the doctrine stated in the text. See next note.

4. Landing, etc.—Bickel v. Polk, 5 Harr. (Del.) 325; Ensminger v. People, 47 Ill. 384; Chicago v. Laflin, 49 Ill. 172, 176; Bainbridge v. Sherlock, 29 Ind. 364; s. c., 95 Am. Dec. 644; Sherlock v. Bainbridge, 41 Ind. 35; s. c., 13

Am. Rep. 302; Talbott v. Grace, 30 Ind. 389; s. c., 95 Am. Dec. 704; The Steamboat Magnolia v. Marshall, 39 Miss. 109; Bell v. Gough, 23 N. J. L. 624, 677; O'Neill v. Annett, 27 N. J. L. 291; s. c., 72 Am. Dec. 364; Chambers v. Furry, 1 Yeates (Pa.) 167; Ball v. Slack, 2 Whart. (Pa.) 508, 531; s. c., 30 Am. Dec. 278; State v. Randall, 1 Strobb. (N. Car.) 110; s. c., 47 Am. Dec. 548.

This principle has even been extended to landing places which are already a part of the highway. In Smith v. Cooper, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 33, DUNCAN, J., says: "There are few ferries whose landing place is not a public highway; ferries would become a property in common, subject to continual strife and where the strongest must ever prevail. The common law, to prevent this confusion, assigns the exclusive right of all property capable of being so enjoyed, to some determinate owner. It has assigned to the owner of the soil the right of landing on his own soil, on the banks of all navigable rivers."

It may be noted that the ground here assigned for this decision (viz., the necessity of giving every species of property a definite owner) is the same as that stated by HARRIS, J., in The Magnolia v. Marshall, 39 Miss. 116, for holding that all fresh water streams are private, and in which he sharply criticises the Pennsylvania cases in which the opposite doctrine is advanced. See note supra.

Views similar to those expressed in Cooper v. Smith, were adopted in Chambers v. Furry, 1 Yeates (Pa.) 167; Chess v. Manown, 3 Watts (Pa.) 219; Bird v. Smith, 8 Watts (Pa.) 434; s. c., 34 Am. Dec. 483; Prosser v. Wapello Co., 18 Iowa 327; Prosser v. Davis, 18 Iowa 367; Pipkin v. Wynns, 2 Dev. (N. Car.) 402.

"But this strict and severe rule is

(2) Mooring, etc.—But as against all save such owners, the public have the right of mooring¹ on the banks, and of anchoring.²

(3) Towing, etc.—There is no public right, at common law, of towing on the banks,³ nor even a public right of access to waters

somewhat relaxed in England, and in Peter v. Kendal, 6 B. & C. 703, the K. B. denied the justness of the conclusion in Saville, and held that the owner of a ferry need not have the property in the soil on either side. It was sufficient that the landing place was a public highway. It was a right incident to the ferry to use such a landing place for the purposes of a ferry. This is the most reasonable conclusion upon the right to the use of a public highway to which a ferry is connected." 3 Kent's Com. (13th ed.) 421, note c.

The doctrine last stated is held in Burrows v. Gallup, 32 Conn. 499; s. c., 87 Am. Dec. 186; Walker v. Armstrong, 2 Kan. 198; Fowler v. Mott, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 204; Gant v. Drew, 1 Oreg. 35; Mills v. Learn, 2 Oreg. 215; Patrick v. Ruffners, 2 Rob. (Va.) 209; s. c., 40 Am. Dec. 740; Somerville v. Wimbish, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 205; Newton v. Cubitt, 12 C. B., N. S. (Eng.) 32.

Landings by Prescription.—It has been held that the public right to a landing place cannot be acquired by custom or prescription. Talbott v. Grace, 30 Ind. 389; s. c., 95 Am. Dec. 704; Pearsall v. Post, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 111; 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 425; Pearsall v. Hewlett, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 111; 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 559. See also Adams v. Rivers, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 390; Curtis v. Keesler, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 511; Etz v. Daily, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 32; Kelsey v. King, 33 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 39; Bloomfield etc. Gas Light Co. v. Calkins, 62 N. Y. 386; Gardiner v. Tisdale, 2 Wis. 153; s. c., 60 Am. Dec. 407.

But a different rule obtains in Massachusetts. Kean v. Stetson, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 492; Coolidge v. Learned, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 504; Boston v. Richardson, 105 Mass. 351, 357; in North Carolina, Askew v. Wynne, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 22; in Pennsylvania, Bird v. Smith, 8 Watts (Pa.) 434; s. c., 34 Am. Dec. 483. See also Gray v. Bond, 2 Brod. & Bing. (Eng.) 667. So in Maine, Sevey's Case, 6 Me. 118. But see Hasty v. Johnson, 3 Me. 282; Littlefield v. Maxwell, 31 Me. 134; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 653; Hill v. Lord, 48 Me. 83, 100. See also DEDICATION, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 395; FERRIES, 7 Am. & Eng.

Encyc. of Law 941; HIGHWAY, 9 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 362; WHARVES AND WHARFAGE.

Eminent Domain.—The legislature may take private property for use as a landing. Mayor etc. of N. Y. v. New York Ferry Co., 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 300; Barrington v. Neuse River Ferry Co., 69 N. Car. 165; Memphis v. Wright, 6 Yerg. (Tenn.) 497; s. c., 27 Am. Dec. 489; Muire v. Falconer, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 12.

But selectmen of a town cannot do so. Bethum v. Turner, 1 Me. 111; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 36; Kean v. Stetson, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 492.

1. Mooring.—Bainbridge v. Sherlock, 29 Ind. 364; s. c., 95 Am. Dec. 644; Sherlock v. Bainbridge, 41 Ind. 35; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 302; Brown v. Stone, 5 Pa. L. J. 75; Baker v. Lewis, 33 Pa. St. 301; s. c., 75 Am. Dec. 598; Delaware River Steamboat Co. v. Burlington etc. Steam Ferry Co., 81 Pa. St. 103; Culbertson v. The Southern Bell, 18 How. (U. S.) 584; The Granite State, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 310; The St. Lawrence, 19 Fed. Rep. 328; Wyatt v. Thompson, 1 Esp. (Eng.) 252; Original Hartlepool Collieries Co. v. Gibb, L. R., 5 Ch. D. 713. As to the right of mooring rafts and logs, see BOOM COMPANIES, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 469; LOGS AND LUMBER, 13 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 1018.

2. Anchoring.—The J. W. Everman, 2 Hughes (U. S.) 17; The Indiana, Abb. Adm. 330; Gann v. Whitstable Free Fishers, 11 H. L. Cas. 192; Foreman v. Whitstable Free Fishers, L. R. 4 H. L. 266.

But anchoring in an improper place is negligence. Knowlton v. Sanford, 32 Me. 148; The Electra, 6 Ben. (U. S.) 189; Strout v. Foster, 1 How. (U. S.) 89. See also NAVIGATION.

3. Towing, etc.—The leading case on this subject is Ball v. Herbert, 3 T. R. (Eng.) 253, overruling Young v. —, 1 Ld. Raymond (Eng.) 725, and Queen v. Cluworth, 6 Mod. Rep. 163. See Brown v. Chadbourne, 31 Me. 9; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 641; Treat v. Lord, 42 Me. 552, s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 298; Reimold v. Moore, 2 Mich. (N. P.) 15; Ledyard v. Ten Eyck, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 102; Lee Navigation Conservators v. Button, L.

from inlying lands.¹ But the owners of stranded property may go upon the banks for the purpose of reclaiming it.²

4. Exercise of the Right.—The use of navigable waters by the public is subject to rules and restrictions similar to those which apply to highways in general.³ (See HIGHWAYS, 9 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 362.) The right must be exercised in a reasonable manner and with due regard to the rights of riparian owners and of other navigators.⁴ (See NAVIGATION, NEGLIGENCE, SHIPPING, Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.) Navigation need not be confined to the usual track of boats and vessels but may extend to any

R., 6 App. Cas. 685; 51 L. J., Ch. 17; 45 L. T., N. S. 385.

In England, the right may be acquired by prescription. Pierse v. Fauconberg, 1 Burr. (Eng.) 292; Kinloch v. Neville, 6 M. & W. 794.

In Maine, those engaged in floating logs may go upon the banks under stress of necessity. Brown v. Chadbourne, 31 Me. 9; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 641; Hooper v. Hobson, 57 Me. 273; s. c., 99 Am. Rep. 769; Weise v. Smith, 3 Oreg. 445, 450.

A board of public works may appropriate the banks of a creek for a tow path. Carpenter v. State, 12 Ohio St. 457.

1. Right of access. Hetfield v. Baum, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 394; s. c., 57 Am. Dec. 563; Seabrook v. King, 1 Nott & (S. Car.) 140; Lawton v. Rivers, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 445, 448; s. c., 13 Am. Dec. 741; Turnbull v. Rivers, 3 McCord (S. Car.) 131; s. c., 15 Am. Dec. 622; Blundell v. Catterall, 5 B. & Ald. (Eng.) 268. See also Bickel v. Polk, 5 Harr. (Del.) 325; West Roxbury v. Stoddard, 7 Allen (Mass.) 158; Coolidge v. Williams, 4 Mass. 140; Courtelyou v. Van Brundt, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 357; s. c., 3 Am. Dec. 439. But a traveller has a right to approach a public water way from any part of the highway, and does not become a trespasser upon the owner of the fee by so doing. Parsons v. Clark, 76 Me. 476.

2. Right to Reclaim Stranded Property.—Hooper v. Hobson, 7 Me. 276; s. c., 99 Am. Dec. 769; Proctor v. Adams, 113 Mass. 376; Carter v. Thurston, 58 N. H. 104, 107; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 584; Etter v. Watts, 58 N. H. 63, 66; Forster v. Juniata Bridge Co., 16 Pa. St. 393; s. c., 55 Am. Dec. 506; Rogers v. Judd, 5 Vt. 223; s. c., 26 Am. Dec. 299. In Maine, the right is provided by statute. Rev. Stats. 1883, ch. 42, § 8. See also LOGS AND LUMBER, 13 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 1018.

3. Governed by the Law of Highways.

—Angell on Highways (3rd ed.), § 229; Harold v. Jones, 86 Ala. 274, 277; Sherlock v. Bainbridge, 41 Ind. 35, 42; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 302; Sawyer v. Eastern Steamboat Co., 46 Me. 400; Wadsworth v. Smith, 11 Me. 278; s. c., 26 Am. Dec. 525; Veazie v. Dwinel, 50 Me. 479, 493; Gerrish v. Brown, 51 Me. 256, 263; Davis v. Winslow, 51 Me. 264, 294; s. c., 81 Am. Dec. 573; Cary v. Daniels, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 466, 478; s. c., 41 Am. Dec. 532; Grand Rapids Booming Co. v. Jarvis, 30 Mich. 308, 319; Scott v. Wilson, 3 N. H. 321; People v. Horton, 64 N. Y. 610; 5 Hun (N. Y.) 516; Baker v. Lewis, 33 Pa. St. 301; s. c., 75 Am. Dec. 598; Dalrymple v. Mead, 1 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 197; State v. Thompson, 2 Strobb. (S. Car.) 12; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 588; Memphis v. Overton, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 389; Attorney General v. Terry, L. R., 9 Ch. 423; Original Hartlepool Collieries Co. v. Gibb, L. R., 5 Ch. Div. 713; Williams v. Wilcox, 8 Ad. & El. (Eng.) 314; Ordinance of 1787.

But in Binney's Case, 2 Bland Ch. (Md.) 124, it is said that a navigable river is not a highway in the most extensive signification of the term.

4. Use Must be Reasonable.—Lancey v. Clifford, 54 Me. 489; s. c., 92 Am. Dec. 561; Hayward v. Knapp, 23 Minn. 430.

Reasonable use is a question of fact, and must be determined by the circumstances of each case. Sawyer v. Eastern Steamboat Co., 46 Me. 400, 405; Davis v. Winslow, 51 Me. 264, 297; s. c., 81 Am. Dec. 573; Original Hartlepool Collieries Co. v. Gibb, L. R., 5 Ch. Div. 713, 721.

A collation of authorities on the subject of the rights and duties of those engaged in navigation will be found in the annotations to Baker v. Lewis, 38 Pa. St. 301; s. c., 75 Am. Dec. 601-612.

part of the channel.¹

5. How Lost—(See also EASEMENTS, 6 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 139). The public right of navigation may be abridged and even extinguished by natural causes or by legal means, such as legislative enactment.² (See OBSTRUCTIONS, infra.) But in those States where the ordinance of 1787 was in force, it has been held that highways by water cannot be totally destroyed.³

V. IMPROVEMENTS—1. Legislative Power Over.—The right of navigation is subject to the governmental power to regulate and control it, and to improve rivers and harbors.⁴ In England this power is vested in parliament.⁵ In the United States, the authority of congress, under the commercial clause of the constitution, is paramount.⁶ In the absence of congressional action the power of the State legislatures is supreme. They may direct the improvement of navigable rivers, or may authorize improvements by individuals and private corporations, and the levy of tolls may be authorized by way of reimbursement.⁷

1. Porter v. Allen, 8 Ind. 1; s. c., 65 Am. Dec. 750; Colchester v. Brooke, 2 Q. B. 339; 15 L. J., Q. B. 59. See also Orr Ewing v. Colquhoun, 2 App. Cas. 339.

2. King v. Montague, 6 D. & R. (Eng.) 616; 4 B. & C. (Eng.) 598; Peters v. New Orleans etc. R. Co., 56 Ala. 528; Cardwell v. Sacramento Co., 79 Cal. 347; Bailey v. Philadelphia R. Co., 4 Harr. (Del.) 389; s. c., 44 Am. Dec. 593; Com. v. Charlestown, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 180; s. c., 11 Am. Dec. 161; Kean v. Stetson, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 492; Charlestown v. Middlesex Co., 3 Metc. (Mass.) 202; Matthiessen etc. Sugar Refining Co. v. Jersey City, 26 N. J. Eq. 247; Lister v. Newark Plank Road, 36 N. J. Eq. 477; Flanagan v. Philadelphia, 42 Pa. St. 219.

But the right of passage is not lost or abridged by the fact that at certain states of the tide vessels cannot pass without grounding and injuring oyster beds. Colchester v. Brooke, 15 L. J., Q. B., N. S. 59; 9 Jur. 1090.

A riparian owner cannot, by prescription, acquire the right to defeat the public right to float logs in a stream capable of such use. Collins v. Howard (N. H. 1889), 18 Atl. Rep. 794.

3. People v. St. Louis, 10 Ill. 351, 359; Chicago v. McGinn, 51 Ill. 266, 271; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 295; Williams v. Beardsley, 2 Ind. 591; St. Joseph Co. v. Pidge, 5 Ind. 13; United States v. New Bedford Bridge, 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 401.

4. Chicago v. McGinn, 51 Ill. 266; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 295; Hollister v.

Union Co., 9 Conn. 436; s. c., 25 Am. Dec. 36; Zimmerman v. Union Canal Co., 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 346.

A law of Pennsylvania forbidding the floating of loose logs does not violate an agreement between that State and Maryland to preserve the free and public navigation of the Susquehanna river, since it promotes navigation by making it safe and convenient for all. Craig v. Kline, 65 Pa. St. 399; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 686.

5. Vooght v. Wince, 2 B. & A. 598; Lowe v. Govell, 3 B. & A. 863; Rex v. Montague, 4 B. & C. 598; Williams v. Wilcox, 8 A. & E. 314; Atty. Gen. v. Burrige, 10 Price 350; Atty. Gen. v. Parmenter, 10 Price 378; Abraham v. Great Northern R. Co., 16 Q. B. 586.

6. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; United States v. Coombs, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 72; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. (U. S.) 212; The Passenger Cases: Smith v. Turner and Morris v. Boston, 7 How. (U. S.) 283; Smith v. Turner, 7 How. (U. S.) 392; Veazie v. Moor, 14 How. (U. S.) 568; Withers v. Buckley, 20 How. (U. S.) 84; The Passaic Bridges, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 782; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 713; The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 557; The Montello, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 430; Pound v. Turck, 95 U. S. 459; Mobile Co. v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691; The Brig Wilson, 1 Brock. (U. S.) 423; Rogers v. Cincinnati, 5 McLean (U. S.) 337; The Chusan, 2 Story (U. S.) 456; The Bright Star, 1 Woolw. (U. S.) 266; Navigation Co. v. Dwyer, 29 Tex. 376.

7. Cannon v. New Orleans, 20 Wall.

2. Right of Riparian Owner to Compensation.—Nor are riparian owners entitled to be compensated for injuries ordinarily incident to such improvements. The rule is otherwise, however, as to injuries not thus incident.¹ In the case of an unnavigable stream

(U. S.) 577; Huse v. Glover, 15 Fed. Rep. 92; Tewksbury v. Schulenberg, 41 Wis. 584; Lipes v. Hand, 104 Ind. 503; Kellogg v. Union Co., 12 Conn. 7; Re Hampshire Co. (Mass.), 3 N. E. Rep. 433; Chaffe v. Trezevant, 38 La. An. 746; Chicago v. McGinn, 51 Ill. 266; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 295; McReynolds v. Smallhouse, 8 Bush (Ky.) 447; Sinking Fund Commrs. v. Green etc. Nav. Co., 79 Ky. 73; Carondelet Canal & Nav. Co. v. Parker, 29 La. An. 430; Clay v. Pennoyer Creek Imp. Co., 34 Mich. 204; Benjamin v. Manistee R. Imp. Co., 42 Mich. 628; Wilcox v. Paddock, 65 Mich. 23; Nelson v. Cheboygan Slack Water Nav. Co., 44 Mich. 7; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 222; Manistee Imp. Co. v. Sand, 53 Mich. 593; Monongahela Bridge Co. v. Kirk, 46 Pa. St. 112; s. c., 84 Am. Dec. 527; Carman v. Clarion River Nav. Co., 81* Pa. St. 412; Lehigh Coal & Nav. Co. v. Brown, 100 Pa. St. 338; Wisconsin R. Imp. Co. v. Manson, 43 Wis. 255.

An act of a State legislature, imposing reasonable tolls, as a compensation for improving the navigation of a river within its own borders, is constitutional, unless it conflicts with the powers of congress in actual exercise. Thames Bank v. Lovell, 18 Conn. 500; s. c., 46 Am. Dec. 332.

The ordinance of 1787 creating the Northwest Territory, and providing that the navigable waters shall be common highways and forever free, does not prohibit a State from improving the navigation thereof, and charging a reasonable toll for the increased facilities, the ordinance referring to such waters in their natural state. Palmer v. Cuyahoga Co., 3 McLean (U. S.) 226; Huse v. Glover, 119 U. S. 543; Benjamin v. Manistee R. Imp. Co., 42 Mich. 628; Sands v. Manistee R. Imp. Co., 123 U. S. 288.

Nor did the act admitting Mississippi into the Union as a State by guarantying the free navigation of the Mississippi river prohibit that State from improving the river. Withers v. Buckley, 20 How. (U. S.) 84.

The State may authorize the conversion of an unnavigable into a navigable stream, and the authorized assessment of tolls for the use of the improvement is not unconstitutional or unlawful. Carondelet Canal & Nav. Co. v. Parker, 29 La. An. 430; Wisconsin Imp. Co. v. Manson, 43 Wis. 255.

A railroad company constructing its road bed on the Hudson River in front of docks and wharves under authority of the State, congress having taken no action, invades no public right, and is not a nuisance as to a vessel owner thereby prevented from fulfilling his contract of transportation with the riparian owners. Ormerod v. New York etc. R. Co., 13 Fed. Rep. 370.

The arms, bayous and sloughs of the Mississippi not required in the interests of commerce to be preserved for navigation are not public highways, but within the control of the State and municipal authorities, and the filling up of a slough at Dubuque formerly used for navigation under authority of the city, was adjudged valid. Ingraham v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 34 Iowa 249.

The taking of the water power of a navigable stream in improving the same, is only an incident thereto, and therefore the right to take it is paramount to any right of user of a riparian owner. And the taking of the surplus water power over and above that necessary for navigation is equally incidental to such improvement and valid as against a riparian owner. Or against such owner therefore a sale by the State of any such supply of water power is valid. Green Bay etc. Canal Co. v. Kaukauna etc. Co., 70 Wis. 635.

1. The public authorities may build wharves and levees on the banks of the Mississippi, and otherwise improve the navigation thereof, without the consent of the adjacent proprietor, and without making him compensation. Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324.

The flooding of land in consequence of a duly authorized improvement of navigation is not damnum absque injuria as being properly incidental to an improvement of navigation. Hackstack v. Keshena Imp. Co., 66 Wis. 439.

Authority to improve a stream to make it floatable within the natural flow of the stream gives no power to act outside of the channel of the stream made navigable and declared a public highway by legislative authority, the riparian owner is entitled to be compensated.¹ But the paramount public right of navigation in waters in fact navigable and incidental power of the State to regulate, control and improve them, as against private rights therein, does not include the power to authorize the taking of the waters for other purposes.² Aside from the subordination of the right of user of the riparian owner to the public right of navigation and control of navigable waters in reference thereto, private property must not or to interfere with 'riparian owners. White Deer Creek Imp. Co. v. Sassaman, 67 Pa. St. 414.

One who owns a towing path is entitled to compensation for obstructions thereby by a commission improving the navigation of the river. Reg. v. Thames & Isis Navigation, 5 A. & E. 804.

In Ryan v. Brown, 18 Mich. 196, erections on private property for dock purposes, not encroaching on the natural navigation of the river St. Mary, were held not to become unlawful by the subsequent opening of a canal which was thereby obstructed, and were therefore not removable by the State without compensation to the owners.

Where the charter of an improvement company provided for compensation in the case of lands taken from private owners, but was silent as to lands belonging to the State, it was held that subsequent purchasers of State lands had no claim to compensation against the company for the taking of such lands. Black River Imp. Co. v. La Crosse Booming etc. Co., 54 Wis. 659.

A flowage of land between high and low water mark is such a taking thereof as renders a statute authorizing a company to improve the waters of a floatable stream and maintain the waters at high water mark without compensation, unconstitutional. Foster v. Stafford Bank, 57 Vt. 128.

The Connecticut legislature may authorize improvements to the navigation of waterways of the State without reference to remote and consequential damage to land within the State; for instance, diminution of water power. This does not amount to a "taking" of private property, etc., within the constitution. Otherwise as to such damage to land owners in other States. Holyoke Water Power Co. v. Connecticut River Co., 20 Fed. Rep. 71.

The obstruction or deepening of the waters of a stream, which is a public highway, by authority of an act of assembly, is not the subject of a claim of damages by the owner of the adjoining land for an injury done to or destruction of a fording across the stream. Zimmerman v. Union Canal Co., 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 346.

On the other hand, the straightening by the State for public purposes of a stream where it empties into another whereby five years later land on the opposite side is injured or destroyed by the current, is not a "taking" within Cal. Const. prior to 1879. Hoagland v. State (Cal. 1889), 22 Pac. Rep. 142.

A company authorized to erect a lock navigation in a river and required to make compensation for any damage done to lands or property by overflowing the same, is liable for all damage it causes by overflow, not merely for the damage done in excess of a reasonable use, and therefore is liable for flooding in high water, whereas a riparian owner would be exempt from liability by reason of his right of reasonable use. Monongahela Nav. Co. v. Coon, 6 Pa. St. 379; s. c., 47 Am. Dec. 474.

1. Where, by making an unnavigable stream navigable, a riparian owner is deprived of his right to use the water for hydraulic and other purposes he is entitled to compensation. Walker v. Board of Public Works, 16 Ohio 540.

A statute declaring river not in full navigable to be a public highway does not make it so if no provision for the compensation of riparian owners is made. Olive v. State, 86 Ala. 88. See also Town of Pierrepont v. Loveless, 72 N. Y. 211; Morgan v. King, 35 N. Y. 454; s. c., 91 Am. Dec. 58.

2. Smith v. Rochester, 92 N. Y. 463; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 393, where diversion of the waters of nontidal navigable stream for supplying a city, authorized by the legislature, was held unlawful as against riparian owners for the loss be taken in the exercise of the public right to control, regulate, and improve navigable waters.¹

VI. OBSTRUCTIONS—1. What Are—(a) In General.—Obstructions to navigation are such impediments as boats and vessels cannot, by the exercise of skill and care, avoid being injured by in passing.² All such, if unauthorized, are prima facie nuisances.³ But impediments which are only slight or temporary, or which are incidental to the exercise of the right of passage, are not action-of whose rights the law provided no compensation.

2. Avery v. Fox, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 246; Hollister v. Union Co., 9 Conn. 436; s. c., 25 Am. Dec. 36.

3. Terre Haute Draw Bridge Co. v. Halliday, 4 Ind. 36, 41.

4. Obstructions Are Prima Facie Nuisances.—Walker v. Allen, 72 Ala. 456; Alden v. Pinney, 12 Fla. 328; Charleston etc. R. Co. v. Johnson, 73 Ga. 306; McLean v. Mathews, 7 Ill. App. 599; Knox v. Chaloner, 42 Me. 150; State v. Freeport, 43 Me. 198; Gerrish v. Brown, 51 Me. 256; s. c., 81 Am. Dec. 569; Davis v. Winslow, 51 Me. 264, 296; s. c., 81 Am. Dec. 573; Newark Plank Road Co. v. Elmer, 9 N. J. Eq. 754; State v. Babcock, 30 N. J. L. 29; People v. Vanderbilt, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 286; 26 N. Y. 287; People v. Horton, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 516; Mayor etc. of N. Y. v. Baumberger, 7 Robt. (N. Y.) 219; Blanchard v. Western Union Tel. Co., 60 N. Y. 510; State v. Dibble, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 107; Volk v. Eldred, 23 Wis. 410; State v. Carpenter, 68 Wis. 165, 168.

No amount of benefit to an indefinite number of individuals or to a community can countervail the public inconvenience resulting from the obstruction of a navigable river, and evidence of such benefit is inadmissible. Gold v. Carter, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 369; s. c., 49 Am. Dec. 712.

So the erection of an embankment in a port or public river is indictable if it hinder navigation, even though productive of collateral benefits. Rex v. Ward, 6 N. & M. (Eng.) 38; 4 A. & E. (Eng.) 384; 1 H. & N. (Eng.) 703.

A vessel is liable for damages resulting from stretching a line across a channel, and a passing raft is not bound to take precautions to avoid it. McCord v. Steamboat Tiber, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 409. See also Pacific Mut. Tel. Co. v. Chicago etc. Bridge Co., 36 Kan. 118; The Swan, 19 Fed. Rep. 455.

But the temporary use of a line across a narrow stream in mooring or handling vessels is not an unlawful obstruction. The Echo, 19 Fed. Rep. 453.

Whether a wire cable across a river for the purpose of a guy on which to run a ferry boat is or is not an unlawful obstruction may depend on the circumstances of the particular case. The Vancouver, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 381; Ladd v. Foster, 31 Fed. Rep. 827; The Imperial, 38 Fed. Rep. 614.

A gas company, authorized to lay its pipes across a navigable river, should bury them beneath the bed; otherwise they constitute an unlawful obstruction. Omslaer v. Philadelphia Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 354; Milwaukee Gas Co. v. Gamecock, 23 Wis. 154. And see, as to oil pipe lines in river beds, Buffalo Pipe Line Co. v. New York etc. R. Co., 10 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 107; United N. J. R. & Canal Co. v. Standard Oil Co., 33 N. J. Eq. 123.

Telegraph cables so laid as to come in contact with vessels navigating the stream, and which would otherwise pass without difficulty, injuriously obstruct navigation, and are pro tanto a nuisance. Nor can the companies so laying them justify under a statute, State or federal, authorizing them to be laid under water. Stephens & C. Transp. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., 8 Ben. 502; Blanchard v. Western Union Tel. Co., 60 N. Y. 510; The City of Richmond, 43 Fed. Rep. 85.

A weir, even if erected under authority, is unlawful if it subsequently become an obstruction to navigation. Williams v. Wilcox, 3 N. & P. (Eng.) 606; 8 A. & E. 314; 1 W. W. & H. 477.

A hidden structure placed between high and low water mark, for the use of a wharf owner, and which obstructs navigation, is unlawful. White v. Phillips, 15 C. B., N. S. 245; 33 L. J., C. P. 33; 10 Jur., N. S. 425; 9 L. T. 388.

A riparian owner on a navigable tidal river has no right to construct a able.¹ Floating docks, elevators, or storehouses in rivers or harbors are a public nuisance, unless authorized.² If, however, they are so located as to afford a passage for vessels they do not become a private nuisance.³

(b) By Boats and Vessels.—The right of navigation must be exercised with due regard to a similar right on the part of others. A boat or vessel may constitute an unlawful obstruction.⁴

jetty into the bed of the river to protect his soil if the public right of navigation is or may be impeded. Atty. Gen. v. Lonsdale, 7 L. R., Eq. 377.

Deposits of sewage that fill up a harbor or a portion to the obstruction of navigation are a nuisance. Brayton v. Fall River, 113 Mass. 218; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 470; Washburn etc. Mfg. Co. v. Worcester, 116 Mass. 458; Boston Rolling Mills v. Cambridge, 117 Mass. 396; Franklin Wharf v. Portland, 67 Me. 46; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 1; Clark v. Peckham, 10 R. I. 35; s. c., 14 Am. Rep. 654.

So are deposits of sediment and debris. Garitee v. Baltimore, 53 Md. 422; Peeple v. Gold Run Ditch Min. Co., 66 Col. 138; s. c., 56 Am. Rep. 80.

1. Slight or Temporary Obstructions.—State v. Carpenter, 68 Wis. 165; s. c., 60 Am. Rep. 848; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling etc. Bridge Co., 13 How. (U. S.) 581; Dutton v. Strong, 1 Black (U. S.) 23; United States v. Rum R. Boom Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 397; St. Louis v. Knapp etc. Co., 2 McCrary (U. S.) 516; Rex v. Tindall, 1 N. & P. (Eng.) 719; 6 A. & E. 143; Reg. v. Russell, 3 El. & Bl. (Eng.) 942; 18 Jur. 10. 22.

The true test as to a structure being a nuisance is whether or not it interferes as little as possible with navigation. Illinois R. Packet Co. v. Peoria Bridge Assoc., 38 Ill. 467.

ALLEN, J.: "Slight inconveniences and occasional interruptions are incidental to many lawful uses of public highways and water courses, and are tolerated by reason of necessity and the benefits resulting to the public at large by the acts causing the interruption. If the obstructions are temporary and reasonable they will not be declared illegal merely because the public may not for the time have the full use of the highway." People v. Horton, 64 N. Y. 610, 616.

2. Wetmore v. Atlantic White Lead Co., 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 70; Neal v. Henry, Meigs (Tenn.) 17; s. c., 33 Am. Dec. 125; Bigelow v. Newell, 10 Pick.

(Mass.) 348; Hecker v. New York Balance Dock Co., 13 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 549; Corning v. Lowerre, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 439.

3. Harrington v. Edwards, 17 Wis. 586; Bainbridge v. Sherlock, 29 Ind. 364; s. c., 95 Am. Dec. 644; Dimes v. Petley, 15 Q. B. 276.

The use of a floating elevator in the ship canal at Buffalo in the loading and unloading of vessels not aground or disabled, no actual injury, public or private, being complained of, is not such an obstruction as equity will interpose to prevent the harbor masters having full power to direct the location of vessels, and never having directed a change of location of the elevator and not having refused or neglected to perform their duty in this regard. People v. Horton, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 516; affirmed 64 N. Y. 610.

4. It is unlawful to let a boat lie so as to obstruct the passage of other boats. King v. Sanders, 2 Brev. (S. Car.) 111.

But the accidental grounding of a vessel is an obstruction incident to commerce, and, in the absence of negligence, is not an actionable nuisance. Cummins v. Spruance, 4 Harr. (Del.) 315; Rex v. Watts, 2 Esp. 675; Brown v. Mallett, 5 C. B. 599. See also Colchester v. Brooke, 2 Q. B. 339; 15 L. J. Q. B. 59; White v. Crisp, 10 Exch. 312.

A steamboat company owning a wharf adjacent to the slips of a ferry company have the same right of navigation in front of the slips as elsewhere in the river, and to moor their boats at their wharf, but must not wilfully obstruct the ferry company in using their slips. Delaware R. Steamboat Co. v. Burlington etc. Steam Ferry Co., 81 Pa. St. 103.

A riparian owner on a navigable river has the right to moor a vessel of ordinary size at his wharf for the purpose of loading and unloading at all reasonable times and for a reasonable period, even though the vessel overlaps others' premises, provided that the others' access to the river is not interfered with. Original Hartlepool Collieries Co. v. Gibb, 5 L. R., Ch. D. 713.

(c) By Rafts and Logs.—The right of rafting must be so exercised as not to obstruct unnecessarily the equal right of navigation and rafting by others,¹ or to infringe on the rights of riparian

One whose boat is lawfully at a wharf and the stern thereof is carried down by the current so as to overlap another's wharf, is not guilty of an unlawful obstruction to other boats thus prevented from landing at the latter wharf if he use reasonable skill, care and dispatch, and subjects others to as little inconvenience as possible. Sherlock v. Bainbridge, 41 Ind. 35; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 302.

A vessel may lawfully pursue its course without regard to seines or nets across the way. Anon. 1 Camp. 517, note; Colchester v. Brooke, 7 Q. B. 339; Moulton v. Libby, 37 Me. 472; s. c., 59 Am. Dec. 57; Com. v. Chapin, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 199; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 386; Post v. Munn, 4 N. J. L. 67; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 570; Lewis v. Keeling, 1 Jones (N. Car.) 299; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 168; Davis v. Jerkins, 5 Jones (N. Car.) 290; Flanagan v. Philadelphia, 42 Pa. St. 219; Mason v. Mansfield, 4 Cranch (U. S.) 580; The City of Baltimore, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 475.

The right of navigation is paramount to the right of crossing by a bridge. Scott v. Chicago, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 510; Castello v. Landwehr, 28 Wis. 522.

It is paramount to a ferry franchise. Steamboat "Globe" v. Kutz, 4 G. Greene (Iowa) 433; Babcock v. Herbert, 3 Ala. 392; s. c., 37 Am. Dec. 695.

The right of navigation must be so exercised as to do no needless harm to one exercising the right of fishery. Colchester v. Brooke, 2 Q. B. 339; Post v. Munn, 4 N. J. L. 67; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 570; Lewis v. Keeling, 1 Jones (N. Car.) 299; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 168; Cobb v. Bennet, 75 Pa. St. 326; s. c., 15 Am. Rep. 52.

The master of a vessel who, in the usual course of navigation, enters a fishery and anchors for the purpose of taking in the residue of his cargo, and not with a malicious intent to injure the fishery, and departs as soon as wind, weather and tide permit, is not liable for the damages caused to the owner of the fishery. Mason v. Mansfield, 4 Cranch (U. S.) 580.

It is unlawful for a steamer to run back and forth unnecessarily near a boom enclosing ice and thereby destroy the same. Peoples' Ice Co. v. Steamer Excelsior, 44 Mich. 229; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 246.

A vessel anchoring, or otherwise navigating negligently, is liable for injuring a telegraph cable at the bottom of the sea. Submarine Tel. Co. v. Dickson, 15 C. B., N. S. 759; The Clara Killam, L. R., 3 Adm. 161.

The owner of a wharf had a mast projecting therefrom over the river. The bowsprit of another vessel moored at an adjoining wharf overhung in front of the first wharf, and on the falling of the tide came in contact with the mast and broke it. The owner of the vessel was held not liable. Dalton v. Denton, 1 C. B., N. S. 672.

The right of navigation must be exercised with a due regard to the interest of others, and one is liable for injuries caused to another's wharf by his unskilful navigation, though the wharf, by reason of its location, was a public nuisance. Dimes v. Pettey, 15 Q. B. 276.

1. It is an unlawful obstruction so to let a raft lie as to obstruct the passage of boats or rafts. And such an obstruction may be removed by one whose passage is impeded, reasonable time being given and no unnecessary or wilful damage being done. Beach v. Schoff, 28 Pa. St. 196; s. c., 70 Am. Dec. 122; The C. D. Jr., 1 Newb. Adm. 501; Philiber v. Matson, 14 Pa. St. 306.

An obstruction by logs for six weeks during the season of navigation is presumptively unreasonable and unlawful. Enos v. Hamilton, 27 Wis. 656.

It is an unlawful obstruction for one to select and occupy a particular portion of a floatable stream for the storage of logs and thereby prevent another from driving his logs into such stream from a tributary. McPheters v. Moose River Log Driving Co., 78 Me. 329.

Giving such headway to a raft of logs while propelling it in the channel of the Mississippi river that it gets beyond control, is unlawful. Hayward v. Knapp, 23 Minn. 430.

Logs to be obstructions to other logs need not come in actual contact with them if the former are in the way of the latter so that the latter cannot be driven till they are out of the way,

NAVIGABLE WATERS.—NAVIGATION.

owners,¹ or otherwise injure others.² But whatever is reasonably necessary to the exercise of the right may be done, reasonable care being exercised.³

2. From Detention and Diversion.—See WATERS AND WATER-COURSES.

3. Remedies.—The remedies for the obstruction of navigable waters are those applicable to nuisances generally: viz., by indictment or information in behalf of the public, by private action in the case of an individual sustaining special injury, by abatement, where such is permissible under the law governing nuisances generally, and by injunction on the presentation of a proper case. (See NUISANCE; INJUNCTION.)⁴

NAVIGATION—(See also NAVIGABLE WATERS; PRACTICE IN ADMIRALTY; SHIPPING.)

I. Definition, 272.

II. Legislative Control, 272.

1. Power of Congress, 272.

2. Power of the States, 273.

they obstruct the latter. Anderson v. Meloy, 32 Minn. 26.

The right to store or boom logs along river banks and in the harbors at their mouths, is incidental to the public right to use floatable streams as highways. Canfield v. Erie, 1 Mich. (N. P.) 105.

1. Using a stream for floating, collecting, dividing or storing their logs must not, for the sake of facilitating their use, raise the water so as to overflow adjoining lands. Grand Rapids Booming Co. v. Jarvis, 30 Mich. 308.

2. The business of floating logs down the Mississippi in a mode that will injure an apron erected over the crest of St. Anthony Falls by the United States to protect the rock from washing away will be enjoined. United States v. Mississippi etc. Boom Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 601.

When a bridge has been built across a floatable stream with a reasonably adequate passageway, it is unlawful to drive down a mass of logs exceeding the capacity of the passageway, and thereby injure the bridge. Bucki v. Cone, 25 Fla. 1.

The careless and negligent driving of logs down a floatable stream gives a right of action for the damages caused thereby. Mandlebaum v. Russell, 4 Nev. 551.

3. One floating logs down a floatable stream, and using reasonable efforts to keep them in it, is not liable for the injury caused to a riparian owner by their stranding, and may enter to reclaim them, doing no unnecessary damage. Carter v. Thurston, 58 N. H. 104; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 584.

If a jam is reasonably necessary to the driving of logs in a floatable stream, the company authorized to improve the navigation thereof and drive logs therein is not liable for injuries caused thereby. Field v. Apple River Log Driving Co., 67 Wis. 569.

The test of due skill and care in navigating a raft is the ordinary skill and care of timber raftsmen on the river. And the right to drive logs down a navigable river is paramount to the right to construct a boom. Sullivan v. Jernigan, 21 Fla. 264.

4. Bibliography.—English—De Jure Maris, ascribed to Sir Matthew, afterwards Lord, Hale (see Gould on Waters, secs. 17, 18, 49), but not published until 1787; Schultes' Aquatic Rights, 1811 (Am. ed. 1839); Callis on Sewers (5th ed. 1824); Phear, Rights of Water, 1858 (Am. ed. 1859); Woolrych's Law of Waters, 1851 (Am. ed. 1853); superseding a work by the same author on Sewers. Willcock's, The Ocean, The River and The Shore, 1863; Hall's Rights on the Sea Shore (2nd ed. 1875); Higgins' Pollution of Watercourses, 1877; Coulson & Forbes on Waters, 1880. American—Angell on Tide Waters (2nd ed. 1847); Angell on Watercourses (7th ed. 1877); Houck, Navigable Rivers, 1868; Gould on Waters, 1883. There is also quite an extensive periodical and fugitive literature on the subject which may be found by consulting Jones's Index to Legal Periodicals.

III. Rules of Navigation, 276.

1. Definition, 276.
2. Origin and Nature, 277.
3. Application, 277.

IV. Lights, 278.

1. Generally, 278.
2. Visibility, 284.
3. Vessels Being Overtaken, 286.
4. Tugs and Tows, 287.
5. Vessels Anchored, Moored, etc., 287.

V. Sound Signals for Fog, etc., 289.

1. Generally, 289.
2. Rate of Speed, 291.
3. Vessels Anchored or Moored, 293.

VI. Steering and Sailing Rules, 293.

1. Sailing Vessels, 293.
 - (a) Generally, 293.
 - (b) One Free and One Close-hauled, 294.
 - (c) Both Close-hauled, 295.
 - (d) Both Free, 296.
 - (e) Inland Waters, 296.
 - (1) Application of Rules, 296.
 - (2) Sailing Vessels Crossing, 297.
 - (3) Sailing Vessels Being Overtaken by Each Other, 297.
2. Steam Vessels, 297.
 - (a) Generally, 297.
 - (b) Application of Rules, 298.
 - (c) Steamers Crossing, 299.
 - (d) One Vessel Overtaking Another, 300.
 - (e) Duties of Vessel Ahead, 301.
 - (f) River Navigation, 301.
 - (1) Generally, 301.
 - (2) Vessels Following, 304.
 - (3) Rivers Crowded with Boats, 304.
 - (4) Boats Crossing River, 304.
 - (5) Steamboats and Barges, 305.
 - (g) Signals, 306.
3. Steam and Sail Vessels, 308.
 - (a) Generally, 308.
 - (b) Presumption of Fault, 314.
4. Right of Way, 314.
 - (a) Change of Course, 315.
 - (b) When Rules Are Obligatory, 316.
 - (c) Changes of Extremis, 316.

5. Speed, 317.

- (a) Generally, 317.
- (b) Crowded Channels, 318.

VII. Steamers and Row Boat, 319.VIII. Tugs and Tows, 319.

1. Generally, 319.
2. Sudden Emergencies, 324.
3. Duty in Making up Tow, 324.
4. Vessels Shifting Tow, 325.
5. Tugs Striving for Precedence, 325.
6. Vessels at Anchor, 325.
7. Fog Signals, 326.

IX. Pilot Boats, 326.X. Fishing Vessels, 326.*XI. Vessels Anchored, Moored, etc., 326.

1. Generally, 326.
2. Anchor Watch, 331.

XII. Vessels Aground, 332.XIII. Vessels Drifting, 332.*XIV. Lookout, 332.

1. Generally, 332.
2. Who Is a Proper Lookout, 334.

XV. Departing from Rules, 335.XVI. Local Regulations, 336.*XVII. Duties After Collision, 337.*XVIII. Rules Fixing Liability for Collisions, 337.

1. Generally, 337.
2. Where One Vessel Is in Fault, 338.
3. Where Both Are in Fault, 339.
4. Where Neither Is in Fault, 341.
5. Where Several Are in Fault, 342.
6. Negligence Generally, 342.
 - (a) Presumption of Negligence, 345.
 - (b) Non-observance of Rules, 345.
 - (c) Acts in Extremis, 347.
 - (d) Negligence in Launching Vessels, 347.
7. Inevitable Accident, 348.
8. Injury to Freight, 349.

XIX. Damages, 349.

1. Generally, 349.
2. Where the Vessel Is Only Impaired, 351.
 - (a) Demurrage, 354.
 - (b) Change of Ownership, 355.
 - (c) Proof of Damages, 355.
3. Where the Vessel Is a Total Loss, 355.
4. Exemplary Damages, 356.
5. Damnum Absque Injuria, 356.

- | | |
|---|--|
| 6. Limitation of Liability
(See SHIPPING), 356.
7. Personal Injuries , 356.
8. Loss of or Injury to Cargo ,
357.
9. Weak Vessels , 358.
10. Lien for Damages , 358.
11. Laches , 358.
XX. Pleadings , 359.
1. Generally , 359.
2. Jurisdiction , 359.
3. Consolidation of Claims , 359.
4. Cross Claims , 360. | 5. Replying , 360.
6. Justification , 360.
XXI. Evidence , 360.
1. Generally , 360.
2. Gist of the Action , 362.
3. What Admissible , 362.
4. Credibility of Testimony ,
362.
5. Witnesses , 363.
6. Identity Must be Estab-
lished , 364.
XXII. Decree , 364.
XXIII. Costs , 364. |
|---|--|

I. DEFINITION.—Navigation is a term applied to the science or business of conducting vessels or materials over navigable waters.¹

II. LEGISLATIVE CONTROL.—(See also INTERSTATE COMMERCE, 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 539; NAVIGABLE WATERS; POLICE POWER)—1. Power of Congress.—The word commerce in the clause of the constitution of the United States, which declares that “congress shall have power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes,” comprehends, and has always been understood to comprehend, navigation within its meaning; and a power to regulate navigation is as expressly granted as if that term had been added.² All laws passed by congress in the regulation of navigation and trade, whether foreign or coastwise are therefore, but the exercise of an undisputed

1. Gerrish v. Brown, 51 Me. 256, 262.

“Navigation” is “the science or art of conducting a ship from one place to another. This includes the supply of necessary implements and skilful mariners. The instruments are useless without the skilful mariners, and, conversely, navigation includes two things—the supply of the instruments or organs of the ship and the living instruments, or seamen. If either of these is wanting by the negligence of the owner, or of those for whom he is responsible, there is improper navigation.” Per FRY, L. J. The Warkworth, 9 P. D. 145. See, further, Good v. London Steamship Assoc., L. R., 6 C. P. 563; 20 W. R. 33; Carmichael v. Liverpool Sailing Ship Assoc., 56 L. T. 863.

The moving of a vessel in an unfinished state, from one place to another in the course of her construction, and not for the purpose of earning money, is not “navigation.” The Joshua Leviness, 9 Bing. (Pa.) 339.

Neither a log nor any number of logs floating upon the surface of a stream, uncontrolled and uncontrollable, is navigation. Harrigan v. Connecticut River Lumber Co., 129 Mass. 580, 585.

“Cases have decided that the word ‘Navigation,’ for some purposes, includes a period when the ship is not in motion; as for instance, when she is at anchor.” Per DENMAN, J. Hayn v. Culliford, 3 C. P. D. 417; affirmed, 4 C. P. D. 182.

Inland navigation defined in 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law i.

2. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; Bark Chusan, 2 Story (U. S.) 455; Brig Wilson v. United States, 1 Brock. (U. S.) 423; Moor v. Veazie, 32 Me. 343; State v. Kennedy, 19 La. An. 397; Sweatt v. Boston etc. R. Co., 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 339; South Carolina v. Georgia, 93 U. S. 4; Comms. of Pilotage v. Steamboat Cuba, 28 Ala. 185.

Commerce includes intercourse, navigation, and not traffic alone. Lord v. Steamship Co., 102 U. S. 548.

Commerce embraces navigation and extends to all the instruments used in navigating inland waters and the ocean. Pacific Coast Steamship Co. v. Board of Railroad Comms., 18 Fed. Rep. 10, 11.

The term “commerce” includes the transportation of passengers as well as merchandise. North River Steamboat Co. v. Livingston, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 713.

power.¹ So vessels engaged in commerce between the States, and however limited that commerce is, so far as it goes it is subject to the legislation of congress,² and it may be exercised with or without positive regulations.³ But it does not extend to that commerce which is completely internal. It applies to all the external concerns of the nation and to those internal which affect the States generally, but not to those which are completely within a particular State, which do not affect other States, and with which it is not necessary to interfere for the purpose of executing some of the general powers of the government. So commerce strictly internal to each State, though carried on by means of the navigable rivers of the United States, is not within the control of congress.⁴ But, where vessels in trading between ports and places within a State, navigate the high seas, congress has power to regulate the liability of the owners of such vessels.⁵

2. Power of the States.—A State may legislate concerning rivers which run exclusively within its own limits, when its own citizens are equally subject with those of other States to any inconveniences flowing from such legislation.⁶ But it has no power to reg-

1. Moran v. New Orleans, 112 U. S. 69; Pacific Coast S. S. Co. v. California R. Commrs., 18 Fed. Rep. 10; Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485; Edge v. Robertson, 112 U. S. 580; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling Bridge Co., 18 How. (U. S.) 421; People v. Downer, 7 Cal. 169; Mitchell v. Stedman, 8 Cal. 363.

2. The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 557.

A State law which authorizes a State officer at a port to make a survey of sea-going vessels there arriving, and of damaged goods found on board—not for the purpose of certifying the quantity and value of the things inspected for the protection of consumers, but to furnish official evidence for the parties immediately concerned, and, where goods are found damaged, to provide for their sale—is not an inspection law, such as a State may pass, but a regulation of commerce and unconstitutional. Foster v. Master etc. of New Orleans, 94 U. S. 246.

3. Bark Chusan, 2 Story (U. S.) 455; Moor v. Veazie, 32 Me. 343; State v. Kennedy, 19 La. An. 397; Brig Wilson v. United States, 1 Brock. (U. S.) 423.

4. The Bright Star, 1 Woolw. (U. S.) 266; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 1.

The power of congress to regulate steamboats employed in transporting passengers to require that they carry life-preservers, that they submit their boilers to inspection, etc., does not extend to vessels plying between ports in the same State and confining their business wholly to commerce within the State. The Thomas Swan, 6 Ben. (U. S.) 42.

5. Lord v. Goodall, Nelson etc. S. S. Co., 102 U. S. 541.

6. Hutchinson v. Thompson, 9 Ohio 52; Sands v. Manistee River Improvement Co., 123 U. S. 288; Fitch v. Livingston, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 492; Houston etc. Navigation Co. v. Dwyer, 29 Tex. 376; Green & B. R. Nav. Co. v. Chesapeake etc. R. Co. (Ky.), 10 S. W. Rep. 6; Kellogg v. Union Co., 12 Conn. 7; Veazie v. Moor, 14 How. 568; Livingston v. Van Ingen, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 507; The Ann Ryan, 7 Ben. (U. S.) 20.

A State law requiring masters of vessels bound to ports in this State to accept the services of the first licenced pilot offering is not unconstitutional. Thompson v. Sprague, 69 Ga. 409; 47 Am. Rep. 760. See State v. Penny, 19 S. Car. 218.

Municipal Ordinance.—The ordinance of the city of New Orleans, imposing a licence tax upon the owners of tow-boats running on the Mississippi river to and from the Gulf of Mexico, does not impose a duty upon tonnage, nor is it a regulation of commerce; and it is not, therefore, in conflict with the constitution of the United States. New Orleans v. Eclipse Tow Boat Co., 33 La. An. 647; 39 Am. Rep. 279.

The local authorities of a port have a ulate navigation which extends beyond its own jurisdiction.¹ A right to prescribe at what wharf a vessel may lie, where she may remain at anchor in a harbor, and for what time, and what description of light she shall display at night, and similar regulations; and such directions are not in conflict with any law of congress regulating commerce, or with the general admiralty jurisdiction conferred on the courts of the United States, and are valid. The James Gray v. The John Fraser, 21 How. (U. S.) 184.

A duty imposed by a city ordinance, which provides that steam packets and other vessels trading steadily, and performing regular successive voyages to that port from the adjoining States of North Carolina and Georgia, shall pay to the harbor-master one cent per ton once every three months, or every quarter, as a tonnage duty; and the ordinance is in violation of section 10, article 1, of the constitution of the United States, by which it is ordained that "no State shall, without the consent of congress, lay any duty of tonnage." Alexander v. Wilmington etc. R. Co., 3 Strobb. (S. Car.) 594. See Steamship Co. v. Port Wardens, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 31. Compare Benedict v. Vanderbilt, 1 Robt. (N. Y.) 194.

Exclusive Privilege.—The legislature of a State may grant an exclusive privilege of navigating the waters of the State with steamboats. Livingston v. Van Ingen, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 507. But such grant is void so far as it attempts to restrain vessels, furnished with a United States coasting licence, from navigating the waters of the State navigable from the sea coast. Odgen v. Gibbons, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) Ch. 150; 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 488; 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; North River Steamboat Co. v. Livingston, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 713. And it makes no difference whether such vessel proceeds from another State to a place in New York, or from one place in that State to another place in the same State. North River Steamboat Co. v. Livingston, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 488.

1. Halderman v. Beckwith, 4 McLean (U. S.) 286; People v. Compayne Général Transatlantique, 107 U. S. 59; 20 Blatchf. C. Ct. 296; Webb v. Dunn, 18 Fla. 721; People v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co., 8 Sawyer (U. S.) 640; 16 Fed. Rep. 344; Neederhouser v. State, 28 Ind. 257.

State statutes requiring the exhibition of lights in certain circumstances, although valid as internal police regulations, are not applicable to vessels engaged in general commerce, and a foreign vessel which has a light within the requirements of the admiralty rule is not in fault for not showing a light conformable to the local statute. The New York v. Rea, 18 How. 223; Snow v. Hill, 20 How. 543; Railroad Co. v. Fuller, 17 Wall. 568. But compare contra, The James Gray v. The John Frazer, 21 How. 184. And see The E. C. Scranton, 3 Blatchf. 30; Rathbun v. Payne, 19 Wend. 399; Fitch v. Livingston, 4 Sandf. 492, 712; The Santa Claus, Olcott 428; 1 Blatchf. 370; Halderman v. Beckwith, 4 McLean, 286. But they do not control foreign vessels. Halderman v. Beckwith, 4 McLean 286; The New York v. Rea, 18 How. 223; The Alert, 1 Dods. 236; The Christiana, 7 Moore P. C. 160; The Borussia, Swabey 94.

A State law which requires those engaged in the transportation of passengers among the States to give all persons travelling within the State, upon vessels employed in such business, equal rights and privileges in all parts of the vessel, without distinction on account of race or color, and subjects to an action for damages the owner of such a vessel who excludes colored passengers, on account of their color, from the cabin set apart by him for the use of whites during the passage, is a regulation of interstate commerce, and, therefore, to that extent, unconstitutional and void. Hall v. DeCuir, 95 U. S. 485.

In Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, it was held that where a State imposes a licence fee, either directly or through one of its municipal corporations, upon ferry boats plying across a navigable river between two States, not a regulation of commerce.

The provision of Mass. Gen. St., ch. 78, § 5, that "No person shall cause or permit to be floated down Connecticut river any masts, spars, logs, or other timber, unless the same are formed and bound into rafts, and placed under the care of a sufficient number of persons to govern and manage the same, so as to prevent damage thereby," is constitutional, even in the case of logs coming from another State, and passing

State has no power to regulate navigation between the States.¹ But where a State exercises her own sovereign power in a matter involving the interests of her citizens, though the exercise may touch upon a subject within the field of the power to regulate commerce, it is not for that reason invalid, if no law which congress has passed upon the same subject is violated.² Where an act of the legislature of a State prescribes a regulation of the subject of navigation, repugnant to and inconsistent with the regulation of congress, the State law must give way; and this, without regard to the source of power from whence the State legislature derived its enactment.³ The same rule applies to municipal through Massachusetts on their way to a third State. Harrigan v. Connecticut River Lumber Co., 129 Mass. 580; 37 Am. Rep. 387.

Municipal Ordinance.—A municipal ordinance which imposes a tax on the privilege of navigating the Mississippi river between New Orleans and the Gulf of Mexico is an unlawful attempt to regulate commerce. Moran v. New Orleans, 112 U. S. 69.

1. State v. Pittsburgh & S. Coal Co. (La.), 6 So. Rep. 220.

2. Craig v. Kline, 65 Pa. St. 399; McReynolds v. Smallhouse, 8 Bush (Ky.) 447; Morris v. State, 62 Tex. 728; Fitch v. Livingston, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 492. See Wilson v. Black Bird etc. Co., 2 Pet. (U. S.) 245. Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99.

An act of a State legislature incorporating a company to improve the navigation of a certain river, and authorizing it for a term of years to navigate the river with its boats and to charge tolls for the passage of other boats than its own, does not violate the United States constitution, as laying a duty of tonnage, or as infringing the power of congress to regulate commerce. McReynolds v. Smallhouse, 8 Bush (Ky.) 447. So a State may confer the right to construct a ship canal, and to levy tolls, congress not having legislated concerning the matter. Morris v. State, 62 Tex. 728.

While the action of congress prescribing a regulation of commerce, or the liability for its infringement, is exclusive of State authority, until action is taken by congress, the legislation of a State, not directed against commerce or any of its regulations, but relating generally to the rights, duties, and liabilities of citizens, is of obligatory force within its territorial jurisdiction, notwithstanding it may indirectly and remotely affect the operations of foreign or interstate commerce, or persons engaged in such commerce. Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99.

The New York statute, enacted in 1826, and continued in the revised statutes, which requires every steamboat navigating the rivers and lakes of that State in the night time to carry and show two good lights, one near her bows and the other near her stern, is still valid and obligatory upon all such vessels, whether navigating from place to place within the State, or from foreign States, under a coasting licence, notwithstanding the subsequent enactment of congress in 1838, that every steamboat navigating at night shall carry one or more signal lights.

That statute applies to the class of steamboats known as propellers, as well as to those in use when it was enacted. Fitch v. Livingston, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 492. As to the right of a State to enact police regulations and to supervise immigration, see POLICE POWER, infra, and IMMIGRATION, 9 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 936. Compare Commissioners of Immigration v. Brandt, 26 La. An. 29.

3. Moran v. New Orleans, 112 U. S. 69; Henderson v. Mayor of New York, 92 U. S. 259; Chy Lung v. Freeman, 92 U. S. 275; Wilson v. Black Bird etc. Co., 2 Pet. (U. S.) 245; Kellogg v. Union Co., 12 Conn. 7; People v. Rensselaer etc. R. Co., 15 Wend. (N. Y.), 113, 114; Lott v. Morgan, 41 Ala. 246; Harbor Commrs. v. Pashley, 19 S. Car. 315.

An act of a State legislature, imposing reasonable tolls, as a compensation for improving the navigation of a river within its own borders, is constitutional and valid, unless it conflicts with the powers of congress in actual ordinances.¹ So any duty, or tax, or burden imposed under the authority of the States which is in its essence a contribution claimed for the privilege of arriving and departing from a port of the United States, and which is assessed on a vessel according to its carrying capacity, is a violation of that provision in the federal constitution, which prohibits the State to lay any duty of tonnage, unless the consent of congress be obtained.² Where congress legislates, it does not repeal, but suspends State law upon the subject, and when the act producing this result is repealed, or so modified as to permit the operation of the State law, it becomes again valid and in force.³

III. RULES OF NAVIGATION--1. Definition.—Navigation rules are systematic rules and regulations to be followed in the navigation of ships or vessels when approaching each other under such circumstances that a collision may possibly ensue.⁴ exercise. Thames Bank v. Lovell, 18 Conn. 500.

Tenn. acts 1879, ch. 84, § 7, sub-sec. 36, imposing a privilege tax on agents of steamboats and railroad companies, other than officers of railroads terminating in the taxing district, is not an attempt to regulate commerce in a manner in contravention to the federal constitution. Lightburne v. Taxing District, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 219.

Local Usage.—A local usage of navigation, forming a part of the common law of a State is valid on the same ground, and no other, in respect of the power and legislation of congress on the subject, as is a statute of the State affecting commerce or navigation. Perry v. Torrence, 8 Ohio, 521.

1. Northwestern etc. Co. v. St. Paul, 3 Dill. (C. C.) 454.

2. Cannon v. New Orleans, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 577; Booth v. Lloyd, 33 Fed. Rep. 593; Ex parte Insley, 33 Fed. Rep. 680; People v. Raymond, 34 Cal. 492; Hackley v. Geraghty, 34 N. J. L. 332. A toll for the purpose of raising revenue, imposed by a State on logs and lumber floated down from that State into an adjoining one, is unconstitutional. Carson River Lumbering Co. v. Patterson, 33 Cal. 334. But laws may be enacted regulating the running and rafting of logs coming from another State, and passing through on their way to another State. Horrigan v. Connecticut River L. Co. 129 Mass. 580; 38 Am. Rep. 387; 13 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 1038.

The Louisiana acts of 1867 and 1868, imposing a charge for weighing and inspecting each bale of hay brought to the port of New Orleans for sale, irrespective of the State or place where the hay is made, do not involve a regulation of commerce between the States, nor do they operate to lay an impost or duty upon imports or exports; and they are not in violation of the constitution of the United States upon either of those grounds. Hay Inspectors v. Pleasants, 23 La. An. 349.

The La. Stat. 1855, relative to the board of master and wardens, which provides for the payment of services actually rendered, or the tender of such services, is not a violation of the clause of the constitution of the United States, which gives to congress the power of regulating commerce. The fees allowed to the master and wardens are in no sense imposts or duties on imports or exports. Port Wardens v. The Martha J. Ward, 14 La. An. 289.

The charges imposed on vessels by the Louisiana quarantine laws are exactions in compensation for services rendered, and are not taxes, duties, or imposts, within the prohibition of U. S. Const. art. 1, § 10. Morgan's Louisiana & Texas R. R. & S. S. Co. v. Board of Health, 36 La. An. 666. See St. Louis v. McCoy, 18 Mo. 238; St. Louis v. Boffinger, 19 Mo. 13.

3. Henderson v. Spofford, 59 N. Y. 131.

4. 2 Abb. L. Dict. 154; 2 Bouv. L. Dict. 271; Anderson's Dict. of L. 699.

"Collision" Defined.—"Collision," in the nautical acceptation of that term, imports the impinging of vessels together while both are being navigated. Common usage, however, applies the

2. Origin and Nature.—Sailing rules were ordained to prevent collisions between ships employed in navigation and to preserve life and property embarked in that perilous pursuit.¹ Such rules existed long before there was any legislation upon the subject, either in this country or in the country from which our judicial system was largely borrowed,² but these have more recently been superseded by express enactment in most of the commercial countries of the world.³ There are two systems of rules to be followed by vessels of the United States: One system for the high seas and coast waters, and one system for the harbors, lakes and inland waters.⁴

3. Application.—The rights of parties in an action for a collision depend on the law of the place where the collision occurred.⁵ Sailing rules and regulations prescribed by law furnish paramount rules of decision whenever they are applicable.⁶ If the collision takes place in the high seas between vessels of different nationalities the rules of the maritime law are to determine which was in fault.⁷ It has been held that the provisions of sections 4233, 4234, were intended to embrace all kinds of vessels, including rafts,⁸ but it has also been held that a car-float is not required to term equally to cases where a vessel is run afoul of when entirely stationary, or is brought in contact with another by swinging at her anchor. The Moxey, Abb. Adm. 73.

1. The America, 92 U. S. 432; The Non Pareille, 33 Fed. Rep. 524; Sawyer v. Eastern Steamboat Co., 46 Me. 400.

2. City of Washington, 92 U. S. 31.

Many years before the rule of the road at sea was regulated by act of parliament, the practice of seamen had established rules to enable approaching ships to keep clear of each other. These rules, which are the foundation of those now in force, were well established by custom, and formed part of the general maritime law administered by the admiralty court. Marsden's Law of Collisions (2nd ed.) 296.

3. 2 Abb. L. Dict. 154. See Sears v. The Scotia, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 170.

Rules were laid down in England by orders in council in 1863 and in 1868. Those of 1863 were substantially re-enacted by the United States by act of April 29th, 1864, ch. 69, 13 St. 58; Rev. Stat., § 4233. Those rules were adopted by more than thirty of the principal states of the world, and were at once regarded as entitled to judicial notice. The Scotia, 14 Wall. 170; 3 Blatchf. 308; The Sylvester Hale, 6 Ben. 523.

The Revised Code was adopted by Great Britain in 1884, and this and the regulations of 1863 are set out in paralleled columns in Marsden's Law of Collision (2nd ed.) 471, 485. This revised code has been adopted by the leading nations, and is the act of March 3rd, 1885, ch. 354, 23 St. 438.

4. See U. S. Stat. 1885, ch. 354, § 1 Rev. Int. Rules and Reg.

5. Desty's Ship. & Adm., § 354; The Peerless, Lush. 30; The China, 7 Wall. 64; The Scotia, 7 Blatchf. 321; Smith v. Condry, 1 How. 28; The Eagle, 8 Wall. 21. And see The Vernon, 1 W. Rob. 319; Gen. St. N. Co. v. Gullion, 11 Mees. & W. 877; The Annapolis, Lush. 295; The Dumfries, Swa. 63; The Zollverein, Ibid. 96; The Saxonia, Lush. 410; The Belle, 1 Ben. 317; Cope v. Doherty, 4 Kay & J. 367; 2 De G. & J. 626; The Chancellor, 14 Moore P. C. 202.

6. The City of Washington, 92 U. S. 31.

7. Desty's Ship. & Adm., § 354; The Scotia, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 170; 7 Blatchf. 326; The Belle, 1 Ben. 320; The Chancellor, 4 Ben. 153; The Saxonia, Lush. 410; The Zollverein, Swa. 96; The Dumfries, Swa. 63; Williams v. Gutch, 14 Moore P. C. 202; explaining The Cleadon, Lush. 158; 4 L. T., N. S. 157. Compare The Fyenoord, Swa. 374; The New Ed. 7. Gustow, Holt R. 28.

8. One Raft, 13 Fed. Rep. 796.

carry lights.¹ Safe guides in cases outside the scope and operation of legislative enactments "are often found in the decisions of the courts, or in the views of standard text writers; but it is competent for the court, in such a case, to admit evidence of usage; and, if it be proved that the matter is regulated by a general usage, such evidence may furnish a safe guide as the proper rule of decision."²

IV. LIGHTS³—1. Generally.—By the general rules of the sea every vessel, whether close-hauled or at anchor, is bound to show a

1. The Manhasset, 34 Fed. Rep. 408.

2. See LOCAL REGULATIONS, infra; The City of Washington, 92 U. S. 31, 32, 39. In St. John v. Paine, 10 How. 557 there is a discussion of the old rules governing sailing and steam vessels in cases of collisions.

3. Rules for the High Seas and Coast Waters.—Steam and Sail Vessels.—ARTICLE 1. In the following rules every steamship which is under sail and not under steam is to be considered a sailing ship, and every steamship which is under steam, whether under sail or not, is to be considered a ship under steam.

Lights.—ART. 2. The lights mentioned in the following articles numbered three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, and eleven, and no others, shall be carried in all weathers, from sunset to sunrise.

Lights for Steamers.—ART. 3. A sea-going steamship, when under way, shall carry—(a) On or in front of the foremast, at a height above the hull of not less than twenty feet, and if the breadth of the ship exceeds twenty feet, then at a height above the hull not less than such breadth, a bright white light, so constructed as to show a uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of twenty points of the compass, so fixed as to throw the light ten points on each side of the ship, namely from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on either side, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least five miles.

(b) On the starboard side a green light, so constructed as to show a uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of ten points of the compass, so fixed as to throw the light from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on the starboard side, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles.

(c) On the port side a red light, so constructed as to show a uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of ten points of the compass, so fixed as to throw the light from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on the port side, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles.

(d) The said green and red sidelights shall be fitted with inboard screens projecting at least three feet forward from the light, so as to prevent these lights from being seen across the bow.

Lights for Towing Steamers.—

ART. 4. A steamship when towing another ship shall, in addition to her side lights, carry two bright white lights in a vertical line, one over the other, not less than three feet apart, so as to distinguish her from other steamships. Each of these lights shall be of the same construction and character, and shall be carried in the same position, as the white light which other steamships are required to carry.

Vessels Not Under Command.—ART.

5. (a) A ship, whether a steamship or sailing ship, which from any accident is not under command, shall at night carry, in the same position as the white light which steamships are required to carry, and, if a steamship, in place of that light, three red lights in globular lanterns, each not less than ten inches in diameter, in a vertical line, one over the other, not less than three feet apart, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles, and shall by day carry in a vertical line, one over the other, not less than three feet apart, in front of but not lower than her foremast head, three black balls or shapes, each two feet in diameter.

Vessels Laying Telegraph Cables.—

(b) A ship, whether a steamship or a sailing ship, employed in laying or picking up a telegraph cable, shall at night carry, in the same position as the white light which steamships are required to carry, and if a steamship, in place of that light three lights in globular lanterns, each not less than ten inches in diameter, in a vertical line, over one another, not less than six feet apart. The highest and lowest of these lights shall be red, and the middle light shall be white, and they shall be of such a character that the red lights shall be visible at the same distance as the white light. By day she shall carry, in a vertical line, one over the other, not less than six feet apart, in front of but not lower than her foremast head, three shapes not less than two feet in diameter, of which the top and bottom shall be globular in shape and red in color, and the middle one diamond in shape and white.

When to Carry Side Lights.—(c) The ships referred to in this article when not making any way through the water, shall not carry the side lights, but when making way shall carry them.

(d) The lights and shapes required to be shown by this article are to be taken by other ships as signals that the ship showing them is not under command, and cannot therefore get out of the way. The signals to be made by ships in distress and requiring assistance are contained in article twenty-seven.

Lights for Sailing Vessels.—ART. 6. A sailing ship under way or being towed shall carry the same lights as are provided by article three for a steamship under way with the exception of the white light, which she shall never carry.

Exceptional Lights for Small Vessels.—ART. 7. Whenever, as in the case of small vessels during bad weather, the green and red sidelights cannot be fixed, these lights shall be kept on deck, on their respective sides of the vessel, ready for use, and shall, on the approach of or to other vessels, be exhibited on their respective sides in sufficient time to prevent collision, in such manner as to make them most visible, and so that the green light shall not be seen on the port side nor the red light on the starboard side. To make the use of these portable lights more certain and easy, the lanterns containing them shall each be painted outside with the color of the light they respectively contain, and shall be provided with proper screens.

Lights for Steam Vessels and Sailing Vessels at Anchor.—ART. 8.

A ship, whether a steamship or a sailing ship, when at anchor, shall carry, where it can best be seen, but at a height not exceeding twenty feet above the hull, a white light, in a globular lantern of not less than eight inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear, uniform, and unbroken light, visible all around the horizon at a distance of at least one mile.

Lights for Pilot Vessels.—ART. 9. A pilot vessel, when engaged on her station on pilotage duty, shall not carry the lights required for other vessels, but shall carry a white light at the mast-head, visible all round the horizon, and shall also exhibit a flare up light or (a) flare up lights at short intervals, which shall never exceed fifteen minutes. A pilot vessel when not engaged on her station on pilotage duty, shall carry lights similar to those of other ships.

Lights for Open Boats and Fishing Vessels.—ART. 10.

Open boats and fishing vessels of less than twenty tons net registered tonnage, when under way and when not having their nets, trawls, dredges, or lines in the water, shall not be obliged to carry the colored side lights; but every such boat and vessel shall in lieu thereof have ready at hand a lantern with a green glass on the one side and a red glass on the other side, and on approaching to or being approached by another vessel such lantern shall be exhibited in sufficient time to prevent collision, so that the green light shall not be seen on the port side nor the red light on the starboard side.

The following portion of this article applies only to fishing vessels and boats when in the sea off the coast of Europe lying north of Cape Finisterre:

(a) All fishing vessels and fishing boats of twenty tons net registered tonnage or upward, when under way and when not having their nets, trawls, dredges, or lines in the water, shall carry and show the same lights as other vessels under way.

(b) All vessels when engaged in fishing with drift nets shall exhibit two white lights from any part of the vessel where they can be best seen. Such lights shall be placed so that the vertical distance between them shall be not less than six feet and not more than ten feet, and so that the horizontal distance between them, measured in a line with the keel of the vessel, shall be not less than five feet and not more than ten feet. The lower of these two lights shall be the more forward, and both of them shall be of such a character and contained in lanterns of such construction as to show all round the horizon, on a dark night with a clear atmosphere for a distance of not less than three miles.

(c) All vessels when trawling, dredging or fishing with any kind of drag nets shall exhibit from some part of the vessel where they can be best seen, two lights. One of these lights shall be red and the other shall be white. The red light shall be above the white light, and shall be at a vertical distance from it of not less than six feet and not more than twelve feet; and the horizontal distance between them, if any, shall not be more than ten feet. These two lights shall be of such a character and contained in lanterns of such construction as to be visible all round the horizon, on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, the white light to a distance of not less than three miles and the red light of not less than two miles. [Omitted from copy of Revised Regulations received from the British Government.]

(d) A vessel employed in line fishing, with her lines out, shall carry the same lights as a vessel when engaged in fishing with drift nets.

(e) If a vessel, when fishing with a trawl, dredge, or any kind of drag net, becomes stationary in consequence of her gear getting fast to a rock or other obstruction, she shall show the light and make the fog signal for a vessel at anchor.

(f) Fishing vessels and open boats may at any time use a flare up in addition to the lights which they are by this article required to carry and show. All flare up lights exhibited by a vessel when trawling, dredging, or fishing with any kind of drag net shall be shown at the after part of the vessel, excepting that if the vessel is hanging by the stern to her trawl, dredge, or drag net they shall be exhibited from the bow.

(g) Every fishing vessel and every open boat when at anchor between sunset and sunrise shall exhibit a white light, visible all round the horizon at a distance at least one mile.

(h) In a fog a drift net vessel attached to her nets, and a vessel when trawling, dredging, or fishing with any kind of drag net, and a vessel employed in line fishing with her lines out, shall, at intervals of not more than two minutes, make a blast with her fog-horn and ring her bell alternately.

Vessels Being Overtaken.—ART. 11. A ship which is being overtaken by another shall show from her stern to such last mentioned ship a white light or a flare up light.

Special Lights for Squadrons and Convoys.—ART. 26. Nothing in these rules shall interfere with the operation of any special rules made by the government of any nation with respect to additional station and signal lights for two or more ships of war or for ships sailing under convoy.

Harbors, Lakes and Inland Waters.—Steam and Sail Vessels.—RULE ONE. Every steam vessel which is under sail, and not under steam, shall be considered a sail vessel; and every steam vessel which is under steam, whether under sail or not, shall be considered a steam vessel.

Lights.—RULE TWO. The lights mentioned in the following rules, and no others, shall be carried in all weathers, between sunset and sunrise:

Lights for Ocean Going Steamers and Steamers Carrying Sail.—RULE THREE. All ocean going steamers and steamers carrying sail, shall, when under way, carry—

(a) At the foremast head, a bright white light, of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least five miles, and so constructed as to show a uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of twenty points of the compass, and so fixed as to throw the light ten points on each side of the vessel, namely, from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on either side.

(b) On the starboard side, a green light of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles, and so constructed as to show a uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of ten points of the compass, and so fixed as to throw the light from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on the starboard side.

(c) On the port side a red light, of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles, and so constructed as to show a uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of ten points of the compass and so fixed as to throw the light from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on the port side.

The green and red light shall be fitted with inboard screens, projecting at least three feet forward from the lights, so as to prevent them from being seen across the bow.

Lights for Towing Steamers.—RULE FOUR. Steam vessels, when towing other vessels, shall carry two bright white masthead lights vertically, in addition to their side lights, so as to distinguish them from other steam vessels. Each of these masthead lights shall be of the same character and construction as the masthead lights prescribed by Rule Three.

Lights for Steamers Not Ocean-Going Nor Carrying Sail.—RULE FIVE. All steam vessels other than ocean going steamers and steamers carrying sail shall, when under way, carry on the starboard and port sides lights of the same character and construction and in the same position as are prescribed for side lights by Rule Three, except in the case provided in Rule Six.

Lights for Steamers on the Mississippi River.—RULE SIX. River steamers navigating waters flowing in the Gulf of Mexico, and their tributaries, shall carry the following lights, namely: One red light on the outboard side of the port smoke pipe, and one green light on the outboard side of the starboard smoke pipe. Such lights shall show both forward and abeam on their respective sides.

Lights for Coasting Steam Vessels and Steam Vessels Navigating Bays, Lakes and Rivers.—RULE SEVEN. All coasting steam vessels, and steam vessels other than ferry boats and vessels otherwise expressly provided for, navigating the bays, lakes, rivers or other inland waters of the United States, except those mentioned in Rule Six, shall carry the red and green lights as prescribed for ocean going steamers; and, in addition thereto, a central range of two white lights; the after light being carried at an elevation of at least fifteen feet above the light at the head of the vessel. The head light shall be so constructed as to show a good light through twenty points of the compass, namely: from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on either side of the vessel; and the after lights so as to show all around the horizon.

The Lights for Ferry Boats shall be regulated by such rules as the Board of supervising inspectors of steam-vessels shall prescribe. (See additional rules below.)

Lights for Sailing Vessels.—RULE EIGHT. Sail vessels, under way or being towed, shall carry the same lights as steam vessels under way, with the exception of the white masthead lights, which they shall never carry. (See Rule Three, b and c.)

Exceptional Lights for Small Sailing Vessels.—RULE NINE. Whenever, as in case of small vessels during bad weather, the green and red lights cannot be fixed, these lights shall be kept on deck, on their respective sides of the vessel, ready for instant exhibition, and shall, on the approach of or to other vessels, be exhibited on their respective sides in sufficient time to prevent collision, in such manner as to make them most visible, and so that the green light shall not be seen on the port side, nor the red light on the starboard side. To make the use of these portable lights more certain and easy, they shall each be painted outside with the color of the light they respectively contain, and shall be provided with suitable screens.

Lights for Steam Vessels and Sailing Vessels at Anchor.—RULE TEN. All vessels, whether steam vessels or sail vessels, when at anchor or in roadsteads or fair ways, shall, between sunset and sunrise, exhibit where it can best be seen, but at a height not exceeding twenty feet above the hull, a white light in a globular lantern of eight inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear, uniform, and unbroken light, visible all around the horizon, and at a distance of at least one mile.

Lights for Pilot Vessels.—RULE ELEVEN. Sailing pilot vessels shall not carry the lights required for other sailing vessels, but shall carry a white light at the masthead, visible all around the horizon, and shall also exhibit a flare up light every fifteen minutes.

Lights for Coal Boats, Trading Boats, Rafts, and Other Like Craft.—RULE TWELVE. Coal boats, trading boats, produce boats, canal boats, oyster boats, fishing boats, rafts or other water craft, navigating any bay, harbor or river, by hand power, horse power, sail, or by the current of the river, or which shall be anchored or moored in or near the channel or fair way of any bay, harbor, or river, shall carry one or more good white lights, light,¹ and where a vessel loses her admiralty lights by tempestu-which shall be placed in such manner as shall be prescribed by the board of supervising inspectors of steam vessels.

Rule 12 shall be so construed as not to require row boats and skiffs upon the river St. Lawrence to carry lights. (Act June 19th, 1886.)

Lights for Open Boats.—RULE THIRTEEN. Open boats shall not be required to carry the side lights required for other vessels but shall, if they do not carry such lights, carry a lantern having a green slide on one side and a red slide on the other side; and, on the approach of or to other vessels, such lantern shall be exhibited in sufficient time to prevent collision, and in such a manner that the green light shall not be seen on the port side, nor the red light on the starboard side. Open boats, when at anchor or stationary, shall exhibit a bright white light. They shall not, however, be prevented from using a flare up, in addition, if considered expedient.

Lights on Vessels of the United States Navy.—RULE FOURTEEN. The exhibition of any light on board of a vessel of war of the United States may be suspended whenever, in the opinion of the Secretary of the Navy, the commander-in-chief of a squadron, or the commander of a vessel, acting singly, the special character of the service may require it.

Sailing Vessels to be Furnished with Signal Lights and to Show Torches.—RULE TWENTY-FIVE. Collectors or other chief officers of the customs shall require all sail vessels to be furnished with proper signal lights, and every such vessel shall, on the approach of any steam vessel during the night time, show a lighted torch upon that point or quarter to which such steam vessel shall be approaching.

Additional Rules.—These additional rules (found in the proceedings of the board of supervising inspectors of steam vessels and decisions of treasury department) are published for the information of all concerned:

Lights for Ferry Boats.—RULE SIXTY-FIVE. All double ended ferry-boats on lakes and seaboard shall carry a central range of clear, bright white lights, showing all around the horizon, placed at equal altitudes forward and aft; also such side lights as specified in section 4233 of the Revised Statutes, Rule Three, paragraphs b and c. Local inspectors, in districts having ferry boats, shall, whenever the safety of navigation may require, designate for each line of such boats a certain light, white or colored, which shall show all around the horizon, to designate and distinguish such lines from each other, which lights shall be carried on a flag staff amidships, fifteen feet above the white range lights.

. . . The signal lights on ferry boats on waters flowing into the Gulf of Mexico and their tributaries, shall be the same as those on all other steam-boats on the same waters, except double ended ferry boats, which shall be governed by the rule governing double ended ferry boats on lakes and seaboards.

Lights on Small Craft.—RULE supplemental to RULE TWELVE, and by virtue thereof: All coal boats, trading boats, produce boats, canal-boats, oyster boats, fishing boats, and other water craft, navigating any bay, harbor or river, propelled by hand-power, horse power, sail, or by the current of the river, or which shall be moored in or near the channel or fair way of any bay, harbor, or river, shall carry one bright white light forward, not less than six feet above the rail or deck.

Rafts of one crib, and not more than two in length, shall carry one bright white light, on a pole, not less than six feet high; three or more cribs in length, shall carry one white light at each end of the raft at the same height.

Rafts of more than one crib abreast shall carry one white light on each corner of the raft, making four lights in all.

Row boats shall carry one white light two feet above the stem.

1. The Eclipse, The Saxonia, 8 Jur., N. S. 315; The Sarmatian, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 152; The Lizzie Henderson, 20 Fed. Rep. 524; The Philotaxe, 37 L. T., N. S. 540; The Indiana, 1 Abb. Adm. 330; Valentine v. Cleugh, 29 Eng. Law & Eq. 49; General Steam Navigation Co. v. Mann, 26 Eng. L. & Eq. 339; The Allwal, 25 Eng. L. & Eq. 602; Smyrna etc. Steamboat Co. v. Whilldin, 4 Harr. (Del.) 228; The Continental, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 3; Chase v. Belden, 117 N. Y. 637; The Algiers, 28 Fed.

ous weather she is bound to obtain new lights on the first opportunity.¹ Yet it seems where a vessel without a light is injured by collision with another vessel the vessel inflicting the injury is liable, if the injury could have been prevented by proper care on her part.² So, where the lights carried by a vessel are not those

Rep. 240; Dowell v. Steam Navigation Co., 38 Eng. L. & Eq. 64; The Robert I. Poulson, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 494; The Haverton, 31 Fed. Rep. 563; The State of Alabama, 17 Fed. Rep. 847; The Frank P. Lee, 34 Fed. Rep. 480; Thomas Martin, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 517; The Parkesburgh, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 247; Bigley v. Williams, 80 Pa. St. 107; The Louisiana v. The Isaac Fisher, 21 How (U. S.) 1; The Belle, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 317; The City of Troy, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 466. Compare Bark Delaware v. Steamer Osprey, 2 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 268; R. B. Forbes, Sprague (U. S.) 328; The Owen Wallace, 30 L. T., N. S. 41; Baker v. Steamship City of New York, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 75.

A ship lying at anchor on a dark night is bound to keep a light always visible, and it is no excuse to free her from liability that the lamp had been temporarily taken down to be trimmed. Tyne Steam Shipping Company v. Smith, The C. M. Palmer, and The Larnax, 21 W. R. 702; 29 L. T., N. S. 120.

This rule applies only where a boat is in the path of vessels. It is not required where the boat is fastened to the shore, especially at a place set apart for such boats. Culbertson v. Southern Belle, 18 How. (U. S.) 584; L'Homme-dieu v. The Mischief, 39 Fed. Rep. 510.

Vessels Under Way.—A vessel driven from her anchors by a gale of wind, and setting sail to go out to sea, is, even if wholly unmanageable, under way, and is bound to exhibit colored lights. The George Arkle, Lush. 382.

A vessel with her anchor down, but not actually holden by and under the control of it, is under way. The Esk and The Gitana, 2 L. R., Adm. 350; 38 L. J., Adm. 33; 17 W. R. 1064.

Vessel Aground.—Where a propeller, being aground on a dark night, did not exhibit a proper light, but must have been seen when 800 or 1,000 feet distant from a tug, which ran into her—held, that both were in fault. The tug should have stopped immediately upon seeing an object ahead, although not knowing what it was. The Frank Moffat, 2 Flipp. (U. S.) 291.

Moonlight Night.—Where the night was moonlight, and, although the light was occasionally obscured, yet it was not so to such a degree as to render the navigation at all dangerous if care, skill and vigilance had been employed, it was held, in a libel by the owners of a sailing vessel against a steamer for damages for a collision in the night-time, that no facts were disclosed which imposed upon the sailing vessel the obligation to show a light. The Louisiana v. The Isaac Fisher, 21 How. (U. S.) 1.

1. The Aurora, Lush. 327.

2. Morrison v. The Gen. Steam Navig. Co., 20 Eng. L. & Eq. 455; The Owen Wallis, 4 L. R., Adm. 177; 30 L. T., N. S. 41; Shields v. New York, 18 Fed. Rep. 748; The Avon, 22 Fed. Rep. 905; The City of Troy, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 466; The Gray Eagle, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 505; Cohen v. The Mary T. Wilder, Taney Dec. (U. S.) 567; Farwell v. The John H. Starin, 2 Fed. Rep. 100.

A steamer with proper lights is not excused from doing everything possible to avoid a collision with a steamer without lights, and the latter is in fault in not governing her movements by the lights of the other. Meigs v. The Northern, 1 Wash. Ter. 91.

A close-hauled vessel exhibiting lights other than those required by the regulations for preventing collisions at sea, was run into by a vessel running free and whose duty it was to keep out of the way, but which, in consequence of not having a proper lookout, did not see the close-hauled vessel or her lights till the moment of the collision. Held, that as the proper lights, had they been exhibited, would not have been seen, neither their absence nor the exhibition of an improper light, which could have been seen, but which, by reason of the improper lookout, was not seen, could by any possibility have contributed to the collision, and therefore that the vessel infringing the regulation as to lights could not be deemed to be in fault for which are prescribed by law, other vessels are not excused from the exercise of proper care in approaching or passing her.¹ So it seems compliance with statute regulations in regard to lights does not; in all cases, show a full performance of duty, for circumstances may arise that call for extraordinary diligence to observe all reasonable precautions.²

2. Visibility.—A vessel will be in fault for assuming a position in which her lights will be obscured.³ So the lights must not be so powerful and placed in such a position as to prevent the lookout from seeing ahead.⁴ Where a steamer approaches a sailing vessel during the night time the sailing vessel must show the the collision within § 17 of the Merchant Shipping act, 1873. The Englishman, 37 L. T., N. S. 412.

1. Hoffman v. Union Ferry Co., 47 N. Y. 176; Meigs v. The Northerner, 1 Wash. Ter. 91.

A green and red light placed in the center of a schooner, forward, and separated only by a board, do not fulfil the requirements of the act of congress of April 29th, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 57). The lights must be placed at the sides of the vessel. But neglect by one vessel to show proper signal lights does not absolve the other from the obligation to observe the usual laws of navigation, or such reasonable precaution as the circumstances call for. The Empire State, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 216. And see Silliman v. Lewis, 49 N. Y. 379.

In The Scottish Bride v. The Anthony Kelly, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 151, it was held that the failure to display the exact statutory light by a vessel at anchor is not sufficient contributory negligence to prevent recovery of damages for a collision occasioned by the reckless navigation of the other vessel.

A yacht of seven tons, carrying, not the light required of enrolled and registered vessels by the sailing rules, but a light well understood by master of a propeller, keld, not in fault for a collision due to the fault of the propeller in not making the light, the collision, moreover, occurring at a place where the propeller knew that light craft abounded. The Gazelle, 33 Fed. Rep. 301.

Delinquency in Lights.—Vessels may be properly excused for not carrying all the regulation lights, if the excuse is on the ground that such delinquency did not contribute to the collision. The Haverton, 31 Fed. Rep. 563, 568.

2. This may include moderate speed; by seeing to it that a tow is under proper control and management; and if in a narrow stream on a dark and rainy night, by keeping well over to her own side of the stream. The R. W. Burrows, 7 Blatchf. (U. S.) 374.

3. The Howard, 30 Fed. Rep. 280; The Seacacus, 34 Fed. Rep. 68; see The Convoy, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 143; The Manhasset, 34 Fed. Rep. 408; Briggs v. Day, 21 Fed. Rep. 727; New York etc. R. Co. v. Cooper (Va.), 9 S. E. Rep. 321.

A vessel assuming a position in which her colored lights are obscured over considerable part of the area in which other vessels are moving does not comply with the law requiring lights to be visible for ten points around the horizon. The Seacacus, 34 Fed. Rep. 68.

A tug is in fault, when navigating in a fog at night, in having her red light obstructed by a barge which she is towing, without having any corresponding light upon the barge to supply its place. The Howard, 30 Fed. Rep. 280.

On collision between two barques in a hazy night, nearly end on—keld, that one was in fault for placing her red light aft near the taffrail, where it was liable to be obscured by the sails or by the swell of the ship's side in front. The Johanne Auguste, 21 Fed. Rep. 134.

4. R. B. Forbes, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 328; Pope v. The R. B. Forbes, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 331.

In England the law does not appoint any particular place at which the lights should be fixed, but they ought to be placed so as to be properly visible. Beal v. Marchais, The Bougainville, and The James C. Stevenson, 5 L. R., P. C. 316. See The Gustav, The New Ed., 9 L. T., N. S. 547; The Germania, 37 L. J., Adm. 59.

proper lights and hold her course,¹ and if her lights are not visible to the steamer, the sailing vessel must show a lighted torch upon that point or quarter to which such steam vessel shall be approaching.² If the lights are visible and the steamer is in fault for not seeing them she will be liable.³ Approaching vessels have a right to expect compliance with the law, and exercise their judgment accordingly; and, even if the same circumstances should operate to lead, in one instance, to the erroneous belief that the faulty

1. The Atlas, 34 Fed. Rep. 543; The Excelsior, 33 Fed. Rep. 554; The Sarmatian, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 152; The Pottsville, 24 Fed. Rep. 655; The Lizzie Major, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 333; The New Orleans, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 303.

A bark and a steamer collided on the open sea in the night time. The bark had proper lights burning and kept her course, while the steamer's single lookout failed to see the bark, although a passenger on the steamer saw her from his state room. Held, that these facts, in addition to the presumption arising from the fact of a collision, justified a finding that the steamer was in fault. The Belgenland, 114 U. S. 355.

A steamer ran into a schooner in the night because the schooner had no light and showed none after she saw the steamer. Held, that the schooner alone was in fault. The Algiers, 28 Fed. Rep. 240.

A steamship sighted, two miles distant, a sloop-smack which kept her course and set no torch light at her bow, but whose red and green lights were not screened. Held, that they were both in fault in colliding, and the damages should be divided. The Alabama, 4 Wood (C. C.) 48.

Wrong Light.—A vessel which, by carrying a wrong light, conveys the erroneous impression that she is at anchor; The Conoho, 24 Fed. Rep. 758; or by carrying a white light instead of exhibiting a green light conveys the impression that she is going in the same direction as is the vessel that sights the light, is liable for a collision caused by her error. The Excelsior, 39 Fed. Rep. 393; affirming 33 Fed. Rep. 554.

2. Rev. Stat., § 4, 234; The Saratoga, 37 Fed. Rep. 119; The Eleanor, 17 Blatchf (U. S.) 88; Leonard v. Whitwell, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 638; The Hercules, 17 Fed. Rep. 606; The New Orleans, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 303; The Caw, 23 Fed. Rep. 734.

A schooner and a steamer came into collision. The schooner's side lights were burning, but not properly, and were not seen from the steamer, though those on her were vigilant. The steamer did all that was incumbent on her to do when she discovered the schooner's light. The schooner did not exhibit any lighted torch, although she saw the approach of the steamer. Held, that the schooner was wholly in fault. The Narragansett, 20 Blatchf. (U. S.) 87. The rule must be observed by pilot boats when off pilot grounds. The New Orleans, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 303.

A becalmed pilot boat was run into by a steamer. The steamer could have been stopped after seeing the boat, but the boat's flare-up light was not shown seasonably. Held, a case for division of damages. The Columbia, 27 Fed. Rep. 238.

A schooner beating down, saw a steamer a mile distant, rapidly overtaking her, and knowing that her own colored lights were not visible to the steamer, till a few moments before collision, held, also in fault for not exhibiting to the steamer a flash light, or any other signal of her presence, as prescribed by Rev. St. U. S., § 4234, directing sailing vessels on the approach of a steam vessel during the night to show a lighted torch on that point or quarter to which the steam vessel is approaching. The Saratoga, 37 Fed. Rep. 119. The fact that the side lights of a sailing vessel could have been seen by a careful lookout from a steamer will not excuse the former's neglect to exhibit a torch, which might have prevented the collision. The Algiers, 21 Fed. Rep. 343.

The requirement that a sailing vessel shall show a torch to a steamer has no application to a foreign vessel on the high seas. Her not doing so creates no imputation of negligence. The A. M. Hathaway, 25 Fed. Rep. 926. See Leonard v. Whitwell, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 638.

3. The Gazelle, 33 Fed. Rep. 301.

vessel is a steamer, and, in another instance, to an erroneous belief that the faulty vessel is a sailing vessel, it by no means follows that either of the deceived parties is in fault. If they actually exercise proper vigilance and skill, and yet are, in fact, misled, they are not responsible that, under circumstances apt to create doubt, their judgment was, in fact, deceived. It is against such errors that the law was designed to guard, and precisely such errors the neglect of its observance is likely to produce.¹ On making the lights of another steamer, if there is the least uncertainty as to their position and motion, speed should be instantly checked, and, if necessary, the boat stopped and backed. Keeping a powerful steamer at full speed under such circumstances, is great recklessness.²

3. Vessels Being Overtaken.—A ship which is being overtaken by another must show from her stern to such last mentioned ship a white light or a flare-up light.³ No vessel has a right to disregard this regulation because she thinks it unimportant. If she knows of the approach of a steam vessel she must exhibit the light, or take the risks of loss occasioned by its absence.⁴ So when a vessel casting off from moorings in a navigable river places herself at night partly athwart the fairway, so that her regulation lights cannot be seen by vessels astern of her coming up the river,

1. The Continental, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 3.

2. The Ogdensburg, 1 Newb. Adm. 139; The Pottsville, 24 Fed. Rep. 655; Bradley v. The John Pridgeon, Jr., 38 Fed. Rep. 261; The Wydale, 37 Fed. Rep. 26; The Illinois, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 256.

A steamer seeing lights close ahead of her, carried by some ship, and being unable to make out those lights, or the course of the ship carrying them, should slacken speed until she is able to ascertain the meaning of the lights, and so be able to avoid the vessel carrying them. The Fanny M. Carvill, The Peru, 44 L. J., Adm. 34; 32 L. T., N. S. 646; affirming the decision of the court of admiralty, 4 L. R., Adm. 417; 44 L. J., Adm. 1; 32 L. T., N. S. 129.

3. Rev. Int. Rules & Reg., art. 11; The Oder, 21 Blatchf. (U. S.) 26; The Algiers, 21 Fed. Rep. 343; The Sarmatian, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 152; The Frank P. Lee, 30 Fed. Rep. 277; The Essequibo, 13 P. D. 51; The Palinurus, 13 P. D. 14; The Excelsior, 39 Fed. Rep. 393; affirming 33 Fed. Rep. 554. Compare The City of Brooklyn, 1 L. R., Adm. Div. 276; The Kirkland, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 109.

By article 2 of the international regulations for preventing collisions at sea, a sailing vessel is forbidden to display a flare-up light to an approaching vessel, except when she is being overtaken by such vessel, as provided in article 11. The Algiers, 38 Fed. Rep. 526.

4. The Eleanora, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 88. Compare The Chanoury, The Leverington, 28 L. T., N. S. 284.

A schooner failing to exhibit a lighted torch, as required by law, will not, because of the omission, be held chargeable with a collision which in no way resulted from such omission. The C. Whiting, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 566. And the fact that a vessel does not have lights burning after sunset, as required by law, cannot be set up as a defence to a libel for damages by a collision, unless the want of lights contributed to the collision. The Buckeye, 11 Biss. (U. S.) 92.

Burden of Proof.—Where a sailing-vessel fails to show the prescribed torch upon the approach of a steamer, and a collision occurs, which presumably would have been avoided had the torch been shown, the burden of clearly proving concurrent negligence on the part of the steamer is on the sailing vessel. The Roman, 14 Fed. Rep. 61.

What Is Sufficient Light.—Placing a service lantern, ordinarily used to give light in discharging the cargo, she is bound to make use of some conspicuous signal to warn them of her position.¹ Where a steamer, at night, enters a harbor at too great a speed,² or proceeds at full speed on a dark night where there was probability of their being other vessels in the way,³ she is liable in case of collision by overtaking a sailing vessel showing no light or signal, if a lower rate of speed would have given the steamer time to have avoided the collision upon sighting the vessel.

4. Tugs and Tows.⁴—Under rule 4 of the navigation rules, a steam-tug which has no masts and cannot carry a light at her masthead, must carry two bright white lights vertically, of a character to be visible five miles away on a dark night with a clear atmosphere, and so constructed as to show a uniform and unbroken light ahead, and from ten points on one side to ten points on the other of the tug.⁵ Barges under tow need not carry side lights.⁶

5. Vessels Anchored, Moored, etc.—A vessel anchored where others are frequently passing must keep an anchor light burning.⁷ When lying in a fair way the anchor light must be known to be all the time up, and this cannot be with certainty unless a watch be kept on deck to keep it burning, and to be able to say posiover the stern is not a sufficient precaution. The John Fenwick, 3 L. R., Adm. 500; 41 L. J., Adm. 38. See the Patroclus, 13 P. D. 54.

1. The John Fenwick, 3 L. R., Adm. 500.

2. The Earle Spencer, 33 L. T., N. S. 235, affirming 23 W. R. 661; 32 L. T., N. S. 370; 4 L. R., Adm. 431. In this case the exhibition of a stern light was not obligatory on the schooner, and the steamer was alone to blame.

3. The City of Brooklyn, 1 L. R., Adm. Div. 276, affirming 34 L. T., N. S. 932. See The Badger State, 15 Fed. Rep. 346. In this case it is held that a vessel, unless there is apparent danger, is not guilty of negligence in not showing a light to a vessel following her.

4. For the statutory rules, see supra.

5. The Jesse Williamson, Jr., 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 106.

6. The Manhasset, 34 Fed. Rep. 408.

Dumb Barges.—When a collision occurs between a dumb barge without lights and a steamer, on a dark night in the Thames, there is no presumption of law that the steamer is to blame. The Swallow, 36 L. T., N. S. 231.

7. Art. 8, supra; The Oliver, 22 Fed. Rep. 848; The Nurnberg, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 505; The Westfield, 38 Fed. Rep. 366; Lenox v. Winisimmet Co., Sprague (U. S.) 160; The Scioto, Davies (U. S.) 359; The Lizzie Henderson, 20 Fed. Rep. 524; The Mary Morgan, 28 Fed. Rep. 333; The Helen, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 116; Williams v. The Whisper, 37 Fed. Rep. 495; The Omega, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 487; Rogers v. St. Charles, 19 How. (U. S.) 108; The Erastus Corning, 25 Fed. Rep. 572; Cohen v. The Mary T. Wilder, Taney Dec. (U. S.) 567; The Willard Saulsbury, 1 Low. (U. S.) 194; The Saxonia, The Eclipse, 8 Jur., N. S. 315.

By the established principles of maritime law, a vessel at anchor where vessels are constantly passing is in fault unless she shows at night the usual signal light of a vessel at anchor, to wit, a globe lamp, or one without any dark side to it, and hung high enough in the rigging to be seen at a distance. Brig James Gray v. Ship John Fraser, 2 How. (U. S.) 184.

If common prudence requires, a vessel lying in a certain place should hang out a light, it is no excuse that the common practice in the harbor was to neglect so to do. Kelly v. Cunningham, 1 Cal. 365.

A schooner was run down at night while at anchor by a steamer. The barge exhibited an anchor light; and the night was good for seeing lights. Held, that a vigilant lookout on the tively that the light was up, in the event of a collision.¹ But where a boat is moored along side other vessels attached to the shore no light is required, especially if the boat is moored at a place set apart for such boats.² A steamer manœuvring to come to an anchor, in a place and manner such that her regulation steamer would have discovered, in time to have avoided, the barge; but, the latter not having an anchor watch when lying in an exposed place, she was in fault also, and the damages should be divided. The Guyandotte, 39 Fed. Rep. 575. The Achilles, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 463.

In Steamboat Blue Wing v. Buckner, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 246, where a hay boat was laid up near a landing, in a usual place for laying up boats, and had no light, and a steamboat, in passing up the river, ran out of the usual course, and injured the hay boat, it was held that steamboats, in passing landing places where boats were usually laid up, should use such skill and caution as not to run foul of the boats laid up, and for a failure in skill and caution, injuries to the stationary boats, though they had no lights up, will be reduced by the law.

A vessel was elsewhere than she supposed herself to be at the time of a collision; but the error was caused by the absence of any light on a derrick boat with which she collided, and the absence of a light on the pier to which the boat was moored, both of which were required by rule 12. Held, the derrick boat could not escape liability by proving the other vessel to have been out of the usual course of passing vessels. The Alabama, 26 Fed. Rep. 866.

Where a steamboat, descending the Hudson river by night, with several barges in tow, and running at the rate of seven or eight miles an hour, struck a brig lying at anchor and exhibiting a light, though not in the manner required by the statutes of New York, the steamboat is grossly in fault, and liable for all damage done. Steamboat New York v. Rea, 18 How. (U. S.) 223.

Wrecking Vessels.—Where two wrecking vessels are stationed over a wreck they should either exhibit one light, or two, distinctly arranged. The Austin, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 11.

1. The Worthington, 19 Fed. Rep. 836; The Henry Warner, 29 Fed. Rep. 601; Buzzard v. The Petrel, 6 McLean

(U. S.) 491; The Oscar Townsend, 17 Fed. Rep. 43; The Thomas Lea, 35 L. T., N. S. 406; The Fremont, 3 Sawy. 571.

In the Oliver, 22 Fed. Rep. 848, HUGHES, J., said: "I do not know that there is any rule of navigation which requires a vessel at anchor to keep a watch on deck; but, rule or no rule, it is very careless for a vessel lying in deep water, in the course pursued by sailing vessels, not to have a watch on deck. See the Sapphire, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 164, and Buzzard v. The Petrel, 6 McLean (U. S.) 491. Her master, I repeat, must know that his light is up; and how can he know this himself, and how can he prove the fact to the satisfaction of a court, in the event he is struck by another vessel, unless he have a watch on deck to see that it does not go out? He assumes great risk if he neglects this precaution. The Mechanic has failed to prove that her light was up for an hour before and at the time of the collision. Lying, as she was, in a fair way without a light, and presenting, as she lay, low down in the water, at midnight, but a small object to the vision of a vessel approaching her from her rear, she invited collision with no light up. The usual presumption of law, against the moving vessel, in favor of the one at anchor, is therefore reversed in this case, and the Mechanic must be held to have been in fault; for, to hold that a vessel lying where she was, without a light in the rigging or a watch on deck, was not in fault, would be to offer a premium for collision."

Unless a vessel, which is moored in a harbor in the usual track of steamers, keep a watch, and set a light in a dark night, she cannot recover damages for being run into by a steamer, if the latter be not grossly negligent nor intentionally wrong. Innis v. The Steamer Senator, 1 Cal. 459.

2. Culbertson v. Southern Belle, 18 How. (U. S.) 584; L'Hommedieu v. The Mischief, 39 Fed. Rep. 510; Ure v. Coffman, 19 How. (U. S.) 56.

The steam tug Q had taken a tow up Hunter's Point creek, and, having lights cannot be seen by an approaching vessel, is bound to give timely notice of her presence by showing a light or some other sufficient means.¹ The presumption of fault is conclusive against a moving steamer which runs into and damages a vessel lying at anchor in a harbor on proper ground, and showing lights.² The fact that the light of a vessel at anchor is not in conformity to the statutory requirement will not render the vessel liable for her proportion of the damages of a collision, if such defect did not co-operate in causing the collision.³

V. SOUND SIGNALS FOR FOG, ETC.⁴—1. Generally.—Fog signals should landed it in a proper place on the shore, was lying alongside the tow, stern down the creek, and with over 100 feet of clear water outside of her. In the early morning the tug M came up the creek and ran into the Q, doing the damage sued for. The M claimed that the absence of lights on the Q was the cause of the collision. Held, that the Q was not required to have a light, and the M was responsible for the collision. L'Hommedieu v. The Mischief, 39 Fed. Rep. 510.

1. The Philotaxe, 37 L. T., N. S. 540.

2. The Florida, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 488. See The Milwaukee, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 509.

3. The Scottish Bride v. The Anthony Kelly, 1 Pa. L. Gaz. Rep. 289. See Hoffman v. Union Ferry Co., 47 N. Y. 176; Whitehall Transportation Co. v. New Jersey Steamboat Co., 51 N. Y. 369.

If a vessel, lying at anchor in the harbor of New York at night exhibits a sufficient light, though not such as the statutes of New York require, her omission to comply with the statutes will not be a fatal objection to a libel in admiralty, brought by her owners against another vessel for collision. DANIEL, J., dissenting. Steamer New York v. Rea, 18 How. (U. S.) 223.

4. Rules for the High Seas and Coast Waters.—ART. 12. A steamship shall be provided with a steam whistle or other efficient steam sound signals, so placed that the sound may not be intercepted by any obstructions, and with an efficient fog horn, to be sounded by a bellows or other mechanical means, and also with an efficient bell. (In all cases where the regulations require a bell to be used, a drum will be substituted on board Turkish vessels.) A sailing ship shall be provided with a similar fog horn and bell.

In fog, mist, or falling snow, whether by day or night, the signals described in this article shall be used as follows, that is to say:

(a) A steamship under way shall make with her steam whistle or other steam sound signal, at intervals of not more than two minutes, a prolonged blast.

(b) A sailing ship under way shall make with her fog horn, at intervals of not more than two minutes, when on the starboard tack one blast, when on the port tack two blasts in succession, and when with the wind abaft the beam three blasts in succession.

(c) A steamship and a sailing ship, when not under way, shall, at intervals of not more than two minutes, ring the bell.

Speed of Ships to be Moderate in Fog, and So Forth.—ART. 13. Every ship, whether a sailing ship or a steamship, shall, in a fog, mist, or falling snow, go at a moderate speed.

Harbors, Lakes and Inland Waters.—RULE FIFTEEN. Whenever there is a fog, or thick weather, whether by day or night, fog signals shall be used as follows:

(a) Steam vessels under way shall sound a steam whistle placed before the funnel, not less than eight feet from the deck, at intervals of not more than one minute.

(b) Sail vessels under way shall sound a fog horn at intervals of not more than five minutes.

(c) Steam vessels and sail vessels, when not under way, shall sound a bell at intervals of not more than five minutes.

(d) Coal boats, trading boats, produce boats, canal boats, oyster boats, fishing boats, rafts, or other watercraft, navigating any bay, harbor, or river, by hand power, horse power, sail, or by the current of the river, or anchored or be sounded,¹ especially when there is so much fog as to prevent vessels seeing each other for more than a short distance.² And the vessel that fails to give the proper signals will be in fault.³ But error in locating a vessel's exact position by the sound of her whistle in a fog is not necessarily a fault, under the proved aberrations in the course of sound.⁴ It may be laid down as a general rule of conduct that it is necessary to stop and reverse, not indeed, every time that a steamer hears a whistle or fog-horn, in a dense fog, but when in such a fog it is heard on either bow, and approaching, and is in the vicinity; because there must then be a risk of collision.⁵

moored in or near the channel or fair way of any bay, harbor, or river, and not in any port, shall sound a fog horn, or equivalent signal, which shall make a sound equal to a steam whistle, at intervals of not more than two minutes.

It is recommended by the board of supervising inspectors of steam vessels, that, whenever there is a fog by day or night, sailing vessels and every craft propelled by sails upon the ocean, lakes and rivers, when on the starboard tack, shall sound, with intervals of not more than two minutes, one blast of the fog horn; when on the port tack two blasts; when with the wind free or running large, three blasts; and that, when lying to or at anchor, they shall sound the bell with the same intervals.

Fog Horns.—The selection of an instrument to be employed in making the fog signals required by law must in all cases be left to the master or owner of the vessel, it being only necessary that this department shall so far regulate such selection that instruments not effective for the purpose shall be excluded.

Any instrument or device for this purpose, which produces a sound equivalent to that of a steam whistle, will be considered sufficient for the purposes of the law.

Conflicting Rules.—Any directions heretofore given by this department conflicting with the above instructions are hereby revoked.

1. The Porter, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 146; The Exchange, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 168; The Bay State, 1 Abb. Adm. 235.

A sailing vessel is bound to have and use in a fog mechanical means for sounding her fog horn. The Wyanoke, 40 Fed. Rep. 702.

Sailing Vessel Hove To.—A sailing vessel when hove to in a fog, should ring a bell and not blow a horn. The Alfredo, 32 Fed. Rep. 240.

Tug Moving in a Slip.—A steam-tug moving in a slip in a fog, and inside of the ends of the piers, is not required to sound her whistle as a signal to a steamer moving up the river outside of the slip, and which runs into the slip and collides with her. The Shady Side, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 132.

2. The Ludwig Holberg, 36 Fed. Rep. 914; The Porter, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 146; The Monticello, 1 Low. (U. S.) 184.

3. Bradley v. The John Pridgeon, Jr., 38 Fed. Rep. 261; Elliott v. The Stafford, 37 Fed. Rep. 811; The Milwaukee, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 509; The Exchange, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 168; The Porter, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 146. See Sawyer v. Eastern Steamboat Co., 46 Me. 400; The Perkio-men, 27 Fed. Rep. 573.

A tug towing a dredge to Sandy Hook in a fog, with a line some 400 or 600 feet moving across the course of a steamer, was grossly in fault where she neither blew a fog signal as required, nor the signal "three distinct blasts in quick succession repeated at intervals not exceeding one minute," to indicate that she had a tow, as required by Supervising Inspector's Rule 10, subd. 8. Especially is she guilty of fault in giving a signal of two whistles to the outgoing steamer, thus telling her to go astern, without giving the three towing whistles to apprise her of the danger of going astern and going across the line of the tow; and where the dredge in tow held the tug subject to the orders of the master of the dredge, such dredge will also be responsible for the misconduct of the tug, where she had a steam engine with whistles, by which her position in a fog could be indicated, and neglected to use them. The City of Alexandria, 31 Fed. Rep. 427. See The Ludvig v. Holberg, 36 Fed. Rep. 914.

4. The Lepanto, 21 Fed. Rep. 651.

5. The Britannic, 39 Fed. Rep. 395; The Lepanto, 21 Fed. Rep. 651; The

2. Rate of Speed.—As to what is the "moderate speed," required by article 13 of the international rules, for vessels in a fog, mist or falling snow must depend on circumstances.¹ Under ordinary circumstances it is such a rate as will place her headway under Pottsville, 24 Fed. Rep. 655; The Frankland, L. R., 4 P. C. 529; Kirby Hall, L. R., 8 Prob. Div. 71; The Dordogne, L. R., 10 Prob. Div. 6; The John McIntyre, L. R., 9 Prob. Div. 135; The City of Atlanta, 26 Fed. Rep. 456; The Stamford, 27 Fed. Rep. 227; The State of Alabama, 17 Fed. Rep. 847; Morton v. Hutchinson, The Frankland and The Kestrel, 4 L. R., P. C. C. 529; 9 Moore P. C. C., N. S. 365; The Otter, 4 L. R., Adm. 203; 22 W. R. 557.

A steamship, upon hearing the fog signal of an invisible vessel, ought to stop at once, without waiting for her to come in sight. The Anna, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 521.

Two steam ferry boats collided in a fog. The one which had the other on her port hand—held, to be solely in fault, she having kept on, while the other had come to a standstill, each having heard the fog whistles from the other. The D. S. Gregory, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 542.

A large steamship came into collision with a bark. It appeared that the steamer was going too fast through a fog, and that she did not slacken speed after hearing the bark's horn. Held, that the steamer was liable for the collision. The City of New York, 35 Fed. Rep. 604.

1. The James Adger, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 515. See The Leland, 19 Fed. Rep. 771; The Luray, 24 Fed. Rep. 751; The Britannic, 39 Fed. Rep. 395; The Europa, 2 Eng. Law, Eq. Rep. 557; The City of New York, 35 Fed. Rep. 604; The Martello, 34 Fed. Rep. 71; The Milwaukee, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 509; The Colorado, 91 U. S. 692; The City of Alexandria, 31 Fed. Rep. 427, 431; The Pennland, 23 Fed. Rep. 551, 555; The State of Alabama, 17 Fed. Rep. 847, 852; The Pennsylvania, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 125; The Bristol, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 537; McCready v. Goldsmith, 18 How. (U. S.) 89; The Bay State, 1 Abb. Adm. 235; The Shady Side, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 132; The Omega, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 487; McCabe v. Old Dominion S. S. Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 234; Northern Indiana, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 92; The Nacoochee, 28 Fed. Rep. 462; Amoskeag etc. Co. v. The John Adams, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 404; The Wyanoke, 40

Fed. Rep. 702; Dolner v. The Monticello, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 7; The St. John, 29 Fed. Rep. 221.

Five knots per hour in a thick fog is not "moderate speed" required by the new International Rules, art. 13, of a steamer nearing the port of New York, whose full speed is twelve knots. The Martello, 34 Fed. Rep. 71.

In the following cases it was held immoderate speed:

Eight miles an hour in a dense fog and in the usual track of vessels approaching a harbor. The City of Panama, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 63. Ten and one half knots an hour in a dense fog in mid-ocean. The Marathon, 24 Fed. Rep. 653.

Seven knots in a dense fog for an hour and a half, before a collision in a much frequented highway of commerce, although, in fact, the vessel had nearly stopped before striking the other vessel. Leonard v. Whitwill, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 638.

Steaming nine knots an hour on a foggy night in the path of other vessels, no pressing emergency existing. Prescott v. United States, 19 Ct. of Cl. 684.

A steamer moving in a narrow channel against the tide at the rate of five and one-third miles an hour in a dense fog, with her whistle blowing feebly—held, liable for a collision with another steamer moving with the tide at the rate of four and three-fourths miles an hour. The Luray, 24 Fed. Rep. 751.

A speed of five miles an hour, in a fog, with some sea and wind, does not show negligence. Bradley v. The John Pidgeon, Jr., 38 Fed. Rep. 261.

It is faulty navigation for a vessel to continue her course at a speed of over five miles an hour, unnecessarily in the river, in a very dense fog, on a course where other vessels are liable to be encountered. The Raleigh, 31 Fed. Rep. 527.

Seven knots, in a dense fog, at night, is immoderate speed for a steamer whose full speed is only ten or eleven knots. The Wyanoke, 40 Fed. Rep. 702.

Six knots is immoderate speed for a sailing vessel, under nearly full sail in a dense fog at night. The Wyanoke, 40 Fed. Rep. 702.

such easy and ready command that she can be stopped within such distance as other vessels can be seen from her.¹ The rule that there must not be too much speed in a fog has been applied to sailing vessels under various circumstances, depending on the particular facts of the case.² But there is, however, no absolute rule that a vessel must lay to during a fog; her duty in this respect is a question of prudence under the circumstances.³ Excess of speed on a steamer is a question of fact, in determining England.—The rate of speed proper for a steamer must depend on circumstances, but in a thick fog and at a part of the ocean where frequently a great number of vessels is congregated, seven knots an hour is too great. The Pennsylvania, 23 L. T., N. S. 55; The Steamship Westphalia, 24 L. T., N. S. 75; The Magna Charta, 25 L. T., N. S. 512; The Europa, 2 Eng. L. & Eq. 71.

Four to five knots an hour is not a moderate speed for a steamer in a thick fog in the Baltic, twenty-five miles east of Gothland. The Magna Charta, 25 L. T., N. S. 512, Adm.

Full Speed.—A violation of article 13 of the international collision rules, by going full speed in a fog, requires, to excuse it, the existence of a present danger, and a necessity to go at full speed to avoid it; and a belief on the part of the master that a danger may in a certain event arise in the future, to avoid which he gives the full-speed order, is not the excuse permitted by article 23. The Iberia, 40 Fed. Rep. 893.

Falling Snow.—A steamer running at half speed, seven knots, in a snow storm at night, when the lights of approaching vessels are visible one-third or one-half mile distant, within which distance the steamer is able to stop, back, or slacken speed so as to effectually avoid collision, is running at a "moderate speed." The Allianca, 39 Fed. Rep. 476.

1. The D. S. Gregory, 2 Ben. 528; 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 166; McCready v. Goldsmith, 18 How. (U. S.) 89; Abb. Adm. 235; The Leo, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 225; The Colorado, 1 Brown Adm. 406; The Louisiana, 2 Ben. 371; The Western Metropolis, 7 Blatchf. (U. S.) 214; 2 Ben. 399; The Free State, 91 U. S. 200; The Louisiana, 2 Ben. 374; The City of Paris, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 638; The Great Eastern, 11 L. T., N. S. 5; Ward v. Ogdenburgh, 5 McLean (U. S.) 638; The Huntsville, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 228; The Favorite, 4 Ben. (U. S.) 134; 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 530; The Leop- ard, 2 Ware (Dav.) 193; The Syracuse, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 676; The Blackstone, 1 Low. (U. S.) 438; The Batavia, 9 Moore P. C. 287; The City of Paris, Holt. R. R. 15; The Hasna, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 591; The Dispatch, Swa. (U. S.) 138; The Europa, 2 Eng. L. & E. 557; The Lady of the Lake, Holt. R. R. 24, 202; The Rose, 2 W. Rob. 1; The Saxonia, Lush. 410; The Virgil, 2 W. Rob. 201; The Karl, Holt. R. R. 203; The Fanny Buck, idem. 193; The Sylph, 2 Spinks 55; The James Watt, 2 W. Rob. 270; The Ligo, 2 Hagg. Adm. 356; The Boldera, Holt. R. R. 205; Nelson v. Leland, 22 How. (U. S.) 48; The Hermann, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 441; The Northern Indiana, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 92; 16 Law Rep. 433; The Berkenhead, 3 W. Rob. 75; The Empire State, 2 Biss. 216.

She must reduce her speed to a moderate rate or abide the consequences. The Louisiana, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 374; The D. S. Gregory, 166; s. c., 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 166; The Hasna, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 526; The Chancellor, 4 Ben. (U. S.) 153; The Blackstone, 1 Low. (U. S.) 487; The Monticello v. Mollison, 17 How. (U. S.) 152; 1 Low. (U. S.) 184.

It is no excuse for excessive speed that the steamer could not otherwise fulfil a mail contract. Rogers v. The St. Charles, 19 How. (U. S.) 108; The James Adger, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 515; The Northern Indiana, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 92; The Rose, 2 W. Rob. 1; 7 Jur., N. S. 381; The Vivid, Swa. (U. S.) 88.

2. The Chancellor, 4 Ben. (U. S.) 164; The Virgil, 2 W. Rob. 201; The Victoria, 3 W. Rob. 49; The Pepperell, Swa. 12; The Robert and Ann, Holt. R. R. of the R. 55.

3. Hoffman v. Union Ferry Co., 68 N. Y. 385. See The Morning Light, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 550.

A ferry boat is not exempt from the obligation of lying to when circumstances require it. Hoffman v. Union Ferry Co., 68 N. Y. 385.

which, the locality and hour, state of the weather, and all the circumstances, are to be fully considered.¹

3. Vessels Anchored or Moored.—A vessel anchored or moored during a heavy fog or snow storm in a channel where vessels naturally come must give the usual fog signals.²

VI. STEERING AND SAILING RULES³—1. Sailing Vessels—(a) GENERALLY.—The rules set out in the notes which are to be followed when two sailing vessels are approaching one another so as to involve risk of collision are the result of the practical experience and wisdom of navigators. Most of them were in use before any statutory regulations were made and the courts apply them, strictly in all cases of collision, unless where a clear exception is established by the party seeking to excuse himself for a departure. They may have their exceptions in extreme cases, depending upon the special circumstances of the case, and in respect to which no general rule can be laid down or applied. Either vessel may find herself in a position at the time when it would be impossible to conform to them without certain peril to herself, or a collision with the approaching vessel. Under such circumstances, the master must necessarily be thrown upon the resources of his own judgment and skill in extricating his own vessel, as well as the vessel approaching from the impending peril. These cases cannot be anticipated, and, therefore, cannot be provided for by Running on the Ohio River in a fog is not negligence per se. The Joseph W. Gould, 19 Fed. Rep. 785.

1. The Northern Indiana, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 92; The James Adger, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 515; The Florida, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 470; The Europa, 2 Eng. L. & E. 557; The Gazelle, 1 W. Rob. 471; The Iron Duke, 9 Jur. 476; The Virgil, 2 W. Rob. 201; The Bay State, Abb. Adm. 235; s. c., 18 How. (U. S.) 89; The New York v. Rea, 18 How. (U. S.) 223; Rogers v. The St. Charles, 19 How. (U. S.) 108.

A steamer should not go at full speed under steam and sail before the wind while her smoke is blown over her bows so as to obscure her lights, and to prevent her from seeing and from being seen by other ships approaching from an opposite direction. The Rona v. The Ava, 29 L. T., N. S. 781.

2. The Porter, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 146; The Exchange, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 168; Art. 12, § c, p. 289. Compare The Rockaway, 19 Fed. Rep. 449.

3. Rules for the High Seas and Coast Waters.—Sailing Vessels.—ART. 14. When two sailing ships are approaching one another so as to involve risk of collision, one of them shall keep out of the way of the others, as follows, namely:

(a) A ship which is running free shall keep out of the way of a ship which is close-hauled.

(b) A ship which is close-hauled on the port tack shall keep out of the way of a ship which is close-hauled on the starboard tack.

(c) When both are running free, with the wind on different sides, the ship which has the wind on the port side shall keep out of the way of the other.

(d) When both are running free, with the wind on the same side, the ship which is to windward shall keep out of the way of the ship which is to leeward.

(e) A ship which has the wind aft shall keep out of the way of the other ship.

Harbors, Lakes and Inland Waters.—

Rule Sixteen.—If two sail vessels are meeting end on, or nearly end on, so as to involve risk of collision, the helms of both shall be put to port, so that each may pass on the port side of the other.

Rule Seventeen.—When two sail vessels are crossing so as to involve risk of collision, then, if they have the wind on different sides, the vessel with the wind on the port side shall keep out any fixed regulation. They can only be examined, and the management of the vessel approved or condemned, as the case may arise.¹

(b) ONE FREE AND ONE CLOSE-HAULED.—A vessel that has the wind free or sailing before or with the wind must get out of the way of the vessel that is close-hauled or sailing by or against it.²

of the way of the vessel with the wind on the starboard side, except in the case in which the vessel with the wind on the port side is close-hauled, and the other vessel free, in which case the latter vessel shall keep out of the way.

But if they have the wind on the same side, or if one of them has the wind aft, the vessel which is to windward shall keep out of the way of the vessel which is to leeward.

1. See St. John v. Paine, 10 How. (U. S.) 557.

2. ART. 14 (a), p. 293; Sch'r Catherine v. Dickinson, 17 How. (U. S.) 170; St. John v. Paine, 10 How. (U. S.) 557; Dickinson v. The Gore, 1 Newb. Adm. 45; The Blossom, Olc. Adm. 188; The Argus, Olc. Adm. 304; The Emily, Olc. Adm. 132; The North Star, 29 Fed. Rep. 151; The Havilah, 33 Fed. Rep. 875; The Woodrop Sims, 2 Dod. 85; The Chester, 3 Hagg. 318; Sills v. Brown, 9 Carr. & Payne, 601; Jameson v. Dunkeld, 12 Moore 148; Vennal v. Gardiner, 1 Crompt. & Mees. 21; The Leopard, Davies (U. S.) 193; The Rose, 7 Jur. 381; The Ann & Mary, 7 Jur. 999; The Harriet, 1 Rob. 182; The Clement, 2 Curtis (U. S.) 363; The Saxonia, Lush. 410; 15 Moore P. C. C. 262; The Erastus Wiman, 20 Fed. Rep. 245; The Emily, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 236; The Pepita, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 483; The Jeremiah, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 326; The John Stuart, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 445; St. John v. Paine, 10 How. (U. S.) 571, 581; The Leopard, Davis (U. S.) 193; Smyrna Steamboat Co. v. Whilldin, 4 Harr. (Del.) 228; Handayside v. Wilson, 3 C. & P. 528; Sills v. Brown, 9 C. & P. 601; Mackay v. Roberts, 9 Moore, P. C. C. 357; The Chancellor, 14 Moore P. C. C. 202. Compare The Mary Evaline, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 501; affirming 3 Ben. (U. S.) 438.

This is also the common law of the sea. The Theodore H. Rand, 12 App. Cas. 247; The Peckforten Castle, 3 Pro. Div. 11; The Swan, 2 Asp. 133; The Halcyon, 1 Lush. 100; The Joseph Somes, Swa. 185; The Mobile, Swa. 127 and 69; s. c., 10 Mo. P. C. C. 467; The Dumfries, 10 Mo. P. C. C. 461; The Immaganda Sara Ansina, 8 Mo. P. C. C. 85; The Commerce, 3 W. Rob. 287; The Speed, 2 W. Rob. 229; The Harriet, 1 W. Rob. 185; The Alt, 3 Hagg. 321; The Baron Halberg, 3 Hagg. 244; Jameson v. Drinkald, 12 Mo. 148; The Woodrop-Simms, 2 Dods. 83; The Thames, 5 Rob. 345; The Havilah, 33 Fed. Rep. 875; The Ella Warner, 30 Fed. Rep. 203; The North Star, 29 Fed. Rep. 151; The S. Anderson, 27 Fed. Rep. 392; The Maria and Elizabeth, 7 Fed. Rep. 253; Kiak v. The Osseo, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 518; The M. M. Hamilton, 1 Hask. (U. S.) 489; The Richard R. Higgins, 1 Low. (U. S.) 290; Bentley v. Coyne, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 509; Crowel v. Bark Radama, 2 Cliff. (U. S.) 551; The John Stuart, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 444; The Clara M. Porter, 3 Ware (U. S.) 39; The Sch'r Catherine Dickinson, 17 How. (U. S.) 170; Allen v. Mackay, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 219; The Blossom, Olc. Adm. 188; The Sch'r Catharine and Martha, 11 N. Y. Leg. Ob. 225; The Argus, Olc. Adm. 304; The Emily, Olc. Adm. 132; The Rebecca, Blatchf. & H. Adm. 347; Marsh v. Blyth, 1 McCord (S. Car.) L. 360.

Where it appeared that a brig was sailing free and a schooner close-hauled, it was the duty of the brig to keep out of the way, and she was held negligent in not seasonably observing the schooner's lights and taking measures to avoid collision. The Havilah, 33 Fed. Rep. 875.

Close-hauled Defined.—A ship hove to, and making both headway and leeway is close-hauled, within navigation rules. The Ada A. Kennedy, 33 Fed. Rep. 623.

"Close-hauled" (in the Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea, 1879), is not confined to a vessel sailing as close as possible to the wind; it may be applied to a vessel on a wind, although she may be able to luff a point or more without losing steerage way." 1 Maude & P. 599, 600, citing Chadwick v. Dublin Steam Packet Co., 6 E. & B. 771.

Running Free.—In the Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea, 1879, "running free" is probably used as op-

The vessel that is close-hauled has the right of way¹ and should keep her course.² A vessel close-hauled on the wind has a right to rely to the last moment on the ability and care of another meeting her with the wind free, to avoid a collision, and is not responsible for a wrong movement on her part, caused by the negligence of the one running free; but a vessel close-hauled is bound to hold her tack so as not to come round in the way of one free and endeavoring to avoid her.³ If a collision is caused by an unnecessary luff on the part of the vessel close-hauled she will be solely in fault.⁴ Yet a change of course, for the purpose of attempting to escape a collision immediately impending, though the manœuvre may be a mistaken one, is not a fault.⁵

(c) BOTH CLOSE-HAULED.—A ship which is close-hauled on the port tack must keep out of the way of a ship which is close-hauled on the starboard tack and the latter must keep her course.⁶ This part of the rule, that a close-hauled vessel on the port tack, must give way to one sailing by the wind on the starboard tack, close-hauled, is not more imperative than is the further branch of the posed to close-hauled. 1 Maude & P. 599.

Presumption of Fault.—In case of a vessel sailing free and one close-hauled, the former is presumed to be in fault. Carll v. The Erastus Wiman, 20 Fed. Rep. 245.

1. The Abby Ingalls, 12 Fed. Rep. 217; The F. W. Gifford, 7 Biss. (U. S.) 249; New York etc. S. S. Co. v. Rumball, 21 How. (U. S.) 372; Bentley v. Coyne, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 1; 509; The Ontario, 2 Low. (U. S.) 40, affirmed on appeal; Swift v. Brownell, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 467; The Mary Doane, 2 Low. (U. S.) 428.

2. The John Stuart, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 444; The Richard R. Higgins, 1 Low. (U. S.) 290; The Chester, 3 Hagg. Adm. R. 316, 318; The Rose, 2 W. Rob. 1; St. John v. Paine, 10 How. (U. S.) 557, 581; Sch'r Catherine v. Dickinson, 17 How. (U. S.) 170, 176; The Tasmania, 14 P. D. (C. A.) 53.

3. The Argus, Olc. Adm. 304.

4. The Ella Warner, 30 Fed. Rep. 203; The North Star, 29 Fed. Rep. 151.

A close-hauled vessel is justified in luffing so as to bring her, after she has sighted another vessel, as close to the wind as she can get so as to remain under command, and such luffing is not a deviation from her course that will relieve the other vessel, having the wind free, from the duty of getting out of her way. The Marmion, 27 L. T., N. S. 255.

5. The Havilah, 33 Fed. Rep. 875; The City of Paris, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 529;

The Jupiter, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 536, 537; The Fairbanks, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 420; Bentley v. Coyne, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 509; New York etc. S. S. Co. v. Rumball, 21 How. (U. S.) 372.

6. ART. 14 (b), p. 293; The Mina A. Read, 30 Fed. Rep. 205; The Ada A. Kennedy, 33 Fed. Rep. 623; The Eliza S. Potter, 35 Fed. Rep. 220; The F. W. Gifford, 7 Biss. (U. S.) 249.

This rule was the same before any statutory regulations were made. The East Lothian, 1 Lush. 241; The North American, Swa. 358; 12 Mo. P. C. C. 331; The Fortune, 9 Mo. P. C. C. 357; The Jersey Tar, 8 Ir. Jur. 317; The Lady Ann, 15 Jur. 18; s. c., 7 N. of C. 364; The Test, 11 Jur. 998; The Seringapatam, cited in 11 Jur. 998; Swift v. Brownell, Holmes (U. S.) 467; s. c., sub nom. The Ontario; The Helen Mar, 2 Low. (U. S.) 40; The Mary C., 1 Hask. (U. S.) 474; The Cynosure, 7 Law. Rep. 222; The Alexander Wise, 2 W. Rob. 65; The North American, 12 Moore P. C. C. 331; The Constitution, 2 Moore P. C. C., N. S. 453; St. John v. Paine, 10 How. (U. S.) 577, 581; The Jeremiah, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 326; The Summit, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 150.

When a port-tacked vessel has thrown herself into stays and becomes helpless, she ought nevertheless to execute any practicable manœuvre in order to get out of the way of a starboard-tacked vessel. Wilson v. Canada Shipping Co., 2 L. R., App. Cas. 389; s. c., sub nom. The Lake St. Clair v. The Underwriter, 36 L. T., N. S. 155.

same rule, as enforced by the courts, that the latter vessel must keep her course.¹ To relieve a vessel from fault in changing her course when the rule required her to keep it, she must show clearly that it was done after a collision had become inevitable, or, at least, after a courageous and skilful navigator would have thought it so.² This rule will not excuse the vessel on the starboard tack not taking other measures to prevent a collision, if circumstances render them necessary.³ And where two sail vessels, both close-hauled, are sailing upon convergent courses, on the same tack, and the convergence is caused by the ability of the one to lie nearest the wind, the latter must give way.⁴

(d) BOTH FREE.—When two vessels are approaching each other, both having the wind free, the vessel on the larboard tack must give way, and each pass to the right.⁵ The same rule governs vessels sailing on the wind, and approaching each other, when it is doubtful which is to windward; but if the vessel on the larboard tack is so far to windward that, if both persist in their course, the other will strike her on the lee side abaft the beam or near the stern, in that case the vessel on the starboard tack should give way.⁶

(e) INLAND WATERS.—The rule that when sail vessels are meeting end on or nearly end on, so as to involve a risk of collision, it is the duty of each to port the helm, which was formerly followed by vessels on the high seas, now applies only to the internal waters of the United States.⁷ The rule was changed, by the revised rules issued in England under the order in council of August 11th, 1884, and adopted in this country by Stat. 1885, ch. 354, § 1, art. 14; 23 Stat. at L. (U. S.) 441; upon the high seas the burden of acting is now placed upon one vessel only—the vessel considered to be the one best situated to manœuvre.

(1) Application of Rules.—The rule that when two vessels are meeting in opposite directions each one shall port her helm so as to pass the other on the larboard side applies only to cases

1. The F. W. Gifford, 7 Biss. (U. S.) 249, 253.

2. The Richard R. Higgins, 1 Low. (U. S.) 290.

3. The Lady Anne, 1 Eng. L. & Eq. 670.

4. The Clement, Sprague (U. S.) 257.

5. ART. 14 (c), p. 293; St. John v. Paine, 10 How. (U. S.) 581; The Thomas Martin, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 517, 519; French v. The Victoria, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 292.

This rule is subject to modification when one is to the windward of the other, and ahead of or above her in a narrow channel, so that an observance of it might probably produce a collision. The Ann Caroline, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 538.

6. St. John v. Paine, 10 How (U. S.)

577, 581; The Commodore Jones, 25 Fed. Rep. 506.

7. See supra, also the Maggie J. Smith v. Walker, 123 U. S. 349; The Anne Lindsley, 104 U. S. 185; The Dexter, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 69; The Sylvester Hale, 6 Bin. (U. S.) 523; The Nichols, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 656; The Chadwick v. Dublin Steam Packet Co., 38 Eng. L. & Eq. 197.

"End On Defined."—Sailing ships are meeting "end on" when they are approaching each other from opposite directions, or on such parallel lines as to involve risk of collision on account of their proximity, and when the vessels have advanced so near each other that the necessity for precaution begins. The Nichols, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 656; The

where both are sailing vessels or both are steamboats; not to cases where one is a steamboat and the other navigated only by sails.¹

(2) Sailing Vessels Crossing.—If sailing vessels are crossing each other in opposite directions, and there is the least doubt of their going clear, the vessel on the starboard tack should keep her course, and the one on the larboard tack should bear up, or keep away before the wind.² When both vessels are going the same course in a narrow channel, the vessel to the windward is to keep away to avoid collision.³

(3) One Sailing Vessel Overtaking Another.—Where two sailing vessels are going in the same direction, the one behind is responsible, ordinarily, for a collision.⁴ The rule does not apply where the vessel in front changes its course and the vessel behind is so circumstanced as to be unable to do the same.⁵ So a vessel astern of another cannot be held in fault for not complying with the rule which obliges the rear vessel to keep out of the way of the one ahead, when it is so dark that the latter vessel cannot be seen by the former.⁶

2. Steam Vessels⁷—(a) GENERALLY.—The steam vessel violating the rule that, when two steamers are meeting each other on Farnley, 8 Fed. Rep. 629; The Dexter, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 69.

1. Haney v. The Louisiana, Taney Dec. (U. S.) 602.

When two sailing vessels are approaching, the one crippled, and the other in good manageable condition, it is the duty of the latter, if possible, to give way to the former. Thorp v. Hammond, 42 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 314.

2. St. John v. Paine, 10 How. (U. S.) 577, 581.

3. Smyrna etc. Steamboat Co. v. Willdin, 4 Harr. (U. S.) 228.

Crossing Defined.—When two vessels are approaching, one heading N.N.E. $\frac{1}{2}$ E., and the other S. W. $\frac{1}{2}$ W., they are crossing and not meeting. The Henry, The St. Cyran, 12 W. R. 1014. See The Ada, The Sappho, 28 L. T., N. S. 825. See Aurania, 29 Fed. Rep. 98; General Steam Navigation Co. v. Hedley; The Velocity, 39 L. J., Adm. 20.

Vessels converging three points and differing in speed not more than one-half knots are crossing vessels, and the one leaving the other on her starboard was bound to keep out of the way. The Aurania, 29 Fed. Rep. 98.

4. Simpson v. Spreckels, 8 Sawy. (U. S.) 229; The Peter Ritter, 14 Fed. Rep. 173; The Anglo-Indian, 33 L. T., N. S. 233; The Nellie D., 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 245; Aldridge v. Clausen, 42

Hun (N. Y.) 473. See The Leo, 34 Fed. Rep. 140; The Priscilla, 3 L. R., Adm. 125; 23 L. T., N. S. 566.

Where a vessel astern in an open sea and in good weather with a fresh breeze, is sailing faster than the one ahead and pursuing the same general direction, if both are close-hauled, the vessel astern as a general rule is bound to give way or to adopt the necessary precautions to avoid a collision. Whitridge v. Dill, 23 How. (U. S.) 448.

5. The Grace Gridler, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 196.

6. The Morning Light, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 550.

7. Rules for the Sea and Coast—Steam Vessels Meeting.—ART. 15. If two ships under steam are meeting end on, or nearly end on, so as to involve risk of collision, each shall alter her course to starboard, so that each may pass on the port side of the other. This article only applies to cases where ships are meeting end on, or nearly end on, in such a manner as to involve risk of collision, and does not apply to two ships which must, if both keep on their respective courses, pass clear of each other. The only cases to which it does apply are when each of the two ships is end on, or nearly end on, to the other; in other words, to cases in which by day each ship sees the masts of the other in a line, or nearly in a line, with courses directly opposite or on courses so nearly opposite as to involve danger of collision, each shall pass on the port side of the other, will be in fault in case of collision.¹

(b) APPLICATION OF RULES.—The rule that where two vessels are meeting in opposite directions, each one shall port her helm, so as to pass the other on the port side, applies only to cases where both are vessels propelled by steam,² and where they meet on courses parallel to each other.³ It does not apply when two vessels are approaching in opposite directions, yet with berth to exclude the possibility of a collision, each pursuing their onward course, they are not required to port helm, as that would tend to bring about rather than avoid a collision.⁴ Nor does it apply to her own, and by night to cases in which each ship is in such a position as to see both the side lights of the other. It does not apply by day to cases in which a ship sees another ahead crossing her own course, or by night to cases where the red light of one ship is opposed to the red light of the other, or where the green light of one ship is opposed to the green light of the other, or where a red light without a green light, or a green light without a red light, is seen ahead, or where both green and red lights are seen anywhere but ahead.

Two Steamers Crossing.—ART. 16. If two ships under steam are crossing so as to involve risk of collision, the ship which has the other on her starboard side shall keep out of the way of the other.

Steamer in Narrow Channel.—ART. 21. In narrow channels every steamship shall, when it is safe and practicable, keep to that side of the fair way or midchannel which lies on the starboard side of such ship.

Harbors, Lakes and Inland Waters—Steam Vessels Meeting.—RULE EIGHTEEN. If two vessels under steam are meeting end on, or nearly end on, so as to involve risk of collision, the helms of both shall be put to port, so that each may pass on the port side of the other.

Two Steamers Crossing.—RULE NINETEEN. If two vessels under steam are crossing so as to involve risk of collision, the vessel which has the other on her own starboard side shall keep out of the way of the other.

1. The Clifton, 14 Fed. Rep. 586; Ward v. The Ogdensburgh, 5 McLean (C. C.) 622; Wheeler v. The Eastern State, 2 Curtis (U. S.) 141; The Galatea, 92 U. S. 438; The Johnson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 146; The Jesmond T. Earl of Elgin, 4 L. R. P. 1; Niagara, 3 Blatchf.

(U. S.) 37; Washington, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 276; Lockwood v. Lashell, 19 Pa. St. 344; The Johnson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 146; The North Star, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 209; The Nautilus, Ware (U. S.) 529; The Mary Sanford, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 100; The Comet, 9 Blatchf. (U. S.) 323.

Steamboat Defined.—“Steamboat” (as used in the navigation laws). Any vessel propelled by steam, includes propellers. Fitch v. Livingston, 4 Sandf. 492, 506.

2. Haney v. The Louisiana, Taney Dec. (U. S.) 602; The Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Kerr, 33 Md. 331.

The rule applies to the case of a propeller having a barge in tow and meeting a side-wheel steamer. New York etc. Transp. Co. v. Philadelphia etc. Nav. Co., 22 How. (U. S.) 461.

But not to a tug moving slowly against the tide towing a heavy vessel out of the center of a channel left entirely free to the other vessel. The Sampson, 3 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 14.

3. Hunt v. Hoboken Land Imp. Co., 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 161.

4. Ward v. Ogdensburgh, 5 McLean (U. S.) 622; Rogers v. The S. B. Wheeler, 4 Cliff. (U. S.) 189; The Arthur Gordon, The Independence, Lush. 270; 14 Moore P. C. C. 103; The Earl of Elgin, 4 L. R., P. C. 1; The Santa Claus, Olc. Adm. 428.

The rule which requires two steamers approaching each other to port their helms, and so pass on the starboard hand, must be acted on when there is any probable chance of collision by keeping their courses. It is not enough for the party who departs from the rule to show that they would have gone clear if each had kept its course: he must also show the other party ought to have perceived there was no probable chance of collision by so do-where those in charge know of circumstances rendering it unsafe.¹ The obligation of this rule depends partly on the distance between the courses on which they are sailing. They are not precluded from passing on the starboard side if the movement for that purpose is executed in ample season.² So the rules of navigation cannot always be applied literally to vessels backing. A steamer backing is, however, upon stopping her engine to change her course by reversing, in a situation analogous to that of sail vessels tacking when beating in rivers, and is bound to use reasonable despatch in order not to mislead or obstruct other vessels. If, backing out of a slip, and two-thirds of a mile across the river upon a defined course, for the purpose of turning about, she is not entitled to the immunities of a vessel getting under way.³

(c) STEAMERS CROSSING.—If the steamers are crossing or approaching each other by interfering courses, so as to involve risk of collision, the vessel which has the other on the starboard side must keep out of the way.⁴ A steamer has no right to starboard and attempt to cross the bows of another steamer which has the right of way.⁵ Where a steamer has the right of way and another approaches so as to involve a risk of collision, the approaching steamer has no right to attempt to pass to the left, unless there is an imperative necessity for it, if that involves a change of course or speed by the other, until she has obtained the consent

ing. Wheeler v. The Eastern State, 2 Curtis (U. S.) 141.

1. Cooper v. Eastern Transp. Co. 75, N. Y. 116; The Santa Claus, Olc. Adm. 428; Ward v. Ogdensburgh, 5 McLean (U. S.) 622.

2. The James Bowen, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 430.

3. The Servia, 50 Fed. Rep. 502.

4. The Beryl, 9 Pro. Div. 137; The Peckforten Castle, 3 Pro. Div. 11; The Farragut, 35 Fed. Rep. 617; The Baltimore, 34 Fed. Rep. 660; The Britannia, 34 Fed. Rep. 546; The Greenpaint, 31 Fed. Rep. 231; The America, 22 Fed. Rep. 845; The Fanwood, 28, Fed. Rep. 373; The Frisia, 28 Fed. Rep. 249; reversing The Frisia and John N. Parker, 24 Fed. Rep. 495; The Bay Queen, 27 Fed. Rep. 813; The Columbia, 25 Fed. Rep. 844; The State of Texas, 20 Fed. Rep. 254; Studwell v. The E. H. Coffin, 8 Repr. 297; The Cayuga v. Hoboken L. etc. Co., 14 Wall. (U. S.) 270; The Pennsylvania, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 215; The Corsica, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 630; The Chesapeake, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 411; The Helena v. The Lord O'Neil, 26 Fed. Rep. 463; The Hansa, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 299; The John Taylor, 6 Ben. (U. S.) 227; The Peshtigo, 25 Fed. Rep. 488; See the Vancouver, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 381.

Article 14 of the English rules for preventing collisions at sea, which provides that "if two vessels under steam are crossing so as to involve risk of collision, the ship which has the other on her own starboard side shall keep out of the way of the other," is not to be construed so that "keeping out of the way" means in all cases porting; a vessel may, within the meaning of that article, keep out of the way by stopping, or by going ahead, or by starboarding, or by porting, or by going astern, as the circumstances of the case may require. The Nor, 30 L. T., N. S. 576.

Vessel Backing.—Where a vessel is backing, her starboard side becomes the port side, and vice versa, and her port quarter her starboard bow. The Servia, 30 Fed. Rep. 502.

5. The Clarion, 27 Fed. Rep. 128; The Alaska, 33 Fed. Rep. 527. See The Frisia, 24 Fed. Rep. 495; The City of Albany, 34 Fed. Rep. 812; The Admiral, 39 Fed. Rep. 574; The Columbia, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 246; The Farragut, 35 Fed. Rep. 617; The Esk, The Niord, 24 L. T., N. S. 167; The E. A. Packer, 20 Fed. Rep. 327; The Brothers, 30 Fed. Rep. 75; The Wm. H. Payne, 20 Fed. Rep. 650; The America, 37 Fed. Rep. 813; The Cambusdoon, 30 Fed. Rep. 704.

of the other to such movement.¹ Yet where a steamer attempts to pass on the wrong side and a collision occurs, a failure on the part of the steamer to back when the collision could have been thus avoided, both are in fault.²

(d) ONE VESSEL OVERTAKING ANOTHER.—An overtaking steamer must keep out of the way of the one ahead, or she is liable for the collision which follows. Nor is it any excuse that the steamer ahead had not acquired full speed.³ The overtaking

1. The E. H. Coffin, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 421.

2. The Baltimore, 34 Fed. Rep. 660.

3. The Panther v. The Ajax, 3 Pittsb. (Pa.) 328. And see Portevant v. The Bella Donna, Newb. 510; The Ellen, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 107; Holgate v. The Illinois, 6 Rep'r 40; The Venetian, 29 Fed. Rep. 460; The Bay Queen, 27 Fed. Rep. 813; Erwin v. Neversink Steamboat Co., 88 N. Y. 184; Kennedy v. American Steamboat Co., 12 R. I. 23; The Rhode Island, Olc. Admr. 505; The Governor, 1 Abb. Adm. 100, 108; The Helen Hasbrouck, 29 Fed. Rep. 463; The Osceola, 30 Fed. Rep. 383; The Cephalonia, 29 Fed. Rep. 332; The Dentz, 29 Fed. Rep. 525; The Sylvan Grove, 29 Fed. Rep. 336; The City of Brocton, 37 Fed. Rep. 897; The Switzerland, 38 Fed. Rep. 853; The Eider, 37 Fed. Rep. 903; The Hackensack, 32 Fed. Rep. 800; The Helena, 34 Fed. Rep. 425; The Chanoury, The Leverington, 28 L. T., N. S., 284; The Franconia, 35 L. T., N. S., 721; The Narragansett, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 475; The Rhode Island, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 363; The Continental, 31 Fed. Rep. 166.

The steam tug H was going out of the bay of New York toward the Scotland light ship. Overtaking her was the steamboat B. As the B came up with and began to draw ahead of the H, the latter gave a sudden sheer, and went into the side of the steamer. Both vessels were damaged, and cross-libels were filed. It appearing that the H's sheer was caused by the suction from the wheels of the B, held, that the collision was caused by the failure of the B, as the overtaking vessel, to come up alongside of the H at a sufficient distance to pass her in safety. The City of Brocton, 37 Fed. Rep. 897.

A tug going up East River was overtaken by a ferry boat. The tug meeting at the same time the cross currents of the ebb-tide from Jackson street was swung involuntarily by the bows under the guard of the ferry boat's port quarter, through the effect of the cross currents or the suction of the ferry boat, or both combined, and was sunk. Held, that the ferry boat was liable (1) for failure, as the overtaking vessel, to keep out of the way, as required by rule 22; (2) for running too near the tug, in violation of 4 Edm. St. (N. Y.) 60, requiring boats to navigate as near mid-river as possible, and 1 Rev. St. (N. Y.) *684, § 7, requiring a steamer passing another to keep off 20 yards. Standard Oil Co. v. The Garden City, 38 Fed. Rep. 860.

The steamship S was going down the bay of New York at the rate of nine knots an hour. The steamship L, going down at the rate of 16 knots, had overtaken the S and was drawing ahead on her port side, when the vessels came in collision, the bow of the S striking the starboard quarter of the L. Cross libels were filed for the resulting damage, the L contending that the collision was due to carelessness on the part of the wheelsman of the S in allowing her to swing to port as the L was going by; the S claiming that the L attempted to cross her bows under a port helm when the distance between the vessels was too small to permit of such a manoeuvre. On conflicting evidence the court found that the collision was caused by a swing to port on the part of the S which was carrying a port helm in the strong northwest wind, and which would so swing under such circumstances by momentary carelessness on the part of the wheelsman, and that, therefore, the fault for the collision lay with the S in failing to hold her course. The Switzerland, 38 Fed. Rep. 853.

Where libellant's small boat, towed astern of a tug, was run down by a steamboat, the latter was solely responsible for consequences, being the overtaking vessel and bound to keep out of the way, and the tug was not at fault. The Sylvan Grove, 29 Fed. Rep. 336.

steamer is liable for the consequent collision, even though such collision was partly due to a sheer of the steamer ahead.¹ So the burden of proof is on the following boat to show that the collision was not caused by fault on her part.²

(e) DUTIES OF VESSEL AHEAD.—A vessel in advance is not bound to give way, or to give facilities to enable a vessel in her rear to pass her, though she is bound to refrain from any manœuvres calculated to embarrass the latter in attempting to pass.³ But where one vessel evidently attempts to pass ahead of another, although difficult, and the other disregards her attempt, keeps on her course, and thus comes into a collision which she might easily have avoided, both vessels are in fault.⁴ So while the forward one of two vessels pursuing the same course has the right of way, if she is wilfully thrown across the path of the other, she cannot recover for a collision ensuing, though the rear vessel be not without fault.⁵ When it is apparent that their movements are commenced simultaneously, neither can lawfully press ahead of the other in getting under way.⁶

(f) RIVER NAVIGATION—(1) Generally.—The uniform rule of navigation, followed by pilots on rivers, is for the descending boat to keep in the middle of the river where she finds the strongest current and deepest water,⁷ and the ascending boat to hug the

This rule applies until the overtaking vessel has completely passed the other. Kennedy v. American Steamboat Co., 12 R. I. 23. See the Brothers, 30 Fed. Rep. 75.

The leading boat must, however, so use her privilege as not intentionally to thwart or prevent the one in the rear from using her superior speed; but is not bound by law to accommodate her by moving to either side to give her more ample room. The Rhode Island, Olc. Adm. 505.

A vessel of superior speed, running in the same direction with a slower one, has a right to pass her if she can do so with safety to both; but the burden of proof is upon her, in case of collision, to show the prudence of her own conduct, and also to prove negligence or misconduct on the part of her rival. The Governor, 1 Abb. Adm. 100, 108.

One steamboat cannot approach another within a distance of 20 yards, in an attempt to run by. The Rhode Island. Olc. Adm. 505. The Boston, Olc. Adm. 407.

Overtaking Vessel Defined.—A ship is an overtaking and not a crossing vessel, within the meaning of these terms as used in the navigation rules, although there is a difference of three points in the courses of the two vessels.

Aldridge v. Clausen, 42 Hun (N. Y.) 473.

1. The Osceola, 25 Fed. Rep. 559. See C. H. Seuff, 32 Fed. Rep. 237. Compare The Clytie, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 588.

2. The Continental, 31 Fed. Rep. 166.

3. The Governor, Abb. Adm. 100, 108.

4. West Virginia Central etc. R. Co. v. The Isle of Pines, 24, Fed. Rep. 498.

5. The St. Paul, 3 Cin. L. Bul. 821.

6. The Boston, Olc. Adm. 407.

7. The Natchez, 1 Newb. Adm. 489; The Dresden, 1 Newb. Adm. 474. See The Relief, Olc. Adm. 104. See The Hand of Providence, Swa. 107; The Smyrna, 10 Jur., N. S. 977; Smith v. Voss, 2 H. & N. 97; 26 L. J. Exch. 233; The Doris Eckhoff, 32 Fed. Rep. 555; The Bridgeport, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 65; Shirley v. The Richmond, 2 Woods (U. S.) 58; Cutter v. Columbia, 1 Oreg. 101; The Scranton and Wm. F. Burden, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 400; Smyrna etc. Steamboat Co. v. Whilldin, 4 Harr. 228; The Belle, 34 Fed. Rep. 669; Barratt v. Williamson, 4 McLean (U. S.) 589. Compare Moore v. Moss, 14 Ill. 106.

In The Alaska, 33 Fed. Rep. 528, the steamboat Morrisania was going up the East River; she sheered over to the Brooklyn shore in order to pass the shore as close as she can in order to avoid the resistance of the current.¹ A descending boat may hug the shore, yet if she meets an ascending boat, also hugging the same shore, and signalling her intention to keep the shore, the descending boat must give way, and take the middle of the river.² If the ascending boat signals her intention to pass to the left, it is the duty of the descending boat on answering the signal, to shut off steam, and go to the lar-

- Superior, which was ahead, and thereby came in collision with the Alaska, which was properly coming down the river. BENEDICT, J., said: "Upon this issue, the clear weight of evidence is with the Alaska. The sheer charged on the Morrisania is proved by convincing evidence. I entertain no doubt that the Morrisania, when she saw that she could not pass inside of the Superior, owing to the vessels there, determined to pass the Superior on the outside, and to do this sheered sharply under a port helm, whereby she was brought directly in the way of the Alaska, coming down outside of the Superior. Such a sheer, under such circumstances, was a fault, and the fault that caused the collision. I find no fault in the navigation of the Alaska. She was going down the river, where she had the right to go. When the Morrisania sheered out, the Alaska was on a course that would have carried her down outside of the Morrisania at a safe distance. The Morrisania's sheer was seen as soon as it was begun, and the Alaska at once starboarded. By so doing she gave the Morrisania all the chance possible to break her sheer and pass on the New York side of her. This was attempted by the Morrisania, but there was not sufficient time, and a severe collision ensued. It is said that if the pilot of the Alaska had possessed enough presence of mind to port his helm an instant before the collision, he would have swung the Alaska's stern enough to have enabled the Morrisania to pass without touching. Perhaps so; but the failure to adopt a measure of that character at the last moment, in the hope of avoiding a danger brought upon him by the previous fault of the Morrisania, was no fault. The sole cause of the collision was the previous fault on the part of the Morrisania in suddenly sheering out from under the stern of the Superior, and across the course of the Alaska."

Ohio River.—The ascending boat on the Ohio river has a right to choose which side of the river she will take, provided she gives the signal required to notify the descending boat of her choice; but she has no right to insist on the rule when its observance will incur the hazard of a collision. Schenck v. The Fremont, 1 Bond (U. S.) 57.

During high water in the Ohio river a descending boat should keep near the middle of the river without regard to the channel. Keys v. The Ambassador, 1 Bond (U. S.) 227.

1. The Dresden, 1 Newb. Adm. 474.

A propeller, heavily laden, going up the Hudson River in the night, against an ebb tide, is justified by the usages of the river navigation and upon general principles of marine law, in hugging the western bank at or near Dunderbarrack Point, for the advantage of an eddy or slacker tide, supposed to be found there, and other boats passing in the opposite direction are to be presumed cognizant of such usage and opinion, and are bound to take precautions accordingly. The Santa Claus, Olc. Adm. 428.

A steam ferry boat has no right by law or usage to keep close to the shore when ascending the East River, so as to oblige a sailing vessel bound down to change her course to avoid collision. E. C. Scranton, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 50.

2. The Dresden, 1 Newb. Adm. 474. See Thorp v. The Defender, 1 Bond (U. S.) 397.

There is no general obligation upon vessels navigating rivers to keep to the right of the centre of the channel. The Milwaukee, 1 Brown Adm. 313.

In a collision between a steamer ascending and one descending the Mississippi river, the evidence shows that by the usage the ascending boat should keep the right bank; but where she deliberately crossed the river towards the left bank, and a collision occurred near the middle of the river, the descending boat having just rounded out from a wood yard, with a sufficient pilot and watch, the ascending one under full speed, but without sufficient watch, the ascending boat is wholly to blame. Goslee v. Shute, 18 How. (U. S.) 463.

board. The duty of manœuvring devolves upon the ascending boat, but these precautions of checking headway, and starboarding or porting helm, must be observed by the other.¹ When two boats are ascending a river abreast of each other and a collision occurs, if it appears that the one next the shore was as near as was safe, and the other had the whole river, the outer boat will be in fault.² A vessel going with the tide through a narrow, dangerous channel has the right of way; a boat going in the opposite direction is bound to wait until the descending vessel has come through.³ But if it is a light steamer stemming the tide in a dangerous channel, and having her movements under command, it is her duty to slow down on observing a loaded steamer coming with the tide, until the positions and courses are known.⁴ So, reasonable margin should be given by boats passing.⁵ A boat is Where two vessels with tugs alongside were going in opposite directions in the East River, both nearer the New York side than the statute allows, and exchanged contrary signals twice, and both persisted in steering to the westward until their tows collided, both tugs were in fault for persistent steering to the westward. The John H. Dillon, 30 Fed. Rep. 285.

1. The Dresden, 1 Newb. Adm. 474. See The Baltimore, 34 Fed. Rep. 660; The Williamson v. Barrett, 13 How. (U. S.) 101.

A tug going up East River with the tide has no right to expect a schooner coming down the New York side of the middle of the river to change her position so as to enable the tug to pass inside. The Charles R. Stone, 18 Fed. Rep. 190.

There is no rule requiring vessels, passing in a river channel, under all circumstances, to pass each other on the right. Each must take such a course as will be the least likely to injure the other, and the vessel having the greatest facilities for choosing and taking its adopted course, and the greater control over its movements, is called upon to give the preference to the other, and to yield the choice of route. Blanchard v. New Jersey Steamboat Co., 59 N. Y. 292.

2. The Porterant v. The Bella Donna, 1 Newb. Adm. 510.

3. The City of Springfield, 26 Fed. Rep. 158.

A tug with a tow descending a narrow river channel has the right of way; nor is she obliged to notify an ascending steamer which sees her plainly. The Rescue, 24 Fed. Rep. 44.

Pilot rule No. 3 requires an ascending vessel, before entering a narrow channel, to lie by until a descending vessel has passed through. An ascending steamer came to the mouth of a narrow channel. Up the channel one of several barges in tow was aground. The steamer, after waiting and signalling, proceeded up, and, as she neared the barges, one of them broke her cable lashings, and drifted down on the steamer, which reversed her engine and did all in her power to avoid a collision, which resulted in the loss of the barge and her cargo. Held, that the steamer was not in fault. The Cherokee, 15 Fed. Rep. 119.

A steamboat, the P, following another steamboat on a flood tide, overtook her near the upper end of Blackwell's Island. Several tows were met, the P crossed to the South channel as the other steamboat was passing down the channel towards the end of the island, and, in crossing her bows, came into collision. Held, that the P was in fault, being the following vessel, for not stopping when she could easily do so, to allow the other vessel to get ahead enough for the P to pass under her stern in safety. The Providence, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 188.

4. The Sots Greys v. The Santiago de Cuba, 19 Fed. Rep. 213.

5. The Anne E. Valentine, 22 Fed. Rep. 620; The Rosedale, 22 Fed. Rep. 737; The Active, 22 Fed. Rep. 175; The Abbotsford, 98 U. S. 440; Scott v. The Drew and The Camelia, 38 Fed. Rep. 858.

Vessels of moderate size, moving at moderate speed, upon direct lines, in the daytime and in clear weather, in not at liberty to cast herself upon another boat, merely because the latter may be out of her proper course, and in that of the former. Both are bound to use ordinary diligence to avoid a collision, and if a collision happens from the want of a proper degree of diligence on the part of either, the owner may be held answerable for the consequences.¹

(2) Vessel Following.—A vessel following another vessel on flood tide should keep at a sufficient distance to be able to avoid the leading vessel in case she makes a stop.²

(3) Rivers Crowded with Boats.—Long experience has demonstrated the importance, to the protection of vessels navigating up and down rivers crowded with boats, to hold to the center of them, as nearly as may be, and it is culpable conduct to move a steam tug from place to place, by running her along near the ends of the piers.³

(4) Boats Crossing River.—The rule, both of statute and the general law of navigation, which requires steamboats approaching one another to turn to the right, applies to steamboats crossing a river.⁴ A ferry boat running across a river, and compelled to make so many trips an hour, is not exempted from the duty of ordinary care to avoid other craft. She has a right to her usual path, but this right is not to be enjoyed at all times without the harbor of New York, are not guilty of culpable navigation by shaping their courses so as to pass 100 feet from each other. The St. Johns, 34 Fed. Rep. 753.

1. Moore v. Moss, 14 Ill. 106; Ward v. Armstrong, 14 Ill. 283.

A steamboat is not necessarily liable for sinking a flat boat by being out of the usual channel. There must be some negligence on the part of the officers of the steamboat to render her liable. The Steamboat Western Belle v. Wagner, 11 Mo. 30.

A steamer, used as a ferry boat, and in the act of transporting passengers in the harbor of Boston, in violation of law, came, by accident, in collision with a vessel which was in the lawful use of the waters of the harbor. Held, that the steamer was liable for the damage done by such collision. The Maverick, Sprague (U. S.) 23.

2. The Hackensack, 32 Fed. Rep. 800.

3. The Relief, Olc. Adm. 104; The Maryland, 19 Fed. Rep. 551; The Doris Eckhoff, 32 Fed. Rep. 555; The Hattie M. Spraker, 29 Fed. Rep. 457; The Wings of the Morning, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 15; The Columbia, 29 Fed. Rep. 716; The American Eagle, 29 Fed. Rep. 302; The Greenpoint, 31 Fed. Rep. 231; The C. F. Starin, 10 Ben.

(U. S.) 404; Culberg v. The Continental, 3 Woods (U. S.) 32.

A ferry boat and a tug came into collision in the North River. The tug kept too near the mouth of the slip and held her course and speed too long, while the ferry boat disregarded the approach of the tug. Held, a case for a division of damages. The Susquehanna, 35 Fed. Rep. 325.

A large steamship and a ferry boat came into collision in the East River. The steamship instead of being near the middle of the river, as she should have been, was near the wharves. She failed to reverse when the collision was imminent. The ferry boat, on the other hand, failed to keep a sufficient lookout. Held, that both were in fault, and that the damages should be divided. The Monticello, 15 Fed. Rep. 474.

A tug towing, and moving out of a pier at ebb tide, without first giving an alarm and continuing it until a passing tug is clear of the pier, whereby a collision occurs, is not exonerated from liability by the fact that the other tug was passing too near the pier. The Edmund Levy, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 144.

4. Hunt v. Hoboken Land Improvement Co., 3 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 144; The Greenpoint, 31 Fed. Rep. 231.

regard to those which may be passing.¹ A steamer coming up, though more powerful than the ferry-boat, is not on that account bound to steer clear of her.² And a ferry-boat plying across a river is bound to remain in her slip, notwithstanding her appointed time of departure has arrived, if any vessel is seen or is in a position to be seen from on board her, with which she will be in danger of coming in collision if she goes out.³ So the only duties of a tug in the river towards a steamer coming out from her slip, having the tug on her starboard side are, first, to keep her course, and, second, to do what she can to avoid collision when the danger becomes apparent.⁴ It is the duty, however, of vessels to keep away, when they can, from the known path of ferry boats, close to the slips.⁵ Old and weak boats have no right to expose themselves along the slips and wharves, to the danger of ordinary contact with other boats, without giving notice of their weakness.⁶ A steamboat should not be backed into a slip crowded with ships without getting a line out to steady her.⁷ And if a steamer at a pier in a slip is so situated that she cannot haul out under her own power, even with the exercise of due care, without swinging outside in the open water, through which she undertakes to manœuvre, she is liable for a collision resulting from the swinging of her stern outside of her own berth.⁸

(5) Steamboats and Barges.—Steamers must keep out of the way of barges and flat-boats floating down the river guided by oars.⁹ In the case of collision the presumptions as to negligence

1. The United States, 1 Newb. Adm. 497; The Nereus, 23 Fed. Rep. 448.

Compare The Chesapeake, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 411.

Ferry boats have no prior navigation rights over other boats. The Manhas-set, 34 Fed. Rep. 408.

A tug with tow alongside, starting down North River against a flood tide, attempted to go between a ferry slip and a ferry boat which was heading up and about to enter the slip diagonally, each vessel on the other's starboard hand, and, the ferry boat failing to stop, they collided. Held, that both were in fault. The John S. Darcy, 29 Fed. Rep. 644. Compare The Columbia, 29 Fed. Rep. 716.

2. The United States, 1 Newb. Adm. 497.

In The Relief, Olc. Adm. 104, it was held that a steamer coming upon or crossing the tracks of ferry boats plying upon the East River, between New York and Brooklyn, is bound to special watchfulness not to interfere with their course, or impede their passages.

3. The Columbus, 1 Abb. Adm. 384. See The Susquehanna, 35 Fed. Rep.

325; The Hudson City, 38 Fed. Rep. 446.

A ferry boat must not cross a steamer's path when the steamer is abreast of her slip and hampered by the presence of other vessels. If the ferry boat starts out of her slip when her bow is astern of the steamer and afterward crosses the steamer's bows, she will be considered as a following and not a crossing vessel. The Venetian, 29 Fed. Rep. 460.

4. The Greenpoint, 31 Fed. Rep. 231.

5. The John S. Darcy, 29 Fed. Rep. 644.

A steamer coming down East River on ebb tide must avoid a ferry boat crossing the river, and the ferry boat must keep her course. The Pequot, 30 Fed. Rep. 839.

6. The N. B. Starbuck, 29 Fed. Rep. 797.

7. Phoenix, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 273.

8. Downes v. The Excelsior, 40 Fed. Rep. 271.

9. Bigley v. Williams, 80 Pa. St. 107; The Owen Wallis, 30 L. T., N. S. 41; 22 W. R. 695.

are in favor of the flat-boat and against the steamboat.¹

(g) SIGNALS.²—Vessels approaching each other should give the proper signals, so that each will understand the course of the other.³ So when a vessel agrees by signal to take a certain course and deviates without reasonable necessity, she is liable for a collision caused thereby.⁴ A vessel that overtakes another without giving the signals required by the international rules will be in fault for the consequent collision occasioned by the sheering of the leading vessel.⁵

Where a flat boat, descending the river Mississippi, in broad daylight, in a place where the river was nearly a mile wide, was driven by the force of an eddy against a steamboat, also descending the river, the steamboat was held responsible. Fretz v. Bull, 12 How. (U. S.) 466.

Where a steamer collided with a flat boat by attempting to land where the latter was moored, it being proved that the latter was in her right place under the local regulations, the former was held liable for the damage. The Southern Belle, 1 Newb. Adm. 461.

1. Seamen v. The Crescent City, 1 Bond (U. S.) 105.

2. Rules for the Sea and Coast.—Signals of Steamers Showing Course.—ART. 19. In taking any course authorized or required by these regulations, a steamship under way may indicate that course to any other ship which she has in sight by the following signals on her steam whistle, namely:

One short blast to mean "I am directing my course to starboard."

Two short blasts to mean "I am directing my course to port."

Three short blasts to mean "I am going full speed astern."

The use of these signals is optional, but if they are used the course of the ship must be in accordance with the signal made.

Distress Signals.—ART. 27. When a ship is in distress and requires assistance from other ships or from the shore, the following shall be the signals to be used or displayed by her, either together or separately, that is to say:

In the daytime—

First. A gun fired at intervals of about a minute.

Second. The international code signal of distress indicated by N. C.

Third. The distant signal, consisting of a square flag, having either above or below it a ball, or anything resembling a ball.

At night—

First. A gun fired at intervals of about a minute.

Second. Flames on the ship (as from a burning tar barrel, oil barrel, and so forth).

Third. Rockets or shells, throwing stars of any color or description, fired one at a time, at short intervals.

3. The Racilia, 25 Fed. Rep. 111; The Wesley A. Grove, 27 Fed. Rep. 311; The Farragut, 35 Fed. Rep. 617; The Michael Davitt, 28 Fed. Rep. 886; The Manitoba, 122 U. S. 97; The Doris Eckhoff, 32 Fed. Rep. 555.

Signals by Bells.—As a matter of law, no signals by bells are a proper precaution for avoiding steamboat collisions, without regard to custom or usage. Rogers v. McCune, 19 Mo. 557.

4. The St. Johns, 29 Fed. Rep. 221; The William H. Vanderbilt, 37 Fed. Rep. 116; The Quickstep, 2 Bis. (U. S.) 291; The City of Albany, 34 Fed. Rep. 812; The Sammie, 37 Fed. Rep. 906; The Minnie R. Childs, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 200.

Thus a vessel that agrees by signal to pass ahead of another vessel implies that the overtaking one will fulfil her statutory duty of keeping out of the way. The Dentz, 29 Fed. Rep. 525; The St. Johns, 34 Fed. Rep. 763; The Armitage, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 108; The William H. Vanderbilt, 37 Fed. Rep. 116.

A vessel running a course parallel with a steamboat, signals her intention to cross the course of the latter, and, while attempting to do so, stops and backs immediately before a collision takes place, she must take the hazard of such departure from the ordinary rules of navigation, and, to escape liability, must show clearly an allegation that the steamboat disregarded her signals, and imperiled her own safety by continuing her former course at a negligent rate of speed. The Gratitude, 14 Fed. Rep. 479.

5. The Osceola, 30 Fed. Rep. 33.

Nothing appearing to the contrary, a signal made and assented to without any signal of misunderstanding, will be presumed to have been made within the proper distance.¹ Where a change of course is indicated by whistle she must make her course correspond with such whistles.² And where there is an exchange of signals between two vessels, one of which is astern of the other, that the overtaking vessel may pass the other, the overtaken vessel must keep her course so far as she consistently can; and she has a right to keep in mid-channel so long as there is sufficient room for the other vessel to pass her on the side agreed upon.³ So the signal of the second steam vessel, going more rapidly than the first in the same direction, and intending to pass, must be repeated if not responded to, and the possibility of collision avoided, if necessary, by slackening speed and changing course.⁴ A vessel should keep her course,⁵ or wait to see whether her signal indicated by whistle is understood.⁶ This is especially necessary where one of the vessels desires to pass the other in a different manner from what the rules of navigation prescribe, and signals the other steamer to that effect. The steamer thus desiring to pass in the unusual manner, has no right to change her course until it is certain that she had made the other steamer hear and understand her signals.⁷ The steamer which undertakes to reverse the statutory rule and pass starboard to starboard, assumes the risk

1. The Charles Morgan, 115 U. S. 69.

Two large steamers, one going out of East River and the other coming in, came into collision. Each saw the other in season, and proper signals were made. The outgoing steamer afterwards stopped unnecessarily without signalling her change of intention, and then lay still, and did nothing after the danger became imminent. The other steamer, in coming in, did not keep far enough to the westward. Held, that each was chargeable. The Britannia, 34 Fed. Rep. 546.

Where two steamboats going in the same direction both fail to comply with each other's signals upon the desire of one to pass the other, they are equally liable for damages from collision. The Captain Miller, 33 Fed. Rep. 585.

2. The Standard, 23 Fed. Rep. 207; The Captain Miller, 33 Fed. Rep. 585.

3. The Deutz, 29 Fed. Rep. 525.

A steamer, having the right of way, that seasonably indicates to another by her own original signal of two whistles that the latter shall go ahead of her, takes on herself the duty to go astern of the other, and is bound to give way or stop in time to prevent collision, and is solely responsible if the other keeps on as agreed, and could not, by stopping or backing, avoid collision when the danger first appeared. The Susquehanna, 35 Fed. Rep. 325.

4. Erwin v. Neversink Steamboat Co., 23 Hun. (N. Y.) 573; The Pegasus, 15 Fed. Rep. 921; Greenwood v. The William Fletcher and The Grapeshot, 38 Fed. Rep. 156.

5. The B. C. Terry, 30 Fed. Rep. 711.

6. Conover v. The City of Chester, 24 Fed. Rep. 91; The Hudson, 14 Fed. Rep. 489; The John H. Dillon, 30 Fed. Rep. 285; Kiernan v. The Leonard Richards, 38 Fed. Rep. 767. Compare The E. H. Coffin, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 20.

7. The Johnson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 146. See The Rockaway, 38 Fed. Rep. 856.

Where tugs are approaching on converging lines, and one gives the signal to pass to the left, to which the other answers that she means to pass to the right, and the first repeats her signal, the first has not the right to presume from a failure to answer her second signal that the other has yielded her course, but should proceed cautiously and not run across the lines of the other. She must take notice of the fact that there is danger of a collision, even though the other tug may be in the

of any misunderstanding of signals properly given by the other steamer.¹ And an assenting signal by the boat having the right of way is merely an announcement to the other, that her intention is known. It gives her no immunity from the responsibility cast upon her by law, and constitutes no fault in the event of subsequent collision.² One steamboat cannot evade all responsibility for the collision by merely showing that the other did not respect her signal as the laws require; she must also show that she herself, in prudence, afterwards endeavored to avoid the peril by backing.³

3. Steam and Sail Vessels⁴—(a) GENERALLY.—Steamers must wrong place and on the wrong course. The Louis Dole, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 172.

An ascending steamer, not seeing or understanding a signal of a descending one must wait until the two come to a complete understanding as to the course. If the ascending one fails to return the other's signal, and chooses to make a cross-signal, the other's acceptance thereof does not excuse the pilot's original fault. United States v. Keller, 19 Fed. Rep. 633.

1. The Frostburg, 25 Fed. Rep. 451.

2. The Admiral, 39 Fed. Rep. 574; The Greenpoint, 31 Fed. Rep. 231.

3. The Mary Ida, 20 Fed. Rep. 741.

4. Rules for the High Seas and Coast Waters.—Steamships to Keep Out of Way of Sailing Vessel.—ART. 17. If two ships, one of which is a sailing ship and the other a steamship, are proceeding in such directions as to involve risk of collision, the steamship shall keep out of the way of the sailing ship.

Steam Vessel Approaching Another Vessel.—ART. 18. Every steamship, when approaching another ship so as to involve risk of collision, shall slacken her speed, or stop and reverse, if necessary.

Vessels Overtaking Another.—ART. 20. Notwithstanding anything contained in any preceding article, every ship, whether a sailing ship or a steamship, overtaking any other shall keep out of the way of the overtaken ship.

Right of Way.—ART. 22. Where, by the above rules, one of two ships is to keep out of the way, the other shall keep her course.

Special Circumstances and Dangers.—ART. 23. In obeying and construing these rules due regard shall be had to all dangers of navigation, and to any special circumstances which may render a departure from the above rules necessary in order to avoid immediate danger.

No Ship, Under any Circumstances, to Neglect Proper Precautions.—ART. 24. Nothing in these rules shall exonerate any ship, or the owner, or master, or crew thereof, from the consequences of any neglect to carry lights or signals, or of any neglect to keep a proper lookout, or of the neglect of any precaution which may be required by the ordinary practice of seamen or by the special circumstances of the case.

Reservation of Rules for Harbor and Inland Navigation.—ART. 25. Nothing in these rules shall interfere with the operation of a special rule, duly made by local authority, relative to the navigation of any harbor, river, or inland navigation.

Harbors, Lakes and Inland Waters.—Sail and Steam Vessels Meeting.—RULE TWENTY. If two vessels, one of which is a sail vessel and the other a steam vessel, are proceeding in such directions as to involve risk of collision, the steam vessel shall keep out of the way of the sail vessel.

Steam-vessel Approaching Another Vessel, or in a Fog.—RULE TWENTY-ONE. Every steam vessel, when approaching another vessel, so as to involve risk of collision, shall slacken her speed, or, if necessary, stop and reverse; and every steam vessel shall, when in a fog, go at a moderate speed.

Vessel Overtaking Another.—RULE TWENTY-TWO. Every vessel overtaking any other vessel shall keep out of the way of the last mentioned vessel.

Right of Way.—RULE TWENTY-THREE. Where, by rules seventeen, nineteen, twenty, and twenty-two, one of two vessels shall keep out of the way; the other shall keep her course, subject to the qualifications of rule twenty-four.

keep out of the way of sailing vessels,¹ and must, to avoid

Special Instructions.—RULE TWENTY-FOUR. In construing and obeying these rules, due regard must be had to all dangers of navigation, and to any special circumstances which may exist in any particular case rendering a departure from them necessary in order to avoid immediate danger.

1. The Adriatic, 107 U. S. 512; The Luna, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 567; The Cynthia, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 411; The Raritan, 32 Fed. Rep. 847; The City of Springfield, 29 Fed. Rep. 923; The Prince Edward, 4 Woods (C. C.) 17; The City of New Bedford, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 17; The Ancon, 6 Sawy. (U. S.) 118; The Columbia, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 254; The Maggie S. Hart, 38 Fed. Rep. 765; Thrush v. United States, 14 Ct. of Cl. 435; Ayer v. The Glaucus, 4 Cliff. (U. S.) 166; The Java, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 524; The Benefactor, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 254; The Gerard Stuyvesant, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 183; The Pennland, 23 Fed. Rep. 551; The George Murray, 22 Fed. Rep. 117; Martello, 39 Fed. Rep. 505; The St. Johns, 34 Fed. Rep. 814; The Manhansett, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 104; McCabe v. Old Dominion S. S. Co., 31 Fed. 234; The I. Harris, 29 Fed. Rep. 926; St'r Oregon v. Rocca, 18 How. (U. S.) 570; Crockett v. Isaac Newton, 18 How. (U. S.) 581; The Beta, 40 Fed. Rep. 899; Fashion v. Ward, 6 McLean (U. S.) 152; Ward v. The M. Dousman, 6 McLean (U. S.) 231; New York etc. Steamship Co. v. Calderwood, 19 How. (U. S.) 241; The Washington Irving, 1 Abb. Adm. 336; The Cornelius C. Vanderbilt, 1 Abb. Adm. 361; The Pearl, 1 Newb. Adm. 129; The M. Dousman, 1 Newb. Adm. 326; Haight v. Bird, 26 Fed. Rep. 539; Mershon v. The Ramapo, 35 Fed. Rep. 612; The Carolus, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 69; Chadwick v. City of Dublin Steam Packet Co., 6 El. & Bl. 771; The Great Eastern, 3 Moore P. C. C., N. S. 31; The Warrior, 3 L. R., Adm. 553; 21 W. R. 82; The Norma, 35 L. T., N. S. 418; The Saratoga, 37 Fed. Rep. 119; The Lady Jocelyn, 12 Jur., N. S. 965; The Una v. The Thomas Lea, 14 L. T., N. S. 834; The Fruiter v. The Fingal, 13 L. T., N. S. 611; The Carroll, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 302; The City of Truro, 35 Fed. Rep. 317; The Laura V. Rose, 28 Fed. Rep. 104; The Thomas P. Way, 22 Fed. Rep. 739; The Illinois, 103 U. S. 298; The Prop. Badger State, 8 Fed. Rep. 526; Crockett v. The Kentucky, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 325; The Carroll, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 286; The Germania, 21 L. T., N. S. 44; The Herbert Manton, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 37; 5 Ben. (U. S.) 469; The Fairbanks, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 420; The Kentucky, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 325; Peck v. Sanderson, 17 How. (U. S.) 178; The Northern Indiana, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 92; Fretz v. Bull, 12 How. (U. S.) 466; The Genesee Chief v. Fitzhugh, 12 How. (U. S.) 443; Newton v. Stebbins, 10 How. (U. S.) 586; St. John v. Paine, 10 How. (U. S.) 557. See The New Orleans, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 101; The Palatine, 27 L. T., N. S. 631; The Tweedsdale, 14 Prob. D. V. 164; The Arthur Gordon, The Independence, Lush. 270; 14 Moore P. C. C. 103; Haney v. The Louisiana, Taney Dec. (U. S.) 602; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Kerr, 33 Md. 331; The Free State, 91 U. S. 200; Wakefield v. The Governor, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 93; The Island City, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 264; The Empire State, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 57; Osprey, Sprague (U. S.) 245; R. B. Forbes, Sprague (U. S.) 328; The Howard Carroll, 41 Fed. Rep. 159.

Steam vessels are regarded in the light of vessels navigating with a fair wind; and they are always under obligations to do not only whatever a sailing vessel going free, or with a fair wind, would be required to do under similar circumstances, but even greater care is required of them, from their being more under the command of the master. Therefore, in the case of a steamer meeting a sailing vessel, whether close-hauled or with the wind free, the latter has a right to keep her course, and the steamer must adopt proper precautions to avoid her. St. John v. Payne, 10 How. (U. S.) 557, 581; Lockwood v. Lashell, 19 Pa. St. 344; The Leopard, 2 Ware (U. S.) 193; Smyrna Steamboat Co. v. Whilldin, 4 Harr. (Del.) 228; Fashion v. Ward, 6 McLean (U. S.) 152; Newb. Adm. 8; Dickinson v. The Gore, Newb. Adm. 45; The New Jersey, Olc. Adm. 415; The Neptune, Olc. Adm. 483; Sanderson v. The Columbus, 4 Pa. Law J. Rep. 493; Lyle v. The Conestoga, 5 Pa. Law J. Rep. 95; Washington Irving Abb. Adm. 336.

A collision occurred between a steamship and a schooner on the ocean when the weather was clear. The latter, having seen the steamship when six or seven miles away, kept steadily on her course. The steamship saw the schooner when three miles off, and from that time until a collision between them occurred, both vessels were sailing on courses which crossed each other, so as to involve the risk of collision. Held, that it was the duty of the steamship to keep out of the way of the schooner, and, the latter having held to her course, the former was liable. The Benefactor, 102 U. S. 214.

liability, keep away by a reasonably safe margin.¹ The sailing

A steamer was sighted by a sailing vessel at a sufficient distance to have avoided a collision. The steamer took no steps until the vessels were very near to each other, when she starboarded her helm, and the sailing vessel ported her helm to avoid a collision, which, notwithstanding, took place. Held, that the steamer was alone to blame, as it was the duty of a steamer to keep out of the way of the sailing vessel, provided she could do it, either by starboarding or porting her helm, and that, on the other hand, it was the duty of the sailing vessel to keep her course, and that she could only be excused from deviating from it by showing that it was necessary to do so in order to avoid immediate danger. The Velasquez, 4 Moore P. C. C., N. S. 426; 1 L. R., P. C. 494.

Where a schooner and a steamer each saw the other at a distance of a mile or a mile and a half, but the schooner was navigated in an unseamanlike manner, and instead of holding her course, changed it once or twice, and brought about a collision by which she was sunk, while the steamer, while she saw the unskilful and dangerous way in which the schooner was being navigated, did not use due and timely caution, nor proper measures to prevent the impending danger, it was held that both vessels were in fault. Boggs v. Parr, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 504.

The fact that a steamer has barges in tow does not alter the rule that she should keep out of the way of an approaching sailing vessel. Favorite, 10 Biss. (U. S.) 536.

Beating Against the Wind.—A steamer must keep out of the way of a sailing vessel beating against the wind when there is nothing to prevent. The Renovator, 30 Fed. Rep. 194.

Sailing on the Wind.—Where a steamer has shaped her course to keep out of the way of a sailing vessel on the wind, the latter is bound to beat out her tack. The A. W. Thompson, 39 Fed. Rep. 115.

Application of the Rule.—U. S. Rev. St., § 4233, Rules 20 and 23, requiring steam vessels to keep out of the way of sail vessels, apply strictly to the open sea; in case of a channel as narrow as the Bolivar in Galveston harbor the attendant circumstances govern. The I. C. Harris, 29 Fed. Rep. 926.

A steamer proceeding up a narrow channel of a river at a rate of eight or ten knots an hour should slacken speed upon meeting a fleet of sailing vessels. Newton v. Stebbins, 10 How. (U. S.) 586.

Exceptions.—In The Buffalo, 1 Newb. Adm. 115, it was held that the only exception to the rule that a steamer must give way to a sail vessel, is where the steamer could by no diligence have discovered the other in season to avoid her. Hall v. The Buffalo, 1 Newb. Adm. 115.

1. The Laura V. Rose, 28 Fed. Rep. 104; The Alaska, 33 Fed. Rep. 107; Wells v. Armstrong, 29 Fed. Rep. 216; The Farnley, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 298; The William Young, Olc. Adm. 38.

Where a large and swift steamer, without sufficient cause, attempts to pass dangerously near to a sailing vessel, one of the risks she takes is that the man at the helm of the sailing vessel shall not lose his presence of mind, or form a different estimate from that of the steamboat pilot as to the danger of collision. The Columbia, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 254.

If a steamboat approach so near a sailing vessel, without any fault on her part as to create a reasonable apprehension that a change in the course is necessary to save the vessel or the lives of the crew, and an error of the moment, committed by the helmsman or lookout, brings on the disaster he meant to avoid, his error will not be imputed to his vessel as a fault. Haney v. The Louisiana, Taney Dec. (U. S.) 602; The Carroll, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 302.

This rule does not apply, however, where the dangerous contiguity of the vessels is occasioned by incompetency or mismanagement of those in charge of the schooner. Haney v. The Louisiana, Taney 602.

vessel should keep on its course.¹ And a steamer may presume that a sailing vessel will hold its course.² These rules are obligatory upon vessels approaching each other, from the time the necessity for precaution begins, and continue to be applicable as the vessels advance, so long as the means and opportunity to avoid the danger remain.³ They do not apply to a vessel required to keep her course after the approach is so near that the collision is inevitable,⁴ and are equally inapplicable to vessels of

1. The Cornelius C. Vanderbilt, 1 Abb. Adm. 361; The Illinois, 103 U. S. 298; McAvoy v. Mignon, 35 Fed. Rep. 319; The St. Johns, 34 Fed. Rep. 814; The Laura V. Rose, 28 Fed. Rep. 104; The Plymouth, 26 Fed. Rep. 879; The Clara Davidson v. The Virginia, 24 Fed. Rep. 763; The Illinois, 103 U. S. 298; The Herbert Manton, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 37; 5 Ben. (U. S.) 469; The Sunnyside, 91 U. S. 208; The Free State, 91 U. S. 200; The Fairbanks, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 420; The Potomac, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 590; The Kentucky, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 325; The Revenue, 41 Fed. Rep. 445; The Bermuda, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 693; Peck v. Sanderson, 17 How. (U. S.) 178; The Northern Indiana, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 92; The William Young, Olc. Adm. 38; The Free State, 91 U. S. 200; Baker v. City of New York, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 75; Wakefield v. The Governor, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 93; Mellon v. Smith, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 462; The St. John v. Paine, 10 How. (U. S.) 557; The Allianza, 39 Fed. Rep. 476; The R. B. Forbes, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 328; Aff'd, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 331; Haney v. The Louisiana, Taney Dec. (U. S.) 602; Hall v. The Buffalo, Newb. Adm. 115; The Osprey, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 245; The Charles Morgan, 6 Fed. Rep. 913.

A schooner and a steamer came into collision. The schooner without apparent necessity, had changed her course from starboard to port and then back again. Negligence on the part of the steamer did not appear. Held, that the schooner alone was liable. The St. Johns, 34 Fed. Rep. 812.

A steamer shaped her course too near a schooner, and the schooner suddenly changed her course, and a collision resulted. Held, a case for the division of damages. The Laura V. Rose, 28 Fed. Rep. 104.

2. The Harrisburg, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 499; The Kanawha, 28 Fed. Rep. 329; The Free State, 91 U. S. 200.

Where a steamer and sailing vessel were passing through a channel, both going in the same direction, and a collision occurred because the master of the steamer expected that the sailing vessel would stop and tack without running out her course, and would thus let the steamer pass, held, that the master of the steamer should have assumed that the schooner would fulfil her duty, and should have navigated his steamer accordingly. The Bridgeport, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 3.

Where a collision between a sloop and a steam yacht is shown to be due to the fact that the sloop luffed without perceiving the proximity of the yacht, the sloop must be deemed in fault. McAvoy v. The Mignon, 35 Fed. Rep. 319.

3. New York etc. S. S. Co. v. Rumball, 21 How. (U. S.) 372. The Beta, 40 Fed. Rep. 899. See The Clement, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 363; The Johnson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 146; The Coleman, 1 Brown Adm. 456; The Thomas A. Scott, 1 Brown Adm. 503; The Charlotte Raab, 1 Brown Adm. 453; The Masten, 61 N. Y. 436; The Colorado, 61 N. Y. 393; The Masters, 1 Brown Adm. 342; The Milwaukee, 1 Brown Adm. 313; The H. P. Baldwin, 1 Brown Adm. 300; The David Morris, 1 Brown Adm. 273; The Free State, 1 Brown Adm. 251; The Sunny Side, 1 Brown Adm. 227; The Avon, 1 Brown Adm. 170; The Morton, 1 Brown Adm. 137; The Planet, 1 Brown Adm. 125; The Nabob, 1 Brown Adm. 115; Mailler v. Express Propeller Line, 61 N. Y. 312.

Where two vessels are approaching each other from opposite directions, the fact that each does not discover the other at the same moment cannot materially affect the question as to which was in fault, if each makes the discovery of the approach of the other in season to adopt every necessary precaution. Crowel v. The Radama, 2 Cliff. (U. S.) 551.

4. The Fairbanks, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 420; Baker v. Steamship City of New York, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 75.

every description, while they are yet so distant from each other that measures of precaution have not become necessary to avoid a collision. Sailing vessels approaching a steamer are required to keep their course on account of the correlative duty which is devolved upon the steamer to keep out of the way, in order that the steamer may know the position of the object to be avoided, and may not be led into error in her endeavor to comply with the requirement.¹ The rules do not forbid such necessary variations in a vessel's course as will enable her to avoid immediate danger arising from natural obstructions to navigation,² or changes that do not contribute in any degree to the disaster.³ So a sailing vessel on the wind, meeting or converging toward a common point with a steamer, has no right to persist in her course in such a manner as to make a collision probable, or so as to drive the steamboat into danger or exposure in order to avoid her, particularly after being hailed to change her course.⁴ But if the sailing vessel makes unnecessary changes which mislead the steamer into so changing her course as to produce a collision, the steamer is not liable.⁵ Under the rule that a steamer must keep out of the way, she must of necessity determine for herself and upon her own responsibility, independently of the sailing vessel, whether it is safer to go to the right or the left, or to stop; and in order that she may not be deprived of the means of determining the matter wisely, and that she may not be defeated or baffled in the

1. New York etc. S. S. Co. v. Rumball, 21 How. (U. S.) 372; The Nessmore, 41 Fed. Rep. 437.

The rule applicable to the management of vessels approaching each other must depend upon the actual situation at the time when the necessity of precaution begins. Everything prior to that is immaterial, except as it may give to each a knowledge of the other's intentions. The Aurania and The Republic, 29 Fed. Rep. 98.

2. The John L. Hasbrouck, 93 U. S. 405; The Fairbanks, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 420; The Western Metropolis, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 210.

3. Baker v. Steamship City of New York, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 75.

An immaterial departure from her course by a yacht, which does not contribute to a collision caused by the steamer's fault, will not affect the steamer's liability. The Thomas P. Way, 22 Fed. Rep. 739. And so the rule that a sailing vessel must hold her course does not apply to the case of a sailing vessel changing her course at sight of a steamer some seven or eight miles off, not in a narrow channel, but a wide lake. The Propeller Monticello v. Mollison, 17 How. (U. S.) 152.

A sailing vessel is not required to remain in stays or overreach longer than usual, when these measures are not apparently necessary to avoid a collision with a steamer. Bearing away at the last moment to avoid instant collision therewith is not a fault. The Renovator, 30 Fed. Rep. 194.

4. The Cornelius C. Vanderbilt, 1 Abb. Adm. 361.

5. The Adriatic, 107 U. S. 512; The Clara Davidson, 24 Fed. Rep. 763; The Potomac, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 590; The Ellen Holgate, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 470; The Illinois, 103 U. S. 298.

The pilot steamer P sunk the pilot schooner G, as both, after making for a brig to proffer pilot service, and passing on opposite sides of her, were in open sea, turning away to their cruising grounds. Held, that the P was not in fault; the G having violated the rule that a sail vessel, when collision appears imminent, must keep on its course without manœuvring (see diagram, 20 Fed. Rep. 865). The Pilot, 20 Fed. Rep. 860.

A sailing vessel is at fault, which, after seeing a steamer, changes its course in a dark night, on the assumption that it has not been seen by the steamer. The Scotia, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 227.

attempt to perform her duty in the emergency, it is required in the admiralty jurisprudence of the United States that the sailing vessel shall keep her course, and allow the steamer to pass either on the right or left, or to adopt such measures of precaution as she may deem best suited to enable her to perform her duty, and fulfil the requirement of the law to keep out of the way.¹ And the steamship, from the moment the sailing vessel is seen, shall watch, with the highest diligence, her movements, so as to be able to adopt timely measures of precaution to prevent a collision.² The general rule requires that a steam vessel, when approaching a sail vessel, should take whatever measures and precautions are necessary to avoid a collision.³ If a steamer possesses extraordinary means for avoiding a collision with a sailing vessel she is bound to use them, and is liable for the consequence of a collision occurring through her neglect to use them.⁴ A steamer

1. New York etc. S. S. Co. v. Rumball, 21 How. (U. S.) 372; The Fannie, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 238; The Illinois, 103 U. S. 298; St. John v. Paine, 10 How. (U. S.) 557; The Oregon v. Rocca, 18 How. (U. S.) 570; Baker v. The City of New York, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 75; The R. B. Forbes, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 328; The Falcon, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 75; Hall v. The Buffalo, Newb. Adm. 115; The Narragansett, Olc. Adm. 246; The Kentucky, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 325.

Where a steamer approaches a schooner tacking and it appears that there is nothing to prevent the schooner's continuing her course at least a quarter of a mile farther, the schooner will be in fault for not beating out her track, as in effect required by rule 24. The steamer will be also in fault for not observing her tacking, and not keeping out of the way, as she might have done, notwithstanding the schooner's fault. The A. W. Thompson, 39 Fed. Rep. 115.

Where the vessels are suddenly brought close together, and the ordinary rules of navigation will not prevent a collision, it is the duty of each to act according to the emergency, and to take any measures likely to obtain that object. Stopping the engine and backing may be proper under these circumstances. Peck v. Sanderson, 17 How. (U. S.) 178.

2. The Carroll, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 302; Mailler v. Express Propeller Line, 61 N. Y. 312; The Zouave, 1 Brown Adm. 110; The Nabob, 1 Brown Adm. 115; The Planet, 1 Brown Adm. 125; The Avon, 1 Brown Adm. 170; The Morton, 1 Brown Adm. 137; The Sunny Side, 1 Brown Adm. 227; The Free State, 1 Brown Adm. 251; The David Morris, 1 Brown Adm. 273; The H. P. Baldwin, 1 Brown Adm. 300; The Milwaukee, 1 Brown Adm. 313; The Masten, 1 Brown Adm. 436; The Colorado, 1 Brown Adm. 393; The Masters, 1 Brown Adm. 342; The Charlotte Raab, 1 Brown Adm. 453; The Coleman, 1 Brown Adm. 456; The Thomas A. Scott, 1 Brown Adm. 503.

3. Hall v. The Buffalo, Newb. Adm. 115; The Falcon, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 75; The Narragansett, Olc. Adm. 246; The Kentucky, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 325; The R. B. Forbes, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 328; Baker v. City of New York, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 75; The Illinois, 103 U. S. 298; The Fannie, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 238; New York etc. S. S. Co. v. Rumball, 21 How. (U. S.) 372; The Oregon v. Rocca, 18 How. (U. S.) 570; St. John v. Paine, 10 How. (U. S.) 557.

4. The Bay State, 11 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 297; Butterfield v. Boyd, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 356; 18 How. Pr. 527; The Empire State, 12 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 259; Twibell v. The Keystone, 9 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 289; The Jamaica Steam Ferryboat Collision, 11 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 242; The Iola, 11 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 263; The Sampson, 3 Wall. Jr. (C. C.) 14; 3 Am. L. Reg. 337; Carpenter v. The Island City, 2 Int. Rev. Rec. 109; Holmes v. Watson, 29 Pa. St. 457.

The master of a vessel who, seeing that a collision is imminent through the fault of the other vessel, fails to use every means in his power to avert the collision, is guilty of contributory negligence, which makes proper a division of the loss between both vessels. The ought not to take a course which will carry her across the bows of the sailing vessel.¹

(b) PRESUMPTION OF FAULT.—The duty of avoiding collisions with sail vessels being upon steamers, the fact of a collision raises a presumption of fault on the part of the steam vessel, and throws on her owners the burden of proving that those navigating her took all precautions proper under the circumstances, and that the collision was caused by fault on the part of the sail vessel or by inevitable accident.²

4. Right of Way.—Where the rules require a vessel to keep out of the way, the other shall keep her course.³ But the right of

B. & C., 18 Fed. Rep. 543; The Warren, 18 Fed. Rep. 559.

It is the duty of a steamer where there is risk of collision, whatever may be the conduct of the sailing vessel, to do everything in her power that can be done consistently with her own safety in order to avoid a collision. Inman v. Reck, The City of Antwerp and Friedrich, 37 L. J. Adm. 25.

1. Beal v. Marchais, The Bougainville and The James C. Stevenson, 5 L. R., P. C. 316.

2. New York etc. S. S. Co. v. Rumball, 21 How. (U. S.) 372; The Oregon v. Rocca, 18 How. (U. S.) 570; The Colorado, 91 U. S. 692; affirming 1 Brown Adm. 393; The Fannie, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 238; The Pennland, 23 Fed. Rep. 551; Perkins v. The Hercules, 1 Fed. Rep. 925; Butterfield v. Boyd, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 356; The Wenona, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 499; The West of England, 36 L. J. Adm. 4; The Java, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 524; affirming 6 Ben. (U. S.) 245; The City of Truro, 35 Fed. Rep. 317; The New Orleans, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 101; The Pacific and The Fashion, 1 Newb. Adm. 8; The William Young, Olc. Adm. 38; The Washington Irving, 1 Abb. Adm. 336; The Golden Rule, 20 Fed. Rep. 198; The North Indiana, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 92; The New Champion, 1 Abb. Adm. 202. Compare The Benefactor, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 426.

Under the rule which requires a vessel propelled by steam to keep out of the way of a sailing vessel, the mere proof that she collided with the latter, unaccompanied by circumstances exonerating her, raises a presumption of fault in the former, which she must overcome or be condemned. The Wenona, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 499.

3. The Moderation, 1 Moore P. C. C., N. S. 528; The Great Eastern, 3 Moore P. C. C., N. S. 31; 11 L. T., N.

S. 5; Waldorf v. The New York, 1 Flip. (U. S.) 49; The Cornelius C. Vanderbilt, 1 Abb. Adm. 361; The Norma, 35 L. T., N. S. 418; The Ellen Tobin, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 446; The Helena, 34 Fed. Rep. 425; The America, 32 Fed. Rep. 845; The Peshtigo, 25 Fed. Rep. 488; The John Taylor, 6 Ben. (U. S.) 227; The Hausa, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 299; affirming 7 Blatchf. (U. S.) 288; The Chesapeake, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 411; affirming 1 Ben. (U. S.) 23; The Columbia, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 246; The Cayuga, 7 Blatchf. (U. S.) 385; affirming 1 Ben. (U. S.) 171; The Columbia, 29 Fed. Rep. 716.

There is no absolute right of way at the peril of immediate collision. If the vessel having the right of way fails, in the presence of immediate danger, to do what it can to avoid collision, it is liable. The Non Pareille, 33 Fed. Rep. 524.

A starboard tacked vessel, when apprised of the helpless condition of a vessel which by the ordinary rule of navigation ought to get out of her way, is bound to execute any practicable manœuvre which would tend to avoid a collision. Wilson v. Canada Shipping Co., 2 L. R., App. Cas. 389; The Lake St. Clair v. The Underwriter, 36 L. T., N. S. 155.

When a sailing vessel and a steamer are approaching each other, the former may change her course, if it is manifest that a collision cannot otherwise be prevented, or in the face of imminent and impending collision. Waldorf v. The New York, 1 Flip. (U. S.) 49; The Benefactor, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 254; The Excelsior v. The Bruce and The Hamilton Fish, 38 Fed. Rep. 271, Hamilton Fish v. The Excelsior, 38 Fed. Rep. 272; The I. C. Harris, 29 Fed. Rep. 926; The Cornelius C. Vanderbilt, 1 Abb. Adm. 361.

The liability of a steamer for violatway is not the right to run into unnecessary collision.¹ When there is risk of collision, a boat having the right of way must stop and back.² So it is a condition of the duty to keep out of the way that the other vessel shall act intelligently, and afford reasonable evidence of her intentions. Until this is done it is the duty of the latter to keep on her course.³

(a) CHANGE OF COURSE.—Where a vessel has the right of way, and should hold her course, and a collision results from an unnecessary violation of the rule, she is in fault.⁴ But an error

ing U. S. Rev. Stat., § 4233, rule 20, in not keeping out of the way of a schooner bound down the South pass, —held, not affected by an effort of the schooner, in extremis, to work nearer the right bank. The Cadiz, 20 Fed. Rep. 157.

An excursion steamer, coming from Rockaway to New York, overtook, off Coney Island, a schooner on her return from a catch of menhaden, and towing behind her two boats holding her seine, and the steamer struck one of the boats and caused the loss of the seine. Held, 1. That the steamer was liable for the damages. 2. That a change of course made by the schooner to avoid the steamer was in extremis, and not a fault. The Columbia, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 254.

Slight Deviations.—When a ship close-hauled is bound to keep her course, luffing as close to the wind as she can without losing headway, is not a deviation such as will render her liable for a collision with another vessel, whose duty it is to keep out of her way. The Aimo, The Amelia, 29 L. T., N. S. 118; 21 W. R. 707.

1. The Baltimore, 34 Fed. Rep. 660.

Where a vessel sailing on the starboard tack, with the right of way, crosses the track of another vessel sailing in the opposite direction, on the port tack, and the latter fails to fall off and give the right of way, the former, on finding a collision imminent, is justified in starboarding her helm, and letting her main sheet run, in order to lessen the force of the collision, and will not be liable for a breach of rules in doing so. The Eliza S. Potter, 31 Fed. Rep. 687.

Where the primary fault is on the vessel bound to keep out of the way for improperly attempting to cross the other's bows, the latter will not be held in fault except on a preponderance of proof that she did not stop and back as soon as she had reason to apprehend danger, because the other could not or would not clear without her co-operation. The Cement Rock, 38 Fed. Rep. 764.

2. The C. H. Seuff, 32 Fed. Rep. 237.

The steamer C, while coming down the North River and approaching her wharf in New York city, was run into by the ferry boat B. It was found that the course of the C was laid direct for her berth, which took her directly across the bows of the B; but that the latter did not reverse until within two hundred feet of the place of collision; and there was evidence showing that the intention of the C to keep on her course was manifested by disregarding the repeated signals of the B. Held, that the B was in fault, although she had the right of way. The Catskill, 38 Fed. Rep. 367.

3. The B. C. Terry, 30 Fed. Rep. 711.

4. The Baltimore, 35 Fed. Rep. 613; The Farragut, 35 Fed. Rep. 617. See The Favorite, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 30; The Ellen Holgate, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 470; The Spring, 1 L. R., Adm. 99; The Dapper v. The Lady Normanby, 14 L. T., N. S. 895; The Queen, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 234; The Wenona, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 499.

Under the rule providing that, "If two ships under steam are crossing so as to involve risk of collision, the ship which has the other on her own starboard side shall keep out of the way of the other,"—if a collision occurs from such other vessel's not having kept on her course, the obligation rests on the latter to show sufficient causes existing in the particular case to render a departure from the rule necessary. The Corsica, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 630, affirming 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 190.

By mistake the wheelsman of a sailing vessel ported his helm when ordered to starboard it, the result being a collision with a steamer. Held, that the sailing vessel alone was liable. Carlisle v. The Pomona, 34 Fed. Rep. 919; 35 Fed. Rep. 921.

committed by the vessel required to keep her course, after the collision is inevitable, will not impair her right to recover for the injuries resulting from the collision, if she was otherwise without fault.¹ If there are special circumstances from which it clearly appears that the sailing vessel can prevent a collision, otherwise inevitable by a departure from her course, she is bound to make it.² If a collision occurs because a vessel does not keep her course, the obligation rests on her to show sufficient excuse in the particular case for a departure from the rule.³ And in justifying her departure from the rule she takes upon herself the obligation of showing both that her departure was, at the time it took place, necessary in order to avoid immediate danger, and also that the course adopted by her was reasonably calculated to avoid that danger.⁴ Where two steamships are navigating open waters, one has no right to assume that the other will at a given time or place alter her course and take another course up or down channel, but the former must, as the other ship approaches, take such measures as are required by the regulations in reference to the course upon which such other ship actually is.⁵

(b) WHEN RULES ARE OBLIGATORY.—The rules of navigation prescribed for avoiding collisions, such as the rule that "when sailing ships are meeting end on or nearly so, the helms of both shall be put to port," are obligatory from the time that necessity for precaution begins, and continue to be applicable so long as the means and opportunity to avoid the danger remain. They do not apply to a vessel required to keep her course after the approach is so near that the collision is inevitable, and are equally inapplicable to vessels of every description while they are yet so distant from each other that measures of precaution have not become necessary to avoid a collision.⁶

(c) CHANGES—In Extremis.—A change of course in extremis is

1 The Fairbanks, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 420; The Western Metropolis, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 210; Baker v. Steamship City of New York, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 75; The Belle, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 317; The Jupiter, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 536; Bartlett v. Williams, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 229; Bentley v. Coyne, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 509.

2 The Cornelius C. Vanderbilt, 1 Abb. Adm. 361; The Maggie J. Smith v. Walker, 123 U. S. 349.

This principle is especially applicable to sailing vessels and steamers meeting in the harbor of New York. The Cornelius C. Vanderbilt, 1 Abb. Adm. 361.

3 The Corsica, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 630; The Chesapeake, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 411.

4 The Agra, The Elizabeth Jenkins, 36 L. J. Adm. 16; 16 L. J. N. S. 755; The Gratitude, 14 Fed. Rep. 479.

If a sailing vessel bound, under the sailing rules, to keep her course, would justify her departure on the ground of special circumstances and immediate danger, she must show the necessity, and must show that her change of course was reasonably calculated to avoid the danger. The Elizabeth Jones, 112 U. S. 514.

5 The Franconia, 35 L. J. N. S. 721.

6 The Dexter, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 69.

As a general rule, a sailing vessel, when a steamer is approaching, should keep her course, but her right to recover on account of a collision with a steamer is not lost by a slight change of course, after seeing the steamer, when the vessels are five miles apart, which does not contribute in any degree to the disaster. Baker v. Steamship City of New York, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 75.

not negligence.¹ So an error of judgment in extremis is not a fault.² Mere apprehension of danger will not exonerate a sailing vessel for changing her course when meeting a steamer, unless the danger is imminent.³ A mistake in manœuvring, which contributes to a collision, to be pardonable because made in extremis, must have been induced by the fault of the other vessel.⁴

5. Speed—(a) GENERALLY.—Every steamship, when approaching another ship so as to involve risk of collision, shall slacken her speed, or stop and reverse, if necessary.⁵ This rule does not mean that she may wait until the danger is imminent before she slackens her speed, nor that she need not slacken her speed, if the risk of collision is caused by some fault in the approaching vessel. It is imperative. When risk of collision appears, it is the absolute duty of the steamer to slacken her speed, and not to trust to avoiding it by other means.⁶ Risk of a collision begins the moment the two vessels have approached so near that a collision

1. The Eliza S. Potter, 35 Fed. Rep. 220; Waldorf v. The New York, 3 West. L. Monthly, 249; The Havre, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 427.

2. The Osceola, 33 Fed. Rep. 719; The Carroll, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 302; The Nichols, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 656; The Belle, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 317; The John Mitchell, 12 Fed. Rep. 511; The New Orleans, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 101; The John D. Abeel, 4 Ben. (U. S.) 28; The Elizabeth Jones, 112 U. S. 514; The State of Alabama, 17 Fed. Rep. 847; The Ella B., 19 Fed. Rep. 792; The Cadiz, 20 Fed. 157; The Renovator, 30 Fed. Rep. 194.

A mere error of judgment in the excitement of a peril in extremis, the peril being caused by the other vessel, is not a fault. The City of Springfield, 29 Fed. Rep. 923.

3. Winter v. The Hercules, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 465.

4. The Elizabeth Jones, 112 U. S. 514.

5. Rev. Int. Rules & Reg., art. 18. See The Syracuse, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 672; Dowell v. Steam Navigation Co., 38 Eng. Law & Eq. 64; The Manitoba, 2 Flip. (U. S.) 241; The Blenheim, 17 Fed. Rep. 608; The Columbia, 27 Fed. Rep. 704; The Aurania, 29 Fed. Rep. 98; Hall v. The Buffalo, 1 Neb. Adm. 115; Johnson v. City of New York, 40 Fed. Rep. 601; The Manhansett, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 104; The Louisiana v. The Isaac Fisher, 21 How. (U. S.) 1; The City of Albany, 34 Fed. Rep. 812; The Kate Irving, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 146; The Frank Moffat, 2 Flip. (U. S.) 291; The Jay Gould, 19 Fed. Rep. 765; The Lepanto, 21 Fed. Rep. 651; Newton v.

Stebbins, 10 How. (U. S.) 586; Bazin v. Liverpool Steamship Co., 3 Wall. Jr. (C. C.) 229; The Westover, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 133.

This rule applies notwithstanding the existence of a gale. The Fred W. Chase, 31 Fed. Rep. 91.

Where a collision occurred between a steamer and a ferry boat, and the evidence showed that the steamer, just before the accident, stopped her engine, but afterwards started it again, it was held that the ferry boat had a right to suppose that the steamer intended to let her pass across her bows, and was justified in keeping her course. The Cayuga, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 171.

6. The Huntsville, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 228.

When two steam vessels are approaching each other from opposite directions, if, from darkness, fog or the haziness of the atmosphere, it is difficult to ascertain the character, position or direction of each other, it is the duty of each, when the other is observed, instantly to check speed, and then, if necessary, to stop and back. Ward v. Ogdensburgh, 5 McLean (U. S.) 622.

A steam vessel, which is bound to keep out of the way of another steamboat, will be held in fault if collision happen through her delay in backing, where the circumstances of wind and tide and signals exchanged were sufficient to have shown her that such backing could not be delayed without risk of collision. New York etc. R. Co. v. The Breakwater, 39 Fed. Rep. 511.

A steamer going ten knots an hour on a dark night up the Horse Channel, might be brought about by any departure from the rules of navigation, and continues up to the moment when they have so far progressed that no such result could ensue.¹ So the rule does not throw a steam vessel in fault for not slackening speed, as long as the vessels are so placed that, if the sailing vessel observes ordinary precautions and rules of navigation, there is no danger of collision. The article does not contemplate a case where a collision is the result of sheer negligence and disobedience of well-known rules; but applies to cases where, supposing the parties intend to perform and do reasonably perform their respective duties, the emergency is such that there is still danger that a collision may occur.²

(b) CROWDED CHANNELS.—Vessels coming into harbors and rivers crowded with craft must slacken speed and proceed cautiously,³ and if in the night time, they must slacken speed so as at the entrance of the Mersey, saw a sail three points on her port bow, less than half a mile distant. She ported her helm but did not ease her engines. Held, that the steamer was in fault for the collision which ensued, for not having stopped or eased her engines when she made out the other vessel, and that maintaining such a rate of speed was unwarrantable. The Dispatch, Swa. 138.

1. The Milwaukee, 1 Brown Adm. 313.

2. The Free State, 91 U. S. 200. See The North American v. The Wild Rose, 14 L. T., N. S. 68.

3. The A. Rossiter, 1 Newb. Adm. 225; The Earle Spencer, 33 L. T., N. S. 235; The Germania, 21 L. T., N. S. 44. See Case v. The Susquehanna, 35 Fed. Rep. 325; The City of Brooklyn, 1 L. R., Adm. Div. 276; Dowell v. Steam Navigation Co., 38 Eng. L. & Eq. 64; The Pepperell, Swa. 12; Netherlands Steamboat Co. v. Styles, 9 Moore P. C. C. 286; The St. John, 29 Fed. Rep. 221; The American Eagle, 29 Fed. Rep. 302; Ure v. Coffman, 19 How. (U. S.) 56; The City of Paris, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 634; The Allegheny, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 522; The Eider, 37 Fed. Rep. 903; Lenox v. Winisimmet Co., Sprague 160.

A steamer coming into a difficult harbor in the wake of a sailing vessel, is bound to proceed with extreme caution. If they collide, and the steamer was grossly negligent, she is liable, even though the sailing vessel may have been not entirely free from blame. Ward v. The M. Dousman, 6 McLean U. S.) 231.

A steam tug, held to be in fault for proceeding in a crowded thoroughfare, like the Chicago River, at the rate of over five miles an hour. The Little Giant, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 23; The Allegheny, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 29.

For a steamer navigating the East river in New York to pass along the shore on the Brooklyn side in close proximity to the mouths of the ferry slips, at such a rate of speed as not to be able to stop when danger of collision with an outcoming ferryboat appears imminent, is gross fault. The Favorita, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 539.

Where a fast steamboat, on her regular run down the North river to Coney Island, was making for a landing near the Hoboken ferry, and came at full speed close to the piers, and struck a ferry boat just coming out of her slip, held, that the steamer was in fault for running at such high speed in that locality, with knowledge of the position of the ferry slip and the presence of the ferryboat there; that the ferry boat was not in fault for attempting to back to avoid the collision. The D. R. Martin, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 532.

A ferry boat is in fault when running at full speed in her slip in a fog. The Howard, 30 Fed. Rep. 280.

Where the slip into which it was customary to breast claimants' vessels off the dock was the private slip of the claimants, used in their business only, it was negligence for a tug accustomed to go there frequently, and chargeable with knowledge of the claimants' custom in mooring their vessels, and having knowledge that a steamer had but just arrived and was within the slip, with to be able to stop at a moment's notice.¹ Where large steamers proceed up or down a river at a speed dangerous to small craft and cause such swells that barges are sunk, they are liable.²

VII. STEAMERS AND ROW BOAT.—Row boats must keep out of the way of steamers. A steamer has a right to assume that such boats are properly manned and equipped, and will take the usual precautions to escape collision.³

VIII. TUGS AND TOWS⁴—1. Generally.—Where a tow is in charge of a tug, the tug and tow are to be treated as being one vessel, and that a steam vessel.⁵ Although tugs with vessels in tow are lights visible, showing that the work of breasting her off was incomplete, to attempt to enter the slip at considerable speed, with no attention to the usages of the slip or the circumstances under which the attempt was made. The Fulda, 31 Fed. Rep. 351.

1. The A. Rossiter, 1 Newb. Adm. 225; The Bay State, 1 Abb. Adm. 235.

Steamers running into a harbor, or through a common thoroughfare of vessels, will be held chargeable with the consequences of collisions when kept at high speed during the night, or during weather so thick that objects cannot be discerned at a distance sufficient to avoid them. The Rocket, 1 Biss. 360; The Rose, 2 W. Rob. 1; The Bay State, Abb. Adm. 235; Bullock v. The Lamar, 8 Law Rep. 275; 1 West. L. J. 444; The Perth, 3 Hagg. Adm. 414; The Neptune, Olc. 483; The Rose, 2 W. Rob. 1; 7 Jur. 381.

2. Netherlands Steamboat Co. v. Styles, 40 Eng. L. & Eq. 19; The Massachusetts, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 177; The Southfield, 19 Fed. Rep. 841; The Rhode Island, 24 Fed. Rep. 295; Wright v. Brown, 4 Ind. 95. See The New York, 34 Fed. Rep. 757; De Lelle v. The Atalanta, 34 Fed. Rep. 918.

A large ocean steamer has no right to leave her moorings in a narrow slip crowded with other craft, by the use of her own propeller, without taking the utmost care to prevent accidents by the disturbance of the water which necessarily follows. The Nevada, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 122.

In an action against the captain of a steam vessel for swamping a loaded wherry on the river, by a swell produced by a too rapid rate of passage, the jury, to find for the plaintiff, must be satisfied that the mischief was occasioned by the swell alone; and if they think it doubtful whether it was or not, or think that the plaintiff contributed to the injury he sustained by his own improper conduct, either in mismanaging or overloading the boat, they must find their verdict for the defendant. Luxford v. Large, 5 C. & P. 421.

3. Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Adams, 89 Pa. St. 31; Fisher v. Camden etc. Ferry Co., 124 Pa. St. 154; The Plymouth, 26 Fed. Rep. 879; Brown v. French, 104 Pa. St. 604.

The plaintiff's intestate, with two other persons, was rowing in a small boat in New York harbor, when they were overtaken and run over by a steamboat. A moment before the collision took place the plaintiff's intestate jumped overboard and was drowned. There was proof that the crew of the boat had not seen the steamboat until she was within forty or fifty feet, owing to want of vigilance on their part, and that even then the collision might have been avoided if they had not lost presence of mind. Held, that the plaintiff could not recover against the owners of the steamboat. Beck v. East River Ferry Co., 6 Robt. (N. Y.) 82.

A man in a small boat, seeing a steamboat two hundred feet off, is presumed to have time to get out of the way. The Missisquoi, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 6.

While a steamer would not be justified in recklessly colliding with a rowboat, yet, when a boat is discovered at such a distance that a few strokes of the oars would back it safely out of the way, the steamer has a right to assume that those in charge of the boat will exercise the proper skill to avoid her, and where a collision is the result of their ignorance of the proper management of the boat, the steamer is not liable. Fischer v. Camden etc. Co., 124 Pa. St. 154.

4. See LIGHTS, supra.

5. The Cleadon, 14 Moore P. C. C. 92; Lush, 158; Anglo-Australian Steam Nav. Co. v. Cornell Steamboat Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 798; New York etc. Transp. Co. v. Philadelphia etc.

not to be held to the strict responsibility of a vessel under steam,¹ yet they are bound to yield to sailing vessels, and, in general, to be liable as though without tows.² A tug engaged in towing a fleet has not the same control over her movements as an ordinary steamer. Where a tug has neglected no precaution, she should not be held responsible to the same extent or under the same law as a detached steamer. But where a voyage is attended with special hazards she must avoid enhancing them. She may occupy a large space and move with less caution on an open bay than in a narrow, eccentric and crowded channel.³

Upon the view taken of the law of principal and agent, in connection with the contract of towage, the tug is held to be the sole principal, and the ship exempted, when her navigation is, by contract, exclusively in charge of the tug.⁴ This rule is limited to cases where the ship is in the exclusive charge and control of the tug, without officers or men of her own in any way participating

Nav. Co., 22 How. (U. S.) 461; Herbert Manton, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 37, affirming The J. H. Gautier, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 469; s. c., sub nom. Sturgis v. Boyer, 24 How. (U. S.) 110; The Civiltà v. Perres, 103 U. S. 699, affirming Ben. (U. S.) 309; The Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. The J. H. Gautier, 11 Am. L. Reg., N. S. 769; 5 Am. L. T. 87. See The American and The Lyria, 6 L. R., P. C. 127; The Jesse Williamson, Jr., 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 106; The Pennsylvania, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 215.

1. The Kingston by Sea, 3 W. Rob. 152; The Cleadon, 1 Lush. 158; The Independence, The Arthur Gordon, 1 Lush. 270; The Marion W. Page and The Missouri, 36 Fed. Rep. 329; The A. P. Cranmer, 8 Fed. Rep. 523; 1 Fed. Rep. 523, and 19 Blatchf. (U. S.) 507; The Maria Martin, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 31. Compare The Warrior, L. R., 3 Adm. & Ecc. 553; The America and The Lyria, L. R., 4 Adm. & Ecc. 431; The Civiltà v. Perry, 103 U. S. 699.

It is the duty of an unencumbered steamer to keep out of the way of a cumbersome tow going slowly with the tide. The Mayumba, 21 Fed. Rep. 476.

A steam tug hove to during fine weather in a fair way and waiting for employment, is bound to keep out of the way of sailing ships using the fairway. The Jennie S. Barker, The Spindrift, 33 L. T., N. S. 318.

2. The Galileo, 28 Fed. Rep. 469; The Ping-On v. The Blethea, 11 Fed. Rep. 607; The James Bowen, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 430; The Herbert Manton, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 37; s. c., 5 Ben. (U. S.) 469; Sturgis v. Boyer, 24 How. (U. S.)

110; The Carolus, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 69; The Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. The J. H. Gautier, 11 Am. Law Reg. (N. S.) 769; The Maggie S. Hart, 38 Fed. Rep. 765; R. B. Forbes, Sprague (U. S.) 328; Union Steamship Co. v. The Aracan, 6 L. R., P. C. 127; The Civiltà v. Perry, 103 U. S. 699. Compare The A. P. Cranmer, 19 Blatchf. (U. S.) 507.

A tug with a tow on a hawser in the East river is bound to keep out of the way of a schooner close-hauled. The Sam Rotan, 20 Fed. Rep. 333.

Tugs which undertake to tow large railroad floats about the harbor of New York must be of sufficient power to handle their floats easily and promptly, and able to avoid sailing vessels which they may meet in the course of their navigation. The Howard Carroll, 41 Fed. Rep. 159.

Where a schooner, close-hauled on a N.N.W. breeze, met a tug with three barges in tow, nearly head on, and, keeping her course, came in collision with a tow—held that the facts proved showed the tug to have been unable to change her course as required by rule 20 of the navigation rules (U. S. Rev. Stat., § 4233), but that she was in fault for not making known such inability to the schooner by hoisting two vertical lights as required by rule 24. The C. F. Ackerman, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 179.

3. Flannery v. The Ontario, 4 Pa. L. J. 312.

4. Sturgis v. Boyer 24 How. (U. S.) 110; The Doris Eckhoff, 32 Fed. Rep. 555. Compare The Ticonderoga, Swa. 215.

in the ship's navigation.¹ Cases arise undoubtedly where both the tug and the tow are liable for the consequences of a collision, as when those in charge of the respective vessels jointly participate in their control and management, and the master or crew of both vessels are either deficient in skill, fail to take due care, or are guilty of negligence in their navigation.² So if a tow injured in a collision is so far identified with its own tug that it is affected by the fault of that tug, it can have no other or greater rights, and no other or better standing in court, against the other tug than would the tug to which it was attached.³ If the vessel in tow has the full control of her own movements, she will be liable for any damages inflicted by her coming in contact with another vessel.⁴ If a collision between the tow and another vessel is caused by the negligence of the owners of the tug, they are responsible.⁵ And the burden is on them to show that such acci-

1. The Doris Eckhoff, 32 Fed. Rep. 555; Sturgis v. Boyer, 24 How. (U. S.) 110; The James Bowen, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 430.

If the tug acts independently of all authority or direction of the tow while executing the employment for which she is engaged, and the tow is master of her own movements, the analogy of principal and agent does not apply. The Express, Olc. Adm. 258.

Both the tug and tow were under the command of the master of the tug, who gave all the orders. None of the ship's crew were on board except the mate, who did not interfere with the management of the vessel, the persons on board being all under the command of a head stevedore. Held, that the master of the tug was the agent of her owners and not of the owners of the ship, and that the tug was responsible for the whole loss. Sturgis v. Boyer, 24 How. (U. S.) 110.

A bark towed by a hawser, and having a pilot aboard, who had general control of the navigation of both tug and tow—held, liable, in part, for a collision that occurred through the negligence of both pilots. The C. P. Raymond, 26 Fed. Rep. 281.

Where a steam tug with a ship in tow, both vessels being in charge of a pilot appointed by the owners of the ship, negligently caused the ship to collide with another vessel, it was held that the tug was liable. The Rescue, 2 Sprague (U. S.) 16.

On the Lakes.—As the business of towing is conducted upon The Lakes, the tug has the general control, but the vessel in tow has certain duties to perform, and each one is responsible for its own negligence. Frank Moffat, 2 Flip. (U. S.) 291.

2. The Virginia Ehrman v. Curtis, 97 U. S. 309, 313. See The Mabey v. Cooper, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 204; The Civita, 103 U. S. 701; The Nettie, 35 Fed. Rep. 615; The Civita v. Perry, 103 U. S. 699.

A collision between a towed canal boat and a boat lying at a dock resulted from the tow line being too long, considering the rapidity of the current, the height of the water, and the intricacy of the channel. Held, that the tug and the tow should both be deemed in fault. The Nettie, 35 Fed. Rep. 315.

3. McNally v. The L. P. Dayton, Bk. 30 U. S. L. ed. 669.

4. The Express, Olc. Adm. 258; The Edgar Baxter, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 162. See The Packer, 24 Blatchf. (U. S.) 27; The Don Juan, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 489; The Niobe, 13 P. D. 55.

A schooner in tow, being under after sail only, became unmanageable, and thus brought about a collision, for which she sought to charge the other vessel. Held, that the libel should be dismissed. Law v. Baker, 26 Fed. Rep. 164.

If the tow, at a critical point, when about to enter a harbor, carries such sail as to take her out of the control of the tug, either as to her headway or course, the tug should not be held at fault for any disaster that ensues. The Margaret, 2 Flip. (U. S.) 640.

5. Creen v. Croce, 17 La. An. 3; The Express, Olc. Adm. 258; The Anglo Norman, The Jane E. Williams, 1 Newb. Adm. 492; The Mariel, 32 Fed.

dent was an unavoidable one, if such was the fact.¹ Where the tow is sunk by a collision brought about by the concurrent negligent acts of the tug and another vessel, the owner of the innocent tow or its cargo may proceed against the two vessels jointly, or either one of them severally, to recover his entire damages, and no apportionment of the loss between the offending vessels will be made, but the owner of the tow or its cargo may resort to either

Rep. 103; The Gratitude, 31 Fed. Rep. 232; The Westhoff v. Oluf, 3 Woods (U. S.) 667; The Alpha, 27 Fed. Rep. 759; The Walverton, 28 Fed. Rep. 381; The Willie, 29 Fed. Rep. 153; The Bridgeport, 35 Fed. Rep. 222. See Harris v. Anderson, 14 C. B., N. S. 499; The Night Watch, 8 Jur., N. S. 1161; 11 W. R. 189; The Swallow, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 223; Deems v. Albany & Canal Line, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 474; The William H. Beaman, 18 Fed. Rep. 334; Hunt v. The Mischief, 32 Fed. Rep. 304; New Philadelphia, 1 Black (U. S.) 62.

Where a steam tug, with two tows, one ahead of the other, going abreast of a steam barge, in the same direction, increases her speed so that the stern of the rear tow, coming abreast with the wheel of the barge, is sheered by its suction and comes into collision with a passenger steamer, the tug is liable. The Mariel, 32 Fed. Rep. 103.

A steamboat was towing a canal boat in New York bay, the latter being attached to the former by a hawser from her stern, when the canal boat sheered and came into collision with and damaged a third vessel. The captain of the steamboat was warned, before he took on the canal boat, that she steered badly, and ought to be taken alongside. The canal boat was under the command of her own captain, who did all in his power to stop the sheer. The steamboat was under the command of her own captain, who did not take proper measures to arrest the sheer and avoid the collision. Held, that the steamboat was liable for the damage to the third vessel, and this, although the master of the canal boat might have been in fault in not exhibiting proper skill or attention in steering his vessel, and was therefore properly responsible for the collision. The Express, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 365.

A tug which was towing a schooner around a wharf with a tow line 50 to 60 fathoms in length, and at a distance of half a hawser's length from the line of the wharf, when she had ample sea room to keep at a safe distance from the wharf—held, liable for damages caused to the tow by collision with a vessel moored to the wharf. The Favorite, 5 Sawy. (U. S.) 226.

A tug, while attempting to assist a drifting steamer, which was in great danger, and blowing signals of distress, collided with and sunk her. Held, that the tug was not liable, having acted in good faith and with reasonable skill. Gilman v. The Tyler, 3 Woods (U. S.) 111.

A vessel, while being towed into a harbor by a steam tug, got aground, and the defendant's vessel, which was being towed in at the same time by the same tug, astern of the plaintiff's vessel, without any active default on the defendant's part, struck and damaged the plaintiff's vessel. Held, no evidence of negligence for which the defendant was liable. Harris v. Anderson, 14 C. B., N. S. 499.

1. Green v. Croce, 17 La. An. 3.

Presumption of Negligence Generally.

—The fact that a boat in tow is brought into a collision raises a presumption of negligence on the part of the tug. The Delaware, 20 Fed. Rep. 797.

Where both contracting parties understood that the towage service was to be performed under circumstances of peculiar peril, in which a mistake of judgment was not improbable, and that the liability of such an error was one of the incidents of risk, the ordinary presumption of negligence on the part of the tug in case of injury is materially weakened; and it is not unreasonable to require the owner of the tow, who imputes fault to the tug, to locate the fault with precision. The Packer, 24 Blatchf. (U. S.) 27; 28 Fed. Rep. 156.

The fact that a tug, in towing two canal boats astern of each other, allows the second to be fastened stern foremost, does not necessarily raise a presumption of negligence; but such a mode of towing imposes on the tug the duty of using great care. The Edmund Levy, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 144.

or both of the offenders for his whole loss.¹ So if a tow is injured by a collision with the tug to which it is attached, through the latter's negligence, the tug will be liable for the damage.² If a tow is injured by collision between the tug to which it is attached and another one, the burden of proof is upon it to establish negligence against each of the tugs separately and independently.³ But a tow cannot hold her tug liable for the consequences of a collision caused by no fault of the tug, but solely by the fault of a steamer.⁴ So if a collision is brought about by a lack of watchfulness and care on the part of those on board a steam vessel colliding with the tow of a tug, the steam vessel will be liable.⁵ If the collision occurs through the contributory negligence of the tug and the other steamer, both will be liable,⁶ or if collision

1. The Franconia, 16 Fed. Rep. 149. See Brady v. Jefferson, 5 Del. 60.

A collision occurred between a steamer and a steam tug with a vessel in tow. The tow was wrecked and sunk. The steamer and tug were solely in fault. Held, in a suit in the name of the owner of the cargo, against the steamer only, that libellant was entitled to recover full compensatory damages for the loss (to the extent of the value of the steamer as limited by act of 1851). The libellant was not bound to join both the colliding vessels as defendants. Nor was his right to recover limited to one-half his damages, against each vessel. The doctrine of apportionment of damages, where there is mutual fault, between two vessels coming in collision, does not apply against a third vessel injured. The Atlas, 93 U. S. 302; S. P. The Juniata, 93 U. S. 337.

2. The Thetis, 2 L. R. Adm. 365.

When a collision between two vessels in tow of the same tug is chiefly attributable to negligence of the persons in charge of the tug, some contributory negligence on the part of one of the vessels in tow will not prevent the other from recovering against the tug. The Morton, 1 Brown Adm. 137.

3. McNally v. The L. P. Dayton, bk. 30, U. S. (L. ed.) 669.

4. The B. B. Saunders, 23 Blatchf. (U. S.) 378; 25 Fed. Rep. 727; The City of Springfield, 29 Fed. Rep. 923; The City of Norwich, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 206.

A steamboat ran into a tow. The collision was caused by the steamboat suddenly attempting to go to starboard of the tug, after having signified her intention to go to port. Held, that the steamboat, not the tug, was liable for the damage. The Richmond, 28 Fed. Rep. 332.

In The Alabama and The Gamecock, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 476, it is held that a vessel in tow of a tug is not responsible for the management of the tug, so as to bar her from recovering damages against a third vessel for a collision, which was partly attributable to the fault of the tug.

A tug whose tow is injured during the towage service, though without fault on the part of the tug, must use reasonable diligence to assist the tow and shield it from additional injury. The Young America, 24 Blatchf. (U. S.) 479; 31 Fed. Rep. 749.

5. The Lynn, 21 Fed. Rep. 815.

6. The Frisia, 28 Fed. Rep. 249; The Silicia v. The Lord Worden, 27 Fed. Rep. 467; The Fanwood, 28 Fed. Rep. 373; The Oregon, 27 Fed. Rep. 751; The Plymouth Rock, 26 Fed. Rep. 40; The A. Demarest, 25 Fed. Rep. 921; The Enterprise, 3 Wall. Jr. (C. C.) 58; The Rio Grande, 30 Fed. Rep. 849; The Ogemaw, 32 Fed. Rep. 919; The Galileo and The Edgar Baxter, 24 Blatchf. (U. S.) 111; 28 Fed. Rep. 469; Shaw v. The Reading and The David Smith, 38 Fed. Rep. 269.

A steamship ran into a tow. The steamship might and should have stopped and reversed. The tow's tug was in fault in attempting to cross the steamship's bows, and in persisting after getting no response to her whistles. Held, that both steamship and tug were liable to the tow. (Reversing, s. c., 24 Fed. Rep. 495.) The Frisia, 28 Fed. Rep. 249.

A steamer came into collision with the tow of a tug. The steamer, after her signal to pass to the right was an-occurs through the negligence of the tow, she will be held responsible for the damages.¹ A tug may be in fault for running free with tide and current down a river at too great a speed in a fog;² or attempting to take her tow through a perilous passage;³ or getting into a position where she could neither advance nor retreat, and where her movements could not be anticipated, so that a collision follows.⁴ If circumstances are such as to make it proper for a tug to use a long hawser in towing a boat, she should be specially careful not only to notify approaching vessels that a tow is following, but, as near as may be, where it is.⁵ So, in such case, if a collision is caused by the sheering of the tow, the tug will be liable.⁶

2. Sudden Emergencies.—Where the officers of a tug boat in the confusion of a sudden emergency caused by another's fault, fail to adopt the most prudent measures of safety, they are not chargeable with negligence on that account.⁷ So where a schooner is about to strike the tow, the tug is justified (as an act in extremis) in putting herself between them to fend off the blow and prevent a more injurious collision, and is not responsible for consequent damage to the schooner.⁸

3. Duty in Making up Tow.—It is the duty of the tug where the swered, backed athwart the course of the tug, and the tug failed to slacken speed. Held, that the tow was entitled to a decree against both the tug and steamer. The Galileo, 28 Fed. Rep. 469.

1. The Herald, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 263.

2. The Katy Wise, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 589; The Mary Shaw, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 266.

3. Miller v. The John C. Ingram, 37 Fed. Rep. 910; The Willie, 29 Fed. Rep. 153; The Venus, 16 Fed. Rep. 792; The Minnie, 31 Fed. Rep. 301.

Extraordinary precautions should be taken by a tug with a large tow in navigating a narrow channel, where the tug and tow virtually occupy the whole width of the channel. The Lucy D., 21 Fed. Rep. 142.

4. The Gratitude, 31 Fed. Rep. 232; The Gorgas, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 541.

5. The Jesse Williamson, Jr., 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 106.

A passenger steamer on a starlight night, going thirteen miles an hour, met at an angle a tug going three miles an hour and towing two barges. The tug made no change of course or speed. The steamer did not discover the foremost barge till close thereto, and thereupon sheered sharply to port, stopped engine and backed, but struck the other barge, which was one thousand feet behind the tug, and nearly one hundred and fifty feet behind the first barge, and on which was a bright light. Held, that even if one of the lights on the tug was dim, the steamer was in fault for attempting to cross between, as if supposing the barge's light was of separate crafts, when so close that no change of her course was possible without collision on her port bow. The Rhode Island, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 50.

6. The Annie Williams, 20 Fed. Rep. 866.

Sheer Caused by the Tide.—Where a tow going up the Hudson River was moving so slowly when approaching the western of two channels, formed by a shoal in the river, that the ebb tide coming out of the easterly channel swung the tail of the tow towards the westward, so that the rear boat was struck by a tow coming down the western channel and passing within seventy-five feet of the ascending tow, both vessels, having signaled each other at a considerable distance, are in fault—the ascending tow for occupying any part of the western side of the narrow channel, and the other for attempting to pass so near her. The Belle, 34 Fed. Rep. 669.

7. The Ella B., 19 Fed. Rep. 792.

8. The George L. Garlick, 20 Fed. Rep. 647.

captains of the tow have no voice in making up the tow, to see that it was properly constructed and that the lines are sufficient and securely fastened. This is an equal duty whether she furnishes the lines to the boats or the boats to her. In the nature of the employment her officers can tell better than the men on the boats what sort of a line will be required to secure boats together and to keep them in their positions.¹ But where the tug has nothing to do with arranging the tow and is signalled to start too soon, the tug will not be liable for a collision occasioned thereby.²

4. Vessel Shifting Tow.—A vessel engaged in shifting her tow is entitled to the undisturbed use of a sufficient area of the water to execute her movements. But if she moves voluntarily while a navigating vessel is dangerously near, keeping no lookout, and giving no signals, thus contributing to the ensuing collision, she is in fault, and liable for damages.³

5. Tugs Striving for Precedence.—Where two steam tugs approach a vessel from different directions to tender their services to tow her into port, the established rules are that the tug following the wake of the vessel should come up on her starboard quarter and slack her engine, so as not to pass the vessel, and that the tug coming down in the opposite direction should run round to, either to windward or leeward, so as to head the same way as the vessel.⁴ And where a tug is entitled to her position and another approaches, the latter must see to it that a collision is avoided.⁵

6. Vessels at Anchor.—A tow boat is liable for the damage resulting from a collision between the boats of her tow and a vessel at anchor in a proper place.⁶

1. The Quickstep, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 665; The Clarita and The Clara, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 1, 14.

Where a tug towed a vessel into a slip, where it was held by a line fastened to another vessel, and the line parted after the tug had cast off, and the vessel drifted and injured another vessel, the tug is not liable therefor. The Greenpoint, 32 Fed. Rep. 799.

2. Angelo-Australasian Steam Nav. Co. v. Cornell Steamboat Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 798.

3. Phenix Ins. Co. v. The Quaker City and The Isabella, E. Wilbur, 38 Fed. Rep. 153.

Two tug boats made up parallel tows, and both headed up stream against a strong ebb tide, and the one nearest the shore, upon completion of the tow and while attempting to turn out of the river, struck a canal boat in tow on the starboard side of the other tug.

Held, as she took the responsibility of being able to effect her turn, she alone was liable. The failure of the other tug to stop her engines, and allow her tow to drift back with the tide, was an excusable error in extremis. The Osceola, 33 Fed. Rep. 719.

4. Sturgis v. Clough, 21 How. (U. S.) 451.

5. The R. L. Maybey, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 88.

A tug approaching another tug, which was between two canal boats in a place where she had a right to be, erroneously supposed that the latter tug was about starting with the boats, and, therefore, did not slack her speed, and ran into one of the boats. Held, that she alone was in fault. The James T. Easton, 27 Fed. Rep. 464.

6. Orison v. The Syracuse, 35 Fed. Rep. 367; The Ogemaw, 32 Fed. Rep. 919. See the Cement Rock, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 443.

7. Fog Signals.¹—While the courts have, in passing upon the duty of tugs in towing other vessels, said, in substance, that the tug and barges were to be considered as one vessel, yet there can be no doubt that when a barge is in tow of a tug or a steamer by a long line, a fog-horn or other signal should be sounded on the barge at regular intervals, in the same manner as if she were moving by the agency of her own sails. On a clear night the lights on the tug and on the barges would notify an approaching vessel that she was in the vicinity of a steamer with tows; but in a fog there must be some means by which the location of the barges can be indicated, and when this precaution is omitted, the craft guilty of such omission is chargeable with negligence and responsible for its consequences.²

IX. PILOT BOATS.—When a pilot boat is approaching a vessel to put off a pilot, it is the duty of the vessel to wait for the pilot boat, and it is the duty of the pilot boat to keep out of the way of the vessel. So where a collision occurs between the pilot boat and the vessel, while so waiting, the pilot boat is in fault and responsible for the damages which may ensue.³ The vessel will not be in fault for a collision which occurs while trying to keep away from a pilot boat, even though the latter be trying to hail her for the purpose of offering services; neither is she in fault for not seeing unexpected manœuvres of the pilot boat that are not customary, or for failing to give answer to the pilot's flash-light offering to give services.⁴

X. FISHING VESSELS.—The ordinary rules of navigation, designed to prevent collisions, are binding on fishing vessels, while engaged on their fishing grounds.⁵

XI. VESSELS ANCHORED, MOORED, ETC.—1. Generally.—Vessels in motion are required to keep out of the way of a vessel at anchor, if the latter is without fault, unless it appears that the collision was the result of inevitable accident; the rule being that the vessel in motion must exonerate herself from blame, by showing that it was not in her power to prevent the collision by adopting any practicable precautions.⁶ So where a vessel at anchor is col-

1. Internal Waters.—"Section 8. All steam vessels (except upon the Red River of the North and rivers whose waters flow into the Gulf of Mexico), when engaged in towing during fog or thick weather, shall sound three distinct blasts of their steam whistles in quick succession, repeating at intervals not exceeding one minute."

2. The Peshtigo, 25 Fed. Rep. 488; The City of Alexandria, 31 Fed. Rep. 427, 430.

3. The Leo, 34 Fed. Rep. 140; The Alaska, 33 Fed. Rep. 106.

4. The Cambusdoon, 30 Fed. Rep. 704.

5. The Summit, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 150. A fishing vessel is bound to show a light in reasonable time to an approaching vessel. The Olivia, Lush. 497; The Englishman, 37 L. T., N. S. 412.

6. The Virginia Erhman v. Curtis, 97 U. S. 309; Boston etc. Steamboat Co. v. Munson, 117 Mass. 34; The Batavier, 40 Eng. L. & Eq. 25; The Lochlibo, 3 W. Rob. 310; Strout v. Foster, 1 How. (U. S.) 89, 94; Ure v. Coffman, 19 How. (U. S.) 56; The Granite State, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 310; The Bridgeport, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 116, 119; Amoskeag Mfg. Co., The John Adams, 1 Cliff.

lided with by a vessel in motion, the latter is prima facie in fault, provided the former is anchored in a proper place.¹ To anchor at night in midchannel,² or off a coal pier, where vessels are fre-

(U. S.) 404, 413; The Achilles, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 463; The El Dorado, 27 Fed. Rep. 762; The Mary Powell, 31 Fed. Rep. 622.

A ferry boat, knowing the position of an anchored brig, proceeded in a snow squall which obscured the view, so that she came into collision with her. Held, that the ferry boat was in fault. The Rockaway, 25 Fed. Rep. 775.

A steamer, although at anchor in a proper place, in the daytime and in fair weather, is bound to avoid a vessel under way subject to special difficulties; for instance, a schooner in a fleet coming out of Hampton Roads with the ebb tide. Wells v. Armstrong, 29 Fed. Rep. 216.

1. The Julia M. Hallock, Sprague (U. S.) 539; The Ogemaw, 32 Fed. Rep. 919; The Brady, 24 Fed. Rep. 300; The George Bell, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 468; The Jeremiah Godfrey, 17 Fed. Rep. 738; The Rockaway, 19 Fed. Rep. 449; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Wheeling etc. Transp. Co., 32 Ohio St. 116; The America, 29 Fed. Rep. 304; The Annapolis, 5 L. T., N. S. 326; The George Arkle, 4 L. T., N. S. 290; The Lady Franklin, 2 Low. (U. S.) 220; The Sylph, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 24; The Scioto, Davies (U. S.) 359; The City of Augusta, 30 Fed. Rep. 844; The Milwaukee, 2 (U. S.) 509; The Exchange, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 168; The Granite State, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 310; Amoskeag etc. Co. v. The John Adams, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 404; The Echo, 19 Fed. Rep. 453; The Baltic, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 452; The Beaver, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 118; The Helen R. Cooper, 7 Blatchf. (U. S.) 378, aff'g 2 Ben. (U. S.) 67; Mills v. The Nathaniel Holmes, 1 Bond (U. S.) 252; Pierce v. Lang, 1 Low. (U. S.) 65; The Moxey, 1 Abb. Adm. 73; The Maryland, 14 Fed. Rep. 367; Commercial Steamboat Co. v. Dutton, 2 Cliff. (U. S.) 537.

When a vessel in motion comes into collision with one at anchor, the presumption is that the former is in fault, and she can exonerate herself only by showing that it was the fault of the vessel at anchor, or caused by circumstances utterly beyond her control. Bill v. Smith, 39 Conn. 206.

Where a vessel breaks from her moorings, and comes into collision with another vessel, also at anchor, the burden of proof is on the former to show vis major, or inevitable accident. The Fremont, 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 571.

The rule that the moving vessel must avoid a collision, does not apply when there is not wind enough to make her mind her helm. Buzzard v. The Petrel, 6 McLean (N. Y.) 491.

2. The Ajace, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 579; The Alabama, 18 Fed. Rep. 831; The Jeremiah Godfrey, 17 Fed. Rep. 738; The City of Milwaukee, 14 Fed. Rep. 365; The Salley, 19 Fed. Rep. 335.

A vessel wrongfully or carelessly interposed in the track of another, so as to render a collision inevitable to the latter, is responsible therefor the same as if the blow was given by her movement directly against the one striking her. The New Jersey, Olc. Adm. 415.

But even if a vessel should anchor in such passageway, without necessity, that will not authorize neglect in any other vessel attempting to pass. Such other vessel is bound to use ordinary care and skill, and if, through want of it, a collision should occur, her owners would be liable to the owners of the anchored vessel for the damages. Knowlton v. Sanford, 32 Me. 148; The Indiana, 1 Abb. Adm. 330.

Two boats, the T and a barge, moored on the opposite sides of a canal, the S with a car float in tow, and in an unfavorable condition of the tide, attempted to pass between the vessels, and collided with the T. Held, that the T was also in fault in remaining in her position after the bark moored on the other side, and the damages should be divided. The Margaret J. Sanford, 37 Fed. Rep. 148; The Behera, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 583.

A vessel—held, not chargeable with a fault contributing to a collision in anchoring within three hundred feet of the end of a pier contrary to a regulation of the port, especially as it appeared that vessels were in the habit of anchoring where she did. The E. A. Packer, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 520.

A vessel was anchored in the middle of a river 1,900 feet wide. She maintained an anchor light and an anchor watch. There was ample room to pass on either side of her. A steam barge with five boats in tow, instead of keeping off, passed so near that the last quently passing, is not a proper place.¹ A vessel ought not to be moored and lie in the channel, or entrance to a port, except in cases of necessity; or, if anchored there from necessity, she ought not to remain there longer than the necessity continues. If she does, and a collision takes place with a vessel entering the harbor, she will be considered in fault.² A vessel should not be anchored or moored so near to another that the motion of the water, created by passing steamers,³ the wind, or tides will cause a collision.⁴ The vessels must be anchored or moored in the proper boat struck. The mate of the anchored vessel saw the danger, and might have run out more anchor chain, or ported his helm, but did not. Held, that the tow was not in fault, but that damages should be divided between the steam barge and the anchored vessel. The Ogemaw, 32 Fed. Rep. 919.

1. Morten v. Five Canal Boats, 24 Fed. Rep. 500; The Lucy D., 21 Fed. Rep. 142; The St. Lawrence, 19 Fed. Rep. 328; The Exchange, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 168.

2. The Scioto, Davies (U. S.) 359.

Where there is a common and known passageway, in a river for vessels to a wharf, no person has a right, ordinarily, to obstruct such passage by anchoring a vessel upon it, or so near it as to expose other vessels to danger, by compelling them to depart from the passageway. In case of absolute necessity, however, a vessel may lawfully anchor upon such passageway, remaining no longer than the necessity exists. In such case the master must exercise reasonable skill, prudence and care, to give all others their just rights; and whether he performs that duty is a question of fact for the jury. Knowlton v. Sanford, 32 Me. 148.

3. The Greenpoint, 18 Fed. Rep. 186.

4. Rogers v. Hurney, 4 Cliff. (U. S.) 582; The Lilian M. Vigus, 22 Fed. Rep. 747; The Fort Lee, 31 Fed. Rep. 570; Meyers v. The American and The Nile, 38 Fed. Rep. 256; The Ponca, 19 Fed. Rep. 223. See The Charles R. Stone, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 182; The Indian v. The Jessie, 12 L. T., N. S. 586; The Maggie Armstrong v. The Blue Belle, 14 L. T., N. S. 340; The Lidskjalf, Swa. 117; The Vivid, 42 L. J. Adm. 57; 29 L. T., N. S. 375; Hodkinson v. Fernie, 2 C. B., N. S. 415; Vantine v. The Lake, 2 Wall. Jr. (C. C.) 52; The John Cottrell, 34 Fed. Rep. 907; The Ciampa Amelia, 41 Fed. Rep. 57; The Moxey, 1 Abb. Adm. 73; The Lincoln, 1 Low. (U. S.) 46.

The steamboat W was moored outside of another steamboat, the O, alongside of a pier, other steamboats lying astern of them. All were laid up for the winter, the W being securely fastened to the O and the pier. The owner of two barges desiring to take them up into the slip to lie up, and not being able to do so on account of ice, made them fast for the night alongside of the W, being told to moor them there by a harbormaster who was not shown to have any official authority as to the mooring of vessels. At that time it was known that, with a flood tide and an easterly wind, ice was liable to come into the slip with great force. During the night, the tide being flood and the wind easterly, the ice did come in, and carried the barges and the W and the O away from the pier and against those lying astern, and the W was injured by such collision. Held, that the injury did not arise from any inevitable accident; that the barges were not properly moored to guard against a danger which was then to be apprehended; that the injury to the W resulted from such improper mooring, and that the barges were liable. The Energy, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 158.

The schooner S was towed to a wharf, and berthed on the outside and within two or three feet of the canal boat C, which was unloading. The S was warned by the C to keep off, or both would go aground at low water, and the C be injured; but the S remained where she was, although she could easily have gotten away by employing a tug, if not by her own efforts. When the tide fell the C grounded, and collided with the S, receiving some injury, but finally getting away. On returning to her position, it was found that the S had got several feet closer to the wharf, in consequence of which, at the next low tide, the vessels again collided, the C receiving further injury. The S could easily have moved off at place,¹ and securely fastened.² So due care should be exercised in fastening vessels to their moorings so that they will not unnecessarily interfere with the movements of other boats.³ Where high tide before the second collision. Held, that she was liable for the damages caused by both collisions. Call v. The Addie Schlaefer, 37 Fed. Rep. 382.

Anchoring directly to leeward of another vessel, at a distance of one hundred and twenty-five to one hundred and fifty fathoms, is not of itself negligence. Julia M. Hallock, Sprague (U. S.) 539.

1. See the Jeremiah Godfrey, 17 Fed. Rep. 738; The Avon, 22 Fed. Rep. 905; Shields v. New York, 18 Fed. Rep. 748; Seabrook v. Raft of Railroad cross-ties, 40 Fed. Rep. 596; Culbertson v. Southern Belle, 18 How. (U. S.) 584; The D. S. Gregory, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 528; The Margaret J. Sanford, 30 Fed. Rep. 714; The Nicholson, 28 Fed. Rep. 889; The Canima, 32 Fed. Rep. 302; The Halsey, 28 Fed. Rep. 255.

Where a collision results because the anchored vessel is in an improper place, she is in fault. Five Canal Boats, 24 Fed. Rep. 500.

One who has negligently moored his barge to the bank of the Mississippi River cannot recover for damages to it caused by a steamer, whose swell, as she passed in the usual channel, drove the barge ashore. The Natchez, 3 Woods (U. S.) 16.

Anchorage in the middle of a river about 1,900 feet wide, leaving room on either side for vessels to pass, is not improper. The Ogemaw, 32 Fed. Rep. 919.

A pilot having mistaken his course, and not knowing where his boat is, who attempts the dangerous passage of a bridge at night, at the highest rate of speed, and without any look-out, is guilty of negligence. And if, under such circumstances, he collides with a barge moored to a bridge pier, which is out of the usual channel of navigation, and by the collision his own boat is lost, the owners of the boat cannot recover, although the barge was without a light. Baltimore etc., R. Co. v. Wheeling etc. Transp. Co., 32 Ohio St. 116.

When the authorities of a port permit vessels to moor, take in and discharge cargo at a certain buoy, it must be assumed that they sanction the use of the buoy, and treat it as a proper and sufficient mooring-place. Doward

v. Lindsey; The William Lindsey, 5 L. R., P. C. 338. If the vessel is fastened in a place safe and secure, except as rendered otherwise by the negligence of a passing vessel, it is in a proper place, unless fastened in such a manner as to be difficult of removal, in the channel along which vessels were frequently passing. Foster v. Holly, 38 Ala. 76.

2. The Thule, 3 Woods (U. S.) 670; The British Empire, 24 Fed. Rep. 493; The Wier v. The Padre, 29 Fed. Rep. 335; The Titan, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 7; The Eloina, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 458; The Kolon, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 197; The Egyptian, 1 Moore P. C. C. N. S. 373; The Louisiana, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 164; The Christopher Columbus, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 239; The Lion, Sprague (U. S.) 40.

A vessel, fastened insecurely for a storm, is liable for her consequent collision with another. The Wier v. The Padre, 29 Fed. Rep. 355.

Where the anchor of a ship fouled, and it does not appear that the dropping of a second anchor would have been of any avail, the vessel is not liable for the dragging of the anchor against a submarine cable, thereby breaking it. The Carl Frederick, 33 Fed. Rep. 589.

A tug, with two heavy car-floats in tow, encountered a squall in the North River. The tug's anchor was insufficient, and the tow drifted against boats moored at a pier. These boats exhibited no lights. Held, that the tug alone was in fault for the collision. Hadden v. The J. H. Rutter, 35 Fed. Rep. 365.

3. Price v. The Sontag, 40 Fed. Rep. 174; Saulter v. New York etc. S. S. Co., 88 N. Car. 123; 43 Am. Rep. 736; The Quaker City, 19 Fed. Rep. 141; The Cornwall, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 212. See The Harry, 15 Fed. Rep. 161; The Margaret J. Sanford, 30 Fed. Rep. 714; The Leo, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 569.

A canal boat, tied up at a pier, was allowed carelessly to project beyond its end. A vessel, in making a landing, negligently struck her. Held, that the damage should be divided, both being in fault. The Canima, 17 Fed. Rep. 271.

When there is plenty of room for a vessel to be pulled out from a dock, and she is permitted to strike a vessel the end of which projects slightly over the

a boat is set adrift and collides with another the owner is in fault.¹ But where the fastenings of a vessel are broken by inevitable accident each party must bear his own loss.² The fact that a vessel end of the pier, the former is wholly in fault. The Martino Cilento, 22 Fed. Rep. 859. So, a steamboat which, in disregard of warning, on coming into her berth at a pier, backed against a canal boat that had just swung her stern out from the pier, holding on by a line at her bow. Held, to be liable for the consequent damages. The General McCullum, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 437.

If one ship has given another a foul berth, the owners of the ship giving the foul berth have no right to demand that extraordinary precaution should be taken on board the other ship to avoid a collision. The Vivid, 42 L. J., Adm. 57; 29 L. T., N. S. 375.

1. The Chickasaw, 38 Fed. Rep. 358. Where a captain allows his sailing vessel to drift with the current in mid-channel of a great navigable thoroughfare in the night, without anchoring his vessel, it is negligence, and no recovery can be had for damages done to such vessel by a propeller accidentally coming in collision with her. 1869, Parrott v. Knickerbocker Ice Co., 2 Sweeny (N. Y.) 93.

A vessel at anchor drifted down on another vessel at anchor, which dropped her starboard anchor after both began to drift. Had the first vessel done the same, no further injury would have resulted, Held, that the first vessel, therefore, was liable for injuries resulting from her mistake. The Mary Fraser, 26 Fed. Rep. 872.

But where a vessel which had been properly fastened drifted and another was compelled to change her moorings to a more exposed condition where she foundered, held, that it was a case of inevitable accident for which the former vessel was not responsible. The Austria, 7 Sawy. (U. S.) 434.

2. The Austria, 14 Fed. Rep. 298; A Floating Dock, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 508; Doward v. Lindsay; The William Lindsay, 5 L. R., P. C., 338; The Louisiana, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 164; The Avid, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 434.

Where a vessel, made fast to a wharf by a competent band of stevedores, by fasts which, through long experience, are deemed by them sufficient, through the action of the winds and waves breaks her fastenings and drifts toward a schooner, placing the schooner in such imminent peril that, in moving to a place of safety, she is capsized and founders, it is a case of inevitable accident. The Austria, 14 Fed. Rep. 298.

In an action for damages to plaintiff's wharf, by defendant's schooner being blown against it by a violent gale, plaintiff alleged that the accident might have been avoided if the schooner had been properly fastened to its buoy, or if it had put out to sea when it began to drag towards the wharf, and that the master was negligent in not calling on a steamship nearby to tow the schooner out to sea. The master, mate, and one of the crew of the schooner testified that they did all possible to secure the vessel, and two master mariners testified that they could have done nothing more than was described, and that it would have been impracticable and dangerous to have put out to sea, or for the steamship to have towed the schooner out. Held, that a finding for defendants on the ground that the accident was inevitable was warranted. Stearns v. Hooper, 78 Cal. 341.

During a very violent gale a brig adrift in the Tyne drove down on a steamer which was lying properly moored to mooring buoys placed there by the harbor authorities. On the brig striking the steamer, the ring of one of the buoys was carried away, and the steamer got adrift and drove down the river and ultimately came in contact with, and did damage to a bark, whose owner instituted a cause of damage against the steamer in the county court, to recover for the damage done to their vessel by the steamer. At the hearing it was proved that the chain cables of the steamer had been unbent at the time she got adrift, and that no lookout had previously been kept on deck, though it was known that the weather was getting worse. Held, that a defence of inevitable accident, set up by the owners of the steamer, was not sustained, and that the steamer was alone to blame for the collision. The Pladda, 2 L. R., Adm. Div. 34; 46 L. J., Adm. Div. 61.

Vessel on Ways.—Where a vessel, in process of being hauled up on ways for repairs, is so negligently handled, and so insufficiently propped, that she breaks loose and slides into the water, coming into collision with another ves-

"has no business to be where she is," or to go where she goes, is chiefly pertinent as respects her own fault. As respects the other vessel, the question is whether she has any business to be where she is, and whether she contributes to the injury by her fault also.¹ To the inquiry whether a vessel voluntarily moored in an exposed position is or is not in fault because of her exposure, and of her liability to be injured herself, or to injure another vessel by some accident, or mistake, or fault of the latter in approaching her, is a question of practical judgment, to be determined according to all the circumstances of the situation.²

2. Anchor Watch.—Vessels anchored in the track of other vessels in the night time should keep an anchor watch.³ He has a right, however, to assume that an approaching vessel is obeying the law; that it has a proper lookout, and is taking the proper precautions to avoid a collision; and hence, when the watch on a vessel at anchor sees another vessel approaching at a distance of about three-quarters of a mile, and sees all her lights clearly and distinctly, he has the right to assume that the lookout on the approaching vessel sees his lights, and will, in due time, adopt the proper manœuvre to pass clear of him.⁴ Ordinarily a vessel anchored in the proper place, in the daytime and in fair weather, is not expected or legally required to be on the watch and to stand prepared to take measures to avoid vessels under way and having control of their own motions; but under exceptional circumstances, where a vessel under way is subject to special difficulties or embarrassments in her navigation, some care and precaution on the part of the vessel at anchor may become absolutely prudent and necessary that would not otherwise be obligatory.⁵ See sel, the same maritime rules of law are applicable as in ordinary collision cases. Baker v. Power, 14 Fed. Rep. 483.

1. The Mary Powell, 31 Fed. Rep. 622.

In case of collision on a river and damage resulting to the vessel of A, where it appears that said vessel was anchored at a place where vessels were prohibited from anchoring, yet if it also appears that the boat belonging to B, which caused the injury, might with ordinary care and attention, have avoided A's vessel and pursued its course, B is answerable to A for the damage done. Adams v. Wiggins, 27 Mo. 95.

A steamship, about to make a landing, saw a canal boat, which, while where it ought not to be and while having no one in charge, was not in the way of the steamship, nor in a place where a steamship had a right to go. The steamship, in attempting to make fast to the pier, ran into and sank the canal boat. Held, that the steamship was alone in fault. The Canima, 32 Fed. Rep. 302.

2. The Mary Powell, 31 Fed. Rep. 622.

3. The Oscar Townsend, 17 Fed. Rep. 93; The Fremont, 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 571; The Thomas Lea, 35 L. T., N. S. 406; The Worthington, 19 Fed. Rep. 836; The Henry Warner, 29 Fed. Rep. 601; Buzzard v. The Petril, 6 McLean (U. S.) 491.

4. The Avon, 22 Fed. Rep. 905, 906.

5. Wells v. Armstrong, 29 Fed. Rep. 216; Wells v. Armstrong, 29 Fed. Rep. 216.

Compare The Fremont, 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 571.

A small schooner, having no watch on deck, was lying at anchor inside the Delaware Breakwater on a very dark night, when vessels were constantly arriving for shelter from an approaching storm. Among them was one well manned, which, in proceeding to a proper anchorage, without any fault of either omission or commission on her

LOOKOUTS, LIGHTS. So an anchor-watch is not bound to take any active measures to get his vessel out of the way of a vessel under command, approaching, in broad daylight, at the rate of eight knots; nor to hail the approaching vessel, unless he discovers that his vessel is not seen.¹

XII. VESSELS AGROUND.—By the general maritime law those in charge of a vessel aground at night in the fairway of a navigable channel are bound to take proper means to warn others of her position.²

XIII. VESSELS DRIFTING.—A steamer, with steam up and sails set, is bound to make an effort to avoid a collision with a sailing vessel, which is likely to result from drifting.³ So when a floating boat follows the course of the current, a steamer approaching must judge of its course, so as to avoid it. This may be done by a proper exercise of skill, which the steamer is bound to use.⁴

XIV. LOOKOUT—1. Generally.—All vessels should have a competent lookout stationed in a position to descry approaching vessels at the earliest moment,⁵ and the want of an adequate lookout on part, collided with and sunk the schooner. If a sufficient watch had been on the deck of the latter, the collision might have been avoided. Held, that the vessel was not liable. The Clara, 102 U. S. 200.

The owners of a vessel moored at a wharf are not bound to keep a watch on board. Amoskeag etc. Co. v. The John Adams, 1 Cliff (U. S.) 404.

1. The Lady Franklin, 2 Low. (U. S.) 220.

2. The Industry, 40 L. J. Adm. 26; 3 L. R., Adm. 303. See The Elizabeth, The Adalia, 22 L. T., N. S. 74.

In an action for damages by collision, it was shown that the plaintiff's vessel was aground at the mouth of a harbor where no vessel had ever been aground before; that she might have been seen from the defendant's vessel in season for the latter to stand off and avoid the collision. Held, that the defendant's not seeing her, and not standing off, but keeping on, and coming into collision with the plaintiff's vessel, did not necessarily make him liable. Kelsey v. Barney, 12 N. Y. 425.

3. Butterfield v. Boyd, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 355.

4. Pearce v. Page, 24 How. (U. S.) 228.

5. The Emily, Olc. Adm. 132; The Blossom, Olc. Adm. 188; The Germania, 21 L. T., N. S. 44; Gencsee Chief v. Fitzhugh, 12 How. (U. S.) 443; Smyrna etc. Steamboat Co. v. Whilldin, 4 Harr. 228; The Indiana, 1 Abb. Adm. 330; The Julia David, 46 L.

J. Adm. Div. 54; The Thomas Lea, 35 L. T., N. S. 406; The Haverton, 31 Fed. Rep. 563; Chamberlain v. Ward, 21 How. (U. S.) 548; McFarland v. Selby Smelting and Lead Co., 17 Fed. Rep. 253; The Manitoba, 2 Flip. (U. S.) 241; The Monticello, 15 Fed. Rep. 474; The Roslyn, 22 Fed. Rep. 687; The Amboy, 22 Fed. Rep. 555; The Edwin H. Webster, 22 Fed. Rep. 171; The Geanibanta, The Transit, 1 L. R., Adm. Div. 283; 24 W. R. 1033; Ward v. The Ogdensburgh, 5 McLean (U. S.) 622; The Pavonia, 23 Blatchf. (U. S.) 403; 26 Fed. Rep. 106; The State of Texas, 20 Fed. Rep. 254; The Luna, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 495; McCabe v. Old Dominion S. S. Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 234; Ward v. Armstrong, 14 Ill. 283; Netherlands S. S. Co. v. Styles, 40 Eng. L. & Eq. 19; Baker v. Lewis, 33 Pa. St. 301; St. John v. Paine, 10 How. (U. S.) 557; Newton v. Stebbins, 10 How. (U. S.) 586; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Kerr, 33 Md. 331; The Sturgis v. Boyer, 24 How. (U. S.) 110; Whitridge v. Dill, 23 How. (U. S.) 448; Haney v. Baltimore etc. Co., 23 How. (U. S.) 287; The Sciota, Davies (U. S.) 359; The Twenty-one Friends, 33 Fed. Rep. 190; The Goslee v. Shute, 18 How. (U. S.) 463; The Racilia, 25 Fed. Rep. 111; The Drew, 25 Fed. Rep. 457; The Nevada, 106 U. S. 154; The Colon, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 512; The Esk, Liord, 24 L. T., N. S. 167; The Pladda, 2 L. R. Adm. Div. 34; 46 L. J., Adm. Div. 61; The Raritan, 32 Fed. Rep. 847; The Nacoochee, 24 Blatchf. (U.

board a vessel at sea is a culpable neglect on her part, which will, prima facie, render her responsible for injuries received from her in that condition.¹ The duty to keep a lookout is especially incumbent upon a steamer going at a rapid pace in hazy weather, in an ordinary track of vessels trading from one port to another.² And it is incumbent upon a steamer backing to keep a lookout well aft,³ though the rules of navigation do not require vessels to keep a lookout against vessels approaching from the rear and sailing in the same direction.⁴ If the ship ahead, however, sees another approaching her from a direction where her lights are not visible, and which vessel she has reason to suppose does not, in

S.) 99; James Adger, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 515; The Victor, 1 Brown Adm. 449; The Coleman, 1 Brown Adm. 456; The Wings of the Morning, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 15; The Manhasset, 34 Fed. Rep. 408; McCormick v. The Gladys, 35 Fed. Rep. 160; The Gilson, 35 Fed. Rep. 533; Kiernan v. The Leonard Richards, 38 Fed. Rep. 767; The Pennsylvania, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 536; The Cement Rock, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 443; The Manhasset, 34 Fed. Rep. 408. Compare Thomas Martin, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 517.

The window of a pilot house on board a steamer was held not to be a proper place for the only lookout. Haney v. Baltimore etc. Co., 23 How. (U. S.) 287; The Ottawa, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 268; Northern Indiana, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 92.

The pilot house is not the proper place for the lookout. The Parkersburgh, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 247; Hazlette v. Conrad, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 79.

The collision was between a steamer and a barge towed with a hawser by a propeller; the barge was held to be in fault because the propeller's lookout was where he could not see—behind the wheel house—and the propeller with her tow attempted to keep the steamer to starboard in passing, instead of porting her helm as steamers meeting each other should do. New York etc. Transp. Co. v. Philadelphia etc. Nav. Co., 22 How. (U. S.) 461.

It is not fault that the master of a steamboat was not on the hurricane deck, his post of duty, at the time of a collision, when it appears that he was at dinner and the mate was on watch. The Mabel Comeaux, 24 Fed. Rep. 490.

Ferry Boats.—A vigilant lookout on ferry boats crossing the East River is required. The America, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 155.

1. The Emily, Olc. Adm. 132; The Osseo, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 537; The Saratoga, 37 Fed. Rep. 119; The W. J. McCaldin, 35 Fed. Rep. 330; Baker v. Lewis, 33 Pa. St. 301; The Petunia, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 349; The Jeremiah, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 326; The Northern Indiana, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 92.

Pilot boats, equally with other vessels, are guilty of gross negligence by running in the night time without a competent lookout stationed forward on the deck. The Blossom, Olc. Adm. 188.

A steamer, in mid ocean, on a dark night, had no lookout on her fore-castle, but had two lookouts on the bridge, one at each end of it. She had her fore trysails set, which obstructed the view ahead from the bridge, and she was going at her utmost speed against a heavy sea. Under the circumstances, the lookouts could not reasonably have been required to remain on the fore-castle. The steamer ran into a sailing vessel and sunk her. Held, that, with the speed of the steamer, and the fore-try sail set, the lookout was insufficient, and the steamer was in fault therefor. The Java, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 524.

In a collision between two sailing vessels, the one whose duty it was to keep out of the way had no lookout, most of her crew having been disabled by yellow fever. Held, that she was not in fault. The Southern Home, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 447.

2. The Nevada, 27 L. T., N. S. 720.

3. The Kirkland, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 641. See The Colon, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 512.

In leaving the slip she must keep a lookout astern, and over her side, into the slip, if necessary. The Nevada, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 122.

4. Erwin v. Neversink Steamboat Co., 23 Hun (N. Y.) 573; 88 N. Y. 184.

fact, whether keeping a good lookout or not, see her, and is likely to come into collision with her, it is her duty to give some warning to the overtaking ship, not necessarily by exhibiting a light, but by some signal, such as the firing of a gun, the showing a light, or otherwise, which will indicate her whereabouts to the overtaking ship, and call the attention of that ship to the danger of a collision.¹ The precaution of a lookout is not indispensable where he could be of no service,² or where the officer of the deck is in full possession of all the information which a lookout could give.³

2. Who Is a Proper Lookout.—The captain, who attends to the navigation of the vessel, is not a proper lookout, neither is the man at the wheel.⁴

1. The Anglo-Indian, 33 L. T., N. S. 233.

2. The George Murray, 22 Fed. Rep. 117; Clark v. The Farragut, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 334; Churchill v. The Altonower, 39 Fed. Rep. 118; The Eider, 37 Fed. Rep. 903.

A large steamer overtaking a tug in New York harbor, neglected the rules of navigation applicable to overtaking vessels; probably supposing that the tug would get out of the way, and not noticing that she had two large logs lashed to her sides, so that her movements were impeded. The tug had no lookout, but a lookout would not have enabled her to avoid the collision which occurred. Held, that the steamer was responsible. The Bermuda, 17 Fed. Rep. 397.

3. The George Murray, 22 Fed. Rep. 117.

4. The Tillie, 13 Blatchf. (U. S.) 514; The Blossom, Olc. Adm. 188; Whiteridge v. Dill, 23 How. (U. S.) 448. See The Milwaukee, 1 Brown Adm. 313; The Ottawa, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 268; The Hypodame, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 216; Northern Indiana, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 92; The Ottawa, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 268; The New York v. Rea, 18 How. (U. S.) 223; The City of New York, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 194; Chamberlain v. Ward, 21 How. (U. S.) 548; The Parkersburgh, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 247; Hazlett v. Conrad, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 79.

Sufficiency of, Generally.—Where a fast and powerful steamer, during a hazy night, had no lookout except the mate and the helmsman, both of whom were in the wheel house, it was held that this was grossly insufficient. The Ogdensburgh, 1 Newb. Adm. 139. See The Parkersburgh, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 247.

The master of a steamboat, standing upon the upper deck some fifteen feet from the water, and about sixty feet from the bow of the boat, is not a sufficient lookout for a steamboat descending the Hudson River, and approaching the city of New York by night. Steamboat New York v. Rae, 18 How. (U. S.) 223.

As a general rule, one to whom belongs the responsibility of controlling and directing the conduct of all the affairs on board a vessel is not a proper lookout. The City of New York, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 194; The Parkersburgh, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 247.

Where the lookout divided his attention between looking out and reefing sail, is insufficient. The Twenty-One Friends, 33 Fed. Rep. 190.

Where the C had two men of experience stationed as lookouts in the "eyes of the ship," there was a sufficient compliance with its duty as to lookouts. Bradley v. The John Pridgeon, Jr., 38 Fed. Rep. 261. See Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Kerr, 33 Md. 331; The Germania, 21 L. T., N. S. 44.

Captain Acting as Pilot and Lookout.—Where the captain of a steamer is acting at the same time as pilot and lookout, the vessel has not a proper lookout, and the owners may be liable for damage caused by such omission. Bill v. Smith, 39 Conn. 206.

Passengers as Lookouts.—Passengers cannot be regarded as lookouts in any sense known to the maritime law, unless they are specially designated by the master for that purpose. Amoskeag etc. Co. v. The John Adams, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 404.

Lookout in the Day Time.—It is necessary that there should be a lookout in the day time. The New Orleans, 106 must be made out for a departure from a rule of navigation before a vessel can be pronounced in fault for adhering to it.¹

XVI. LOCAL REGULATIONS.—Independent of statutory provisions the managers of vessels may, as respects themselves, make regulations for the passage of their boats. It is competent for them to waive their rights under the statute and adopt a different mode for their boats to pass each other.² So a local usage of navigation, forming a part of the common law of a State, is as valid, in respect of the power and legislation of congress on the subject, as is a statute of the State affecting commerce or navigation.³ Regulations instituted by the harbor master, under the authority of the statute, are of binding efficacy, and form part of the law of the State.⁴ So the corporations of cities and towns on navi-put a-starboard to avoid a barge. Held, that the burden of showing that a departure from the thirteenth rule was necessary lay on the defendants; and, in the absence of evidence to show what became of the barge, they were to blame for the collision. The Concordia, L. R., 1 Adm. & Ecc. 93.

1. The Clement, 2 Curt. (C. C.) 363.

2. Moore v. Moss, 14 Ill. 106, 111; The Milwaukee, 1 Brown Adm. 313. See Malcomson v. General Steam Nav. Co., The Ranger and The Cologne, 4 L. R., P. C. 519; 21 W. R. 273; The Thomas P. Way, 30 Fed. Rep. 207; Hoffman v. Union Ferry Co., 68 N. Y. 385.

It being the usage in Chicago harbor for many years for pleasure yachts of less than ten tons to carry a single white light forward of the mast, where it could be seen at any point forward of quarter, the captain of a steamer, familiar with the waters of the harbor and the fact that such yachts carried but one light, is estopped from saying that collision with a yacht was caused by its failure to carry regulation lights. The Gazelle, 33 Fed. Rep. 301.

Where well-known usage has sanctioned one course for a steamer ascending, and another for a sail vessel descending a river, the vessel, if required by natural obstructions to navigation to change her course is, after passing them, bound to resume it. Failing to do so, and continuing her course directly into that which an approaching steamer is properly navigating, she is not entitled to recover for a loss occasioned by a collision which the steamer endeavored to prevent by adopting the only means in her power. The John L. Hasbrouck, 93 U. S. 405.

The existence of a custom must be established by the proof in the case in order to justify the failure to comply with the rule. The Niagara, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 37; The Washington, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 276.

Vessel Stemming the Tide.—The usage is, for vessels having the tide, to keep farther out; those stemming the tide, nearer the shore; and this usage will be considered in questions of collision. Smyrna etc. Steamboat Co. v. Whillden, 4 Harr. 228.

3. Fitch v. Livingston, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 492.

Hudson River.—The customs as to the navigation of the North river are in consonance with nautical usages at sea, and the rules regulating such navigation are the same as obtain in regard to sea-going vessels. The Argus, Olc. Adm. 304.

It seems that there is no settled usage among those navigating the Hudson river, which requires vessels anchoring over night to take up a position within any particular limits as respects the shore; nor any usage justifying a steamboat, making a night trip, in dispensing, while running in the middle of the river, with any care or precautions to avoid collision, which she would be bound to take if running near the shore. The Indiana, 1 Abb. Adm. 330.

New York Harbor.—It being the usage, in the harbor of New York, to run steamboats in thick weather, the court refused to hold that both vessels were in fault, so as to justify an apportionment of the damages. The Sylph, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 24.

4. Griswold v. Sharpe, 2 Cal. 17. See The Grand Republic, 16 Fed. Rep. 424.

A ferry boat cannot, however, justify under a municipal ordinance which does not purport to regulate the navigable rivers, when authorized by their legislatures, have the right to pass rules and regulations with regard to their landings, and it is the duty of courts of admiralty to respect and uphold them.¹ And where there is a well known rule as to mooring or fastening, it should be followed, and it is immaterial whether it is established by usage or by ordinance.² Rules made by a local authority governing the navigation of a river are to be taken as evidence of what it is the duty of vessels to do in the circumstances named therein; and although the mere breach of one or any of them will not be sufficient reason for holding a ship to blame for a collision, yet, if that breach occasions or contributes to the collision, the existence of the rule will afford the best reason for holding the ship violating the rule to be guilty of a breach of duty, and consequently to blame for the collision.³

XVII. DUTIES AFTER COLLISION.—When a collision takes place which might probably endanger life, it is the duty of the vessel to stay by until the extent of the damage is ascertained,⁴ and to render what assistance it may be able to protect life and property.⁵

XVIII. RULES FIXING LIABILITY FOR COLLISIONS—1. Generally.—In cases of collisions the prosecuting vessel must not only make it manifest that the loss was occasioned by the fault of those in charge of the colliding vessel,⁶ but she must prove that she used all proper precautions and measures to prevent it.⁷ She cannot gation of the river. E. C. Scranton, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 50.

1. The Southern Belle, 1 Newb. Adm. 461; Harbor Master v. Southerland, 47 Ala. 511.

Effect.—Municipal ordinances concerning vessels are binding only as police regulations. Beyond that they have no force in the admiralty courts. But they may be read, and the court will determine for itself their application to the subject matter. The Paknetto, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 140.

2. Culberton v. Southern Belle, 18 How. (U. S.) 584; The Bedford, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 200.

3. The Raithwaite Hall, 30 L. T., N. S. 233. See The Vanderbilt, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 225.

4. The Queen of the Orwell, 11 N. R. 499; The Germania, 21 L. T., N. S. 44.

5. Germania, 21 L. T., N. S. 44; The Queen, 2 L. R., Adm. 354; The Adriatic, 33 L. T., N. S. 102.

Although it is the duty of every vessel, whether British or foreign, to render assistance to another which she has injured in collision, the rule will not compel a ship to remain alongside another so injured so as to run risk of capture by an enemy's fleet. The Thuringia, 41 L. J. Adm. 44; 26 L. T., N. S. 446.

6. The Columbus, 1 Abb. Adm. 384, 385; The Haverton, 31 Fed. Rep. 563; Steamboat Farmer v. McCraw, 26 Ala. 189.

7. The Clara, 102 U. S. 200; McCabe v. Old Dominion S. S. Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 234, 338; The Nacoochee, 28 Fed. Rep. 462; The Colorado, 91 U. S. 692; Karasich v. Hasbrouk, 28 Wis. 569; The Boston, Olc. Adm. 407; The Haverton, 31 Fed. Rep. 563; The New Jersey, Olc. Adm. 415; The Neptune, Olc. Adm. 483; Ward v. The Ogdensburgh, 5 McLean (U. S.) 622.

To exonerate a vessel it must be shown that she had taken every reasonable precaution to meet any emergency which might arise, and that she was not guilty of want of ordinary care, caution or maritime skill. McCabe v. Old Dominion S. S. Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 234, 238.

In all cases of collision between a sail vessel and steamer the latter will not be exonerated unless on proof that every precautionary measure, such as sustain the action merely by convicting the other steamer of negligence or fault in her movements, which conduced to the collision.¹

2. Where One Vessel Is in Fault.—When a collision takes place by the fault of one of the vessels, she is responsible for all the damage.² The fact that one boat is in fault will not justify another in the infliction of an injury that can be avoided by the observance of proper skill and care.³ And, in determining the slackening the speed, was adopted to avoid the collision. If the steamer conforms to the rules of navigation and the sail vessel does not, still the latter will not be liable unless it appear that such nonconformity, and not the steamer's want of the utmost care, was the sole cause of the accident. The Fashion, 1 Newb. Adm. S.

In Tuff v. Warman, 5 C. B., N. S. 573, it is held that mere negligence or want of ordinary care or caution will not, however, disentitle the plaintiff to recover, unless it be such that but therefor, the misfortune could not have happened; nor if the defendant might by the exercise of care on his part have avoided the consequence of the neglect or carelessness of the plaintiff.

1. The Relief, Olc. Adm. 104. See The Martha Brower, 27 Fed. Rep. 513; The John S. Smith, 27 Fed. Rep. 398; The New Jersey, Olc. Adm. 415; The Neptune, Olc. Adm. 483; Swift v. Brownell, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 467; Tuff v. Warman, 5 C. B., N. S. 573.

In case of collision the libellants must show due precaution on their part, as well as fault in the respondents. Fashion v. Ward, 6 McLean (U. S.) 152; Griswold v. Sharpe, 2 Cal. 17.

A vessel out of place is not to be run into with impunity, if she may be avoided by the use of ordinary skill and care. Cummins v. Spruance, 4 Harr. (U. S.) 315; Moore v. Moss, 14 Ill. 106.

2. The Scioto, Davies (U. S.) 359; McCreedy v. Wells, 18 How. (U. S.) 89; Pope v. The R. B. Forbes, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 331; The Carolus, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 69; The Greene County Tanner, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 396; The Narragansett, Olc. Adm. 246; The British America, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 417; The Franz Sigel, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 480; The Woodrup-Sims, 2 Dods. 83; The Sappho, 9 Jur. 560; Reeves v. Ship Constitution, Gilpin 579; The Earle Spencer, 33 L. T., N. S. 235; Netherlands Steamship Co. v. Styles, 40 Eng. L. & Eq. 19; The American Eagle, 29 Fed. Rep. 302;

The Manhasset, 34 Fed. Rep. 408; The Continental, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 3; Chase v. Belden, 117 N. Y. 637; The City of Chester, 27 Fed. Rep. 319; The Robert I. Poulson, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 494; The Ellen Tobin, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 446; The Haney v. Baltimore etc. Co., 23 How. (U. S.) 287; The Luna, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 495; The Osseo, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 518; The New Orleans, 106 U. S. 13; The Osceola, 33 Fed. Rep. 719; The Narragansett, Olc. Adm. 246; The Active, 22 Fed. Rep. 175; The Abbottsford, 98 U. S. 440; The William H. Vanderbilt, 37 Fed. Rep. 116; The City of Paris, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 529; The E. C. Scranton, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 25; Snow v. Hill, 20 How. (U. S.) 543; The Ligo, 2 Hagg. 356; The Thomas, 5 Robinson, 345; Vanderplank v. Miller, Moody & Malk. 169; Sills v. Brown, 9 Carr. & Payne 613; The A. R. Weeks v. The Ephrussi, 26 Fed. Rep. 654; The Old Dominion S. S. Co., 8 Ben. (U. S.) 221; The Gevalia and The Vision, 39 Fed. Rep. 47; The Tonawanda, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 516; McCreery v. The Jessie Russell, 38 Fed. Rep. 624; The Amos C. Barstow, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 401; Hunt v. The Mischief, 32 Fed. Rep. 304.

One vessel brought into immediate jeopardy by another's fault is not liable, even if she has not been manoeuvred with perfect skill and presence of mind. The Maggie J. Smith v. Walker, 123 U. S. 349.

3. The Maria Martin, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 31. See Mills v. The Nathaniel Holmes, 1 Bond (U. S.) 352; Western Ins. Co. v. The Goody Friends, 1 Bond (U. S.) 459; The Haverton, 31 Fed. Rep. 566.

Some negligence on the part of one in fastening his boats in an exposed position does not excuse gross negligence in another in running into and destroying them. Bequette v. People's Trans. Co., 2 Oreg. 200.

Although the act of fastening a skiff to a snag in the middle of the channel question of fault with a view to the ascertainment of liability for an injury, the proximate cause of the injury must be regarded. If that proximate cause is found in the improper attempt of the colliding vessel to land, or the inexcusable violence with which it was landed, the respondents are not shielded from liability by proof of negligence or fault on the part of the other vessel which had no connection with the act that produced the injury.¹

3. Where Both Are in Fault.—Where both are in fault the loss is divided.² But this rule will not be applied where the fault on of a harbor where vessels are frequently passing, and in such a manner that it could not be conveniently and expeditiously loosed, is an act of negligence on the part of the owner or person having charge of the skiff, yet if the skiff, being in that situation, is sunk in consequence of the carelessness of a passing vessel, it cannot be said that the fault of so placing the skiff was a proximate cause of the injury, and therefore does not preclude a recovery against the owners of the negligent vessel. Foster v. Holley, 38 Ala. 76.

1. The Maria Martin, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 31.

2. The America, 32 Fed. Rep. 845; The Columbia, 23 Blatchf. (U. S.) 268; 25 Fed. Rep. 844; The Warren, 23 Blatchf. (U. S.) 282; 25 Fed. Rep. 782; The Drew, 22 Fed. Rep. 852; The Connecticut, 103 U. S. 710; The Martello, 34 Fed. Rep. 71; McCabe v. Old Dominion S. S. Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 234; Chamberlain v. Ward, 21 How. (U. S.) 548; The Haverton, 31 Fed. Rep. 563; The Mary Morgan, 28 Fed. Rep. 333; The Standard, 23 Fed. Rep. 207; Foster v. The Miranda, 6 McLean (U. S.) 221; The Howard, 30 Fed. Rep. 280; The Pavonia, 23 Fed. Rep. 204; The Roslyn, 22 Fed. Rep. 689; The City of Macon, 20 Fed. Rep. 159; The Harry, 15 Fed. Rep. 161; The N. B. Starbuck, 29 Fed. Rep. 797; Williams v. The Whisper, 37 Fed. Rep. 495; The Omega, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 487; The Captain Miller, 33 Fed. Rep. 585; The State of Alabama, 17 Fed. Rep. 847; The Wesley A. Grove, 27 Fed. Rep. 311; The Seringapatam, 5 Notes of Cases, 61, 66; 2 W. Rob. 506; The Sappho, 9 Jur. 560; Vaux v. Sheffer, 8 Moore P. C. 75; The De Cock, 5 Month. Law Mag. 303; 2 Law Rep. 311; 22 A. Jur. 464; The Schooner Catherine v. Dickinson, 17 How. (U. S.) 170, 177; Brig James Gray v. The Ship John Fraser, 21 How. (U. S.) 184, 195; Rogers v. St'r St. Charles, 19

How. (U. S.) 108; The Oratava, 5 Month. Law Mag. 45; The Rival, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 128; The Scioto, Davies (U. S.) 359; Lenox v. Winsimmet Co., 1 Sprague (U. S.) 160; Gen. Steam Nav. Co. v. Tonkin, 4 Moore P. C. 314; The Monarch, 1 W. Rob. 21; The Montreal, 24 Eng. L. & Eq. 580; The Victoria, 3 W. Rob. 49; Allen v. Mackay, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 219; The Nautilus, Ware (U. S.) 529; O'Neil v. Sears, 2 Sprague (U. S.) 52; The Marcia Tribou, 2 Sprague (U. S.) 17; Reeves v. Ship Constitution, Gilpin (U. S.) 579; The Seacaucus, 34 Fed. Rep. 68; The Scuff, 32 Fed. Rep. 237; The Manitoba, 122 U. S. 97; The Michael Davitt, 28 Fed. Rep. 886; The Stamford, 27 Fed. Rep. 227; The City of Atlanta, 26 Fed. Rep. 456; The Perkiomen, 27 Fed. Rep. 573; Thomas Swann, 1 Newb. Adm. 158; Thomas Martin, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 517; The Hypodame, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 216; Phoenix, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 27; The Favorita, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 30; The Hibernia, 31 L. T., N. S. 805; The Fulda, 31 Fed. Rep. 351; The Sammy, 35 Fed. Rep. 327; The Gilson, 35 Fed. Rep. 333; The Fanwood, 28 Fed. Rep. 373; The Electra, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 282; The Havre and The Scotland, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 295; The Scioto, Davies (U. S.) 359; Brig James Gray v. Ship John Fraser, 21 How. (U. S.) 184; Barrett v. Williamson, 4 McLean (U. S.) 589; Halderman v. Beckwith, 4 McLean (U. S.) 286; The City of Greenville, 22 Fed. Rep. 347; The Alberta, 23 Fed. Rep. 807; De Lelle v. The Atlanta, 34 Fed. Rep. 918; The Mary Patten, 2 Low. (U. S.) 196; The Nacoochee, 28 Fed. Rep. 462; Milliken v. The C. H. Northam, 37 Fed. Rep. 238; The Garden City, 19 Fed. Rep. 529; The Armitage Breasley, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 108; The Drew, 25 Fed. Rep. 457; The State of Alabama, 17 Fed. Rep. 847; The Continental, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 345; The Uncle Abe, 18 Fed. Rep. 270; The Brothers, 2 Biss.

(U. S.) 104; The Magenta, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 495; The Louisiana, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 371; The Pegasus, 19 Fed. Rep. 46; Parkersburg, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 247; The Bay State, 11 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 297, aff'g 6 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 198; Abb. Adm. 235; The Rival, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 128; Lenox v. Winisminnet Co., 1 Sprague (U. S.) 160; The Marcia Tribou, 2 Sprague (U. S.) 17; The North Star, 106 U. S. 17; The Sapphire, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 51; The Gray Eagle 9 Wall. (U. S.) 505; The John Henry, 3 Ware (U. S.) 264; The Mary Morgan, 28 Fed. Rep. 333; The Mary Ida, 20 Fed. Rep. 741; The Monticello, 15 Fed. Rep. 474; The Chas. E. Soper, 19 Fed. Rep. 844; The David Dows, 16 Fed. Rep. 154; Collins v. Nickerson, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 128; Peters v. Warren Ins. Co., 1 Story (U. S.) 463, 471; The Standard, 23 Fed. Rep. 207; The B. & C., 18 Wall. (U. S.) 543; The Sam Brown, 29 Wall. (U. S.) 650; The Maggie Burke, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 741; The Jeremiah Godfrey, 17 Fed. Rep. 738; Naunton v. The Oregon, 1 Pac. L. Mag. 242; Kirk v. The Osseo, 19 Fed. Rep. 844; The S. Shaw, 6 Fed. Rep. 93; The Wings of the Morning, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 15; The Bedford, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 200; Cohen v. The Mary T. Wilder, Taney's Dec. (U. S.) 567; Elliott v. The Volunteer, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 568; The Non Pareille, 33 Fed. Rep. 524; Vanderbilt v. Reynolds, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 80; The Farnley, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 298; The C. L. Taylor, 2 Wash. Ter. 93; The Fred W. Chase, 31 Fed. Rep. 91; The S. B. Hume, 24 Fed. Rep. 296; The City of Merida, 24 Fed. Rep. 229; The S. Anderson, 27 Fed. Rep. 392; The Nacoochee, 22 Fed. Rep. 855; West Virginia etc. R. Co. v. The Isle of Pines, 24 Fed. Rep. 498; The Westernland, 24 Fed. Rep. 703; The Lizzie Henderson, 20 Fed. Rep. 524; The Helen, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 116; Lucas v. Thomas Swann, 6 McLean (U. S.) 282; Standard Oil Co. v. The Garden City, 38 Fed. Rep. 860; Meigs v. The Northerner, 1 Wash. Ter. 91; The City of Paris, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 531; The Industry, 27 Fed. Rep. 767; The Fort Lee, 31 Fed. Rep. 570; The Bay State, 1 Abb. Adm. 235; The Hattie M. Spraker, 29 Fed. Rep. 457; The Plymouth Rock, 26 Fed. Rep. 40; The Minnie, 31 Fed. Rep. 301; Memphis etc. Packet Co. v. H. C. Yaeger Transp. Co., 3 McCrary (U. S.) 259; Wilson v. Canada Shipping Co., 2 L. R., App. Cas. 389; s. c., Nom. The Lake St. Clair v. The Underwriter, 36

L. T., N. S. 155; Williams v. The Whisper, 37 Fed. Rep. 495; The Minnie, 20 Fed. Rep. 543; The Nereus, 23 Fed. Rep. 448. Compare The Martha Brewer, 27 Fed. Rep. 513; The Aliwal, 25 Eng. Law & Eq. 602; Cummins v. Spruance, 4 Harr. 315.

If one of the two vessels is a total loss the owners thereof cannot, by virtue of the Limited Liability act, claim a decree for half the damage without first deducting the damage to the other vessel. The North Star, 106 U. S. 17.

In an action against two vessels equally in fault, the damages should be divided, any balance not collectible by the libellant against one being collectible against the other. The Sterling, 106 U. S. 647.

A fault of one vessel will not excuse any want of care, diligence or skill in another, so as to exempt her from sharing the loss and damage. The Scioto, Davies (U. S.) 359.

The fact that one of the vessels, colliding through mutual fault, was wholly lost does not prevent recoupment by the other (upon equal division of damages) for half the value of the cargo. The Hercules, 20 Fed. Rep. 205.

Where a collision is caused by defective lights on one vessel, and by the want of a lookout on the other and too great speed on her part, both are in fault. The Titan, 23 Fed. Rep. 413.

A schooner, going at the rate of seven miles an hour, came into collision with a steamboat going at the rate of fifteen. Had either been going at a more moderate speed, the collision might have been avoided. Held, that both were in fault, and that damages should be apportioned. The Rhode Island, 17 Fed. Rep. 554.

Where a collision results in part from too high a rate of speed on the steamer's part, and in part from defective lights on the sailing vessel, both are in fault, and the damages should be equally divided. The Alaska, 22 Fed. Rep. 548.

In The David Dows, 16 Fed. Rep. 154, it is held that the law provides for a division of loss in three cases—where the fault is inscrutable; where there is no fault on either side, and when both parties are guilty of negligence.

Rule of Common Law.—The general rule of the common law is, that, if both vessels are to blame, neither can recover damages for injuries caused by the collision; but this rule applies only to faults which operated directly and one side is flagrant, and on the other so trivial as to leave it in doubt whether it at all contributed to the accident.¹ If the collision occurs by the wilful fault or intentional wrong of both parties, the damages will not be apportioned, but the libel will be dismissed.² So if there is reasonable doubt as to which party is to blame, the loss must be sustained by the party on whom it has fallen.³ If one has suffered more than the other a decree should be made against the one which suffered least for one-half the difference in their respective losses.⁴

4. Where Neither Is in Fault.—If neither be in fault the loss rests where it falls.⁵

immediately to produce the collision. Steamboat Farmer v. McCraw, 26 Ala. 189; Broadwell v. Swigert, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 39; Rathbun v. Payne, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 399; Barnes v. Cole, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 188; Kelly v. Cunningham, 1 Cal. 365; Myers v. Perry, 1 La. An. 372; Duggins v. Watson, 15 Ark. 118; Dunn v. McComb, 11 La. An. 325; Dowell v. The Gen. Steam. Nav. Co., 5 Ell. & B. 195; 32 Eng. L. & Eq. 158; Luxford v. Large, 5 Car. & P. 421; Vanderplank v. Miller, Moody & M. 169; Lack v. Seward, 4 Car. & P. 106; Sills v. Brown, 9 Car. & P. 601; Handasyde v. Wilson, 3 Car. & P. 528, 530; per BEST, C. J., Vennall v. Garner, 1 Crompt. & M. 21; 3 Tyrw. 85; Simpson v. Hand, 6 Whart. (U. S.) 311; Clyde Navigation Co. v. Barclay, 36 L. T., N. S. 379. See also The Gen. Steam Nav. Co. v. Mann, 14 C. B. 127; 26 Eng. L. & Eq. 339, 341; Union Steamship Co. v. Nottinghams, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 115; Baker v. Lewis, 33 Pa. St. 301; Digby v. Kenton Iron Co., 8 Bush (Ky.) 166; Halderman v. Beckwith, 4 McLean (U. S.) 286; Barrett v. Williamson, 4 McLean (U. S.) 589; Lord v. Hazeltine, 67 Me. 399; Artic Fire Ins. Co. v. Austin, 69 N. Y. 470; Blanchard v. New Jersey Steamboat Co., 59 N. Y. 292; Collinson v. Larkins, 3 Taunt. (U. S.) 1; Tuff v. Warman, 2 C. B., N. S. 740; The Sisters, 44 L. J. Adm. 23.

The rule of the common law that contributory negligence prevents a recovery is not applicable in admiralty. The David Dows, 16 Fed. Rep. 154.

1. The M. Dousman, 1 Newb. Adm. 236; Ralston v. The State Rights, Crabbe (U. S.) 22. See The C. S. Butler. The Baltic, 30 L. T., N. S., 475; 43 L. J. Adm. 17.

2. The R. L. Maybey, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 88.

3. The Grace Girdler, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 196.

4. Beatty v. Hanna, Bk. 30 U. S. L. ed. 1095; The North Star, 106 U. S. 17.

5. The Rebecca Shepherd, 32 Fed. Rep. 926; The Sylph, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 24; Broadwell v. Swigert, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 39; Myers v. Perry, 1 La. An. 372; The Continental, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 345; Union S. S. Co. v. New York etc., S. S. Co., 24 How. (U. S.) 307, 313; The Morning Light, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 550, 561; The Shannon and The Placida, 7 Jur. 380; s. c., nom. The Shannon, 1 W. Rob. 463; The Catherine of Dover, 2 Hagg. Adm. 145, 154; Jameson v. Drinkald, 12 J. B. Moore 148; The Celt, 3 Hagg. Adm. 328, note; The Woodrop-Sims, 2 Dods. 83; The Thornley, 7 Jur. 659; The Ebenezer, 2 W. Rob. 206; Fashion v. Wards, 6 McLean (U. S.) 152; Duggins v. Watson, 15 Ark. 118; Myers v. Perry, 1 La. An. 372; The Brig Veruma v. Clark, 1 Tex. 30; Cummins v. Spruance, 4 Harr. (Del.) 315; Smyrna Steamboat Co. v. Whilldin, 4 Harr. (Del.) 228; The Ligo, 2 Hagg. Adm. 356; The Moxey, Abb. Adm. 73; The Eliza & Abby, 1 Blatchf. & H. Adm. 435; Steinback v. Rae, 14 How. (U. S.) 532; Reeves v. Ship Constitution, Gilp. (U. S.) 579; The Scioto, 2 Ware (U. S.) 359; The Itinerant, 2 W. Rob. 236.

In cases of collision of vessels, occasioned by stress of weather, where neither of the parties is in fault, the owner of the injured ship must bear the loss. The Brig Veruma v. Clark, 1 Tex. 30.

Where a collision occurs between two sailing ships in thick and foggy weather, and neither is guilty of negligence in keeping lookout and making proper signals, and neither being able to see or hear the other until immediately before the collision, when they both act promptly, is inevitable acci-

5. Where Several Are in Fault.—Where several vessels are all in fault for collision, the damages should be divided between them pro rata, subject to the limitation of liability prescribed by the statute.¹

6. Negligence Generally.—The general rule that vessels approaching each other so as to involve a risk of collision are required to exercise such reasonable care to avoid injury as ordinary prudence would suggest, is understood to mean such a degree of care and attention as experience has found reasonable and necessary to prevent injury to others in like cases.² It should not be forgotten, however, that these terms are comparative, and always bear a direct relation to the particular circumstances of each case. The increasing probabilities of danger require a corresponding increase of care and vigilance to avoid it. The degree of vigilance which the law exacts, by the requirement of ordinary care, must vary with the probable consequences of negligence, and also with the command of means, to avoid injuring others, possessed by the person on whom the obligation is imposed. Under some circumstances a very high degree of vigilance is demanded by the requirement of ordinary care. Where the consequence of negligence will probably be serious injury to others, and where the means of avoiding the infliction of injury upon others are completely within the party's power, ordinary care requires almost the utmost degree of human vigilance and foresight.³ A failure to display proper lights,⁴ dent. The Rebecca Shepherd, 32 Fed. Rep. 926.

1. The Doris Eckhoff, 41 Fed. Rep. 156.

2. The Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Kerr, 25 Md. 521; Crary v. Marshall, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 530.

3. Kelsy v. Barney, 2 Kern. 425; The Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Kerr, 25 Md. 521.

4. The Frank P. Lee, 34 Fed. Rep. 480; The Nurnberg, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 505; The Oliver, 22 Fed. Rep. 848; The Excelsior, 33 Fed. Rep. 554; Chamberlain v. Ward, 21 How. (U. S.) 548; The General Steam Navigation Co. v. Morrison, 20 Eng. Law & Eq. 267; The Continental, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 3; Chase v. Belden, 117 N. Y. 637; The Haverston, 31 Fed. Rep. 563; The Mary Morgan, 28 Fed. Rep. 333; The New Orleans, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 303; The John Fenwick, 3 L. R., Adm. 500; R. B. Forbes, Sprague (U. S.) 328; Dowell v. Steam Nav. Co., 33 Eng. L. & Eq. 64; The City of Chester, 27 Fed. Rep. 319; The Robert I. Poulson, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 494; The Royal Arch, 22 Fed. Rep. 457; 22 Blatchf. (U. S.) 209; The Hercules, 17 Fed. Rep. 606; The Pottsville, 24 Fed. Rep. 655; Foster v. The Miranda, 6 McLean (U. S.) 221; The S. B. Hume, 24 Fed. Rep. 296; The Eleanor, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 88; The Wisconsin, 23 Fed. Rep. 831; The Hypodame, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 216; The Queen, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 234; The Mary Lord, 26 Fed. Rep. 862; Baker v. The City of New York, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 75; Cohen v. The Mary T. Wilder, Taney Dec. (U. S.) 567; Green v. The Adelaide, Taney Dec. (U. S.) 575.

Noncompliance by a vessel with the provisions of the navigation laws in regard to lights is negligence, which will defeat a recovery by its owners for injuries to it resulting from a collision with another vessel, if the absence of the proper lights in any way contribute to the injury. But where the evidence tends to show that the collision resulted solely from other causes, the question of contributory negligence becomes one of fact. Whitehall Transp. Co. v. M. J. Steamboat Co., 51 N. Y. 369.

When a collision occurs at night, and the lights of one of the ships are not burning at the time when the vessels or see the lights of another vessel,¹ or mistaking signals,² or a failure to have a sufficient lookout,³ or a helmsman,⁴ or slacken speed on approaching another vessel in such a way as to involve a risk of collision,⁵ or proceeding at an imcome in sight, and the court is not satisfied that the want of those lights is occasioned by circumstances over which the crew of the ship had no control, she must, even if the want of the lights did not contribute to the collision, be held to blame under the Merchant Shipping act, 1873, 36 & 37 Vict., ch. 85, § 17. The Hibernia, 31 L. T., N. S. 805; 24 W. R. 60.

1. The Niagara County, 25 Fed. Rep. 208; The City of Chester, 27 Fed. Rep. 319; The Fanita, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 545; The Zodiac, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 171; The Martha Brower, 27 Fed. Rep. 513; The Seacaucus, 34 Fed. Rep. 68; The Atlas, 34 Fed. Rep. 543; The Englishman, 37 L. T., N. S. 412; The Manitoba, 2 Flip. (U. S.) 241; The Amboy, 22 Fed. Rep. 555.

A ferry boat came into collision with a canal boat towed by a tug. The ferry boat did not see the lights of the tug, indicating that there was a tow, and so started ahead before the tow had got by. Held, that the ferry boat was alone in fault. The Flushing, 32 Fed. Rep. 334.

Even if the light of one vessel was invisible, the vessel will not on that account be held to have contributed to the collision, where the other vessel has pursued a course which of itself would suffice to produce the collision. Beal v. Marchais, The Bougainville and The James C. Stevenson, 5 L. R., P. C. 316.

2. The Helena, 34 Fed. Rep. 425. See The Santa Claus, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 370; Seabrook v. Raft of Railroad Cross Ties, 40 Fed. Rep. 596; The W. M. Wood, 31 Fed. Rep. 569; Nelson v. Leland, 22 How. (U. S.) 48.

3. The Julia David, 46 L. J. Adm. Div. 54; The Nurnberg, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 505; Chamberlain v. Ward, 21 How. (U. S.) 548; Genesee Chief v. Fitzhugh, 12 How. (U. S.) 443; The Haverton, 31 Fed. Rep. 563; McFarland v. Seeby Smelting & Lead Co., 17 Fed. Rep. 253; The Roslyn, 22 Fed. Rep. 687; The Amboy, 22 Fed. Rep. 555. The Edwin H. Webster, 22 Fed. Rep. 171; The Pavonia, 23 Blatchf. (U. S.) 403; 26 Fed. Rep. 106; The New Orleans, 106 U. S. 13; The W. J. McCaldin, 35 Fed. Rep. 330; The Fanita, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 545; The Zodiac, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 171; The Tonawanda, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 516; The Nacoochee, 28 Fed. Rep. 462; The Raritan, 32 Fed. Rep. 847; The Emily, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 236; Sturgis v. Boyer, 24 How. (U. S.) 110; James Adger, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 515; The Iona, L. R., 1 P. C. 426; The Velasquez, 1 P. C. 494; The Fort Lee, 31 Fed. Rep. 570; The Eleanora, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 88; The Alabama and the Gamecock, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 476; Cianciminos Tow & Transp. Co. v. The Ripple, 41 Fed. Rep. 63; The Twenty-One Friends, 33 Fed. Rep. 190; The City of New York, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 194; The Queen, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 234; The Comet, 9 Blatchf. (U. S.) 323.

A vessel will not be condemned for a collision, upon the ground of negligence in not keeping a proper lookout, if it clearly appears from the circumstances of the collision that although a proper lookout was not kept, yet he could have been of no service in preventing the collision. Clark v. The Farragut, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 334.

A neglect to keep a proper lookout, which does not in any way contribute to a collision, cannot be alleged as a ground on which to recover damages caused by the collision. Shirley v. The Richmond, 2 Woods (U. S.) 58.

4. In an action to recover damages for a collision of boats, the fact that the plaintiff's boat was without a helmsman is of no consequence unless the accident was occasioned thereby. Haley v. Earle, 30 N. Y. 208.

5. Hall v. The Buffalo, 1 Newb. Adm. 115; The Blenheim, The Rona, The Ava, 29 L. T., N. S. 781; The Columbia, 27 Fed. Rep. 704; The Manitoba, 2 Flip. (U. S.) 241; The City of Alexandria, 31 Fed. Rep. 427; The City of Albany, 34 Fed. Rep. 812; The Syracuse, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 672; The Aurania, 29 Fed. Rep. 98; The Eider, 37 Fed. Rep. 903; The Louisiana v. The Isaac Fisher, 21 How. (U. S.) 1; The Huntsville, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 228.

proper rate in a fog, or in the dark,¹ or in a channel crowded with ships, are faults that will prevent a recovery or incur liability for a collision when the collision was due to such negligence.² Where a vessel is charged for omitting to do something which she ought to have done, there must be clear proof, first, that the thing omitted to be done was clearly within the power of the steamer; secondly, that, if done, it would in all probability have prevented the collision; and, thirdly, that it was an act which would have occurred to any officer of competent skill and experience in com-

1. McCabe v. Old Dominion S. S. Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 234; The Europa, 2 Eng. Law & Eq. Rep. 557; The Britannic, 39 Fed. Rep. 395; The Leland, 19 Fed. Rep. 771; The St. John, 29 Fed. Rep. 221; The Martello, 34 Fed. Rep. 71; The S. B. Hume, 24 Fed. Rep. 296; The City of Brooklyn, 1 L. R., Adm. Div. 276; The Iberia, 40 Fed. Rep. 893; The Atter, 4 L. R., Adm. 203; 22 W. R. 557; The City of New York, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 194; The Pennsylvania, 9 Blatchf. (U. S.) 451; Morrison v. The Petaluma, 1 Sawy. (U. S.) 127; McCready v. Goldsmith, 18 How. 89; s. c., Abb. Adm. 235; Newton v. Stebbins, 10 How. 606; The Chancellor, 4 Ben. 164; Bullock v. Lamar, 8 Law Rep. 275; The Blackstone, 1 Low. 487; The Monticello v. Mollison, 17 How. 152; The Hansa, 5 Ben. 526; The Aleppo, 5 Ben. 560; The Rose, 2 W. Rob. 1; 7 Jur. 381; The Louisiana, 2 Ben. 375; The Bristol, 4 Ben. 397; The Rhode Island, 1 Blatchf. 363; Olcott, 505; The Virgil, 2 W. Rob. 201; The Iron Duke, 9 Jur. 476; The Indiana and Buffalo, Newb. 122; The Juliet-Erskine, 6 Notes of C. 633; The Magna Charter, 25 Law T. Rep., N. S. 512; The Londonderry, 4 Notes of C., Sup. 31; The Genesee Chief, 12 How. 448; Whitridge v. Dill, 23 How. 454; Rogers v. The St. Charles, 19 How. 108; The Northern Indiana, 3 Blatchf. 92; The Westphalia, 4 Ben. 404; The Batavier, 9 Moore P. C. 287; 40 Eng. L. & E. 19; The John Adams, 1 Cliff. 404; The Pacific, Newb. 32; The Great Eastern, 11 Law T., N. S. 5; The D. S. Gregory, 6 Blatchf. 166; 2 Ben. 166; The Fashion v. Ward, 6 McLean 176; The Mattewan, 4 Ben. 107.

2. The Germania, 21 L. T., N. S. 44; The Earl Spencer, 33 L. T., N. S. 235; Netherlands Steamship Co. v. Styles, 40 Eng. L. & Eq. 19; The Martello, 34 Fed. Rep. 71; The Bay State, 1 Abb. Adm. 235; The American Eagle, 29 Fed. Rep. 302; Northern Indiana,

3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 92; Clark v. The Farragut, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 334; The Fannie, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 238; Shirley v. The Richmond, 2 Woods (U. S.) 58; The Starlight, 1 Hask. 517; Law v. Baker, 26 Fed. Rep. 164; The Franz Sigel, 6 Ben. (U. S.) 550; McCabe v. Old Dominion Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 235; The Titan, 23 Fed. Rep. 413.

Nine miles an hour is an unreasonable speed in a crowded river. The Florida, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 470. So are twelve and a half knots without a competent lookout. The Morning Star, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 67. Over five miles an hour by a tug in a crowded thoroughfare. The Little Giant, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 23.

A schooner sailing in the night in a fog, in a common thoroughfare of approaching steam vessels, and heading on a course crossing their regular tracks, and hearing fog signals from them from various directions, was run into by one of such steamers and sunk. Held—

1. That the schooner was in fault for not exhibiting a lighted torch, and that nothing short of an absolute certainty that the torch would have done no good, to be established by proof, would justify an omission to obey the rule requiring it to be so exhibited.

2. That she was in fault also because, while on her port tack, she sounded one blast only of her fog-horn at a time, instead of two; the rule of the supervising inspectors of steam vessels on that subject, though not having the force of law as regards a sailing vessel, still having become binding on the schooner as a usage of the sea.

3. That she was in fault also because she was sailing short-handed in a fog, having only two men on deck, one attending to going about, and acting as a lookout, and the other steering and blowing the fog horn. The Eleanora, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 88.

mand of the steamer.¹ The fact that the plaintiff's boat was a weak one affords no protection to the defendant, if the collision happened through his carelessness.² It is an act of negligence to leave a vessel moored with only a single seven-eighth inch chain in a high and increasing wind,³ or for a steamer to crowd upon a sailing vessel so as to render a danger probable in her situation,⁴ or the omission of a ferryboat to carry a whistle,⁵ or an attempt on the part of a vessel to pass to the starboard of another vessel in a narrow channel when the vessels are not approaching head to head.⁶ If a steamer wrongfully places herself in the track of another vessel, and in such circumstances as allow the other no chance of avoiding a collision, the former is answerable as if she had run into the other.⁷ So where a collision occurs in a river through the inability of one of the boats to make a turn which she takes the risk of being able to effect, she alone will be in fault.⁸ When a ship carries a latent instrument dangerous to others, those who have control of it are bound to take all reasonable precautions that it shall not cause damage to others.⁹

(a) PRESUMPTION OF NEGLIGENCE.—The mere fact of a collision between two vessels does not in itself raise a presumption of negligence on the part of either; but the circumstances may be such as, upon proof of the situation of the injured vessel, to raise a presumption of want of reasonable care, caution, and skill on the part of the other.¹⁰

(b) NONOBSERVANCE OF RULES.—Where a collision results from a neglect of any of the rules the vessel disregarding the rule will, in legal contemplation, be guilty of negligence, and liable for the damages,¹¹ and the highest diligence must be exercised in

1. Inman v. Reck, The City of Antwerp and The Friedrich, 37 L. J. Adm. 25; 2 L. R., P. C. 25.

2. Inman v. Funk, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 538.

3. The Lotty, Olc. Adm. 329.

4. The William Young, Olc. Adm. 38.

5. The Electra, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 282.

6. Meigs v. The Northerner, 1 Wash. Ter. 91.

7. The Narragansett, Olc. Adm. 246.

8. The Osceola, 33 Fed. Rep. 719. See The Columbia, 29 Fed. Rep. 716.

9. H. M. S. Bellerophon, 32 L. T., N. S. 412; 44 L. J. Adm. 7.

10. The Bridgeport, 7 Blatchf. (U. S.) 361.

11. Shirley v. The Richmond, 2 Woods (U. S.) 58; Niagara, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 37; Washington, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 276; The City of New York, 15 Fed. Rep. 624; The Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Kerr, 25 Md. 521. See The Hibernia, 31 L. T., N. S. 805; The Franconia, 25 W. R. 197; 2 L. R.

Adm. Div. 8; The Scotia, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 170; The Wheatsheaf v. The Intrepide, 13 L. T., N. S. 612; The America, 29 Fed. Rep. 304; Blanchard v. New Jersey Steamboat Co., 59 N. Y. 292.

A neglect of the rule for navigating the Mississippi river, that ascending boats shall run the points, and descending boats the bends, which results in a collision and loss, renders the boat disregarding the rule liable for the damages. Shirley v. The Richmond, 2 Woods (U. S.) 58.

A steamboat disregarding the law which requires steamboats navigating the East river to keep in the middle of the stream, cannot recover damages received by collision with a steamboat, which was in the proper track. Bay State, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 48.

In a cause of collision between a sailing ship and a steamer, although the sailing ship may be found to have been guilty of misconduct, or not to have observed the sailing regulations, yet the steamer obeying the rules.¹ The omission of a known legal duty is such strong evidence of carelessness and negligence, that, in every case of collision happening under such circumstances, the offending vessel should be held to be altogether in fault unless clear and indisputable evidence establishes the contrary.² So where a vessel comes suddenly and without warning into imminent peril of a collision—e. g., where two vessels approaching are concealed from each other by intermediate objects until they are close upon each other—the necessary uncertainty and confusion created by the surprise is to be taken into account in determining whether the management of the respective vessels is proper or blameworthy.³ A failure, however, on the part of one of the two vessels approaching each other, so as to endanger collision, to comply with the requirements of the statute and the rules of navigation does not excuse the other vessel from adopting reasonable precautions to avoid the collision,⁴ and where a collision is caused exclusively will be held culpable if it appears that it was in her power to have avoided the collision. Inman v. Reck, The City of Antwerp and The Friedrich, 37 L. J. Adm. 25; 2 L. R., P. C. 25.

Under a State statute a vessel whose jibboom is standing contrary to law must be held liable for collision caused by it. The China, 7 Wall. 70; The Carolus, 2 Curt. 269; The Julia M. Hallock, 1 Sprague, 539; Bussy v. Donaldson, 4 Dall. 206; Yates v. Brown, 8 Pick. 23; Williamson v. Price, 4 Mart., N. S. 399; Dennison v. Seymour, 9 Wend. 1; Smith v. Condry, 1 How. 28; The Lottery, Olcott 329; Smith v. The Creole, 2 Wall. Jr. 514; The Rescue, 2 Sprague 16.

A vessel's failure to comply with statutory regulations for preventing collision, such as the law prescribing lights, is not a bar to a recovery for a collision; at most it only raises a presumption of negligence; the question is for the jury. Hoffman v. Union Ferry Co., 68 N. Y. 385.

In a cause of collision between a steamship and a sailing vessel, occasioned by the fault of the steamship, it was proved that the sailing vessel had failed to comply with the admiralty regulations regarding lights, having either shown no lights as she was bound, or if she had any lights, that the lights could not be seen till the collision was too imminent for prevention: Held, that the collision might have been avoided if the sailing vessel had obeyed the admiralty regulations, and that though the omission to exhibit proper lights might be immaterial, where it is clearly shown that the absence of such lights was not the cause of the collision, and did not conduce to it, yet where it is proved that a vessel has not shown proper lights, the onus lies on such vessel to show that the noncompliance with the regulations was not the cause of the collision, which the sailing vessel failed to do; the general rule being, that a vessel must not only obey the admiralty regulations as regards lights, but must obey them in time to prevent an impending collision. The Fenham, 3 L. R., P. C. 212; 23 L. T., N. S. 329.

1. The Propeller Monticello, Molli-son, 17 How. (U. S.) 153. Each vessel is bound to observe the rules of navigation applicable to their respective positions. The William Young, Olc. Adm. 38.

A vessel's officers and crew who have complied with all the rules which the circumstances required them to observe will not be held in fault in the event of a collision. The Negaunee, 20 Fed. Rep. 918.

2. Taylor v. Harwood, Taney Dec. (U. S.) 437.

3. The Columbus, 1 Abb. Adm. 384, 385.

Mistakes committed on the injured vessel in moments of peril and excitement produced by the mismanagement of those in charge of the other vessel, are not of a character to relieve such other vessel causing the collision from payment of full damages. The Belle, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 317; The Nichols, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 656.

4. The Sunny Side, 91 U. S. 208; The Shannon, 2 Hagg. Adm. 173; The

by the negligence of one of the colliding vessels, and the other violates the rules, the latter will not be deemed in fault, if the infringement of the regulations could not, under the circumstances of the case, have contributed to the collision.¹

(c) ACTS IN EXTREMIS.—A failure to do an act, only to be adopted in extremis, is not negligence.² So a vessel which, having performed her own duty, is thrown into immediate danger of collision by the wrongful act of another, is not to be held liable if at that moment she adopts a wrong manœuvre.³

(d) NEGLIGENCE IN LAUNCHING VESSELS.—It is the duty of those who launch a vessel to do so with the utmost precaution, and to give such notice as is reasonable and sufficient to prevent injury happening to other vessels from the launch.⁴ If there is a custom, they are bound to give the customary notice; if there is no custom, then reasonable notice.⁵ What is reasonable and sufficient notice depends upon local circumstances; the size and breadth of the river or waters in which the launch takes place, the amount of shipping, and other like matters.⁶ A party launching must prove that such notice was given.⁷ And vessels navigating a river are bound to observe reasonable signals of an in-

Lady Anne, 1 Eng. L. & E. 670; The Niagara, 17 Law Rep. 336; The St. John v. The Mary Bannatynem, 18 Law Rep. 528; Moore v. Moss, 14 Ill. 106; Hawkins v. Dutchess S. Co., 2 Wend. 452. But see The Oregon v. Rocca, 18 How. 570; Crockett v. Newton, 18 How. 581; Wheeler v. The Eastern State, 2 Curt. 141; The Sylph, 2 Spinks, Ec. & Adm. 75; St. John v. Payne, 10 How. 557; Haney v. Baltimore S. P. Co., 23 How. 562; The Ann Caroline, 2 Wall. 538; Foster v. The Miranda, Newb. 227; 6 McLean 221; The Santa Claus, Olcott 423; The Vanderbilt, Abb. Adm. 361; Allen v. Mackay, 1 Sprague 219; The Hope 1 W. Rob. 154; The Friends, 1 W. Rob. 478.

The fault of a sail vessel in not following the public regulations and rules of navigation as to lights, keeping her course, etc., will not excuse a steam vessel in case of collision unless the latter adopts every reasonable precaution in her power to avoid a collision. The Scotia, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 170.

1. The Englishman, 37 L. T., N. S. 412. See Drew v. Chesapeake, 2 Doug. 33.

2. The Galileo, 28 Fed. Rep. 469.

When the captain of a steamer, upon a vessel being reported lying ahead, immediately gave orders to stop and reverse, but was unable to stop the way of his ship in time to prevent a collision, he is not proved to have been guilty of negligence because he did not take the further precaution of immediately dropping his anchor. Tyne Steam Shipping Company v. Smith, The C. M. Palmer and the Larnax, 21 W. R. 702; 29 L. T., N. S. 120. See Hodgkinson v. Fernie, 40 Eng. Law & Eq. 306.

Injudicious Order.—At the moment a collision is apprehended to be inevitable, an injudicious order, given in the excitement of the moment, is not to be considered the only cause, even if a fault, should the antecedent negligence and conduct of the one party have placed the other in a situation where there was no time for judicious action. The Pacific & The Fashion, 1 Newb. Adm. 8.

3. The Carroll, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 302; The Nov, 30 L. T., N. S. 576.

4. The Glengary, 30 L. T., N. S. 341; The Vianna, Swab. 405; The Andalusian, 2 L. R., Adm. Div. 231; 46 L. J. Adm. Div. 77.

5. The Vianna, Swab. 405.

6. The Glengary, 30 L. T., N. S. 341.

The mere hoisting of a flag is not enough to exempt from responsibility a vessel which, on being launched in a crowded harbor, struck a vessel then passing, the officers and crew of which were ignorant of the intention to launch. Malster v. Humphreys, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 180.

7. The Vianna, Swab. 405; The Glengary, 30 L. T., N. S. 341.

tended launch.¹ When, in launching a vessel in a river, the usual precautions taken in that river have been taken, and the usual general notice that the launch was about to take place has been given, the persons having charge of the launch have performed all they are required to do by law, and no specific notice of the exact moment of the launch is required.²

7. Inevitable Accident.³—Where no negligence or fault can be imputed to either vessel, it will be considered as inevitable accident, though not caused by storm or vis major.⁴ or, in other words, it is only when the disaster happens from natural causes, without negligence or fault on either side, and both parties have endeavored, by every means in their power, with due care and caution, and with a proper display of nautical skill, to avoid injury.⁵

1. The Vianna, Swab. 405.

A tug- steamer, when being launched in the river Tyne, ran stern foremost into the starboard side of a steamer passing down the river, and negligently being at that place. Held, that, notwithstanding the steamer's negligence, the tug might, by ordinary care, such as giving a signal before launching, have avoided the consequences of such negligence, and, therefore, both being to blame, half the damage only was payable by the tug. The United States, 12 L. T., N. S. 33.

2. The Glengary, 3 L. T., N. S. 341; 43 L. J. Adm. 37.

3. See ACCIDENT, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 82.

4. The Pacific and The Fashion, 1 Newb. Adm. 8; The Morning Light, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 550-561; The Java, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 189.

5. Sampson v. United States, 12 Ct. of Cl. 480. See The Louisiana, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 164; Union etc. S. S. Co. v. New York etc. S. S. Co., 24 How. (U. S.) 307; The Uhla, 19 L. T., N. S. 89; The Pladda, 2 L. R., Adm. Div. 34; The Secret, 26 L. T., N. S. 670. See The Aimo, The Amelia, 29 L. T., N. S. 118; Doward v. Lindsay, The William Lindsay, 5 L. R., P. C. 338; 29 L. T., N. S. 355.

Where a floating dock, which was properly moored to resist any storm of wind or sea ever known in the locality, was lifted from its moorings by a violent storm, which caused the water in the harbor to rise to a height greatly beyond that ever known before, and drifted against a schooner and damaged her. Held, that this was an inevitable accident, and that each party must bear his own loss. A Floating-Dock, 3 Hughes (U. S.) 508.

A collision resulting from the darkness of the night, and without the fault of either party, is an "inevitable accident." The Morning Light, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 550.

A steamer proceeding slowly through a fog ran into a schooner at anchor. Held, a case of inevitable accident for which the steamer should not be held liable. Van Dyke v. The Bridgeport, 35 Fed. Rep. 159.

Two schooners came into collision in the fog off Cape Cod. Neither could hear the other's signals. When the collision was imminent both acted promptly. Held, that the collision should be deemed due to an inevitable accident, and this, even though possibly if one of the schooners had ported instead of attempting to go astern, the accident might not have happened. The Rebecca Shepherd, 32 Fed. Rep. 926.

A schooner ran foul of a ship, whereby the latter became unmanageable. Her anchor was let go, when she swung round upon and came in collision with a brig lying at anchor. Held, that the collision was inevitable, those on board the ship having done what they could to avoid it. The Hibernia, 4 Jur., N. S. 1244.

Two sailing vessels approaching stem on in such a manner as that, under the sailing rules, each would be bound to port, being in a dense fog, only sighted each other at a distance of about two hundred yards. The defendant's vessel, having been close hauled on the port tack, was then preparing to go about, and had eased off her head sheets. Both vessels immediately ported, but came into collision. Only one minute elapsed between the time of sighting and the collision. The plaintiff's petition alleged that the defendant's vessel

Where the collision is the result of an inevitable accident, arising out of one of the perils of navigation, and, in judgment of law, is not attributable to the fault of either party, the settled rule in admiralty is that each vessel must bear her own loss.¹ The defence of inevitable accident can never be sustained where the disaster was caused by negligence. Unless both parties have endeavored by all means in their power to prevent the collision, the defence of inevitable accident is inapplicable.² The defence, to succeed, must be supported by proof that everything was done which could and ought to have been done to avoid the collision; and this, though the vessel is in some degree disabled, and so less manageable than she would otherwise have been.³

8. Injury to Freight.—For an injury done to freight by a collision, the owner of it must share the fate of the vessel on board of which his goods are shipped, and cannot recover, unless upon the facts proved her owners would be entitled to recover.⁴

XIX. DAMAGES—1. Generally.—Ships and vessels are held liable for damage occasioned by collision, either on account of the culpable neglect or complicity, direct or indirect, of their owners,⁵ or on neglected to port, and it was stated, in answer to a question by the judge of the admiralty court, that the head sheets of the defendant's vessel were not again hauled aft. On this evidence that vessel was held to blame by the admiralty court, on the ground that she had not executed all the proper manœuvres which she might have executed after sighting the other vessel. Held, that the collision was the result of an inevitable accident, the defendant's vessel having done all that could be effected by ordinary care, caution or maritime skill in the short space of time that elapsed; and that the plaintiff, if he meant to rely upon the fact that the head sheets had not been again hauled back, ought to have alleged that fact in his petition as the cause of the collision; the allegation of neglect to port not sufficiently indicating the nature of such omission. The Marpesia, 4 L. R., P. C. 212; 8 Moore P. C. C., N. S. 468.

Where a casualty occurs which might have been prevented by the use of known and proper precautions against the danger, it is not an inevitable accident. Ladd v. Foster, 31 Fed. Rep. 827.

So a collision between two steam canal boats going in opposite directions on a starlight night, at a speed of less than three miles an hour, cannot be attributed to inevitable accident. The Thomas Carroll, 23 Fed. Rep. 912.

The term cannot be applied where a steam vessel is running through a dense fog at three knots an hour, after her officers have seen, before the fog settled, a fleet of schooners ahead, and have heard their fog-horns, and the steam vessel collides with one of the schooners; nor where two schooners appear at the same moment, through a fog, lying becalmed, the one on the port and the other on the starboard bow of a steam vessel under steerageway, and there is room for the steamer to be carried between them with a proper display of nautical skill, but she collides with one. Sampson v. United States, 12 Ct. of Cl. 480.

1. The Brooklyn, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 365; Evans v. The John F. Warner, 4 West. L. Month. 93; Pharo v. Smith, 7 Leg. Int. 381; Beane v. The Mayurka, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 72; The Fashion v. Ward, 6 McLean (U. S.) 152; Newb. Adm. 8; The Nautilus, 1 Ware (U. S.) 529; The Moxey, Abb. Adm. 73; The North America, 2 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 67; The Eliza & Abby, Blatchf. & H. 435; The Morning Light, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 550; Steinback v. Rae, 14 How. (U. S.) 532; The Moxey, 1 Abb. Adm. 73.

2. The Clavita and The Clara, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 1; The Nacoochee, 24 Blatchf. (U. S.) 99; 28 Fed. Rep. 462.

3. The Calcutta, 12 L. T., N. S. 768; The Secret, 26 L. T., N. S. 670.

4. Duggins v. Watson, 15 Ark. 118.

5. The Continental, 14 Wall. (U. S.)

345.

account of the negligence, unskilfulness or carelessness of those employed in their control and navigation.¹ When employed in navigation ships and vessels should be kept seaworthy and be well manned and equipped for the voyage, and in cases where they are not seaworthy, or not well manned or equipped, and a collision ensues between such a vessel and one without fault in that respect, the owners of the vessel not seaworthy, or not well manned and equipped cannot escape responsibility, if it appears that the unseaworthiness of the vessel, or the want of a competent master, or of a sufficient crew, or of suitable tackle, sails, or other motive power as the case may be, caused or contributed to the disaster, and as the owners of the vessel appoint the master and employ the crew they are also held responsible for their conduct in the control and navigation of the vessel.² Although a vessel is

1. The Continental, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 345; Martino v. Boggs, 1 La. An. 74; Cook v. Parham, 24 Ala. 21; Seccombe v. Wood, 2 M. & Rob. 290.

If the steamer at the time of the collision is in the possession and control of the master as owner pro hac vice sailing her on shares, the action cannot be maintained against her owners, but the action must be brought against the master. Somes v. White, 65 Me. 542. See Sparks v. Kate French, 5 Metc. (Ky.) 533.

The master of the vessel on board at the time is responsible for the wrongful act of the vessel, although it was consequential to the neglect or misfeasance of a licensed pilot in securing her improperly to a wharf. The Lotty, Olc. Adm. 329.

Charterers.—One of several owners, who sails a vessel on shares, under an arrangement between himself and the owners, whereby he in effect has become the charterer, hiring his own crew, paying and victualling them, paying half the port charges, retaining half the net freight after the port charges are taken out, and paying the other half to the general owners, is to be considered the owner pro hac vice, and, as such, is liable personally for a tortious collision with another vessel. Thorp v. Hammond, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 408.

In England a ship chartered by her owners so that the whole control and management of the ship and crew are vested in the charterers, still remains liable in a proceeding in rem of damage done to another ship by the negligence of her crew, although they are the charterer's servants. The Lymington, 32 L. T., N. S. 69; 23 W. R. 421. See Fenton v. Dublin Steam Packet Company, 1 P. & D. 103.

Insurers.—If the vessel is insured the insurers will not be liable. Mathews v. The Howard Ins. Co., 11 N. Y. 9; The Thetis, 2 L. R., Adm. 365.

In case of a total loss of a cargo by collision, a libel may be brought by the insurer against the colliding vessel, after notice and proof of the loss and demand of payment, though no payment has been made. The Manistee, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 381.

Contractor.—A ship is liable for the act of a contractor in sole charge of the ship. The Ruby Queen, Lush. 266.

Dockmaster.—where a master and crew are bound by statute to obey the directions of a harbor-master in going into dock, and a collision is occasioned by the ship being conducted according to the harbor-master's directions, the ship is not liable. The Bilbao, Lush. 149. See The Cynthia, 36 L. T., N. S. 184.

2. The Washington, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 276; Cook v. Parham, 24 Ala. 21; The Continental, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 345; Fletcher v. Braddick, 2 N. R. 182; Martin v. Temperly, 4 Q. B. 298; The Gerard Stuyvesant, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 183.

Compare Bowcher v. Noidstrom, 1 Taunt. 568; Nicholson v. Mouncey, 15 East 384; Huggett v. Montgomery, 2 N. R. 446; Rose v. Miles, 4 M. & S. 101; Hodgkinson v. Fernle, 2 C. B., N. S. 415.

Owners of vessels are bound to provide skilful officers, as well as a full complement of men and officers. Washington, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 276.

When the master of a ship takes all such precautions as a man of ordinary obliged to employ a pilot or to pay pilot fees, the presence of a pilot on the vessel does not relieve the owner from liability for damage caused by a collision.¹ So where there is joint blame in the master and crew and the pilot, the owners are not exempted from liability for damage by reason of having a licensed pilot on board.² When a collision between two vessels is caused by the fault of the one only, she is liable for the immediate damage to the other vessel, and also for damages resulting from reasonable and proper efforts of her master and crew to save her from the condition in which she has been left by the act of the wrongdoer, as well as for any other consequential damages fairly attributable to that act. But, if it is proved that a subsequent stranding of the injured vessel was caused by the negligence of those in charge of her, when they could, by the use of ordinary nautical skill, have avoided it, the vessel originally in fault is responsible for the immediate effect of the collision only, and for no part of the damages by the stranding.³

2. Where the Vessel Is Only Impaired.—The general rule of damages applicable to collisions which are not wilful is, that the owner of the injured vessel is to receive a remuneration which will place him in the situation in which he would have been but for the collision.⁴ Thus the measure of damages is the loss necessarily inprudence and skill, exercising reasonable foresight, would use to avert danger, his owners are not held responsible because he may have omitted some possible precaution which the event suggests that he might have resorted to. Doward v. Lindsay, The William Lindsay, 5 L. R., P. C. 338.

1. Cook v. Curtis, 58 N. H. 507; The Borussia, Swa. 94; The Belgic, 36 L. T., N. S. 929. See Martin v. Farnsworth, 41 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 59; The Carolus, 2 Curtis (U. S.) 69; The E. M. Norton, 15 Fed. Rep. 686; Smith v. Condry, 1 How. (U. S.) 28; The China, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 53; Smith v. The Creole, 2 Wall. Jr. (C. C.) 485. Compare Griswold v. Sharpe, 2 Cal. 17.

In a collision, where the court, assisted by trinity masters, decided that both vessels were to blame, but that with respect to one of them the blame was to be attributed to the pilot, who had been taken on board under a local (Liverpool) pilot act, it was held, that such vessel was not to contribute to the loss; and with respect to costs, that each party must pay his own costs. The Montreal, 24 Eng. L. & Eq. 580.

2. Netherlands Steamship Co. v. Styles, 40 Eng. L. & Eq. 19.

3. Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Griffin, 21 Fed. Rep. 733; Myers v. Perry, 1 La. An. 372; The Narragansett, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 211; The Baltimore, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 377; The Countess of Durham, 9 Monthly Law Mag. (Notes of Cases) 279; The Pensher, Swa. 211; The Linda, Swa. 306; The Flying Fish, Brown & L. 436; s. c., 3 Moore P. C., N. S. 77; Cummins v. Spruance, 4 Harr. 315; The Union, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 18; Mould v. The New York, 40 Fed. Rep. 900; The City of Lincoln, 15 Probate D. V. 15.

A boat was run into through the carelessness of a tug. The boat was towed away for repairs and broke her moorings, sustaining further damage. Held, that this latter damage was too remote to be charged to the tug. The Reba, 22 Fed. Rep. 546.

In Cummins v. Spruance, 4 Harr. 315, it is held, that the measure of damages for collision is the injury sustained, or cost of repairs. The loss of profits by the voyage is too remote and consequential.

4. The Rhode Island, 1 Abb. Adm. 100; The New Jersey, Olc. Adm. 444; The Blossom, Olc. Adm. 188; Fitch v. Livingston, 4 Sandf. Sup. Ct. 492; The Fannie Tuthill, 17 Fed. Rep. 87; The Thuringia, 26 L. T., N. S. 446; 41 L. I.

curred in repairing a vessel and also for its use during the repairs.¹ And in estimating the cost of repairs the expense of raising and clearing out the injured vessel,² the expenses and delay of taking the injured vessel from the place of collision to her port of destination, and thence to the most suitable place for repair,³ charges

Adm. 44; The Georgiana v. The Anglican, 21 W. R. 280.

In a libel for collision, where the vessel injured has been repaired, the expense of restoring her to a condition as good as she was in before the injury, is the true measure of damages. The evidence of experts as to their opinion of the nature and extent of the injury is not admissible in such cases, though it may be where a vessel has been run down and abandoned. Schooner Catharine v. Dickinson, 17 How. (U. S.) 170.

Where, on a libel for a collision, it appeared there had been no examination and estimate in advance by competent persons, and repairs had been made, altering the injured sloop from a poop-decked to a flush-decked vessel, and at a cost exceeding her value—held, that the libellant could only recover the value of his vessel at the time of the accident, with the cost of five days' pumping, necessary to ascertain the extent of her injuries and the cost of repair, and with the damage to his personal property on board at the time. A Scow, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 181.

Where an injury by a collision can be repaired at a trifling expense by bolts and braces, this expense, and not that of a new beam, is measure of damages. The J. T. Easton, 24 Fed. Rep. 95.

When the wrongdoer takes the injured vessel into his possession to repair the injury he has done, he will be required to show that the boat, when returned, was in substantially as good condition as before the accident. Where, in such case, the boat, when returned, appears to have been repaired in an imperfect manner, and the owner had refused to accept the repairs as satisfactory, the wrongdoer will be held liable for all the additional work necessarily done upon the boat, to put her in such good condition. The Uncle Abe, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 502.

Where, in a collision case, a commissioner allowed, as damages, $800 for the difference between the value of the libellant's vessel after the same was repaired and the value before the injury, the court, on all the facts, disallowed any damages, holding that she was, after being repaired, in as good condition as before the injury. The Isaac Newton, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 21.

1. Missouri R. Packet Co. v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 281; Halderman v. Beckwith, 4 McLean (U. S.) 286; Barrett v. Williamson, 13 How. (U. S.) 101; The Narragansett, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 211, 217; The Rhode Island. Olc. Adm. 505; The Mary Eveline, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 497; Myers v. Perry, 1 La. An. 372; The Seabrook v. Raft of Railroad Cross-ties, 40 Fed. Rep. 596; The Fannie Tuthill, 17 Fed. Rep. 87; The Granite State, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 310; The Cambridge, 2 Low. (U. S.) 21; The Mary Steele, 2 Low. (U. S.) 370.

The colliding vessel cannot diminish the allowance of her market value by proving her actual worth to be less because of her age, imperfect build, or the state of her timbers. The New Jersey, Olc. Adm. 444.

The expense of the repairs where they were made affords the measure of recovery, the amount being less than the estimate made at the place of the injury. The City of Chester, 34 Fed. Rep. 429.

Where, in a collision case, it appeared that several of the bills for repairs to the injured vessel were exaggerated, with the knowledge and connivance of the master, if not by his procurement, with a view to impose upon the underwriters, and the district court reduced the items to the lowest estimate, it was held, that such reduction was proper. The Sampson, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 28.

When both are in fault no allowance will be made for losses arising from the detention during repairs. Meigs v. The Northerner, 1 Wash. Ter. 91.

2. Vantine v. The Lake, 2 Wall. Jr. (C. C.) 52; Fitch v. Livingston, 4 Sandf. Sup. Ct., 492. See The Mary Eveline, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 497; The America, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 485; Williamson v. Barrett, 13 How. (U. S.) 101, 110; The Nebraska, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 261.

3. Halderman v. Beckwith, 4 Mc-for wharfage while repairing,¹ and wages of the crew necessarily kept on the injured vessel while she is repairing,² and the cost of surveying the injuries done by collision, and of superintending the repairs, when necessary to the economical prosecution of the work, are to be taken into account.³ If the repairs are made not at once, but at different times, voyages intervening, this circumstance should be considered in measuring the damages, and a reasonable deduction made from their cost.⁴ In the absence of direct evidence of the amount of the loss of the use of the vessel during the time consumed in making repairs, interest upon the value of the vessel for the time occupied in making such repairs may be awarded as a fair compensation in this respect.⁵ So interest on the sum paid for the repairs of the injured vessel is to be added.⁶ And also interest on the sum allowed for demurrage.⁷ But insurance does not enter into the amount for which the owner of the vessel is liable.⁸ The amount paid for salvage service is Lean (U. S.) 286; Barrett v. Williamson, 4 McLean (U. S.) 589; Fitch v. Livingston, 4 Sandf. Sup. Ct. 492; The Morning Star, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 62; The Benjamin F. Hunt, Jr., 34 Fed. Rep. 816; The Fannie Tuthill, 17 Fed. Rep. 87.

A vessel was injured in a collision caused by the fault of another and was unable to continue her navigation. Held, that the expense of a tug to tow her through dangerous navigation to the home port was a proper item of damages; and unless the master in taking her to the home port, instead of going into an immediate port for temporary repairs, acted dishonestly, his action will be respected. The Benjamin F. Hunt, Jr., 34 Fed. Rep. 816.

A vessel having her jibboom carried away and one of her fore chain plates broken in a collision while weighing anchor is justified in putting back for repairs, and is entitled to damages for the detention, where the other vessel was in fault. Wells v. Armstrong, 29 Fed. Rep. 216.

But expenses from the port of departure to the place of collision and of return to the port of repairs will not be allowed in damages. Memphis & St. Louis Packet Co. v. The H. C. Yeeger, 2 McCrary (U. S.) 165.

In a collision cause, in which a steamer and a sailing vessel were both found to be in fault, and the steamer, after the collision had towed the schooner into port, held, an allowance might be made for towage, as part of the damage suffered by the steamer, but not for salvage. The Mary Patten, 2 Low. (U. S.) 196.

1. Vantine v. The Lake, 2 Wall. Jr. (C. C.) 52; The James A. Dumont, 34 Fed. Rep. 428; The Fannie Tuthill, 17 Fed. Rep. 87.

2. New Haven Steamboat Co. v. Mayor etc., 36 Fed. Rep. 716; The Naragansett, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 211, 217. See Fitch v. Livingston, 4 Sandf. Sup. Ct. 492; The Linda Flor, Swa. 309. Hoffman v. Union Ferry Co., 68 N. Y. 385.

Personal Effects of Seamen.—If a vessel is lost by a collision to which the fault of both contributed, the seamen of the lost vessel may recover half the value of their lost personal effects; the master, however, can recover nothing. The City of New York, 25 Fed. Rep. 149.

3. New Haven Steamboat Co. v. Mayor etc., 36 Fed. Rep. 716.

A superintendence on behalf of the libellant and a separate superintendence in the interests of the insurer are unnecessary, and the charge for but one will be allowed. New Haven Steamboat Co. v. Mayor etc., 36 Fed. Rep. 716.

4. The Henry M. Clark, 22 Fed. Rep. 752.

5. The Rhode Island, 2 Abb. Adm. 100. See Atchison v. Steamboat Dr. Franklin, 14 Mo. 63; Fitch v. Livingston, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 492; The Alexandria, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 101; The Mary Eveline, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 497; The Manitoba, 122 U. S. 97.

6. The Baltic, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 195.

7. The Alexandria, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 101.

8. The City of Norwich, 118 U. S.

chargeable,¹ and so is a reasonable sum for the care and custody of cargo,² or loss of freight, but this should be net freight after deducting the expenses of the voyage, not gross freight.³ Damage suffered by the disabled vessel, in the course of reasonable and proper efforts to save her, is a consequence of the condition in which she is left by the wrongdoer, and is therefore properly chargeable.⁴ So actual expenses incurred by the surviving ship in the rescue, support, and return to land of the other's crew is a damage to be shared by both, where both were in fault.⁵

(a) DEMURRAGE.⁶—When the vessel is employed at the time of the collision, or when it appears that she would have been beneficially employed during the period of her detention, it is entirely clear that actual loss has attended the interruption of her engagements.⁷ Demurrage is, therefore, a proper subject for the allowances of such damages.⁸ The amount of damages is to be resolved by ascertaining the market value of the use of the vessel, or her probable net earnings during the period of her detention, by the best evidence attainable. One way of ascertaining this is by ascertaining what she was earning at the time, or immediately before and after the collision.⁹

468; The Scotland, 118 U. S. 507; The Peshtigo, 2 Flap. (U. S.) 466.

Where two steamboats collided and were adjudged to pay each one half the damage, and one of the boats received insurance money—held, that it was not to be deducted from the share which the other boat was adjudged to pay, even though the underwriters voluntarily released her from all claim for her fault. Cannon v. The Potomac, 3 Woods (U. S.) 158.

1. The Cepheus, 24 Fed. Rep. 507; The Narragansett, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 211, 215; The Abbie C. Stubbs, 28 Fed. Rep. 719; The Cambridge, 2 Low. (U. S.) 21.

The owners of the injured vessel will be allowed salvage expenses and other charges necessarily paid by them in rescuing the vessel and cargo from perils they were placed in by the collision, and it will not be limited to a quantum meruit for mere work and labor. The Narragansett, Olc. Adm. 246.

2. The Alexandria, 10 Ben. (U. S.) 101.

3. The Heroine, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 226; The Abbe C. Stubbs, 28 Fed. Rep. 719; The Benares, 1 Eng. Law & Eq. 637; The Utopia, 16 Fed. Rep. 507; The Star of India, 35 L. T., N. S. 407; 25 W. R. 377.

Reasonable efforts to secure fresh cargo are required of a vessel, which, in consequence of a collision, has lost freight, before she can recover dead freight as an item of her damage. The C. P. Raymond, 28 Fed. Rep. 765.

4. The Narragansett, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 211. See Seabrook v. Raft of Railroad Cross Ties, 40 Fed. Rep. 596.

5. Leonard v. Whitwell, 19 Fed. Rep. 547.

6. See DEMURRAGE, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 548.

7. The Clarence, 3 W. Rob. 283; Williamson v. Barrett, 13 How. (U. S.) 101; The Rhode Island, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 113, 114; The Cayuga, 7 Blatchf. (U. S.) 385.

8. Cannon v. The Potomac, 3 Woods (U. S.) 158; The Cayuga, 7 Blatchf. (U. S.) 385; The Baltic, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 195; The Thomas Kiley, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 228; Coffin v. The Osceola, 34 Fed. Rep. 921; Memphis etc. Packet Co. v. H. C. Yaeger Transp. Co., 3 McCrary (U. S.) 259; Swift v. Brownell, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 467; The Stromless, 1 Low. (U. S.) 153; The City of Buenos Ayres, 25 L. T., N. S. 672.

Where a vessel damaged by collision becomes locked by ice while awaiting her turn at the dry dock, the colliding vessel is not liable for the time lost thereby. The Mina A. Read, 30 Fed. Rep. 287.

9. The Margaret J. Sanford, 37 Fed. Rep. 148.

An exaggerated claim for demurrage

(b) CHANGE OF OWNERSHIP cannot affect the liability of a ship that has injured another in a collision.¹ So where the purchasers of a steamer assume any liability for damages that may have resulted from a collision with another boat, the owners of the latter may avail themselves of the assumption, and recover from the purchasers damages for the injury sustained.²

(c) PROOF OF DAMAGES.—The libellant is bound to prove not only the injuries sustained, but also the amount of money necessary to repair such injuries; and an estimate including repairs not proved to have been made necessary by the accident cannot be taken as proof of the amount of damages.³

3. Where the Vessel Is a Total Loss.—Where a vessel is sunk by a wrongful collision, under circumstances rendering it improbable that she can be raised and repaired at any advantage, a decree may pass that her whole value be paid as damages, and that the title of the libellants to her be remitted to the claimants of the colliding vessel.⁴ And in determining the amount of the loss her while a vessel injured by a collision is undergoing repairs will not be allowed. For a seventy ton schooner, six years old—held that $15 per day was unreasonable; that $5 per day was an ample allowance. The Excelsior, 17 Fed. Rep. 924.

For a canal boat worth $1,350—held that, under similar circumstances, an allowance of $3 per day was enough, $8 per day being claimed. The Venus, 17 Fed. Rep. 925.

1. The Bold Buccleugh, 2 Eng. Law & Eq. Rep. 536; Dean v. Richards, The Europa, 2 Moore P. C. C., N. S. 1; The Charles Amelia, 2 L. R., Adm. 330.

A prize while in charge of a prize-master and crew, while on her way to the port for adjudication, through her own fault came into collision and sunk another vessel. No claim having been presented, she was duly condemned as a prize and sold and the proceeds paid into the registry. The owners of the sunken vessel and cargo intervened. Held, that they were entitled to have their damages assessed and paid out of the proceeds of the vessel before distribution to the captors. (NELSON, J., dissenting.) The Siren, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 152.

2. Myers v. Perry, 1 La. An. 372.

3. The Tiger Lily, 14 Fed. Rep. 591.

4. The Falcon, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 75; The Shady Side, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 132; The Peshtigo, 2 Flip. (U. S.) 466; The Ontario, 2 Low. (U. S.) 40. See The Cambridge, 2 Low. (U. S.) 21.

A canal boat lying at a pier in New York was struck by a steamship and sunk in thirty feet of water. It being impossible to ascertain the amount of her injury as she lay, her master contracted for $500 to have her raised, which was done. On putting her upon the ways, she was found, after examination and survey, to be not worth repairing, whereupon she was sold at auction for $100. Held, that her owner might recover as damages her value as a total loss, deducting the sum for which she was sold, and, in addition, the cost of raising her and putting her on the ways to be examined. The Nebraska, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 261.

In raising a canal boat which had been sunk by a collision, her bow end, to the extent of about one third her length, was broken off, and she was then towed to some flats, where she lay between two and three months, and was then sold at auction for $18, there being nothing to show that she did not bring all she was supposed to be worth. Her owners were allowed to recover her value as for a total loss. Deems v. Albany & Canal Line, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 474.

One whose vessel is sunk by a collision in shallow water, cannot abandon her and recover of the vessel in fault as for a total loss, if she can be raised and repaired for less money. And if he delays in raising her he cannot claim an increased expense arising out of the delay. The Thomas P. Way, 28 Fed. Rep. 526.

Damages allowed for injuries to a vessel by a collision cannot ordinarily market price or value at the time of sinking will be the criterion.¹ In ascertaining the value of a vessel sunk in collision when the market was stagnant, and there were no actual sales to furnish a criterion, her cost, with deductions for deterioration, may be resorted to.² Compensation will be allowed for the profits which would have been realized upon an existing charter of the vessel, because the charter is itself thereby lost; but this rule does not apply to profits on a personal contract, in which any other fit vessel might be used.³

4. Exemplary damages may be given for a wilful collision.⁴ If exemplary damages are claimed, evidence may be given of acts prior to the injuries complained of, but must be confined to such acts.⁵

5. Damnum Absque Injuria.—In case of a collision by mere accident, without fault or negligence of either party, it is damnum absque injuria, and neither party can recover.⁶

6. Limitation of Liability.—See SHIPPING.

7. Personal Injuries.—The limitation of liability, under the act of congress⁷ applies to claims by the personal representatives of persons lost on the trip.⁸ To recover damages for personal injuries the collision must be the proximate cause of such injuries,⁹ and in such cases only the actual damage from physical injury, or exceed her value at the time of collision, i. e., as for a total loss, with cost of raising, to determine her condition, or to remove her as an obstruction, where that is necessary. To recover more where the vessel has been repaired instead of being abandoned, special circumstances must be shown, proving that the excess accrued notwithstanding the exercise of good faith and ordinary prudence in repairing. The Venus, 17 Fed. Rep. 925.

1. The New Jersey, Olc. Adm. 444; The Laura Lee, 24 Fed. Rep. 483. See The North Star, 15 Blatchf. (U. S.) 532; The Utopia, 16 Fed. Rep. 507; The George Bell, 5 Hughes. (U. S.) 172; Swift v. Brownell, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 467.

In assessing damages on total loss by collision, though the cost of construction is competent evidence where no market value is ascertainable, the whole cost should not be given as damage where the vessel could be duplicated for a less sum, and the cost testified to, includes various changes and improvements. The City of Alexandria, 40 Fed. Rep. 697.

2. Leonard v. Whitwill, 19 Fed. Rep. 547.

In estimating the value of a Mississippi river steamboat, the rule that a depreciation of twenty per cent. results each year, affords the rule of value ordinarily. The Laura Lee, 24 Fed. Rep. 483.

3. The City of Alexandria, 40 Fed. Rep. 697.

4. Smyrna etc. Co. v. Whilldin, 4 Harr. 228.

Greater damages may be given than the amount of actual injury, if the collision was the result of motive and design. Ralston v. The State Rights, Crabbe (U. S.) 22.

5. Ralston v. The State Rights, Crabbe (U. S.) 22.

6. Smyrna etc. Steamboat Co. v. Whilldin, 4 Harr. 228.

7. Rev. Stat., §§ 4283-5.

8. The Alpena, 10 Biss. (U. S.) 436.

9. The Union, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 18.

When a steamer through its own fault collided with a skiff in which were the libellant and his son, whereby the son was drowned and the libellant so seriously injured as to confine him to his bed for seven weeks, and render him unfit for labor until the date of the decree and partially disable him for life, and the skiff was broken, the court allowed as damages the necessary cost of repairs to the skiff with compensation for the loss of its use while undergoing repairs, the cost of the cure of libellant, consequent loss of employment should be allowed. If the collision occurs by the fault of both vessels, and both are before the court, the damages must be apportioned between them; and the seamen on board one vessel can recover only half their damages against the other, because they are disabled by their relation to their own ship and her owners from any recovery against the latter, directly or indirectly.¹

8. Loss of or Damage to Cargo.—Where the owners of a ship or vessel damaged by a collision are carriers of cargo, they may recover for the loss or injury in the suit for the collision.² If totally lost, they may recover its full value.³ The value to be estimated from the value at the port of shipment including expenses of transportation to the place of collision, lading of the cargo, etc., and interest at 6 per cent. per annum,⁴ the value of the cargo at the market price at the home port of the injured vessel at the time it would ordinarily have arrived there,⁵ its value at the time and place of shipment without including loss of profits which would have been realized by completing the voyage.⁶ Where the damages are recovered for the loss of cargo they may properly include an allowance in the nature of freight after the voyage, as far as performed,⁷ and which the vessel was earning at the time, deducting expenses⁸ or the amount of freight paid to a substituted vessel.⁹ The owners of the colliding vessel will not be liable for the loss of goods by a collision unless they are to blame.¹⁰ also a sum of money as compensation for his sufferings, also a sum equal to the amount of such wages as the libellant with the aid of his son could have earned up to the time of the decree, and compensation for his permanent partial disability. The latter was arrived at by the present allowance of a sum equal to the amount of such income as the ordinary labor of libellant would produce for one-third of the period of his expectation of life according to the mortality tables. Miller v. The W. G. Hewes, 1 Woods (U. S.) 363.

The limit of £30 in the Merchant Shipping act, § 510, as the amount of damages payable by the owner of a vessel which has wrongfully caused the death of any of the crew of another vessel, to the family of each seaman, applies only to damages assessed by the board of trade, and not to damages in a suit under § 514 of the act. Glaholm v. Barker, L. R., 2 Eq. 598; Same v. Same, L. R., 1 Ch. 223.

1. The Queen, 40 Fed. Rep. 694.

2. The Commander-in-chief, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 43; The Commerce, 1 Black. 574.

3. The Russia, 3 Ben. 479; The Com- mander-in-chief, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 43; The Narragansett, Olc. 225.

4. Desty's Ship & Adm., § 401; The Monticello v. Mollison, 17 How. 152; The Glaucus, 1 Low. 371; The Aleppo, 7 Ben. 125; The Anna Maria, 2 Wheat. 327.

5. Swift v. Brownell, 1 Holmes 467; The Joshua, Abb. Adm. 215.

6. Desty's Ship & Adm., § 401; The Mary J. Vaughan, 2 Ben. 47; Smith v. Condry, 17 Pet. (U. S.) 20.

7. The Glaucus, 1 Low. 366; The Ann Carolina, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 538; The Baltimore, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 385; The Rebecca, Blatchf. & H. 347; The New Jersey, Olc. 444; The Cayuga, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 278; The Heroline, 1 Ben. 226; Williamson v. Barrett, 13 How. 101; Egbert v. Baltimore etc. Co., 2 Ben. 225; Jones v. Whyte, 2 Jur. 303; The Canada, Lush. 586; Yates v. Whyte, 4 Bing. N. C. 272; The Eolides, 3 Hagg. Adm. 367; The Rhode Island, Abb. Adm. 104.

8. Williamson v. Barrett, 13 How. 101.

9. The Yorkshireman, 2 Hagg. Adm. 30.

10. Desty's Ship & Adm., § 401; Cros-

9. Weak Vessels.—Where a weak vessel is in a situation to expect some encounters with other vessels, and is responsible for the position assumed by her, she is bound to give notice to others approaching her of any condition rendering her liable to be seriously injured by ordinary contacts; and in default of notice, in such cases, only half damages are given.¹

10. Lien for Damages.—Damage creates a lien on the ship causing the collision,² which it carries with it into whosoever hands it may come.³ So a lien on a vessel for damages by collision takes precedence of all other liens arising prior thereto, including seamen's wages.⁴ It is not divested by the removal of the vessel into another jurisdiction,⁵ or by sale of vessel.⁶ It is inchoate and must be perfected by subsequent proceedings,⁷ but it lasts long enough to give the party a reasonable opportunity to enforce it.⁸ There is no maritime lien upon the cargo for damages by collision, except to the extent of freight due, though the cargo belonged to the owner of the vessel in fault.⁹

11. Laches.—No arbitrary or fixed period of time in delaying the assertion of a maritime lien has been or will be established as an inflexible rule, but the delay which will defeat such a suit must, in every case, depend on the peculiar equitable circumstances of that case. Admiralty denies the privilege of enforcing the lien which has been suffered to lie dormant, without excuse, until the rights of innocent third persons would be prejudiced if it should be recognized.¹⁰

by v. Fitch, 12 Conn. 410; Williamson v. Grant, 1 Conn. 487; The New Jersey, Olc. 448.

1. The Syracuse, 18 Fed. Rep. 328; The Niagara, 20 Fed. Rep. 152; The Reba, 22 Fed. Rep. 546; The Chas. R. Stone, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 182; The N. B. Starbuck, 29 Fed. Rep. 797; The Howard, 30 Fed. Rep. 280.

2. Harmer v. Bell, 7 Moore P. C. C. 267; The America, 6 Law Rep., N. S. 264; 8. c., 2 West. L. M. 279; The Rock Island Bridge Co., 6 Wall. 213; Edwards v. The R. F. Stockton, Crabbe 589; The Bold Buccleugh, 3 W. Rob. 220; 2 Eng. L. & Eq. 536. But see The Volant, 1 W. Rob. 383; The Europa, Brown & L. 87; 2 Eng. L. & Eq. 557.

3. The Avon, 1 Brown Adm. 170; The China, 7 Wall. 68; Edwards v. The R. F. Stockton, Crabbe 580; The America, 16 Law Rep. 264; The Amalia, Brown & L. 151; The Bold Buccleugh, 3 W. Rob. 220; The Alabama, 1 Ben. 476. And see The Zollverein, Swa. 96; The Gazelle, 2 W. Rob. 279; Schuyler v. The Corsica, 37 How. Pr. 262.

Freight.—As to a lien on the freight, see The Roecliff, 38 L. J. Adm. 56; The Orpheus, 3 L. R., Adm. 308.

4. Rusk v. The Freestone, 2 Bond (U. S.) 234.

5. The Avon, 1 Brown Adm. 170. And see The Zollverein, Swa. 96.

6. The Genesee Chief, 12 How. 443; The Avon, 1 Brown Adm. 180; The Zollverein, Swa. 96. It follows proceeds on sale of wreck. Flaherty v. Doane, 1 Low. 151; The Clara, 1 Swab. 1.

7. Edwards v. The R. F. Stockton, Crabbe 580; The Bold Buccleugh, 3 W. Rob. 220; The China, 7 Wall. 68; The America, 16 Law Rep. 264.

8. The Europa, Brown & L. 89. Four years' intervening sale defeats the lien. The D. M. French, 1 Low. 43. Twenty months deemed sufficient. The Admiral, 18 Law Rep. 91.

9. The Bristol, 29 Fed. Rep. 867; Place v. Norwich etc. L. Co., 118 (U. S.) 468. See LIMITATION OF LIABILITY under SHIPPING.

10. Smith v. Sturgis, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 330; The Columbia, 13 Blatchf. (U. S.) 521; Harmer v. Bell, 22 Eng. L. & Eq. 62. See The Leo, 8 Ben. (U. S.) 506.

XX PLEADINGS—1. Generally.—The pleadings should state the cause of the collision as accurately and distinctly as possible, leaving nothing to inference.¹ A mere general allegation that “she was so carelessly, negligently, unskillfully and recklessly navigated that,” etc., is not sufficient.² The pleadings should be so framed as to assist not only the party in his statement of the case, but also the court in investigating the truth between the litigants; the defendant in a collision cause cannot rely on a simple negative, but must state the circumstances relating to the collision.³

2. Jurisdiction.—The admiralty jurisdiction of the courts of the United States extends to cases of collision occurring in a harbor, sound, or navigable river, within a State.⁴ But the law of the seas—the law maritime according to the law of nations—furnishes the rule by which to determine the extent of liability for collisions occurring upon the high seas and not the United States courts of admiralty when none of the owners of either vessel are residents of the United States.⁵

3. Consolidation of Claims.—Where a party has received injuries from the collision of two vessels, each of which was in fault, they may both be proceeded against in one libel, and the damages apportioned between them equally. At the same time the right may be reserved to the party injured to collect from either party the full amount of damages, in case the other is unable to pay.⁶ If one only is found in fault, a decree may be rendered against that one.⁷ But if each boat is charged with a distinct and sep-

See Dean v. Richards, The Europa, 2 Moore P. C. C., N. S. 1; The China, 7 Wall. 68; The America, 16 Law Rep. 264; Edwards v. The R. F. Stockton, Crabbe 580. A libel filed four years after the collision deemed too late. The D. M. French, 1 Low. 43. See ante, § 84.

Where a libel to recover damages was filed eleven months after the boat had been sunk, and during the interval the steamer had passed into possession of one without notice of the collision, libellants are not guilty of laches, as the crew of the sunken vessel, their most important witnesses, had perished with her. The Alaska, 33 Fed. Rep. 107.

1. The Lady Anne, 1 Eng. L. & Eq. 670. See The East Lothian, 14 Moore P. C. C.; 1 Lush. 241; The Alhambra, 33 Fed. Rep. 73.

The pleadings should be confined to the merits of the collision. The George Arkle, Lush. 222.

2. The H. P. Baldwin, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 257; The Marpesia, 4 L. R., P. C. 212; 26 L. T., N. S. 333. Compare George v. Watts, 30 L. T., N. S. 60.

It seems that the established rule, which requires a plaintiff in a cause of damage to state with reasonable certainty the instances of neglect on which he intends to rely, and if he relies on a breach of a statutory rule of navigation, that he should specifically plead that the act done or not done was in violation of that particular rule, does not apply to a case where one vessel is under way and the other incapable of moving. The Secret, 26 L. T., N. S. 670.

A plaintiff whose vessel has been run down at anchor, may charge negligence generally, and the burden of proof, the collision proved, is thrown upon the defendant to establish his defence. The Bothnia, Lush. 52.

3. The Why Not, 2 L. R., Adm. 265; 38 L. J., Adm. 26.

4. St. John v. Paine, 10 How. (U. S.) 557; Newton v. Stebbins, 10 How. (U. S.) 586. Compare The St'r. New York v. Rae, 18 How. (U. S.) 223.

5. Thommasen v. Whitwell, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 458. Compare The British America, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 516.

6. The Washington, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 513; Atkinson v. The R. B. Hamilton, 1 Bond (U. S.) 536.

7. The E. C. Scranton, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 25.

arate act of collision, without any allegation of privity between them, or concert or unity of purpose, they cannot be joined in the same libel.¹ Seamen and passengers sustaining injuries by collision may be made colibellants with the owners of the vessel, even after an interlocutory decree, no sufficient reason to the contrary appearing.² Where several actions are brought against a ship in respect of one collision by different plaintiffs, and several bail bonds given, and the actions are consolidated by order of the court, and the damage pronounced for in the usual course, the court has the power to open the order of consolidation and dis-sever the actions, but will not do so unless due cause is shown.³

4. Cross Claims.—Where there is a cross action, and both come on to be heard together by consent of proctors, the court decides in the cross action according to the facts pleaded and proved in the original action.⁴

5. Replying.—A plaintiff may plead new matter in reply, if it is really matter of reply, and not properly a part of the case set up in his behalf.⁵ Where the evidence has been taken before an examiner of the court, the plaintiff's counsel is entitled to reply.⁶

6. Justification.—It is not a sufficient defence in a libel for collision to set up that a sound boat would not have sustained any damage,⁷ or that the owners have already paid the libellants for the damage done by the collision,⁸ or that the owners of the injured steamboat have been satisfied by the insurers for the damage.⁹ So public convenience, or contract with a department of the government, will not justify an excessive rate of speed.¹⁰ The mere fact that a pilot was on board assisting in the management of the ship and occasionally giving orders at the time would not defeat a recovery against the steamer.¹¹

XXI. EVIDENCE—1. Generally.—In cases of collision the burden of proof is on the libellant.¹² The burden of proof is on the plaintiff, not only to show negligence on the part of the defendant, but ordinary care on his own part.¹³ So where one of the

1. Atkinson v. The R. B. Hamilton, 1 Bond (U. S.) 536.

2. The Queen, 40 Fed. Rep. 694.

3. The William Hutt, Lush. 25.

4. The Vortigern, Swa. 518.

5. The Bothina, Lush. 52.

6. The Njukan, 14 W. R. 973.

7. The Sam Gaty, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 190; Amoskeag Mfg. Co. v. The John Adams, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 404.

8. The Propeller Monticello v. Molli-son, 17 How. (U. S.) 152.

9. The Yeager, 4 Wood (U. S.) 18; 20 Fed. Rep. 653.

10. James Adger, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 515.

11. Pope v. The R. T. Forbes, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 331.

12. The Wolverton, 13 Fed. Rep. 44;

The Ralph M. Hayward, 12 Fed. Rep. 794, 795; The Ligo, 2 Hagg. Adm. 356; The Edwin H. Webster, 18 Fed. Rep. 724. See The Breeze, 6 Ben. (U. S.) 14. 13. Drew v. Chesapeake, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 33; Morgan v. Sim, 11 Moore P. C. C. 30; The Haverton, 31 Fed. Rep. 563. See Schenck v. The Fremont, 1 Bond (U. S.) 57; Elliott v. The James Nelson, 1 Pittsb. (Pa.) 6; Randolph v. The United States, Newb. 497; The Relief, Olc. Adm. 104; The New Jersey, Olc. Adm. 415; The Maresia, L. R., 4 P. C. 212; The Sea Nymph, Lush. 23; Hall v. Little, 2 Flip. (U. S.) 153; Mellon v. Smith, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 462. See The Negaunee, 20 Fed. Rep. 918.

To sustain an action for damages vessels neglects an ordinary and proper measure of precaution,¹ or departs from the rule, the burden is on her to show that the collision was not owing to that neglect, or that such a departure was necessary.² If the defendants plead inevitable accident alone, the plaintiff must show a prima facie case of negligence against the defendants, and the plaintiffs must, therefore, begin.³ A plaintiff is only entitled to recover secundum allegata et probata.⁴ Therefore, a party suing cannot recover in full if he fails to prove the case set up in his pleading and evidence, although no fault is proved against his vessel, and fault is established against the other vessel.⁵ So in an action for injuries caused by a collision, the occasioned by collision between two steamboats, it must be shown that the plaintiff was using ordinary care. Halderman v. Beckwith, 4 McLean (U. S.) 286; Barrett v. Williamson, 4 McLean (U. S.) 589.

Where a collision is caused by the negligence of two vessels, proof that the disaster could have been prevented by one of them is not sufficient to exculpate the other. The entire damage may be recovered from one vessel, though both be in fault, if one only is saved. The Troy, 28 Fed. Rep. 861.

1. The Lion, Sprague (U. S.) 40; The Anglo Norman, The Jane E. Williams, 1 Newb. Adm. 492; The Great Republic, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 20.

2. The LaFayette, 20 Fed. Rep. 319; The Pennland, 23 Fed. Rep. 555; The Alaska, 22 Fed. Rep. 548; The Curtis Park, 19 Fed. Rep. 797; The Elizabeth Jones, 112 U. S., 514; The Elizabeth Jenkins, L. R., 1 P. C. App. 501; The Miranda, 1 Newb. Adm. 227; The Concordia, 1 L. R., Adm. 93.

Where there has been a breach of the rules, and a collision ensues, the prima facie presumption is that it was occasioned thereby. The Palestine, 13 W. R. 111.

It is incumbent upon the vessel claiming the protection of the rule and a departure from the statutory requirement to show—

1. That a proposition to depart from the statute was made by her by means of the signals prescribed by rule 1, and in due season for the other vessel to receive the proposition and act upon it with safety.

2. That the other vessel heard and understood the proposition thus made.

3. That the other vessel accepted the proposition. The Milwaukee, 1 Brown Adm. 313.

3. The Abraham, 28 L. T., N. S. 775; The Benmore, 4 L. R., Adm. 132; 43 L.

J., Adm. 5; overruling The Thomas Lea, 38 L. J. Adm. 37; 20 L. T., N. S. 1017. See also The Otter, 22 W. R. 557. Compare The Marpesia, 4 L. R., P. C. 212.

Where, in case of a collision at sea at night, the defence of inevitable accident is raised, and the main issue is, whether the weather was such that the lights of one vessel could be seen in time to enable the other to keep out of the way—held, that the burden is upon libellants to show, not only that their lights were burning, but also that the weather was such that they could be seen a sufficient distance to avoid the collision. The Florence P. Hall, 14 Fed. Rep. 408.

4. The Ann, Lush. 55; 13 Moore P. C. C. 198; The Dispatch, Lush. 98; 14 Moore P. C. C. 83; The Haswell, B. & L., 247; Fashion v. Ward, 6 McLean (U. S.) 195; Malton v. Nesbit, 1 C. & P. 70.

An allegation in a petition that the vessel proceeded against in a collision cause was "considerably further out to the north side of the river than" the other vessel, and improperly ported, and so brought about a collision, is sufficiently proved to entitle the owners of the vessel making the allegation to recover, by showing that the vessel proceeded against was further over to the south side of the river than the other, and improperly ported. The word "considerably" need not be proved to the full extent. Malcomson v. General Steam Navigation Company; The Ranger and The Cologne, 4 L. R., P. C. C. 519; 9 Moore P. C. C., N. S. 352.

Application of the Rule.—The rule that a party seeking redress for an injury can only recover secundum allegata et probata, applies only to cases where the averments alleged are material to the issue raised. The Alice, The Rosita, 2 L. R., P. C. 214.

5. The North America, 12 Moore P.

plaintiff is not restricted, in the recovery of damages, to the amount named in his bill of particulars and affidavit, but may, on the trial, prove a greater value, and recover according to his proof, if the amount do not exceed the amount laid in his declaration.¹

2. Gist of the Action.—The gist of the action for collision is negligence, misconduct, or want of nautical skill.² And the libellant must show the alleged negligence by a fair preponderance of the evidence; otherwise the libel must be dismissed.³

3. What Admissible.—The court will admit a log book on production by the officer in whose custody such logs are kept, without requiring the evidence of the person who made the entries.⁴ So the books containing the entries made by the coast guard, and sent to the coast guard office, are admissible to prove the state of wind and weather at the time of the collision, without calling the person who made the entries.⁵ Where a vessel has been sunk by a collision, it is competent, as bearing upon the question of damages, to prove that the vessel could not be raised, or that it would cost more to do so than the value of the wreck when raised.⁶ Evidence of an order, as to the lights, given twelve hours before the collision, is admissible, but not of conversations with respect to them.⁷ So evidence that the defendant's boat was racing at the time of the accident is not irrelevant.⁸ Where the collision is caused by error induced by excitement from the imminence of the peril, evidence cannot be admitted when the peril itself was brought about by the negligence, etc., of those in charge of the same vessel.⁹

4. Credibility of Testimony.—Where the account given on behalf of one of the vessels is consistent and credible, while that given on behalf of the other is inconsistent and irreconcilable with the undoubted course of each, the account given by the former should be taken as true in fixing the liability.¹⁰ Witnesses upon a vessel

C. C. 331; Swa. (U.S.) 358; The Ancon, 6 Sawy. (U. S.) 118.

1. The Steamboat Clipper v. Logan, 18 Ohio 375.

2. Cummins v. Spruance, 4 Harr. 315.

3. The Joseph W. Gould, 19 Fed. Rep. 785, 787. See Butterfield v. Boyd, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 356; Middlesex Quarry Co. v. The Albert Mason, 2 Fed. Rep. 321; The Edwin H. Webster, 18 Fed. Rep. 724.

4. The Maria Das Dorias, B. & L. 27. See The Newport, 36 Fed. Rep. 910.

Erasure Immaterial.—The log-book of one of the ships produced contained an erasure as to the wind at the time of the collision, but the alteration was rather adverse to the case on behalf of the ship. Held, that the erasure was immaterial. The Constitution, 10 Jur., N. S. 831.

5. The Catherina Maria, 1 L. R., Adm. 53.

6. Blanchard v. New Jersey Steamboat Co., 59 N. Y. 292.

7. The Aleppo, 35 L. J. Adm. 9; 14 L. T., N. S. 228.

8. Myers v. Perry, 1 La. An. 372.

9. The Dexter, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 69.

Evidence that the pilot, "after the accident, admitted the collision was caused by his neglect, and, within twenty-four hours afterwards, committed suicide by poison," was inadmissible. Bigley v. Williams, 80 Pa. St. 107.

10. The Alhambra, 25 Fed. Rep. 846; The S. C. Tryon, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 161.

A libel to recover damages resulting from a collision will be dismissed where in motion, looking at another also in motion, cannot determine by the eye, unaided otherwise, with reliable exactness, either her course, distance or speed.¹ The courts attach greater weight to the testimony of witnesses to facts which occurred within their own knowledge, on board their own vessel, than to any opinions or judgments formed by those upon one vessel respecting the management of the other.² So loose declarations or admissions extracted from or freely made by portions of a crew directly after a wreck from collision, will have but slight weight in invalidating their deliberate testimony to the facts.³

5. Witnesses.—In a cause of collision the crew of the vessel proceeded against are competent witnesses, notwithstanding they may be sharers in the profits and losses of the vessel, and do not deny their interest in the suit.⁴ Witnesses should, as far as possible, be examined viva voce before the court, not upon written in-the testimony is irreconcilably conflicting, and the probabilities are against the libellant's case. The Leversons, 5 Hughes (U. S.) 351; The Grand Isle, 34 Fed. Rep. 767.

Where the testimony is conflicting and irreconcilable, the conclusion of the district judge, who saw and heard the witnesses, will be accepted by the circuit court. Downes v. The Excelsior, 40 Fed. Rep. 271; The Hypodame, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 216.

So where the evidence shows that defendant's vessel displayed unusual lights, which misled the pilot on plaintiff's boat, and the testimony on either side regarding the occurrences immediately before the collision is in direct conflict upon material matters, the verdict of the jury, whose determination rested upon a consideration of the conduct of the vessels at and before the collision, will not be disturbed. Chase v. Belden, 117 N. Y. 637.

1. The Narragansett, Olc. Adm. 246.

2. The Governor, 1 Abb. Adm. 108; The Osceola, Olc. Adm. 450. See The Santa Claus, Olc. Adm. 428; The Nessmore, 41 Fed. Rep. 437.

On a question as to the strength and direction of the wind arising, on the trial of a libel for collision, brought in behalf of a sailing vessel against a steamboat, the testimony of those on board the former, whose movements depend upon the wind, is entitled to more weight than that of those on board the latter, whose movements are independent of it. Genesee Chief v. Fitzhugh, 12 How. (U. S.) 443.

So the estimate or judgment of witnesses, formed in the night time, and expressed orally, or exhibited on charts or diagrams, on a vessel in motion, are of slight weight in determining the relative position and bearing of another vessel, also under motion. The Argus, Olc. Adm. 304.

Where competent officers are in their places attentive to their duties, and navigating their vessel in accordance with what can be seen, their testimony that a light was not perceived, which must have been seen if properly burning, is entitled to superior credit, if not outweighed by other circumstances. The Westfield, 38 Fed. Rep. 366.

3. The New Jersey, Olc. Adm. 415; The Nessmore, 41 Fed. Rep. 437.

The settlement by a tug, for damages to her tow caused by a collision is a strong practical admission of her own liability, either in whole or in part, therefor. The Hattie M. Spraker, 29 Fed. Rep. 457.

4. The Osceola, Olc. Adm. 450; The Hudson, Olc. Adm. 396; The Catherine of Dover, 2 Hagg. 145; McNally v. The L. P. Dayton, 30 U. S. 669. See Gillingham v. Charleston Towboat & Transp. Co., 40 Fed. Rep. 649. Compare The Midlothian, 15 Jur. 806; 5 Eng. L. & Eq. 556; The Foyle, Lush. 10.

The receiver of wrecks has no power under §§ 448, 449 of 17 and 18 Vict., ch. 104, to examine into the question which ship caused the damage to the other by a collision, and in an action for the collision the captain's statement by him taken was held to be inadmissible to show that the damage to the plaintiff's ship was on her starboard bow. Northard v. Pepper, 17 C. B., N. S. 39.

terrogatories before an officer of the court prior to the hearing.¹

6. Identity Must be Established.—If the libellant fails to establish the identity of the vessel in fault, the libel must be dismissed.²

XXII. DECREE.—In collision causes, the court will look at all the allegations of both parties, upon which fault depends, consider which are true, and, not allowing either party to contradict, by proof, what he has alleged, will extract the true case from the entire record and decree accordingly.³ And in doing this the court will look chiefly to the facts in proof, and will pay but slight attention to the opinions and hypotheses of witnesses, especially those of each ship's company, in respect to the acts of the other.⁴ Where there is too much doubt of any substantial damage to warrant a decree, the suit should be dismissed.⁵ So the court will refuse to award damages for swearing falsely.⁶

XXIII. Costs.—The vessel in fault should bear the costs.⁷ If both vessels were in fault each should pay its own costs,⁸ or the costs should be divided,⁹ or refused to either.¹⁰ So, where both are in fault, the vessel most in fault bears all the costs,¹¹ but if a vessel, not in fault, fails to render assistance after the collision, she will be liable for the costs.¹² If neither was to blame, each should bear its own costs.¹³ Where damages occur by inevitable accident no costs are allowed,¹⁴ but the power to award

1. A certified copy of an examination taken before a receiver of wrecks cannot be used to discredit the captain in the witness box; the original only can be admitted. The Emperor, The Zephyr, 12 W. R. 890.

2. The Annex No. 3, 35 Fed. Rep. 560.

A steamer at a pier was run into at night, and at about that time a ferry boat struck something in the neighborhood. Held, that the identity of the ferry boat, not being proved, the evidence being conflicting and unsatisfactory, the steamer's libel against the ferry boat must be dismissed. The Annex No. 3, 27 Fed. Rep. 516.

3. The Clement, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 363; See Peterson v. Wayne, 37 Fed. Rep. 808; The Alfred, 2 Eng. L. & Eq. 541.

4. The Narragansett, Olc. Adm. 246. See The Isaac Newton, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 21; Sills v. Brown, 9 C. & P. 601; Fenwick v. Bell, 1 C. & K. 312.

5. The S. O. Pierce, 40 Fed. Rep. 767.

6. The Sylvan Grove, 29 Fed. Rep. 336.

7. The Favorita, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 539.

8. Desty's Ship & Adm., § 406; The De Cock, 5 Month. Law Mag. 303; Hay v. Le Neve, 2 Shaw Scotch App. 395;

The Monarch, 1 W. Rob. 21; Foster v. The Miranda, Newb. 227; 6 McLean 221; The Washington, 5 Jur. 1067; 2 Mar. L. C. 23; The Columbus, Abb. Adm. 390; The Baltimore, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 388.

9. Lenox v. Winisimmet Co., 1 Sprague 160.

10. The Favorita, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 539.

11. Desty's Ship & Adm., § 406; The Columbus, Abb. Adm. 390; The Rival, 1 Sprague 130; The Celt, 3 Hagg. Adm. 321; The Monarch, 1 W. Rob. 21; Reeves v. The Constitution, Gilp. 579; The Debock, 5 Mon. Law Mag. 303; The Scioto, 2 Ware (Dav.) 359.

12. The Celt, 3 Hagg. Adm. 321.

Where a vessel deserted the injured vessel without cause, costs were awarded as a punishment. The Caledonia, Spinks 23; The St. Lawrence, 7 Notes of C. 556; The Atlas, 4 Ben. 33; The Celt, 3 Hagg. Adm. 321.

Where the crew of the vessel not in fault were guilty of gross violence, costs were denied. The Cataline, 2 Spinks 23.

13. The Columbus, Abb. Adm. 384; The Shannon and Placidia, 7 Jur. 380.

14. The Ebenezer, 2 W. Rob. 206; The Itinerant, 8 Jur. 132; 2 W. Rob. 236; The Margaret, 1 L. T., N. S. 340.

costs in such cases is in the discretion of the court.¹ The party who fails in any suit, except under peculiar circumstances, should pay the whole of the costs.² So where a libel is dismissed the respondent is entitled to the cost.³ If the action is brought without cause, the party bringing it should pay his own costs.⁴ So the costs and expenses paid in defending a suit for services and keeping a vessel afloat are not recoverable where both vessels were in fault.⁵ Nothing can be taxed as costs for services of attorney or counsel, except the costs and the fees therein described and enumerated by the statute.⁶

NAVY YARD.—See note 7.

NEAP TIDES.—Those tides which happen between the full and the change of the moon, twice in every twenty-four hours.⁸

NEAR; NEAREST.—(See also AT, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 890; NEXT).—Near is a relative term, and its precise meaning depends upon circumstances.⁹

1. The London, Brown & L. 82; The Rival, 1 Sprague 130; De Vaux v. Salvador, 11 Ad. & E. 420; The Sapphire, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 51.

2. The Christina, 8 Jur. 321.

3. The Catherine of Dover, 2 Hagg. Adm. 145. Compare The George, 2 W. Rob. 386; 9 Jur. 670; The Scioto, 2 Ware (Dav.) 359.

4. The Thornley, 7 Jur. 659.

5. Desty's Ship. & Adm., § 406; The Favorita, 4 Ben. 132.

6. The Baltimore, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 377; Flanders v. Tweed, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 453; Oelrichs v. Spain, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 230.

7. Navy Yard.—Includes the waters contiguous to and necessary to the operations of the navy yard. The waters necessary to float the vessels stationed at the yard are, like the yard itself, within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. Ex parte Tatem, 1 Hughes (U. S.) 588.

8. Teschmacher v. Thompson, 18 Cal. 21.

9. Bouv. L. Dict.; Tyne Keelmen v. Davison, 16 C. B., N. S. 616; Fall River Iron Works Co. v. Old Colony etc. R. Co., 5 Allen (Mass.) 227; American Dock and Imp. Co. v. Trustees of Public Schools, 39 N. J. Eq. 435; Kirkbride v. Lafayette Co., 108 U. S. 211; Barrett v. Schuyler Co. Court, 44 Mo. 197. See also Shepherd v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 130 U. S. 426; s. c., 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 437; Boston etc. R. Co. v. Midland R. Co., 1 Gray (Mass.) 367; Fassett v. Roxbury, 55 Vt. 554.

Near (as used in Tenn. law of 1869, prohibiting liquor selling on election days, "near an election ground") includes a locality a mile and a quarter off. Manis v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 315.

In or near, in the grant of a market. See Attorney General v. Horner, 14 Q. B. D. 245; s. c., 11 App. Cas. 66. In his judgment in that case, BRETT, M. R., is reported (54 L. J. Q. B. 230) to have said: "A distinction was attempted to be drawn between the words 'next' and 'near;' but I can see none."

But see Rex v. Hervey, 1 W. Bl. 20, where it was held that, the word "near" in a penal case must be construed strictly, and is not equivalent to the word "next."

A Question of Fact.—Where plaintiffs were to run for defendant his staves "at and near T." at a specified price, keld, that whether a point a mile and a half from there was "near T," within the meaning of the contract, was a question of fact for the jury, and could not be decided by the court as matter of law. Shaw v. Davis, 7 Mich. 318.

The words "near town lines," under the Illinois statute, which provides for the erection of bridges over streams near county or town lines, were held to give the highway commissioner, of the town or towns electing to build such a bridge, power to determine its site, within a mile or any other reasonable distance from the town line. Insley v. Shepard, 31 Fed. Rep. 869.

"Near the House of K."—A declaration, in an action to recover damages of a town for a defect in a highway, which alleges the defendant's failure to keep it in repair "near the house of K." is not so clear, that, upon the defendant failing to deny in his answer his liability to repair that spot, an admission of such liability is inferred. Kellogg v. Northampton, 4 Gray (Mass.) 65.

Definition.NEAR—NEAREST.*Definition.

"Near the Sea Shore."—In a patent, the words, "near the sea shore," must have been used in the sense of "along the sea shore." Keyser v. Coe, 9 Blatchf. (U. S.) 35.

"At or Near."—"A statute fixing a terminus of a railroad at or near a place, was held to be satisfied in one case by a location 2,475 feet from the place. Fall River Iron Works Co. v. Old Colony etc. R. Co., 5 Allen (Mass.) 221. And in another by a location a mile and a half away. Parke's Appeal, 64 Pa. St. 137." Lewis on Em. Dom., § 257.

Meaning of words at or near. "See Mason v. Brooklyn City etc. R. Co., 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 373; Mohawk Bridge Co. v. Utica etc. R. Co., 6 Paige (N. Y.) 554; State v. Hudson Tunnel R. Co., 38 N. J. L. 548; Central R. Co. v. Pennsylvania R., 31 N. J. Eq. 475." Lewis on Em. Dom., § 257n.

As Near as May be.—"In § 914, Rev. Stat. U. S., which provides for the conformity of the practice of federal courts, in common lawsuits, to that of the State courts, means "not as near as may be possible, or as near as may be practicable." Indianapolis etc. R. Co. v. Horst, 93 U. S. 291; Beardsley v. Littell, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 105; Emma Silver Min. Co. v. Park, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 415.

Near the Creek, in a Deed.—A deed describing a line as running to a stump "near the creek, and thence up the creek," etc., is to be construed as including all the land to low water mark of the creek. The court said: "Though the words 'near the creek,' strictly speaking, imply the existence of space betwixt the object immediately expressed, and the object of reference beyond it, they indicate, in popular meaning, no more than the whereabouts." Klingensmith v. Ground, 5 Watts (Pa.) 458.

"Near to."—Where an owner is entitled to a remedy when his property, "near to" a street in which a railroad track or structure has been placed, is damaged thereby, it was held, that the property was "near to" the street, if the injury to it is the direct and necessary result of the occupancy of the street by the track, etc. Shepherd v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 130 U. S. 426.

"Near a Dwelling House."—Where a passenger can only be put off a train near a dwelling house, the question whether or not a dwelling house is "near," within the meaning of the statute, should be submitted to the jury; and the court refused to say as a matter of law that a dwelling house 25 or 30 rods distant upon another highway was, within the contemplation of the statute, a near dwelling house in a dark night, its vicinity being unknown to the passenger. Loomis v. Jewett, 35 Hun (N. Y.) 313.

"Near St. Louis."—A deed conveyed all the interest of the grantor in his father's estate "near St. Louis;" held, that it might be shown that the father possessed land nearer St. Louis, and more appropriately within the description of the deed of the son, than that sought to be comprised within it. Menkens v. Blumenthal, 27 Mo. 198. See Campbell v. Smith, 19 Ves. 400. Gates v. Madison Co. Mut. Ins., 5 N. Y. 469; s. c., 2 N. Y. 43.

"Three Nearest Towns."—In the clause of a Massachusetts statute (Gen. Stat., ch. 43, § 28), which provides that the jurors, who are to assess the damages for the taking of land for a public use, shall be returned from the "three nearest towns," the word "nearest" refers to the situation of the towns relatively to each other, and not relatively to the tract of land to be viewed. Reed v. Hanover etc. R. Co., 105 Mass. 304; Wyman v. Lexington etc. R. Co., 13 Met. (Mass.) 316; Meacham v. Fitchburg R. Co., 4 Cush. (Mass.) 291.

Nearest Courthouse.—Where there was a provision that "the cause shall be removed to some adjoining county, the courthouse of which is nearest the courthouse of the county in which the suit is pending," it was held, that "the nearest courthouse," in the meaning of the statute, is not necessarily the one nearest by geometrical measurement, but may be the one most convenient of access, and nearest by the usual traveled route. Shaw v. Cade, 54 Tex. 307.

Nearest Magistrate.—Condition precedent to recovery for loss by fire, under the terms of a policy, was the production of "the certificate under seal of the magistrate or notary public living nearest the place of fire," as to the amount of loss, etc.; the production of the certificate of such magistrate, which stated some of the facts required, and that he was not competent to state others, and also the certificate of another

Definition.

NEAT CATTLE—NECESSARIES.

Definition.

NEAT CATTLE.—See note 1.

NECESSARIES.²—See also EXEMPTIONS, 7 Am. & Eng. Encyc.

magistrate who did not live as near as the first, but whose office was nearer, stating all the facts required, is a sufficient compliance with the condition. Agricultural Ins. Co. v. Bemiller, 70 Md. 400.

"We are asked to go into a nice calculation of distances, and settle the point on the law of mensuration. De minimis, etc., is a sufficient answer to this objection. The spirit of the condition required no such mathematical precision from the assured. Its object is completely secured by the proximity of the certifying magistrate." Turley v. North American F. Ins. Co., 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 374.

Nearest Male Cousin.—In a devise to the "nearest and most deserving male cousin," held, that the word nearest meant "nearest in blood, or coming next, or most closely related, or pointing at the eldest by way of eminence." Power v. Quealy, 2 L. R. I. 227, 234; affirmed in 4 L. R. I. 20, where CHRISTIAN, L. J., remarked: "Now, 'nearest,' in such a collocation as this, has, I think, a legal meaning attached to it by authority. Its meaning is not, I think, nearness to the estate, according to the order of descent, as it was put in the argument, but nearness in blood to the testator; and amongst a class of persons all equally the nearest of kin in that state of the description, as three brothers are, it means simply the nearest in the order of birth."

Nearest Practicable Point.—A railway company obligated itself to locate depot at the nearest practicable point. It was held, that the road was only bound to locate its depot at the nearest point at which it could be done at a reasonable and ordinary cost. Wooters v. International etc. R. Co., 54 Tex. 300.

Near Thereto as She May Safely Get.—These words must receive a reasonable, not a literal application. Per POLLOCK, B., in Nielsen v. Wait, 14 Q. B. D. 522; affirmed 16 Q. B. D. 67. See Capper v. Wallace, 49 L. J. Q. B. 350; 6 Q. B. D. 163; Pyman v. Dreyfus, 24 Q. B. D. 152; 49 L. J. Q. B. 13.

"It appears from Parker v. Winlow, 27 L. J. Q. B. 49; 7 E. & B. 942; Bastifell v. Lloyd 31 L. J. Ex. 413; 1 H. & C. 388, and Dahl v. Nelson 12 Ch. D. 568; 6 App. Cas. 38, that when the charter party provides that a ship shall go to a harbor named, or 'as near thereto as she can safely get,' the primary object is to get to the place named, and the alternative condition does not arise unless the cause which prevents the immediate arrival of the ship at the place named, is such that it cannot be got rid of by the shipowner by reasonable means and within a reasonable time, having regard to the nature and object of the voyage; and further, that if the cause of detention be the arrival of the vessel during the low tides, her having to wait for the tides to increase is one of the ordinary incidents of navigation, and the shipowner must submit to the delay so occasioned." Per NORTH, J., in Horsley v. Price, 11 Q. B. D. 244. See Schillizzi v. Derry, 4 E. & B. 873; Shield v. Wilkins, 5 Ex. 305; The Alhambra, 6 P. D. 68; Castel v. Trechman, 1 Cab. & El. 276.

1. An indictment is uncertain which charges a theft of "three head of neat stock or beeves." All neat stock are not beeves. Castello v. State, 36 Tex. 324.

In the Texas statute, "If any person shall steal any 'neat' cattle, sheep, goat or hog, he shall be, etc.," the amendment omits the word "neat" in the article. The obvious purpose of the legislature was to leave the word "cattle" in the act, with its popular and well understood acceptance. The word, originally, certainly had a more extensive and comprehensive meaning than it now has in the United States. It has still a more extended signification in English parlance; and to give the term the restricted meaning which it only possesses in general American phraseology, the Englishman still uses some qualifying adjective, such as black or neat cattle. The popular signification of the word in this country, however, is well understood, without particularity of definition. Hubatter v. State, 32 Tex. 483.

2. (As used in the provision of the bankrupt law, excepting from the assignment such articles and necessities of the bankrupt as the assignee shall set apart.) Includes money. When an allowance in money is appropriate and necessary, it may be made. Re Hay, 2 Low. (U. S.) 180.

of Law 130; HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, p. 789; INFANTS, vol. 10, p. 613; INSANITY, vol. 11, p. 134; MARITIME LIENS, vol. 14, p. 410; POOR AND POOR LAWS.

NECESSARILY.—"In a necessary manner; by necessity; unavoidably; indispensably."¹

NECESSARY.—(See EXECUTIONS, 7 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 151; HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, p. 789; INFANTS, vol. 10, p. 613; TAXATION).—The word necessary has great flexibility of meaning. It is used to express mere convenience, or that which is indispensable to the accomplishment of a purpose.²

1. Webster's Dict. followed by the court in Summers v. Farney, 123 Ind. 560.

A cause is necessarily on the calendar (N. Y. Code of Pro. § 307, subd. 8) when it is regularly or properly there. Sipperly v. Warner, 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 332.

"Necessarily Expended."—"The import of the words 'necessarily expended' is sufficiently evident when we consider the purpose for which they were inserted, and the nature of the subject to which they are applied. They relate not to the necessity of payment as between the officer and the person to whom it is made—which would, perhaps, be satisfied by nothing short of the power of legal compulsion—but to the necessity of the expenditures, having reference to what is due to the public and the law, in the efficient and faithful discharge of official duty." People v. Supervisors, 32 N. Y. 473.

2. St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Illinois Inst. for Blind, 43 Ill. 307; Montague v. Richardson, 24 Conn. 347; McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 316; Easter v. Allen, 8 Allen (Mass.) 7; New Jersey R. etc. Co. v. Hancock, 35 N. J. L. 545; Jerome v. Ross, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 315.

The interpretation of this word in McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, is too lax. It should be confined more strictly to its etymological meaning. Nothing can be said to be necessary to the accomplishment of an object which can be dispensed with without abandoning the object itself. Leisse v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 2 Mo. App. 105.

In an act exempting from taxation "all colleges, with the grounds annexed and necessary for the enjoyment of the same," the word "necessary" "as used in jurisprudence, imports, not an absolute, but a reasonable necessity." North- ampton Co. v. Lafayette College, 45 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 246. See also Smart v. Morton, 5 El. & B. 47; s. c., 85 E. C. L. 47; Stoughton v. Lynch, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 467; Swanston v. Twickenham, 11 Ch. D. 838. The word necessary is an adjective possessing degrees. A thing or purpose may be necessary, more necessary, indispensably necessary. Cotton v. Commissioners, 6 Fla. 629.

Where it is lawful to inflict pain on an animal, if it is reasonably "necessary," the latter word includes "adequate and reasonable object." "That without which an animal cannot attain its full development, or be fitted for its ordinary use, may fairly come within the term 'necessary.'" Ford v. Wiley, 58 L. J. R. M. C. 145, 149; s. c., 61 L. T., N. S. 74.

In deciding where it was "necessary" for two steamers to stop and reverse, it was held, that if a steamship is approaching another in a dense fog, without the means of ascertaining, except by fog signals, the course which the other was pursuing, unless there were indications to convey to a seaman of reasonable skill that they were in such a position as to pass well clear of each other, it was there "necessary" to stop and reverse, or be liable for the consequences. The Lebanon v. The Ceto, 62 L. T., N. S. 1.

A toll house was held exempt from taxation as "necessary" to the operation of the turnpike. The court, quoting from the opinion in State v. Hancock, 35 N. J. L. 537, said: "The word 'necessary,' in this connection, does not mean 'indispensable.' It embraces all things suitable and proper for carrying into execution the powers granted." Detroit etc. R. Co. v. Detroit (Mich. 1890), 46 N. W. Rep. 12, 14.

Necessary Alterations.—A written provision in an insurance policy author-

Definition.

NECESSARY.

Definition.

izing "necessary alterations and repairs," held, not to authorize a material enlargement of the building, as by an addition 12 feet wide and 200 feet long. Frost's Detroit Lumber etc. Works v. Millers' etc. Ins. Co., 37 Minn. 300. See also FIRE INSURANCE, 7 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 1002.

Necessary, as Used in Statute.—Where a statute declares that the urban local authorities shall be empowered, "if upon the report of the surveyor it appears necessary," to carry water mains "into, through, or under any lands situate within their district," the word "necessary" must be construed as meaning "necessary for the efficient discharge of the duty in the way most for the benefit of the public." And further, that the person to determine the necessity was the surveyor. Lewis v. Weston-Super-Mail Local Board, L. R., 40 Ch. Div. 55.

A statute (2 Rev. Laws 445, § 267), declared to be a public act, authorized the corporation of the city of New York to make by-laws "for regulating, or, if they find it necessary, preventing the interment of the dead" within the city. "This necessity is not absolute. It is nearly synonymous with expediency, or what is necessary for the public good." Stuyvesant v. Mayor etc. of New York, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 606.

An Illinois statute provides that every railroad corporation shall construct farm crossings "when and where the same may become necessary for the use of the proprietors of the lands adjoining such railroad." The word "necessary" was held to be equivalent to "reasonably convenient." Chalcraft v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 113 Ill. 88.

In a provision in an Indiana statute that "auditors and their deputies are authorized to administer oaths necessary in the performance of their duties," "the word 'necessary' in connection with the performance of the duties of auditors, as used in the section, we think, must be regarded as relating to matters filed with, or business transacted before, the auditor, in which an oath is required, and in reference to which some duty is enjoined upon the auditor. The oath in such a case is a necessity, without which the auditor cannot perform the duty required of him, and he is, therefore, authorized to administer it, as necessary in the performance of his duties." Wheat v. Ragsdale, 27 Ind. 199. See also Garrett v. Higgins, 27 Ind. 162; Curry v. Miller, 42 Ind. 320.

Under § 69 of the charter of Jersey City, power is given to the board of public works "to purchase or construct . . . such other buildings as may be necessary for the purposes of this act." "A building necessary for the purposes of the act is one convenient and proper for such purposes, a building reasonably required or needed for carrying into effect the provisions of the act." Gregory v. Mayor etc. of Jersey City, 36 N. J. L. 169.

The word "necessary," as used in the phrase "any other work necessary for the construction, use, or enjoyment of said railroad," comprises within its fair and legitimate import "all such means as are suitable and to accomplish the end which the legislature had in view at the time of the enactment of the charter. State v. Hancock, 35 N. J. L. 537; Crawford v. Longstreet, 43 N. J. L. 328.

In Exemption Laws.—Where "necessary household furniture" is exempt by statute from execution, the word "necessary" is always given a liberal construction. It is never treated as synonymous with "indispensable." It embraces all those articles which enable the family to live conveniently and decently, according to the custom of the country in which they reside. "We think the word 'necessary' was not intended to denote those articles of furniture only which are indispensable to the bare subsistence of the persons for whose benefit the law was designed—the debtor and his family. According to such a limited construction, it would exclude many things which universal usage and the common understanding of that word in reference to this subject have pronounced to be necessary articles of household furniture; and would, indeed, protest merely those rude contrivances which are used only in a savage state. The word was obviously used in a larger sense; it was intended to embrace those things which are requisite in order to enable the debtor not merely to live, but to live in a convenient and comfortable manner." Montague v. Richardson, 24 Conn. 338; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 173; Davlin v. Stone, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 359. Nevertheless it cannot be extended by taking into consideration the debtor's present or past station in life, and the mode of living to which he and his family have been accustomed. Articles which are unusually valuable, so as properly to be regarded as ornaments, cannot be exempt under a statute exempting "household furniture necessary for supporting life." "The law intends that the debtor, when withholding money from his creditor for furniture, shall supply each class of his necessities, and secure his comfort and convenience by expending money in a reasonably economical manner, looking solely to utility." Hitchcock v. Holmes, 43 Conn. 528; Freem. on Exec. (2nd ed.), § 231.

In those States where the exemption is confined by statute to necessary wearing apparel, the word "necessary" "is not to be understood in its most rigid sense implying something indispensable, but as equivalent to convenient and comfortable. It would, therefore, include such articles of dress or clothing as might properly be considered among the necessities, in contradistinction, to the luxuries of life. Whether an article attached is a necessary or a luxury may, under some circumstances, be a question for the jury, depending upon the situation of the debtor and the character and uses, and, perhaps, the cost of the article." Towns v. Pratt, 33 N. H. 349; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 726. "The wearing apparel, 'necessary for immediate use,' must be such an amount of clothing as is necessary to meet the varying climate and the customary habits and ordinary necessities of the mass of the people. The clothing worn by the individual, while about his daily toil, might be all that was necessary for the time, but be wholly insufficient when the labor ceased; and the clothing suitable and proper for days of labor might not be such as the common sentiment of the community would deem necessary for use on days set apart for religious assembling and worship. Peverly v. Sayles, 10 N. H. 356; Freeman on Exec. (2nd ed.), § 232.

Grounds adjoining a college used for the president's house, etc., are exempt from taxation as "necessary" for the enjoyment, etc. "The word 'necessary,' as used in jurisprudence, imports not an absolute but a reasonable necessity." Northampton Co. v. Lafayette College, 45 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 246.

"Necessary" as used in the R. I. act for laying out highways (Digest of 1844, p. 319) is to be taken in the sense of "reasonably necessary." "It was never, however, understood that the term 'necessary,' in this act, implied, or was intended to imply, an absolute necessity; for, in that sense, no new way, in modern days, at least, could become necessary." Hazard v. Middletown, 12 R. I. 227; Hunter v. Newport, 5 R. I. 328.

The power given by § 96, Poor House act, 1875, enabling justices to order the doing of works "necessary" for the abatement of a nuisance, does not extend "to whatever the local sanitary authority thinks necessary." Per STEPHEN, J., in Ex parte Whitchurch, 6 Q. B. D. 545. See also Ex parte Saunders, 11 Q. B. D. 191; R. v. Llewellyn, 13 Q. B. D. 681; Whitaker v. Derby, 55 L. J. M. C. 8; R. v. Wheatley, 16 Q. B. D. 34.

"Expenses (if any) necessary to maintain hereditaments in a state to command such rent," in definition of annual value in § 1, 6 & 7 W. IV, ch. 96, include drainage works for a farm. Reg. v. Gainsborough, 4 L. R., 7 Q. B. 64.

Where a party has a contractual right to demand such things as he may "think necessary"—e. g., to ask for further proof or information—this does not enable him to act capriciously, it only embraces such things as he may reasonably require. Braunstein v. Accidental Ins., 1 B. & S. 782.

Necessary Repairs.—The question, which arose in Truscott v. Diamond Rock Co., 20 Ch. D. 251, was whether a covenant "to do necessary repairs" was the equivalent of a covenant to repair. It was decided in the affirmative. "Necessary," in the phrase "necessary repairs," neither adds to nor takes away from the meaning. Per JESSEL, M. R.

It is well settled that a mortgagee in possession is not bound to expend money on the mortgaged premises, further than to keep them in "necessary repairs;" this language has been construed strictly, and such allowance put on the ground of absolute necessity for the protection of the estate; for such expenditure when incurred he will receive allowance. Clark v. Smith, 1 N. J. Eq. 121.

Necessary Appendages.—See APPENDAGE, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 630.

Necessary Charges.—Wherefor towns authorized by Mass. Gen. Stat., ch. 18, § 10, to raise money, were held not to include expenses of a committee directed by a vote of the town to petition the legislature for the annexation of the town to another town. Minot v. West Roxbury, 112 Mass. 1; Coolidge v. Brookline, 114 Mass. 592. But see Connolly v. Beveriey, 151 Mass. 437, construing the subsequent act of 1889, ch. 380. See also Stetson v. Kempton, 13 Mass. 278; Friend v. Gilbert, 108 Mass. 411; Hood v. Mayor etc. of Lynn, 1 Allen (Mass.) 105; Babbitt v. Savoy, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 530; Fuller v. Groton, 11 Gray (Mass.) 340; Hadsell v. Hancock, 3 Gray (Mass.) 530; Bancroft v. Lynnfield, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 566; Willard v. Newport, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 231; Hardy v. Waltham, 3 Met. (Mass.) 163; French v. Quincy, 3 Allen (Mass.) 9; Spaulding v. Lowell, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 71.

"All Necessary Apparatus."—See APPARATUS, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 615 n.

In the articles of a corporation the executive committee were authorized "to do all acts necessary for the prosperity of the society in the intervals of the meeting of the board." This does not authorize it to buy real estate. Tracy v. Guthrie Co. Agricultural Soc., 57 Iowa 29.

"All Necessary Expenses and Charges."—The expression in a collateral note, that the holder is to be reimbursed "all necessary expenses and charges" arising from the sale of the collateral, means those incident to its sale. De Coursey v. Johnston, 20 Pittsb. L. J., N. S. (Pa.) 407.

"Necessary for the Construction or Operation" of a Railroad.—Property is to be regarded as "necessary" for the operation of the road if it is such as the company, in the reasonable exercise of its discretion, thought it best to procure for the most profitable use of the road to itself and the most beneficial use of it to the public, even though the road could have been operated without it. Buck v. Seymour, 46 Conn. 156.

"Necessary and Convenient."—A private act of parliament, for enclosing the waste lands of a manor, reserved to the lord and his assigns all "convenient and necessary ways." "We are all of opinion that, upon the construction of the words, 'convenient and necessary,' which occur in one part of the section, and the words, 'necessary or convenient,' which occur in another part, the true question is not whether the road has been made in the direction, or in the manner least injurious to the owner of an allotment; or in that direction, or by that mode which a strict and rigid necessity would point out; much less whether it has been made in that direction or by that mode, which, upon a view of the work when accomplished, and when a better judgment may possibly be formed than could have been formed before, may be thought by persons possessing the highest degree of skill and experience to be the best that could have been devised; but whether the direction chosen has been such as a person of reasonable and ordinary skill and experience would have selected beforehand, and whether the mode adopted has been such as a prudent and rational person would have adopted if he had been making the road over his own land, and not over the land of another." Abson v. Fenton, 1 B. & C. 201.

"Necessary Help."—When warden of prison is entrusted with authority to employ "all necessary help," he may employ a physician. State v. Hobart, 13 Nev. 420.

"All necessary incidental powers" occurring in a bank charter—the court, says: "The term is used to mean that kind of necessity which custom and usage impose on that particular branch of business called banking." Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 168.

"Necessary Occasions."—A fund applicable to the "repairs, ornaments and other necessary occasions" of a parish church may be applied (probably under either of the words "repairs" or "ornaments," and certainly under "necessary occasions") in the building of a spire to the church, although the church has not previously had a spire. Re Palatine Estate Charity, 39 Ch. D. 54.

Necessary Acts.—Under a provision that a railroad "may do all other acts necessary for making, maintaining, altering, or repairing and using the railway," an act is not "necessary" merely because it would be economical to the company. Reg. v. Wycombe R. Co., L. R., 2 Q. B. 310; Fenwick v. East Lond. R. Co., L. R., 20 Eq. 544; Pugh v. Golden Valley R. Co., 12 Ch. D. 274. See also Greenwich v. Easton, etc. R. Co., 24 N. J. Eq. 217.

A necessary easement is one necessary for the enjoyment of the property as it stood at the time when such property was acquired under the title in virtue of which the easement is claimed. Pyer v. Carter, 1 H. & N. 916; commented on in Morland v. Cook, L. R., 6 Eq. 252, dissented from in Wheeldon v. Burrows, 12 Ch. D. 31; and approved in Watts v. Kelson, 6 Ch. 166. See Gale on Easements (5th ed.) 131; Elph. 189, 190. See also EASEMENTS, 6 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 139.

"Necessary and Useful for Public or Private Purposes."—As used in the Pennsylvania Lateral Railroad act of 1832, § 1, in the clause, "necessary and useful for public or private purposes," it refers not to an absolute but a reasonable necessity. Hays v. Briggs, 3 Pittsb. (Pa.) 504.

"Necessary Land for Making a Railway."—An exception, in a contract for sale of an estate, of "necessary land for making a railway," renders the contract void for uncertainty. Pearce v. Watts, 44 L. J. Ch. 492; L. R., 20 Eq. 492.

Where the right exists to get the minerals under land, and for that purpose has been granted the right to construct "necessary" or "convenient" ways, the test of the proper exercise of such right is "whether the direction chosen has been such as a person of reasonable and ordinary skill and experience would have selected beforehand, and whether the mode adopted has been such as a prudent and rational person would have adopted if he had been making the road upon his own land and not upon the land of another." Abson v. Fenton, 1 B. & C. 196; 15 Morr. Min. Rep. 215.

"Necessary outgoings," deductible from the annual value of a succession (§ 22, 16 & 17 V., ch. 51), mean "permanent charges made on the occupier of the property—such as repairs, poor rates, highway, sewer and county rates, drainage rates and the like;" but income tax or commission to agent is not included. Re Elwes, 28 L. J. Ex. 46; 3 H. & N. 719; Re Cowley, L. R., 1 Ex. 288.

Necessary Disbursements.—Means actual expenses. Wolf v. McGavock, 24 Wis. 54. See also DeWitt v. Swift, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 282.

"Necessary and proper," occurring in art. 1, § 8, ch. 8, of U. S. Constitution, empowering congress to make laws "necessary and proper" for carrying its express provisions into effect, are thus construed by C. J. MARSHALL: "It would be incorrect, and would lead to endless difficulties, if the opinion should be maintained that no law was authorized which was not indispensably necessary to give effect to a specified power. Where various systems might be adopted for that purpose, it might be said, with respect to each, that it was not necessary, because the end might be attained by other means. Congress must possess the choice of means, and must be empowered to use any means which are, in fact, conducive to the exercise of a power granted by the constitution." United States v. Fisher, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 358; McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 413; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 304; Juilliard v. Greenman, 110 U. S. 440; Thayer v. Hedges, 23 Ind. 146; Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; Harris Am. Const. Law 106. And see Legal Tender Case, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 457; Harris Am. Const. Law 103-108.

"It must be taken then as finally settled, so far as judicial decisions can settle anything, that the words 'all laws necessary and proper for carrying into execution' powers expressly granted or vested, have, in the constitution, a sense equivalent to that of the words, laws, not absolutely necessary, indeed, but appropriate, plainly adopted to constitutional and legitimate ends; laws not prohibited, but consistent with the letter and spirit of the constitution; laws really calculated to effect objects entrusted to the government. CHASE, CH. J., in Hepburn v. Guswold, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 603. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 701.

"Works Necessary and Convenient for Traffic."—By "works necessary and convenient for traffic," in a deed, is meant, not those without which the passenger and goods traffic cannot be carried on, but those which are reasonably necessary for passenger and goods traffic as carried on on a railway of the kind of the grantee, and as from time to time required. Harris v. London etc. R. Co., 60 L. T., N. S. 392.

"Necessary Expense to Command Rent."—Under a local act for the embanking and draining a district consisting of several parishes, an annual rate was imposed on the district, and lands occupied by the respondent were rated at a certain proportion yearly. The rate by the act was expressly made a landlord's tax, and the respondent's landlord had accordingly always paid the amount. The whole rate under the act was necessary for and was spent each year in maintaining the drainage works. Without such drainage works, the land occupied by the respondent would have been under water at certain seasons, and the annual value would have been considerably diminished. Held, that in assessing the respondent to the poor rate, a deduction was to be allowed under 6 & 7 Will. IV. ch. 96, § 1, in respect of the drainage rate, as an expense necessary to main-

NECESSITY.¹—See also EMINENT DOMAIN, 6 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 509; MARITIME LIENS, vol. 14, p. 410; MILITARY LAW, vol. 15, p. 390; PRIVATE WAYS; SUNDAY LAWS; WAYS.

NEED.²—See also WANT.

NE EXEAT (Writ of).

- I. History of the Writ, 374.
- II. Definition of the Modern Writ of Ne Exeat, 375.
- III. When Granted, 375.
 1. Generally, 375.
 2. For Alimony, 378.
 3. For Account, 378.
- IV. The Application for the Writ, 379.
 1. The Time at Which the Application May be Made, 379.

2. How the Application Is to be Made, 379.

3. The Affidavit, 380.

V. Against Whom Issued, 381.

VI. Tenor of the Writ, The Bond, etc., 382.

VII. How and When the Writ Is Discharged, 383.

tain the land in a state to command the rent. Reg. v. Gainsborough Union, 7 Q. B. 64.

"Necessary Implication."—"Necessary implication," in construing a will, means so strong a probability of intention that an intention contrary to that imputed cannot be supposed. Wilkinson v. Adam, 1 Ves. & B. 466. See also People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 558; State v. Union Bank, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 164.

1. "In Case of Fire or Other Great Necessity."—Where a city is to be furnished with water free of charge in case of "fire or other great necessity," no charge can be made for supplying the city with water for the purposes of flushing sewers, watering the streets, and irrigating the parks, etc. Spring Valley Water Works v. San Francisco, 52 Cal. 111.

Dishorning cattle is not a "necessity," so as to avail as a defence upon a charge of cruelty to animals. Ford v. Wiley, L. R., 23 Q. B. D. 210.

2. "Most in Need."—A devise to the testator's brothers A and B, to dispose of the same "among our brothers and sisters and their children, as they shall judge to be most in need of the same, is not void for uncertainty. Bull v. Bull, 8 Conn. 47; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 86. Contra, Fontaine v. Thompson, 80 Va. 229.

Need Not.—This phrase does not mean "must not;" and, therefore, though by subd. 2, § 1, M. W. P. act, 1882, a husband "need not" be joined in actions by or against his wife, yet he may be joined, especially so where the wife is a defendant in an action of tort. Seroka v. Katzenburg, 17 Q. B. D. 177; 54 L. T. 649; 34 W. R. 542. See MUST.

"Need and Require" in a Will.—Testator gave a fund to his executors in trust for the use and benefit of his daughter for life, the interest to be paid to her as she may "need or require." The daughter was weakminded. Held, that it is as if he had said, "as she may need or her necessities require." Corlies v. Allen, 36 N. J. Eq. 100.

Need Such Aid.—A devise to trustees, in trust for such of testators' children or descendants as may need such aid, is invalid, being too remote. Kent v. Dunham, 142 Mass. 216.

"Needful" in Statute.—By a Wisconsin statute the school boards are clothed with the power to make needful rules and regulations for the government of the schools, that is, "such as will best advance the pupils in their studies, tend to their education and mental improvement, and promote their interest and welfare." A rule that the pupils shall carry wood for the use of the schoolhouse, not promoting these ends, is not "needful." State v. Board of Education, 63 Wis. 237.

Needlessly in statute, forbidding the needless killing or mutilating of any animal. "Needless cannot be reasonably construed as characterizing an act which might, by care, be avoided. It simply means an act done without any useful motive, in a spirit of wanton cruelty for the mere pleasure of destruction. Grise v. State, 37 Ark. 460.

"Needlessly Torture or Mutilate."—Trapping a trespassing and depredating

I. HISTORY OF THE WRIT.—The writ of ne exeat regno was, in early times, in England, a high prerogative writ, issuing, for political purposes only,¹ to forbid, as its name implies, the departure of a subject from the realm. The date of its introduction is very obscure.² The common law, as evidenced by Magna Charta, allows untrammelled liberty of locomotion to the subject, permitting him to depart from the kingdom for business or for pleasure without any licence from the crown.³ Relying upon this, some writers contend that the writ was introduced between the reigns of John and Edward I. However, the opinions of Lord Coke, Fitzherbert and Justice Story, that the writ was a part of the prerogative at common law, seem to be the better. While it was undoubtedly true that every man might leave the kingdom at his pleasure without permission of the crown, the king, being entitled to his military services, might forbid his departure without infringement of this general right.⁴ The exact date at which the writ was first applied as an aid to chancery in the administration of remedial justice is also unknown; but the first application seems to have occurred in the reign of Queen Elizabeth.⁵ And in the reign of James I, this use of the writ had become so common as to be the subject of one of Lord Chancellor Bacon's ordinances.⁶ In several of the United States the writ has been abolished, either in direct terms or by judicial construction, being considered as contrary to the spirit of American governments.⁷ In the States where it is still in use it is dog is not "needlessly torturing or mutilating," within a statute against cruelty to animals. Hodge v. State, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 528; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 307.

In a Will.—"As she may need" was held to be equivalent of "as she may desire" where the bequest was "the interest to be drawn and used by her as she may need." Gillen v. Kimball, 34 Ohio St. 363.

1. Jackson v. Petrie, 10 Ves. 164; Beames on Ne Exeat 1; 1 Bl. Com. 162, 319; Story Eq. Jur., § 1467; Flack v. Holm, 1 Jacob & Walk. 403; Ex parte Brunner, 3 P. Wms. 312.

2. Story Eq. Jur., § 1465.

3. Beames on Ne Exeat 1, 3.

4. 2 Fitz. Nat. Brev. 85; Beames on Ne Exeat 85; Co. Ins. 54; Com. Dig. Chan. 4 b; Story Eq. Jur., § 1466.

5. Beames on Ne Exeat 16; Story Eq. Jur., § 1467.

6. Writs of ne exeat regno are properly to be granted according to the suggestion of the writ, in respect of attempts prejudicial to the King and State, in which case the Lord Chancellor will grant them, upon prayer of any of the principal secretaries, without cause showing, or upon such information as his lordship shall think of weight; but, otherwise also, there may be according to the practice of long time used, in case of interlopers in trade, great bankrupts in whose estates many subjects are interested, or other cases that concern multitudes of the king's subjects; also in case of duels and divers others. Beames Ord. in Chan., p. 39, ord. 40, 89; Beames on Ne Exeat 16, 17.

7. In Vermont, Pennsylvania, Mississippi, Kentucky and Louisiana, any restraint on emigration is forbidden by the constitution. In Arkansas the writ is abolished.

In Cable v. Alvord, 27 Ohio St. 654, the court concludes that the writ is abolished in all civil actions. In Ex parte Harker, 49 Cal. 465, the court declares that the writ is not included among the proceedings by which a person can be arrested in a civil action. While in New York the act to abolish imprisonment for debt was held not to have deprived the court of chancery of the power to issue a writ of ne exeat in cases of equitable cognizance where such writ would have been allowed previous treated as a writ of right,¹ and is governed by the same principles in general that apply to the writ as used in England.²

II. DEFINITION OF THE MODERN WRIT OF NE EXEAT.—Ne exeat, as now understood, is a writ issuing out of a court of equity, on the petition of a complainant having a clear equitable demand, to prevent the departure of a defendant who has sequestered his property and is about to leave the country.³ It is a writ to obtain equitable bail.⁴ It may be questioned whether its functions may not have become practically obsolete in view of the general abolition of imprisonment for debt and the growth of the writ of attachment as allowed under the codes, wherein legal and equitable remedies and procedure are assimilated, and under the enlarged procedure of courts of equity in those jurisdictions where the functions of courts of law and of equity are still distinct.

III. WHEN GRANTED.—The writ being governed altogether by custom it is almost impossible to lay down fixed principles by which it is governed. This much, however, may be said:—

1. Generally.—The writ has been granted only in cases of equitable demands,⁵ to the passage of that act. Brown v. Haff, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 235; s. c., 28 Am. Dec. 425; Ashworth v. Wrigley, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 301. The code of Civil Proc., § 548, abolished the writ and stated that no arrests should be made in civil actions or special proceedings except as prescribed by statute. Boucicault v. Boucicault, 59 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 134; Collins v. Collins, 80 N. Y. 24. Whether the writ was abolished by the old code—quære. Collins v. Collins, 80 N. Y. 24.

1. Sherman v. Sherman, 3 Bro. (C. C.) 370; Gleason v. Bisby, 1 Clarke (N. Y.) 551; Gilbert v. Colt, 1 Hopk. (N. Y.) 499; Mitchell v. Bunch, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 606; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 669; Porter v. Spencer, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 169; Rice v. Hale, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 242. Though originally a prerogative writ, it is now resorted to merely for the purpose of obtaining equitable bail. Cable v. Alvord, 27 Ohio St. 666; Cox v. Scott, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 384; 2 Story Eq., § 1469.

2. Rice v. Hale, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 238; Brown v. Haff, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 235; s. c., 28 Am. Dec. 425; Denton v. Denton, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 441.

3. Dick v. Swinton, 1 Ves. V. 372; Stewart v. Graham, 19 Ves. V. 312; Grant v. Grant, 3 Russell Ch. 598; Cox v. Scott, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 384; Mitchell v. Bunch, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 606; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 669; Smedberg v. Mark, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 138; Cable v. Al- vord, 27 Ohio St. 666; Adams v. Whitcomb, 46 Vt. 708; Johnson v. Clendenin, 5 Gill & J. (Md.) 463.

Ne exeat is a process to hold the custody of the defendant's body until he shall give bail to abide the decree of the court. Cable v. Alvord, 27 Ohio St. 666; Gresham v. Peterson, 25 Ark. 377.

A person cannot be prevented from going beyond the State limits by an injunction, but only by a writ of ne exeat. Bleyer v. Blum, 70 Ga. 558.

Not Imprisonment for Debt.—Arrest and restraint of liberty upon a writ of ne exeat, held not "imprisonment for debt," within the meaning of a constitutional prohibition on the subject. 1868, Dean v. Smith, 23 Wis. 483; s. c., 99 Am. Dec. 198.

4. Mitchell v. Bunch, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 606; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 669; Story Eq. Jur., § 1470.

The practice of a court of equity, whereby a justice thereof, independent of any statutory authority, may in vacation by a capias arrest a person intending to leave the State in order to evade a decree, or attach his property to secure an enforcement of an anticipated final decree, is analogous in principle and application to that under the writ ne exeat regno, as recognized and administered by the English law. 1870, Samuel v. Wiley, 50 N. H. 353.

5. Cox v. Raber, 6 Ves. Jr. 783; Crosby v. Marriott, 2 Dock. 609; Hannahan v. Nicholis, 17 Ga. 77; 2 Story where the equity was clear,¹ the demands certain and not contingent,² actually payable and not future,³ of a pecuniary nature and not in the form of unliquidated damages,⁴ and the party was about to leave the country to avoid payment.⁵ The

Eq. Jur., § 1470; Smedberg v. Mark, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 138; Porter v. Spencer, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 169; Brown v. Haff, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 235; s. c., 28 Am. Dec. 425; Cox v. Scott, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 384; Palmer v. Van Doren, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 425; Rhodes v. Cousins, 6 Rand. (Va.) 188; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 715; Lucas v. Hickman, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 11; s. c., 19 Am. Dec. 44; Rice v. Hale, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 241; Graham v. Stucken, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 50.

As in case of a capias ad respondendum, a ne exeat should not issue unless the petition sets forth facts raising a strong presumption of fraud. Malcolm v. Andrews, 68 Ill. 101.

1. Woodward v. Schatzell, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 412; 1 N. Y. Ch. L.

To sustain the writ sufficient equity must appear on the face of the bill; mere apprehension that the defendant will misapply funds in his hands or abuse his trust is not sufficient.

2. Sherman v. Sherman, 3 Bro. (C. C.) 370; 1 Turn. & Russ. 322; Rico v. Guatree, 3 Atk. 500; Whitehouse v. Partridge, 3 Swanst. 377, 378; Morris v. McNeal, 2 Russ. 604; Porter v. Spencer, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 169; Graham v. Stucken, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 50; Mattocks v. Tremaine, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 75; MacDonough v. Gaynor, 18 N. J. Eq. 249.

The court will not grant a ne exeat in behalf of a surety, to enable him to hold his principal to bail, in order to compel payment of a forfeiture or penalty under the law of a foreign state, before it is legally ascertained that either principal or surety will be compelled to pay such penalty. Gibbs v. Mennard, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 258; Gibbs v. Mermaud, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 482.

3. Seymour v. Hazard, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1. The debt for which this writ will issue must be certain in its nature, and actually payable and not contingent. 2 Story Eq. Jur., § 1474; Whitehouse v. Partridge, 3 Swanst. 365-377; Sherman v. Sherman, 3 Bro. (C. C.) 370; Gibbs v. Mermaud, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 482.

There must be a debt existing at the time and so far mature that present payment or performance can rightfully be demanded. Gleason v. Bisby, 1

Clarke (N. Y.) 551; Rhodes v. Cousins, 6 Rand. (Va.) 188; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 715; Cox v. Scott, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 384; De Rivafinoli v. Corsetti, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 264; s. c., 25 Am. Dec. 532; Cable v. Alvord, 27 Ohio St. 666; Rico v. Guatree, 3 Atk. 500; Whitehouse v. Partridge, 3 Swanst. 377, 378; Morris v. McNeil, 2 Russ. 604; Porter v. Spencer, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 169; Malcolm v. Andrews, 68 Ill. 101; Forrest v. Forrest, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 46; s. c., 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 125; Hunter v. Nelson, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 263; MacDonough v. Gaynor, 18 N. J. Eq. 249; Palmer v. Van Doren, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 425; Edwards v. Massey, 1 Hawks (N. Car.) 359; Samuel v. Wiley, 50 N. H. 353.

4. Blaydes v. Calvert, 2 Jac. & Walk. 211; Gibbs v. Mermaud, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 482; Cowdin v. Cram, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 231; De Rivafinoli v. Corsetti, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 264; s. c., 25 Am. Dec. 532; Etches v. Lance, 7 Bes. 417; Cox v. Ravie, 6 Ves. 283; Graham v. Stucken, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 50; Beames on Ne Exeat, 36-57, 53-55; Smedberg v. Mark, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 138; Story Eq. Jur., § 1475.

5. Graham v. Stucken, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 50; Mattocks v. Tremaine, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 75; Mitchell v. Bunch, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 606; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 669.

Proof that the maker of a note is about to leave the State and take away his property is ground for a ne exeat, although the surety is solvent and accessible. Under 2 Ind. Rev. Stat., p. 275, § 668, all the parties jointly liable as defendants, or interested as plaintiffs, need not be joined in the proceeding. 1877, Fitzgerald v. Gray, 59 Ind. 254.

To become entitled to the writ of ne exeat a party must show that the defendant is removing or about to remove himself or his property. Orme v. McPherson, 36 Ga. 571; Ramsay v. Joyce, 1 McMull. Ch. (S. Car.) 236.

A ne exeat was held properly issued against a defendant in a suit to compel the settlement of a partnership account, where it appeared by the verified complaint and other affidavits that he had converted all his property into writ will, in no case, be granted on a mere legal claim,¹ but, if equity has concurrent jurisdiction, it has been held not an objection to its issue that the complainants might have resorted to a court of law.² For instance, the writ has been granted upon a bill to enforce payment of the amount due upon a lost bond,³ and again upon a vendor's bill for specific performance;⁴ but in this latter money or notes and threatened to leave the State. 1868, Dean v. Smith, 23 Wis. 483; s. c., 99 Am. Dec. 198.

1. Ex parte Bunker, 3 P. Wms. 312; Atkinson v. Leonard, 3 Bro. (C. C.) 218; Parker v. Appleton, 3 Bro. (C. C.) 427; De Carriere v. De Callone, 4 Ves. Jr. 577; Jackson v. Petrie, 10 Ves. Jr. 164; King v. Smith, 1 Dick. 82; Brocker v. Hamilton, 1 Dick. 154; Ex parte Duncombe, 2 Dick. 503; Seymour v. Hazard, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1; De Rivafinoli v. Corsetti, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 264; s. c., 25 Am. Dec. 532; Edwards v. Massy, 1 Hawks (N. Car.) 359; 2 Story Eq. Jur., § 1740; Smedberg v. Mark, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 138; Cox v. Scott, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 384; Palmer v. Van Doren, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 425; Rhodes v. Cousins, 6 Rand. (Va.) 188; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 715; Lucas v. Hickman, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 11; s. c., 19 Am. Dec. 44; Rice v. Hale, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 241; Forrest v. Forrest, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 46; s. c., 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 125; Beames on Ne Exeat, p. 30; Stewart v. Graham, 19 Ves. 314; Orme v. McPherson, 36 Ga. 571; Ramsey v. Joyce, 1 McMull. Ch. (S. Car.) 236; Hunter v. Nelson, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 263; MacDonough v. Gaynor, 18 N. J. Eq. 249; Bonesteel v. Bonesteel, 28 Wis. 245; Gresham v. Peterson, 25 Ark. 377; Victor Scale Co. v. Shurtleff, 81 Ill. 313.

The writ of ne exeat will not be issued on account of a claim on which the defendant may be arrested and held to bail at law. Hannahan v. Nichols, 17 Ga. 77; Nixon v. Richardson, 4 Desaus. (S. Car.) 108.

Under Georgia act of 1857 the surety has a perfect remedy by bailing his principal, and, therefore, cannot resort to the equitable remedy by ne exeat. Ross v. Hawkins, 29 Ga. 261.

Illinois.—The revised statute of Illinois provides that it shall not be necessary for the applicant for the writ of ne exeat to show a strictly equitable claim. Rev. Stat. Ill., p. 1716, ch. 97, § 7.

Against an Executor.—A ne exeat will not be granted against an executor, sued at law as such, on a demand purely legal as a bill of exchange endorsed by the testator, there being no charge or affidavit that assets have come to the hands of the defendant. Smedberg v. Mark, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 138.

2. Hannay v. M'Intire, 11 Ves. 54; Jones v. Alphain, 16 Ves. 370; Jones v. Sampson, 8 Ves. 593; Grant v. Grant, 3 Russ. 598; Porter v. Spencer, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 169; Atkinson v. Leonard, 3 Bro. (C. C.) 218; Johnson v. Clendenin, 5 Gill & J. (Md.) 463.

In Alabama, a ne exeat will be granted—1st, where the defendant is about to remove beyond the jurisdiction of the court, and the demand against him is exclusively of an equitable nature, whether a sum certain be due or not; 2nd, where the courts of law and equity have concurrent jurisdiction if the defendant is about to remove, and has not been held to bail in an action at law; 3rd, where such courts have concurrent jurisdiction, and no action has been commenced at law, but suit has been instituted in equity, and the party is about to remove from the State; and 4th, where, from the extreme necessity of the case, and to prevent a failure of justice, it becomes necessary. Lucas v. Hickman, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 111; s. c., 19 Am. Dec. 44. See also Baker v. Rowan, 2 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 361.

An allegation of nonresidence alone is insufficient to give the chancellor jurisdiction to grant a ne exeat, and to render a decree in personam for an alleged debt, for which the remedy is exclusively legal. McGinley v. Brooks, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 129.

Where a defendant, who had been sued at law and held to bail, was about to depart from the State with his bail, who had sold his property, a writ of ne exeat was granted, from the necessity of the case, to prevent a failure of justice. Porter v. Spencer, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 169.

3. Atkinson v. Leonard, 3 Bro. (C. C.) 218.

4. Boehm v. Wood, T. & R. 332-334; Raynes v. Wyse, 2 Mer. 472; Dan.

case not unless there has been a decree, or the court could clearly see that there must be a specific performance.¹

2. Alimony.—As a means for enforcing the collection of alimony, the writ of ne exeat is becoming of slight importance by reason of statutes' affording other remedies.² The writ has been issued, however, in American as in English courts for this purpose.³ Where alimony has been decreed the court has issued the writ upon the necessary affidavit,⁴ but only for the sum actually due and in arrears and the costs,⁵ and the writ will never be granted until a decree has been made.⁶

3. Account.—In account, as in other cases of concurrent juris-

Ch. Practice (Perk. ed.), vol. 3, ch. 40, § 1, p. 1,804.

A demand against the vendor for specific performance, not being a money demand, is not a case for ne exeat. The claim for specific performance must be a demand for money, or the writ will not be granted. Cowdin v. Crom, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 231.

To entitle plaintiff to a ne exeat against defendant, in a suit for specific performance, he must show affirmatively that he had a clear and unencumbered title to the land at the time of commencing the suit. Brown v. Haff, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 235; s. c., 28 Am. Dec. 425.

1. Morris v. McNeal, 2 Russ. 604; Brown v. Haff, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 235.

To the issuing of the writ it is no objection that the land, the subject matter of the bill, is without the State, provided the decree may be in force by acting on the person of a party. Enos v. Hunter, 9 Ill. 211.

2. Bishop on Marriage and Divorce, § 505.

3. Denton v. Denton, 1 Johns. Ch. 364; McGee v. McGee, 8 Ga. 295; Prather v. Prather, 4 Des. 33; Devall v. Devall, 4 Des. 79; Yule v. Yule, 2 Stock. 138; Kirby v. Kirby, 1 Paige 261; Bayly v. Bayly, 2 Md. Ch. 326. And see Harper v. Rooker, 52 Ill. 370; Bylandt v. Bylandt, 2 Halst. Ch. 28; Lyon v. Lyon, 21 Conn. 185, 199, note.

4. Coglar v. Coglar, 1 Ves. Jr. 94. The writ cannot be granted unless prayed for in the bill. Sharpe v. Taylor, 11 Sim. Ch. 50; Reed v. Reed, 1 Ch. Cas. 115; Shaftoe v. Shaftoe, 7 Ves. 71; Dawson v. Dawson, 7 Ves. 173.

5. Coglar v. Coglar, 1 Ves. Jr. 94; Shaftoe v. Shaftoe, 1 Ves. Jr.—; Dawson v. Dawson, 7 Ves. Jr. 173; 14 Ves. 261; 1 Jack. & Walk. 457; 1 Turn. & Russ. 322.

And being in the nature of equitable bail it will not be granted under circumstances that would not entitle the party to bail at law, therefore in case of alimony it will only issue for arrears actually due. Haffey v. Haffey, 14 Ves. 261; 1 Jack. & W. 407; Angier v. Angier, Prec. Ch. 497; Story Eq. Juris., § 1472; Cooper Eq. Pr., ch. 3, 149, 150; Bailey v. Cadwell, 51 Mich. 217.

6. And it seems that even where there has been a decree for alimony the writ will not issue pending an appeal from it by the husband. 3 Dan. Ch. Prac. (Perk. ed.), ch. 40, § 1; Street v. Street, 1 T. & R. 322; Shaftoe v. Shaftoe, 7 Ves. 171; Dawson v. Dawson, 7 Ves. 173; Haffey v. Haffey, 14 Ves. 261; Coglar v. Coglar, 1 Ves. 94; Bailey v. Cadwell, 51 Mich. 217; Story Eq. Jur., § 1472.

Contra.—Though the doctrine of the text is the undoubted English doctrine, many of the States have followed the decision of CH. KENT in Denton v. Denton. In that case the learned chancellor granted the writ pending suit for alimony, saying: "The process in cases like this, where the intended departure of the husband is clearly made out, appears to me to be essential to justice." Denton v. Denton, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 364, 441; S. P. Forrest v. Forrest, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 46; 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 125.

It is no ground for the dissolution of an injunction and ne exeat, issued in a suit by the wife for a divorce, that the husband does not intend to dispose of property, or to reside permanently out of the State. Hammond v. Hammond, 1 Clarke (N. Y.) 151.

In New Jersey the writ will not be granted until petition for divorce is filed. Bylandt v. Bylandt, 6 N. J. Eq. 28. The court of chancery in this State have uniformly followed the decision of Denton v. Denton, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 364; Yule v. Yule, 10 N. J. Eq. 138.

diction, the writ has been issued upon the necessary affidavits.¹

IV. THE APPLICATION FOR THE WRIT²—1. The Time at Which the Application May be Made.—The writ may be granted at any stage of the proceedings in equity, but only upon a bill filed.³ A statute of the United States provides that “writs of ne exeat may be granted by any justice of the supreme court, in cases where they may be granted by the supreme court; and by any circuit justice or circuit judge, in cases where they might be granted by the circuit court of which he is judge. But no writ of ne exeat shall be granted unless a suit in equity is commenced, and satisfactory proof is made to the court or judge granting the same, that the defendant designs quickly to depart from the United States.”⁴ The writ may be granted in a proper case at or after decree, though the bill contains no prayer for it.⁵

2. How the Application Is to be Made.—The application may be made by motion or petition, more generally by motion, supported

1. Jones v. Alphesian, 16 Ves. 470; Jones v. Sampson, 8 Ves. 593; Russell v. Ashby, 5 Ves. 96; Amsinck v. Barclay, 8 Ves. 597; Hannay v. McIntire, 11 Ves. 55; Howden v. Rogers, 1 V. & B. 129; Dick v. Swinton, 1 V. & B. 371; 2 Story Eq. Jur., §§ 1471-1473; Atkinson v. Leonard, 3 Bro. (C. C.) 223; Rhodes v. Cousins, 6 Rand. (Va.) 188; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 715; Mitchell v. Bunch, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 606; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 669; Nixon v. Richardson, 4 Desaus. (S. Car.) 108.

The plaintiff, even in matters of account, must swear positively to a debt or balance due to him, but he need swear only according to his belief as to the amount. Thorne v. Halsey, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 189; Gernon v. Boecaline, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 130; Gilbert v. Colt, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 496; Denton v. Denton, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 364; Clayton v. Mitchell, 1 Del. Ch. 32.

“We think the writ is not grantable when the account is open and unliquidated, although the plaintiff states in his affidavit that a certain sum is due. Such an allegation, although in terms the statement of a fact, that is, of the defendant’s actual indebtedness, must nevertheless be qualified by the subject matter to which it relates. It relates to a long and unliquidated account, as to facts which are future and contingent. It can amount to nothing more than a strong declaration of a confident expectation or belief, and is not sufficient ground for issuing the writ, unless it is accompanied and supported by proper accounts and documents.” SHAW, C. J., in Rice v. Hale, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 241;

Porter v. Spencer, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 169; Atkinson v. Leonard, 3 Bro. (C. C.) 218; Johnson v. Clendenin, 5 Gill & J. (Md.) 463.

2. In view of the settled policy of our laws against imprisonment for debt, every application for a writ of ne exeat should be closely scrutinized, and promptly rejected when the complaint is not clearly within the spirit of the law, cited in Gresham v. Peterson, 25 Ark. 380. See Wallace v. Duncan, 13 Ga. 41; Tomlinson v. Harrison, 8 Ves. Jr. 33; Burnsides v. Blythe, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 12; Russel v. Ashby, 5 Ves. Jr. 96.

3. Ex parte Brunker, 3 P. Wms. 312; Samuel v. Wiley, 50 N. H. 355; Dunham v. Jackson, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 629; Mattocks v. Tremaine, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 75; The Georgia Lumber Co. v. Bissell, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 225.

A solicitor’s bill being taxed and reported overpaid £60, on motion and affidavit of his going beyond the sea, a ne exeat regno was granted, though no bill was in court whereon to ground the writ. Loyd v. Cardy, Prec. Ch. 171.

4. The district judges of the United States courts have no authority to issue the writ of ne exeat. Gernon v. Boecaline, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 130.

The writ of ne exeat is not issuable in Michigan by a circuit court commissioner or injunction master as a matter of interlocutory chancery practice. Bailey v. Cadwell, 51 Mich. 217.

5. Collinson v. ———, 18 Ves. Jr. 453. See also Patterson v. McLaughlin, 1 Cranch (C. C.) 352; Lewis v. Shainwald, 7 Sawy. (U. S.) C. C. 403;

by an affidavit, or the writ may be prayed for in the bill.¹ It may be ex parte, as any notice to the defendant might frustrate the object of the writ by giving him an opportunity to get without the jurisdiction of the court.²

3. The Affidavit.—The application for the writ must be supported by an affidavit made by the complainant or some person conversant with the facts.³ This affidavit must contain positive allegations⁴ that there is an equitable debt due certain in amount,⁵ though in case of account it is sufficient if he swears to the amount to the best of his knowledge and belief,⁶ that the defend-

Lowenstein v. Biernbaum, 8 W. N. C. 163; Union Ins. Co. v. Kellogg, 5 W. N. Cas. 477; Graham v. Stucken, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 50.

1. It is not necessary to entitle complainant to the writ that he should have prayed for it in his bill. Collinson v. ———, 18 Ves. 453. Nor need the bill be amended when application is made. 1 Hoff. Ch. Pr. 91; Gilbert v. Colt, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 498; 1 Turn. & V. 987; 3 Dan. Ch. Pr. (Perk. ed.) 1810.

In a petition for a ne exeat, a defective statement of facts will not deprive the master in chancery of jurisdiction in its issuance. Bassett v. Bratton, 86 Ill. 152.

2. Collinson v. ———, 18 Ves. 453; Samuel v. Wiley, 50 N. H. 355.

3. Dawson v. Dawson, 7 Ves. Jr. 173; McGee v. McGee, 8 Ga. 295; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 407; Cable v. Alvord, 27 Ohio St. 666.

4. In an affidavit to found a motion for a writ of ne exeat, it is sufficient to refer to the facts charged in the bill as showing the ground of the complainant's demand or complaint without restating them in the affidavit, if the facts so charged are such as to entitle the plaintiff to the writ. 1818, Clayton v. Mitchell, 1 Del. Ch. 32. Mere apprehensions of the plaintiff will not warrant the issuance of the writ. Forrest v. Forrest, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 46; 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 125. See Bushnell v. Bushnell, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 389; s. c., 15 Barb. 399; Cox v. Scott, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 384; Williams v. Williams, 3 N. J. Eq. 130; Rhodes v. Cousins, 6 Rand. (Va.) 188; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 715; Woodward v. Schatzell, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 412; De Rivafrinoli v. Corsetti, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 264; s. c., 25 Am. Dec. 532; Lehman v. Logan, 7 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 296.

In Georgia, where, on an application for a writ of ne exeat, the bill was verified by the affidavit of the complainant, who swore that the facts stated were true so far as they concerned herself, and, so far as they concerned the acts and deeds of others, she believed them to be true, and the bill alleged that the defendant had threatened to leave the State, it was held that this was sufficient. McGee v. McGee, 8 Ga. 295; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 407.

Sufficiently strong allegations in a bill, sworn to only "to the best of her knowledge and belief," were held not sufficient to support a writ of ne exeat. Bryan v. Ponder, 23 Ga. 480.

Under Ga. Stat. 1813, extending the right to writ of ne exeat to cases where the property, for the forthcoming of which the surety (petitioner) is liable, is about to be removed, a petition stating that the petitioners are informed and believe that it is about to be removed, was held insufficient, in not stating the facts which were the grounds of the belief. Woodes v. Symmes, 25 Ga. 69. And see Wallace v. Duncan, 13 Ga. 41; Holliday v. Riodan, 25 Ga. 629.

5. Darley v. Nicholson, 1 Dr. & W. 66; Yule v. Yule, 10 N. J. Eq. 138; Sherman v. Sherman, 3 Bro. (C. C.) 370. Holliday v. Riodan, 25 Ga. 629; Howden v. Rogers, 1 Ves. & B. 129; Mattocks v. Tremaine, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 75; Rhodes v. Cousins, 6 Rand. (Va.) 188; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 715; Gilbert v. Colt, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 496; Gernon v. Boecaline, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 130; Thorne v. Halsey, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 189; Rice v. Hale, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 241. The debt may have appeared from a master's report. Yule v. Yule, 10 N. J. Eq. 141; Collinson v. Collinson, 18 Ves. 352. Or from other matter before the court. Rice v. Hale, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 412. Plaintiff must swear positively that a debt or balance is due; though he may state his belief as to the amount. Thorne v. Halsey, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 189.

6. Rico v. Gaultier, 3 Atk. 501; Redman v. Hetherton, 5 Ves. Jr. 91; Jones

ant entertains a positive intention to go abroad,¹ and that the debt will be endangered thereby.² It is not sufficient if a belief of the defendant's intention to go abroad is stated, but the affidavit must be positive as to this intention, or to his declarations to that effect, or to other facts from which this intention may be deduced.³

V. AGAINST WHOM ISSUED.—The writ may issue as well against a foreigner, who is within the jurisdiction of the court, as against a citizen.⁴

v. Sampson, 8 Ves. 593; Jackson v. Petrie, 10 Ves. Jr. 164; Mattocks v. Tremaine, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 75; Gernon v. Boecaline, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 130; Clayton v. Milton, 1 Del. Ch. 32; McGehee v. Polk, 24 Ga. 406.

In case of account, the plaintiff, in a bill for a ne exeat, must swear positively that something is due him, though as to the amount of the debt he may swear as to his belief. Thorne v. Halsey, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 189.

1. Mattocks v. Tremaine, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 75; Rhodes v. Cousins, 6 Rand. (Va.) 188; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 715; Orme v. McPherson, 36 Ga. 571; Yule v. Yule, 10 N. J. Eq. 138; Gresham v. Peterson, 25 Ark. 377; Houseworth v. Hendrickson, 27 N. J. Eq. 60; Sherman v. Sherman, 3 Bro. (C. C.) 370; Gilbert v. Colt, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 500; Gernon v. Boecaline, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 130; Thorne v. Halsey, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 189; Rice v. Hale, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 241; Beames on Ne Exeat 25; 7 Ves. 417, 410; 7 Ves. 470.

An affidavit for a ne exeat is sufficient if it is positive as to the defendant's intention to go abroad, although upon knowledge and belief only, as to preparations and threats. Moore v. Gleaton, 23 Ga. 142.

2. It is sufficient to allege that the debt will be endangered by the departure of the defendant, without alleging that his purpose in going abroad is to avoid the jurisdiction of the court. Etches v. Lance, 7 Ves. Jr. 417; Stewart v. Graham, 19 Ves. 313; Yule v. Yule, 10 N. J. Eq. 140; Atkinson v. Leonard, 5 Bro. (C. C.) 218; Mattocks v. Tremaine, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 75; Rhodes v. Cousins, 6 Rand. (Va.) 188; s. c., 18 Am. Dec. 715; McGehee v. Polk, 24 Ga. 406; King v. Huntley, 2 Hawaiian Rep. 457.

The affidavit must set out that defendant has disposed of, or is about to remove, his property (Dean v. Smith, 23 Wis. 483; s. c., 99 Am. Dec. 198; Fitzgerald v. Gray, 59 Ind. 254); and should show that the property sold by the defendant, with intent to depart, etc., was not exempt from execution. 1876, Jones v. Kennicott, 83 Ill. 484.

3. Etches v. Lance, 7 Ves. 417; Amsinck v. Barclay, 8 Ves. Jr. 597; Beames on Ne Exeat 33; Jones v. Alphesin, 16 Ves. 470; Sherman v. Sherman, 3 Bro. (C. C.) 370; Yule v. Yule, 10 N. J. Eq. 138; Moore v. Gleaton, 23 Ga. 142; Woodes v. Symmes, 25 Ga. 69.

Upon an application for a ne exeat, the fact that the information of defendant's intention to depart came from those who would most probably have informed him of the intended application for a ne exeat, if they had been asked for an affidavit, is a sufficient reason for not producing their affidavits. Oidionaux v. Helie, 2 Ch. Sent. 609.

4. The writ can issue only against those whom the court cannot reach by attachment or execution. 3 Bl. Com. 213; 3 Dan. Ch. Pr. 1801.

It is no objection to a court of equity entertaining a bill respecting land, that the land is not within its jurisdiction, where its decree can be enforced by acting on the person of a party; and in a proper case the court will restrain the party from leaving the jurisdiction by a ne exeat. Enos v. Hunter, 9 Ill. 211; Woodward v. Schatzell, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 412.

It is not necessary that the defendant should be actually in the State when the writ of ne exeat is applied for. Parker v. Parker, 12 N. J. Eq. 105.

A writ of ne exeat may issue against a foreigner or citizen of another State, and on demands arising abroad. Mitchell v. Bunch, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 606; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 669; Gilbert v. Colt, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 500; Forrest v. Forrest, 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 125; s. c., 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 46; McNamara v. Dwyer, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 237; s. c., 32 Am. Dec. 627. Cannot issue against a female in an

VI. TENOR OF THE WRIT, THE BOND, ETC.—It commands the officer to whom it is directed to cause the defendant to appear before him and give bail not to go without the jurisdiction of the court without its permission;¹ and, in case he refuses to give bail, to commit him to jail until he does so;² and when he has taken security, to make and return a certificate thereof to the court.³ The writ must be marked on the back with the sum for which the defendant is to give security, in words at length.³ action founded on contract. Adams v. Whitcomb, 49 Vt. 708.

1. DeCariere v. DeCalonne, 4 Ves. 577; Flack v. Holb, Black & W. 416.

The sum in which defendant shall be held to bail is determined by the court, at a sum sufficient to cover a reasonable amount of future interest; and the sheriff must take a bond for that sum without any addition. Gilbert v. Colt, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 496; McNamara v. Dwyer, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 239; 6 c., 32 Am. Dec. 627.

The Georgia act of 1830 allowed a writ of ne exeat regno to run in the alternative, that the defendant shall not go beyond the seas, or that he shall give bonds for the eventual condemnation money. McGehee v. Polk, 24 Ga. 406.

Service.—Under the New Jersey statute forbidding service of any writ, process, etc., on Sunday, service of a writ of ne exeat on Sunday is void, and the bond given on issuing the writ so served should be cancelled. 1876, Jewett v. Bowman, 27 N. J. Eq. 275.

The Bond.—A ne exeat bond only binds the sureties to the extent of the final decree of the court; and if the defendant continually remain in the district, according to the condition of the bond, they will be discharged altogether. Zantzinger v. Weightman, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 478.

A bond given, on a writ of ne exeat, to restrain the obligor from leaving the State, etc., conditioned to "appear at the court of common pleas at Union court house on the fourth Monday in June next [when no court was to sit], to answer to a bill in equity," etc. (over which subject the court had no control), was held to be void. Darby v. Hunt, 2 Treadw. Const. (S. Car.) 740.

If a defendant arrested upon a ne exeat does not appear, so that he may be made amenable to the process of court, the sheriff is responsible for the debt; but he will not be compelled to pay the debt without giving him time to produce the defendant or to recover the debt upon the bail bond. Brayton v. Smith, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 489.

In South Carolina the writ of ne exeat requires the defendant to find surety that he will not depart the State without leave of the court. The sureties have the same rights as bail. Commissioner v. Phillips, 2 Hill (S. Car.) 631.

The perfecting of an appeal of a ne exeat cause may be a ground for a temporary suspension of the action on the recognizance therein, but not for an abatement. The taking of the recognizance by the sheriff, and entering it on the order of arrest in such proceeding, is no necessary part of the issue, service, or return of the order. Fitzgerald v. Gray, 61 Ind. 109.

Leave of Absence.—By consent of parties, leave of absence may be granted to a defendant who has given bail upon a ne exeat, notwithstanding the bail bond, but without prejudice to the bail. Dupont v. Goffe, 1 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 143.

2. Foster's Federal Prac., § 263. A writ of ne exeat should be made returnable to the first day of the term next after it issues. Crocker v. Dunkin, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 535.

3. The court allowing the writ directs a sum in which the defendant is to be allowed to bail, sufficient to cover the debt, costs, etc. Beames on Ne Exeat; Gilbert v. Colt, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 500; McNamara v. Dwyer, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 239; Gleason v. Bisby, 1 Clarke (N. Y.) 537.

In fixing the amount of security to be given by the defendant in a writ of ne exeat, the court will exercise a sound discretion, having due regard to the rank of the parties and the property of the husband. Denton v. Denton, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 441.

A ne exeat should be marked by the officer issuing it, at the time, with the sum in which the defendant is to be held to bail; but where it is marked by the clerk it will be presumed to have been

VII. HOW AND WHEN THE WRIT IS DISCHARGED.¹—The application for the discharge of the writ is made by motion, and, if security has been given, notice of the motion should state that application will be made as well for the discharge of the writ as that the bond may be given up and cancelled.² The motion must be made within a reasonable time, or the application will be refused.³ If it appears that there has been some irregularity in the application for the issuance of the writ, or if the defendant disproves the complainant's charges on the merits, the court will discharge the writ.⁴ But the unsupported affidavit of the defendant denying the allegations of the debt, and the defendant's intention to depart contained in the plaintiff's affidavit, will not be sufficient grounds for a discharge.⁵ If from the affidavit of the plaintiff so marked in pursuance of a fiat of the proper officer. Gleason v. Bisby, 1 Clarke (N. Y.) 551; Viadero v. Viadero, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 313.

1. In Massachusetts the supreme court may discharge the defendant from custody under a writ of ne exeat, in the same manner as if he were a poor prisoner committed in execution. Rice v. Hale, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 238.

2. Dan. Ch. Pr. (3rd Am. ed.) 1817.

Where L has been arrested on a ne exeat, and has given the usual bail to the sheriff upon such arrest, and afterwards, by an agreement between him and the complainant, the ne exeat was discharged upon his executing the usual bond to answer the bill and abide the decree, it was held, that as L had not, in his agreement, reserved his right of questioning the propriety of issuing the ne exeat, he was precluded from moving that the bond be given up and cancelled, upon the ground that the ne exeat was improvidently issued. Jesup v. Hill, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 95.

3. Dan. Ch. Pr. (3rd Am. ed., 1817); Harris v. Hardy, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 393; Miller v. Miller, 1 N. J. Eq. 386. One arrested on ne exeat may apply for a discharge on affidavits before answer filed. Cary v. Cary, 39 N. J. Eq. 20.

4. The writ will not be discharged upon the defendant's denying the intention. Amsinck v. Barclay, 8 Ves. Jr. 594.

The plaintiff having twice held the defendant to bail in actions at law, obtained a writ of ne exeat discontinuing his action at law. He was discharged, on the principle that a man cannot be arrested and held twice to bail on the same cause. But the court will not interfere, after the writ has been discharged in equity, to direct the party be discharged from a subsequent arrest at law for the same demand; but will leave it with the court of law to determine whether, under the circumstances, the common law process ought to be made available. Dan. Ch. Pr., ch. 50; Walker v. Christian, 7 Sim. 367; Leo v. Lambert, 3 Russ. 417; Pratt v. Wells, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 425.

A ne exeat ought to be dissolved where there is sufficient remedy at law. Hawthorn v. Kelly, 30 Ga. 965.

A defendant in chancery being in prison in Indiana, on a writ of ne exeat to secure his performance of a decree for a pecuniary demand against him, claimed by the bill, was discharged from custody on motion under the act of 1842 abolishing imprisonment for debt, no fraud on the subject being shown. West v. Walker, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 420.

A subpœna and ne exeat were taken out and delivered to the sheriff at the same time. The sheriff being unable to serve them, in consequence of defendant's departure from the county, a new writ of ne exeat was sent to the county in which defendant then was, and immediately after the service of the second ne exeat, a new subpœna was sent to the same county, but defendant left the State before the subpœna could be served. Held, that the arrest of defendant upon the ne exeat was regular, though he had not been served with a subpœna. Georgia Lumber Co. v. Bissell, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 225.

5. Russell v. Ashby, 5 Ves. 98; Boehm v. Wood, T. & R. 332; Myer v. Myer, 25 N. J. Eq. 28; Houseworth v. Hendrickson, 27 N. J. Eq. 60; Fitch v. Richardson, 1 Morris (Iowa) 245; O'Conner v. Debriane, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 230; Cowdin v. Cram, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.)

and the answer of the defendant is made a strong prima facie case that nothing is due, the writ will be discharged.¹ When the writ is discharged another application may be made founded upon new affidavits. If issued for more than is due, the court will not discharge the writ, but will order the sum to be reduced.² Upon payment of the amount of the complainant's claim into court,³ or upon giving security to abide the decree, the court will discharge the writ.⁴

NECKLACES.—Where a testatrix bequeathed her necklaces of every description, pearls, garnets, cornelians, and watches, to B and, by a subsequent testamentary disposition, all her trinkets and pearls, with various specific articles to C, it was held that a certain diamond necklace passed to C and not to B.⁵

NEGATIVE.—See BURDEN OF PROOF, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 649; OPEN AND CLOSE.

NEGATIVE EASEMENT (see also EASEMENT, 6 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 139) is an easement, or, as it is sometimes called, an amenity, and consists in restraining the owner from doing that with, and upon, his property which, but for the grant or covenant, he might lawfully have done, and hence is called a negative easement, as distinguished from that class of easements which com-

231; Glenton v. Clover, 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 422.

One arrested on ne exeat will be refused a discharge where it appears that he has boasted that his property was out of his hands, but that he still controlled it, and would leave the State before anything could be done with him, etc. Cary v. Cary, 39 N. J. Eq. 20.

Where, on an application for ne exeat, it appeared that defendant had applied to be relieved from his administratorship on the ground that he was going to leave the State, an answer that he had so intended, but did not at the time of filing the answer, but might change his mind—held, not sufficient to prevent the granting of the writ. Conyers v. Gray, 67 Ga. 329.

1. Leo v. Lambert, 3 Russell 417. Where defendant's answer is before the court it should be taken into consideration. Gilbert v. Colt, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 496.

2. Grant v. Grant, 3 Russell 398.

3. Evans v. Evans, 1 Ves. Jr. 86; Stewart v. Stewart, 19 Ves. 314; Gilbert v. Colt, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 501.

4. Baker v. Dumaresque, 2 Atk. 66; Jerningham v. Glass, 3 Atk. 409; Reddam v. Hetherton, 5 Summer Ves. 91; Woodard v. Schatzell, 3 Johns. Ch. (N.

Y.) 412; Atkinson v. Leonard, 3 Bro. (U. S.) 218-224; Parker v. Parker, 12 N. J. Eq. 105.

In New York it is a matter of course to discharge a writ of ne exeat upon the defendant's giving security to answer the plaintiff's bill, where a discovery is necessary, and to render himself amenable to the process of the court pending the litigation, and to such process as may be issued to compel a performance of the final decree. Georgia Lumber Co. v. Bissell, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 225; McNamara v. Dwyer, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 239; s. c., 32 Am. Dec. 627; Mitchell v. Bunch, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 606; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 669; Gleason v. Bisby, 1 Clarke (N. Y.) 551.

He can be relieved from the restraint by giving a bond in double the value of the claim, under Ga. Code, § 3228; but the court cannot impose other conditions as the ground for relief. Bleyer v. Blum, 70 Ga. 558.

In a suit on a ne exeat bond, the sureties cannot object to any irregularity in the original proceeding previous to judgment against their principal; that judgment is conclusive upon them, and they are bound by his laches, in not making a better defence. Blue v. Shepard, 28 Ga. 566.

5. Atty. Gen. v. Harley, 5 Russ. 173.

pels the owner to suffer something to be done upon his property by another.¹

NEGLECT—(See also DIVORCE, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 745; NEGLIGENCE).—Omission or forbearance to do a thing that can be done or that is required to be done.²

1. Trustees of Columbia College v. Lynch, 70 N. Y. 447; Washb. on Easem. 5. "A negative easement, by which the owner of lands is restricted in their use, can only be created by covenant in favor of other lands not owned by the grantor and covenantor." Trustees of Columbia College v. Lynch, 70 N. Y. 448.

2. Anderson's L. Dict.; Malone v. United States, 5 Ct. Cl. 486.

Neglect does not generally imply carelessness or imprudence — simply an omission to do or perform some work, duty or act. Rosenplaenter v. Roessle, 54 N. Y. 268. To neglect is "to omit by carelessness or design." Webster's Dict., followed in New York Guaranty etc. Co. v. Gleason, 53 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 127. "No neglect can be imputed to the plaintiff in omitting to do that which cannot be done." New York Guaranty etc. Co. v. Gleason, 53 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 127; Wakeman v. Paulmier, 39 N. J. L. 341.

"The ordinary meaning of the word neglect is an omission, from carelessness, to do something that can be done and ought to be done." Hart v. Chase, 46 Conn. 207. See also Willoughby v. Willoughby, 9 Q. B. 923; s. c., 58 E. C. L. 935.

Neglect or Default.—"A 'neglect' and a 'default' (in a covenant for quiet enjoyment) seems to imply something more than the mere want of discretion with respect to the covenantor's own interests; something like the breach of a duty or legal obligation existing at the time; those words, in their proper sense, implying the not doing some act to secure his title which he ought to have done, and which he had the power to do; and the not preventing or avoiding some danger to the title which he might have prevented or avoided." Per TINDAL, C. J., in Woodhouse v. Jenkins, 9 Bing. 441, 442; Sug. V. & P. 602-604. See also Coite v. Lynes, 33 Conn. 109.

"Neglect to Deposit."—Where a guest offered the clerk of a hotel a small package for deposit within the safe, but did not mention that it contained jewelry or other valuables, and the clerk returned it, saying, "Take it to your room; it will be just as safe there"—held, that was a "neglect to deposit." It would have been otherwise if guest had told the clerk that the package contained valuables. Bendetson v. French, 46 N. Y. 266. See also Rosenplaenter v. Roessle, 54 N. Y. 262.

Neglect and Fault (Distinguished).—See FAULT, 7 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 817, n. 2.

Distinguished from Omit.—"If the word 'neglect' imports something more than the word 'omit,' it must because it imports that the party had opportunity to do the thing which he omitted to do. If he did not have such opportunity, he cannot be said to have neglected it." Johnson v. Huntington, 13 Conn. 50.

Distinguished from Refusal.—As used in respect to the payment of money, "refusal is the failure to pay money when demanded; neglect is the failure to pay money which the party is bound to pay without demand." Kimball v. Rowland, 6 Gray (Mass.) 224.

"Neglect or Refuse."—In a condition to a deed which was as follows: "Whenever E C or her heirs or assigns shall neglect or refuse to support said fence, this deed to be void." "Both these terms [neglect and refuse], in connection with the subject matter, imply some previous demand, notice, or request—if the fence has decayed, or been removed, to replace it," and after notice defendant has refused or neglected to replace it. Merrifield v. Coblelgh, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 178.

In Indictment.—A prisoner was convicted on an indictment charging him with neglect to provide food and clothing for his child, but omitting to allege ability. Held, that the ability to provide was implied in the word "neglect." Reg. v. Ryland, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 99.

In Bill of Lading.—A provision in a bill of lading, whereby common carriers by water agreed to deliver merchandise in good order, "all loss and damage . . . from any act, neglect, or default whatsoever of the pilot, master, or mariners being excepted, and the owners being in no ways liable for any consequences above excepted," does not excuse the carriers from liability for a loss

NEGLIGENCE.¹

- I. Introduction, 387.
- II. Analytical Description, 387.
- III. Definition of Negligence, 389.
 - 1. Inadvertence an Element of Negligence, 392.
 - 2. Inevitable Accident, 396.
 - 3. Ordinary Care Defined, 398.
 - 4. Test of Ordinary Care, 402.
 - 5. May be Either Inadvertent Action or an Omission to Act, 405.
 - 6. A Legally Responsible Person, 406.
 - 7. Person to Whom Duty Is Due, 411.
 - 8. The Legal Duty, 415.
 - (a) From Implication of Law, 419.
 - (b) Created by Statute, 420.
 - (c) Out of Contract or Agreement, 424.
 - 9. Damage an Essential Element, 425. [426.]
- IV. No Degrees of Negligence,
- V. Negligence as Dependent Upon Relationship and Duty, 427.

- VI. Causal Connection—Proximate Cause, 428.
 - 1. Proximate Cause Defined, 436.
- VII. Combined and Concurrent Causes, 440. [444.]
- VIII. Intervening Efficient Cause,
- IX. Causal Connection—Remote Cause, 446.
- X. Contributory Negligence, 447.
- XI. Comparative Negligence, 447.
- XII. Imputable Negligence, 447.
- XIII. Presumptions as to Negligence, 448.
- XIV. Burden of Proof, 453.
- XV. Evidence of Negligence—General Rules, 455.
 - 1. Evidence of Usage, 462.
 - 2. Opinion Evidence, 462.
- XVI. Questions of Law and Fact, 463.
 - 1. Province of Jury, 465.
 - 2. Province of Court, 466.
- XVII. Parties to an Action for Negligence, 468.
 - 1. Plaintiff, 468.
 - 2. Defendant, 471.
- XVIII. Measure of Damages, 476.

occasioned by the delivery of the goods by the mate of the vessel, without authority or direction from the plaintiffs, to a carman who was not empowered to receive them. Guillaume v. Hamburgh etc. Packet Co., 42 N. Y. 212.

In Statute.—The neglect of an attorney to pay over money collected for his client is a "neglect" in a "professional employment," within the exception of Pa. act of July 12th, 1842, abolishing imprisonment, etc. Wills v. Kane, 2 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 60.

An overseer who neglects to sign the burgess delivered by him, under section 15 of 5 & 6 W. IV, ch. 76 (Municipal Corporation act), incurs the penalty imposed by section 48, although his neglect was neither wilful nor corrupt. 49 E. C. L. 96.

To "neglect" doing "is the omission to do some duty which the party is able to do." Per PATTERSON, J., in King v. Burrell, 12 A. & E. 468; s. c., 49 E. C. L. 96.

Wilful neglect is an intentional failure to perform a manifest duty in which the public has an interest, or which is important to the person injured, in either preventing or avoiding the injury. Kentucky Cent. R. Co. v. Gastineau, 83 Ky. 128.

To "wilfully neglect to do a thing" is intentionally or purposely to omit to do it (per MELLOR, J., R. v. Downes, inf.); and therefore to pray, instead of sending for a doctor, is to "wilfully neglect" to provide medical aid within §§ 37, 31 & 32 V., ch. 122; Reg. v. Downes, 1 Q. B. D. 25; Reg. v. Morby, 8 Q. B. D. 571.

Wilful neglect or misconduct inducing to adultery (§ 31, Matrimonial Causes act, 1857) means marital neglect or misconduct, and not such compulsory absence as is occasioned by a term of imprisonment. It means also such neglect or misconduct as has led up to the respondent's fall from virtue—i. e., the first lapse. St. Paul v. St. Paul, L. R., 1 P. & D. 739; Cummington v. Cummington, 1 Sw. & Tr. 475; Allen v. Allen, 28 L. J. P. & M. 51; Badcock v. Badcock, 31 L. T., O. S. 268; Proctor v. Proctor, 34 L. J. P. & M. 99; Dering v. Dering, L. R., 1 P. & D. 531; Davies v. Davies, 32 L. J. P. & M. 111; Hawkins v. Hawkins, 10 P. D. 177.

See also Washburn v. Washburn, 9 Cal. 476; Holt v. Holt, 117 Mass. 202; DIVORCE; 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 507.

1. Cross References.—This article, dealing as it does with only the principles

I. INTRODUCTION.—This article deals with the general principles of the law of negligence and the rules concerning their application to different relations and states of fact. It does not undertake to treat the law of negligence in detail in its particular applications to the many and varied relations known to the law.¹

II. ANALYTICAL DESCRIPTION.—There has been no satisfactory definition of negligence.² It is, however, susceptible of an analytical description. Negligence is either actionable or not action-of the law of negligence, and leaving the application to the many relations known in law to be made in other parts of the work, must, of necessity, require many references. The following table of cross references is therefore appended.

Negligence of Public Officers and Private Persons.—See NOTARY PUBLIC; PUBLIC OFFICERS; SHERIFFS; MARSHALS AND CONSTABLES; ATTORNEY AND CLIENT; AUCTIONS AND AUCTIONEERS; BAILMENTS; DRUGGIST; FORWARDING MERCHANTS; GUARDIANS; INNS AND INNKEEPERS; MALPRACTICE; MERCANTILE AGENCIES; PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

Negligence of Municipal Corporations.—See BRIDGES; FIRE DEPARTMENT; GAS COMPANIES; HIGHWAYS; LATENT DEFECTS; LAW OF THE ROAD; LACHES; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS; STREETS; SIDEWALKS; STREET RAILWAYS.

Negligence of Railway Corporations.—See CARRIERS OF GOODS; CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS; CARRIERS OF STOCK; CROSSINGS; COUPLING CARS; FELLOW-SERVANTS; FIRES BY RAILWAYS; LATENT DEFECTS; RAIL COMPANIES.

Negligence of Other Private Corporations.—See CARRIERS OF GOODS; CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS; CARRIERS OF STOCK; CORPORATIONS; FOREIGN CORPORATIONS; EXPRESS COMPANIES; GAS COMPANIES; STEAMBOATS; STREET RAILWAYS; TELEGRAPH COMPANIES; TURNPIKES; WAREHOUSES.

Negligence in Special Relations.—See AGENCY; BAILMENTS; CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS; EXPRESS COMPANIES; FELLOW-SERVANTS; INNS AND INNKEEPERS; LANDLORD AND TENANT; MASTER AND SERVANT; PARENT AND CHILD.

Negligence in Care and Use of Property.—See ANIMALS; BAILMENTS; BRIDGES; DAMS; FENCES; FERRIES; PERSONAL PROPERTY; REAL PROP-ERTY; WATER AND WATER COURSES.

Negligence Generally.—See CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE; COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE; ACCIDENT; ACT OF GOD; DAMAGES; DEATH; EXPLOSIONS; FIRE; FLOODS; INSURANCE; INEVITABLE ACCIDENT; LACHES; PARTIES TO ACTIONS; TORTS.

1. Authorities.—In this discussion of the law of negligence free use has been made of the text books upon the subject and acknowledgment is here made once for all of the use of the following books and editions: Thompson on Negligence; Wharton on Negligence (2nd ed.); Shearman and Redfield on Negligence (4th ed.); Campbell on Negligence (2nd ed.); Saunders on Negligence (Hooper's ed.); Beven on Negligence; Beach on Contributory Negligence; Deering on Negligence; Cooley on Torts (2nd ed.); Bishop on Non-Contract Law; Pollock on Torts; Holland's Jurisprudence (4th ed.); Pierce on Railroads; Thompson on Carrier of Passengers; Patterson's R. Accident Law; Bigelow's Lea. Cas. on Torts; Wood's Master and Servant (2nd ed.).

Especial obligations are also acknowledged to the very valuable notes in the Am. Decisions, Am. Reports, Am. St. Rep. and Am. & Eng. R. Cases.

Necessarily such an article as this can be little more than a compilation, but for much original research and valuable suggestions, acknowledgment is made to Hon. Geo. W. Easley, of Harriman, Tenn., and H. D. Whitney, Esq., of Chattanooga, Tenn.

The definition of negligence in this article is believed to be correct, inclusive and exhaustive. It owes much of its accuracy to the acute criticism and suggestion of Mr. Easley, whose wide experience in the practical application of the law of negligence enabled him to point out clearly the errors of other definitions.

2. See Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 2; post, subtitle DEFINITION, note, where able. It is actionable when it proximately causes a legal injury.¹ It is not actionable when it is only a remote cause or a mere condition of damage,² or when it does not cause any damage.³

Actionable negligence, proximately causing legal injury and damage, falls into three divisions. It may be:

1. A pure tort.⁴
2. A breach of contract in the nature of a tort, and which may be treated as such independent of the contract;⁵ or,
3. An inadvertent breach of contract which cannot be regarded as independent of the contract and tortious.⁶

With breaches of contract, not susceptible of being regarded as torts, this article does not deal. It is limited to the other two divisions.⁷

Negligence which does not cause any damage, mere carelessness, the mere breach of a legal duty, from which no evil results flow, are also outside the scope of this discussion.⁸

the various definitions are presented and reviewed. The many definitions which are usually given "are some evidence that a definition of any other value than as an illustration of some phase or phases of the subject, is impossible." Beach on Contrib. Neg., § 2.

1. Cooley on Torts (2nd ed.) 816 (679); Atkinson v. Goodrich Transp. Co., 60 Wis. 141; Wharton on Neg., § 74, et seq.; Heaven v. Pender, L. R., 11 Q. B. 503; Hayes v. Michigan etc. R. Co., 111 U. S. 288.

2. Scheffer v. Washington City etc. R. Co., 105 U. S. 249, 252; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 40; McClary v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 3 Neb. 44; Bodkin v. Western Union Tel. Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 134.

3. Cooley on Torts (2nd ed.) 752 (630); Broom's Com. (4th ed.) 656; Shear. & Red. on Neg., §§ 4, 23; Pollock on Torts 19.

4. Pollock on Torts 19. To constitute a tort, two things must occur: 1, actual or legal damage to plaintiff; 2, a wrongful act committed by the defendant. BAYLY, J., in Rex v. Pagan Commrs., 8 B. & C. 362; Addison on Torts 1; Cooley on Torts (2nd ed.) 3. It will thus be seen that actionable negligence may be a pure tort.

5. Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 74-76; Clark v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 64 Mo. 440; Southern Express Co. v. McVeigh, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 264. See also Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 22. It is there said that the owner of property may recover directly from the wrongdoer for any tortious injury to the property without noticing any contract which the wrongdoer may have made with respect to such property, of which the wrongful act is a violation." Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Kemp, 61 Md. 74; Green v. Clark, 12 N. Y. 343; Needles v. Howard, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 54; Weed v. Saratoga etc. R. Co., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 537; Dows v. Cobb, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 310; Piper v. Manny, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 282; Marshal v. York etc. R. Co., 21 L. J. 34; Pollock on Torts 429, et seq.; 1 Chitty's Plead. (16th ed.) 151-2.

6. Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 76; Pollock on Torts 432-435; Courtney v. Earle, 10 C. B. 73; s. c., 20 L. J. C. P. 7. "The doctrine is not, that the breach of any contract may at the election of the party injured, be treated as a tort, but it is applicable only where the law casts its separate obligation." Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 76.

7. In other words this article does not treat of actions for injuries that are the result of the mere nonperformance of a promise, because a mere nonperformance of a contract, while a breach of the contract, is not a substantive tort. There must be a misfeasance or malfeasance as well as mere nonfeasance to make a breach of contract actionable as a tort, whether the action be in form ex contractu or ex delicto. Pollock on Torts 434; Courtney v. Earle, 10 C. B. 73; 20 L. J. C. P. 7; Walsh v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 42 Wis. 23.

8. This follows from what was said supra, viz: Negligence is actionable only when it proximately causes legal injury, and this treatise is to be con-

Excluding the foregoing classes of so-called negligence from consideration, actionable negligence arises from—

1. A legal duty, not dependent on contract, to use ordinary care under the circumstances in which the person from whom the duty is owing is placed.¹

2. A breach of that duty by a failure to use such care, the failure being inadvertent and not wilful;²

3. Damage to another proximately caused in natural sequence by such inadvertent breach of duty.³

This leads to an attempt at a

III. DEFINITION OF NEGLIGENCE.—Actionable negligence is the inadvertent failure of a legally responsible person to use ordinary care under the circumstances in observing or performing a noncontractual duty, implied by law, which failure is the proximate cause of injury to a person to whom the duty is due.⁴

finer to a discussion of actionable negligence only. See Wharton on Neg. (2nd ed.), § 77; Pollock on Torts 18, 20; Id. 26-7; Pierce on Railroads 310; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Rend, 6 Ill. App. 243; Cosgrove v. New York etc. R. Co., 13 Hun (N. Y.) 329; Barringer v. New York etc. R. Co., 18 Hun (N. Y.) 398.

1. Morris v. Brown, 111 N. Y. 318; s. c., 7 Am. St. Rep. 751; Cooley on Torts (660, 661); Pollock on Torts 352.

2. Shear. & Red. on Neg., §§ 6, 9; Wharton on Neg., §§ 3, 11; Lecture on Jurisprudence (Austin) 20; Beven on Neg. 1, 2.

3. Broom's Com. (5th ed.) 368; Rockford v. Tripp, 83 Ill. 247; Tutein v. Hurley, 98 Mass. 211; s. c., 93 Am. Dec. 154; Pollock on Torts 18, 20; Id. 26-45. Compare the analysis by Shearman and Redfield (§ 5): "Negligence consists in:

"1. A legal duty to use care.

"2. A breach of that duty.

"3. The absence of distinct intention to produce the precise damage, if any, which actually follows.

"With this negligence, in order to sustain a civil action there must concur:

"1. Damage to the plaintiff.

"2. A natural and continuous sequence uninterrupted by connecting the breach of duty with the damage as cause and effect." Approved in Beven on Neg. 9.

See also Wharton's (§ 3): "It will be seen therefore that in order to constitute negligence . . . there must be:

"1. Inadvertence.

"2. Imperfection in the discharge of a duty.

"3. A duty which is thus imperfectly discharged.

"4. Injury to another or to the public as a natural and ordinary sequence."

4. The elements of this definition will be substantiated by the authorities which are cited in the discussion of each one separately.

Other Definitions.—There have been many definitions of negligence by various authors, but no one has seemed to be sufficient to the author of any one of the others. The one most frequently cited is that of ALDERSON, B. viz: "The omission to do something which a reasonable man, guided upon those considerations which ordinarily regulate the conduct of human affairs, would do, or doing something which a prudent and reasonable man would not do; and an action may be brought, if thereby mischief is caused to a third party not intentionally." Blythe v. Birmingham Water Works Co., 25 L. J. Ex. 213.

Mr. Pollock adds to this definition the explanatory clause: "Provided, of course, that the party whose conduct in question is already in a situation that brings him under the duty of taking care." Pollock on Torts 355.

This definition, though valuable as a description, is entirely too wide for a definition of negligence from the standpoint of legal liability; since it would include even improvident business enterprises, which in their undertaking hold out employment, in their collapse involve ruin, perhaps to thousands; but which, though both committing and omitting what a reasonable man would neither do nor omit, yet bring in their train no legal responsibility whatever. See Beven on Neg. 1, 2.

This definition is followed in Smith v. L. & S. R. Co., L. R., 5 C. P. 102; Sunney v. Holt, 15 Fed. Rep. 880; Backus v. Hart, 13 Fed. Rep. 691; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Johnson, 103 Ill. 512; Parrott v. Wells, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 534, 536; Crandall v. Goodrich Transp. Co., 16 Fed. Rep. 75, and numerous other cases.

Brett's Definition.—Mr. Brett, J., in Heaven v. Pender, 11 Q. B. D. 503-507, defines it: "Actionable negligence consists in the neglect of the use of ordinary care or skill towards a person to whom the defendant owes the duty of observing ordinary care and skill, by which neglect the plaintiff has suffered injury to his person or property." See also Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 436, and note.

Justice Swayne's Definition.—"Negligence is the failure to do what a reasonable and prudent person would ordinarily have done under the circumstances of the situation, or doing what such a person under the existing circumstances would not have done. The essence of the fault may lie in omission or commission." Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Jones, 95 U. S. 439. But this is rather a statement of what constitutes proper care than a definition of negligence.

Bishop's Definition.—"Negligence is any lack of carefulness in one's conduct, whether in doing or in abstaining from doing, wherefrom, by reason of its not filling the full measure of the law's requirement in the particular circumstances, there comes to another a legal injury to which he did not himself contribute by his own want of carefulness or other wrong." Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 436.

Horace Smith's Definition.—"Negligence in law is a breach of duty unintentional and proximately producing injury to another possessing equal rights." Smith's Law of Neg. 1.

This definition is peculiar, owing to the introduction of a new element, viz, "possessing equal rights." The proposition is that the question of negligence only arises where the rights of the parties are equal; or in other words, where the rights are unequal the question of negligence does not arise. But this is obviously an incorrect view; e. g., to let off fire-works in the street, though unlawful, will, if carefully done, produce no injury to any person and in such event no remedy arises, but if negligently done and causing injury to a neighbor a right of action arises. Here there is no equality of right for the negligent person had no right whatever, yet it is clearly a case of actionable negligence. Beven on Neg. 5.

Austin's Definition.—The most formally scientific analysis of negligence is that of Austin. He draws a distinction between negligence, heedlessness and rashness, which, though closely allied, are broadly distinguished by differences.

"In cases of negligence the party performs not an act to which he is obliged; he breaks a positive duty. In cases of heedlessness or rashness, the party does an act which he is bound to forbear; he breaks a negative duty. In cases of negligence, he adverts not to the act which it is his duty to do. In cases of heedlessness, he adverts not to consequences of the act he does. In cases of rashness, he adverts to those consequences of the act; but by reason of some assumption which he examines insufficiently he concludes that those consequences will not follow the act in the instance before him."

The view of negligence which commends itself to Mr. Austin is that "it applies exclusively to injurious omissions—to breaches by omission of positive duties." But whatever is philosophic value, this circumscribes negligence in far too narrow limits for the purposes of practical jurisprudence. See Lectures on Jurisprudence (Austin) 20.

Dr. Wharton's Definition.—Dr. Wharton in his work on Negligence (§ 3) describes negligence in its civil relations as "such an inadvertent imperfection, by a responsible human agent, in the discharge of a legal duty, as produces, in an ordinary and natural sequence, a damage to another." Quoted and approved in Salmon v. Railroad Co., 38 N. J. L. 11.

The objection to this definition, according to Mr. Beven, lies in the element introduced by the words "inadvertent imperfection." "Inadvertence in its ordinary meaning," he says, "is closely allied, if not synonymous with heedlessness; whereas the scope of negligence is much wider than that of mere heedless or inadvertent acts and extends to neglects of which the consequences are clearly foreseen though not willed; as the allowing a drain pipe to be stopped and thereby causing a flood, where the injurious consequence has clearly been foreseen, but, though mere inertia of the person whose duty it was to clear it, no prevention has been applied. This is neither an inadvertent act, since the consequences were foreseen, nor yet a wilful one, since they were not willed; the negligent person trusting to the chapter of accidents or to the act of some third person to save him from the consequences of his sluggishness." Beven on Neg. 3.

This criticism of the use of the term "inadvertent," in a definition of negligence, we do not deem quite well taken. Inadvertent as used in the definition in the text means in effect unwilful. The negligent person may, it is true, advert to the act or omission which renders him chargeable with negligence at the time he is guilty of such act or omission, but he cannot advert to the injurious consequences of such an act or omission without taking himself out of the category of the merely negligent, and putting himself in the position of one inflicting a wilful injury. See post, subtit. III, 1, INADVERTENCE.

Shearman and Redfield's Definition.—"Negligence, constituting a cause of civil action, is such an omission, by a responsible person, to use that degree of care, diligence and skill which it was his legal duty to use for the protection of another person from injury, as, in a natural and continuous sequence, causes unintended damage to the latter." Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 3.

It has been objected to this that it does not include the negligence of a competent servant for which the master is responsible. If, observes an able English authority, the servant were incompetent, to the knowledge of the master, the master being a responsible person, would be liable for entrusting work to an incompetent servant. But if the servant is competent, then the master has done his duty; and this is shown by considering that if the person injured were a fellow-servant, the master would not be liable, on the ground that he had done his duty; yet, in the event of injury being done to a third person, he would be liable, and his liability would be dependent, not on any amount of care, diligence and skill he could or ought to have exerted, but on the simple issue whether the servant had exercised the care which was due to the injured person. True, the servant is, for the purposes of personal liability, a responsible person. Still, in law, the master is no less guilty of negligence; yet, this liability of the master would find no place under the terms of the definition. Beven on Neg. 9. But this criticism seems rather strained and unwarranted, leaving out of view the true meaning of the principle which governs the relations of master and servant.

Pollock's Definition.—"Some relation of duty public or private, special or general must exist, either by contract or as an implication of public policy, before one man becomes liable to another for the consequences of a careless act or omission on the part of the first man which causes injury to the second man, and when such duty does exist and such careless act or omission occurs causing an injury in direct and regular sequence, the careless act becomes in the eyes of the law actionable negligence for which the party injured has a right of action against the person inflicting the injury." Pollock on Torts 352. Compare Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 446.

Other Definitions.—Many other definitions have been given in various cases, but every element which has ever attempted to be embraced within the term, has already been given in the preceding. See, however, Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Matthews, 36 N. J. L. 531; Cooley on Torts 630; Unger v. Forty-Second St. etc. R. Co., 51 N. Y. 497; Kelsey v. Barney, 12 N. Y. 425; Cayzer v. Taylor, 10 Gray (Mass.) 274; Fletcher v. Boston etc. R. Co., 1 Allen (Mass.) 9; O'Brien v. Philadelphia etc. R. Co., 3 Phila. 76; Bizzell v. Booker, 16 Ark. 308; 1 Thompson Neg. 135; Kerwhacker v. Cleveland etc. R. Co., 3 Ohio St. 172; s. c., 1 Thomp. on Neg. 472, 483; Campbell on Neg. (2nd. ed), § 1, et seq.; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Johnson, 103 Ill. 512, 521; Great Western R. Co. v. Haworth, 39 Ill. 346, 353; Carter v. Columbia etc. R. Co., 19 S. Car. 20, 24; Hyman v. Nye, L. R., 6 Q. B. 685; Grant v. Mosely, 29 Ala. 302; Frankfort etc. Turnpike Co. v. Philadelphia etc. R. Co., 54 Pa. St. 345; Texas etc. R. Co. v. Murphy, 46 Tex. 356; Blaine v. Chesapeake etc. R. Co., 9 W. Va. 252; Northern etc. R. Co. v. State, 29 Md. 420; Barber v. Essex, 27 Vt. 62; Gardner v. Heartt, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 232, 236; Tonawanda R. Co. v. Munger, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 255, 267; Amick v. O'Hara, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 258; Tally v. Ayres, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 677; Vaughan v. Taffvale R. Co., 5 Hurlst. & N. 679; Philadelphia etc. R.

1. Inadvertence an Element of Negligence.—The element which distinguishes actionable negligence from criminal wrong or wilful tort is inadvertence on the part of the person causing the injury. He may advert to the act or omission of which he is guilty, but he cannot advert to it as a failure of duty—that is, he cannot be conscious that it is a want of ordinary care—without subjecting himself to a charge of having inflicted a wilful injury, because one who is consciously guilty of a want of ordinary care is by implication of law chargeable with an intent to injure, malice being but the “wilful doing of a wrongful act.”¹ And necessarily the

Co. v. Stinger, 78 Pa. St. 225; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Jones, 95 U. S. 442; Brown v. Congress etc. R. Co., 49 Mich. 153.

Is Negligence a State of Mind?—Mr. Pollock, while not disputing that psychologically negligence may be a state or condition of mind, yet in speaking of his definition, says: “This it will be observed says nothing of the party’s state of mind, and rightly. Jurisprudence is not psychology, and law disregards many psychological distinctions, not because lawyers are ignorant of their existence, but because for legal purposes it is impracticable or useless to regard them . . . Negligence is the contrary of diligence, and no one describes diligence as a state of mind. The question for judges and juries is not what a man was thinking or not thinking about, expecting or not expecting, but whether his behavior was or was not such as we demand of a prudent man under the given circumstances. Facts which were known to him, or by the use of appropriate diligence would have been known to a prudent man in his place, come into account as a part of the circumstances.” Pollock on Torts, pp. 355, 356. But compare Holland’s Jurisprudence (4th ed.) 94; Wharton on Neg. (2nd ed.), §§ 13, 14, 15; Campbell on Neg. 3.

1. Gardner v. Heartt, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 232; Gove v. Farmers’ etc. Ins. Co., 48 N. H. 41; Beven on Neg. 1, 2; Lectures on Jurisprudence (Austin) 20; Wharton on Neg., §§ 3, 11; Smith on Neg. 2, 3; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 80, 81. Compare CRIMINAL LAW, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, et seq.; Shear. & Red. on Neg., §§ 6, 19. See also MALICE, 14 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 5; State v. Robbins, 60 Me. 324; Earl of K., 9 Cla. & F. 321.

Therefore an instruction that gross negligence is that degree of negligence which indicates intentional wrong is clearly erroneous. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. McCoy, 81 Ky. 403.

“For one may act in perfect good faith and still be guilty of gross negligence.” Lincoln v. Buckmaster, 32 Vt. 652.

Lack of Intent No Defence.—Since inadvertence is a necessary element of negligence it can plainly be no plea that the injury caused was unintentional. Sharp v. Bonner, 36 Ga. 418; Tally v. Ayres, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 677; Danner v. South Carolina etc. R. Co., 4 Rich. (S. Car.) 329; Amick v. O’Hara, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 258; Blaen Avon Coal Co. v. McCulloh, 59 Md. 403; Wallard v. Worthman, 84 Ill. 446; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 499.

Criminal Liability for Negligence.—Rev. Stat. U. S., § 5344, provides that “every captain . . . or other person employed on any steamboat or vessel by whose misconduct, negligence or inattention to duties . . . the life of any person is destroyed . . . shall be deemed guilty of manslaughter.” See also United States v. Holtzhauer, 40 Fed. Rep. 76. But as negligence proper excludes the idea of intentional wrong and as a crime always involves intent, criminal negligence is a self-contradictory term so far as the civil law is concerned. The criminal feature is entirely foreign to this discussion.

“Inadvertent,” as used in this connection and in the definition, is not intended to convey the idea that the party did not advert to his failure to use care, but means that such failure was not willed. If allowed to coin a word, we should say “an unwilful” or “an unwilled” failure. A careful study of the true meaning of negligence will sustain this application of the element of inadvertence. It applies not to the act causing the damage, nor yet to the damage only, but to the failure to use guilty person cannot advert to the injurious consequences of his conduct with a consciousness that they are to follow, without becoming, in contemplation of law, chargeable with a wilful injury. When the original act or omission is thus actually, or, by presumption of law, wilful, the guilty person, upon an old principle of the common law, is held responsible for all the consequences of his wrongful act.¹ For an inadvertent failure to use ordinary care resulting in damage, an action for a negligent injury may be maintained, and a recovery be had for all consequences of which such inadvertent failure was the proximate cause.² But when the injury was caused wilfully, as above defined, the action is not limited to a recovery for a negligent injury, and damages can be recovered for consequences of which the original wrongful act was only the remote cause;³ but in such case a charge of negligence will not admit direct proof of wilfulordinary care in observing or performing the duty a person may owe. See Beven on Neg. 4, 5, 6; Smith on Neg. 1; definitions supra; Gardner v. Heartt, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 232.

Mr. Bishop thus describes this feature: "Negligence is neither an intent to commit injury nor a mental condition free from fault. There are other mental states occupying a like middle ground. Thus if two persons are fighting and one of them unintentionally strikes a third person, he is answerable to such third person, and his want of malice toward him will only mitigate the damages. The reason is simply that the injury came from an intentional wrongful act; while a like injury from a well meant lawful one would not be actionable if carefully performed; though if negligently, it would be." Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 501; James v. Campbell, 5 Car. & P. 372; Vandenburg v. Truax, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 464; Noyes v. Shepherd, 30 Me. 173; Weaver v. Ward, 1 Hob. 134.

1. Pollock on Torts 28, 29; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 81, and cases cited; Bigelow on Torts 313, note 4; Loop v. Litchfield, 42 N. Y. 358; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 543; Binford v. Johnson, 82 Ind. 29; Cooley on Torts (76) 84; Rex v. Latimer, 17 Q. B. D. 359; Scott v. Shepherd, 2 Wm. Bl. 892; s. c., 1 Smith's L. Cas. (549); Ricker v. Freeman, 50 N. H. 420; s. c., 9 Am. Rep. 267.

To support their idea as to this element of negligence which is that the inadvertence relates to the actual injury caused, rather than to the act causing the injury, Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 6, give as an illustration the following: "If a mischievous boy strike a horse for the very purpose of making it run away, his act would be one of wilful injury as to the owner of the horse, but only of negligent injury, as to a child run over by the horse in a distant street." But the idea conveyed by this illustration is clearly erroneous since, as shown supra, the principle that a wilful wrongdoer is liable for all the consequences of his misconduct is one old and well established. CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 81, and authorities cited; DAMAGES, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 11, 12; cases cited supra.

2. Fleming v. Beck, 48 Pa. St. 309; 2 Thompson on Neg. 1084; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Reaney, 42 Md. 117; Cooley on Torts (68) 73; McLelland v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 94 Ind. 276; post, subtit. PROXIMATE CAUSE; DAMAGES, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 6, et seq.

3. Suth. on Dam. 71; Bigelow on Torts 313, note 4; DAMAGES, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 11, and cases cited; Morgan v. Curley, 142 Mass. 107; Smith v. Goodman, 75 Ga. 198; West v. Forrest, 22 Mo. 344; Hawes v. Knowles, 114 Mass. 519; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, §§ 16, 142; Day v. Woodworth, 13 How. (U. S.) 363; Bishop's Crim. Law (7th ed.), § 343, 335; Jefferson etc. R. Co. v. Riley, 39 Ind. 568 (brakeman threw a burning stick from train without warning, and at a place where passengers were passing, and where it was their duty to pass in order to board the train. The act was

ness,¹ nor will a charge of wilfulness be maintained by proof of mere negligence.² To confuse wilfulness with negligence is either to hold the defendant responsible for consequences of his negligence, which that negligence only remotely caused, or to limit his liability to the consequences of his wilfulness, which are merely proximate; in the one case doing injustice to the defendant, in the other allowing a guilty person to escape full punishment.³

Since negligence necessarily implies inadvertence and lack of intent, such an expression as "wilful negligence" is a contradiction in terms and can mean nothing.⁴ Its use arises from a confusion conclusively presumed to have been wilful and defendant was held liable for remote consequences); Drake v. Kcily, 93 Pa. St. 495; Carter v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 98 Ind. 555; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 347; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 360; Sauter v. New York Cent. etc. R. Co., 66 N. Y. 50; Brown v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 54 Wis. 342; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 444.

1. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Smith, 98 Ind. 42; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 7. Thus where the declaration alleges that the defendant's servants sounded the whistle "wilfully, wantonly and maliciously whereby, etc.," no recovery can be had thereunder on mere proof of negligence without proof of recklessness or malice." Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Dickson, 88 Ill. 431.

2. Indiana etc. R. Co. v. Burdge, 94 Ind. 46; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 192; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 7. Compare Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Bryan, 107 Ind. 51; Belt R. etc. Co. v. Mann, 107 Ind. 89; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Ader, 110 Ind. 376.

3. See CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 80, 81; DAMAGES, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 11, 12.

4. "Wilful Negligence" Self-Contradictory.—This is seen from the universally accepted idea as to the element of inadvertence in negligence. See definitions, supra. See also Cleveland etc. R. Co. v. Asbury, 120 Ind. 289; Taylor v. Holman, 45 Mo. 371; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Bryan, 107 Ind. 51.

The term "wilful negligence" is used in Peoria Bridge Assoc. v. Loomis, 20 Ill. 235; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 263; Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Beggs, 85 Ill. 80—and "wanton and reckless negligence" is found used in Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Hall, 87 Ala. 708; Columbus etc. R. Co. v. Bridges, 86 Ala. 448.

This proposition, found in a work on negligence (Deering, § 2), is therefore full of contradictions, though it is sustained by one of the cases appended to it, viz: "To constitute wilful negligence the wrong done must be either intentional or such a wanton disregard of the rights of others as amounts to bad faith." Citing Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Filbern, 6 Bush (Ky.) 574; Claxton v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 13 Bush (Ky.) 636; Peoria Bridge Assoc. v. Loomis, 20 Ill. 235.

In the first case the term used was "wilful neglect," and the other language was, "or the wrong done must, etc., or such a wanton disregard of security and right as to imply bad faith." See note following.

In the case of Cleveland etc. R. Co. v. Asbury, 120 Ind. 289, the complaint in an action for negligence charged defendant with negligence but used the qualifications "wanton," "wilful" and "with the intention" to injure plaintiff. It was held, however, that the gravamen of the action was simple negligence, and that the complainant stated a good cause of action. See also Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Mitchel, 87 Ky. 327; Hays v. Gainesville etc. R. Co., 70 Tex. 602.

Upon this element of inadvertence, Mr. Smith has to say in explaining his definition, that if the act be intentional it becomes fraudulent or criminal, or it may be a trespass, and with such classes a treatise upon negligence has nothing to do. "Intentional negligence," a phrase sometimes used, seems to involve a contradiction in terms; so also the words "wilful negligence" are often used. If by wilful is meant intentional, the same objection applies, but if by wilful only recklessness is meant, the phrase "wilful negligence" is unobjectionable. Smith on Law of Negligence *4.

of "negligence" with "neglect," which latter may be intentional; and because it is overlooked that the failure to use ordinary care must be inadvertent, or such failure is wilful and not negligent at all. Negligence and wilfulness are the opposites of each other. They indicate radically different mental states.¹ The distinction between negligence and wilful tort is important to be observed, not only in order to avoid a confusion of principles, but it is necessary in determining the question of damages, since in case of an injury by the former, damages can only be compensatory; while in the latter they may also be punitive, vindictive, or exemplary.² The distinction is also needful because of the defences which may be set up; contributory negligence of the plaintiff is no bar to an action for a wilful tort, though it is a complete bar to an action for negligence.³

Negligence is also to be carefully distinguished from fraud, the distinction arising in this case as before, upon the element of inadvertence. Fraud is invariably intentional, either actually or

In Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Bryan, 107 Ind. 51, the court observes: "The words 'wilful negligence' used in conjunction have not always been employed with strict regard for accuracy of expression. To say that an injury resulted from the negligence or wilful conduct of another is to affirm that the same act is the result of two exactly opposite mental conditions. It is to affirm in one breath that the act was done through inattention, thoughtlessly, heedlessly, and at the same time purposely and by design. It seems to be supposed that by coupling the words together, the middle ground between negligence and wilfulness between cases of nonfeasance and misfeasance may be arrived at. It is only necessary to say that the distinction between cases falling within one class or the other is clear and well defined, and cases in any one class are not aided by importing attributes pertaining to the other." See also Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Graham, 95 Ind. 286; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 77.

1. Wilful neglect, under a Kentucky statute, is defined in a "bridge case" to be "a knowledge of the company of the insufficiency of its bridge for that end, i. e., for safe travel, and after lapse of a reasonable time a voluntary failure to remedy the defect; and a palpable and perilous defect which any competent judge of such a structure could discover by ordinary vigilance may authorize a presumption of such knowledge and of wilful neglect." Shelby Co. v. Scarce, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 576. See also on the same subject, Lexington v. Lewis, 10 Bush (Ky.) 677; Jacobs v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 10 Bush (Ky.) 263; 2 Thompson on Neg. 1003 (5), 1233, note 8; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Filbern, 6 Bush (Ky.) 574; s. c., 99 Am. Dec. 699; Paducah etc. R. Co. v. Letcher (Ky. 1888), 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 61.

2. Post, subtit. XVIII, MEASURE OF DAMAGES; DAMAGES, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 21, 212; Walrath v. Redfield, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 368; 1 Suth. on Damages 724; Day v. Woodworth, 13 How. (U. S.) 363; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 748, note.

The recovery of punitive or vindictive damages is allowed only where the act causing the injury has been wilfully done, or where the circumstances indicate that there was a deliberate, pre-conceived or positive intention to injure, or show that reckless disregard of the safety of person or property which is equally culpable. Wallace v. New York, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 440; Moody v. McDonald, 4 Cal. 297.

3. Derby v. Kentucky Cent. R. Co. (Ky. 1887), 4 S. W. Rep. 303; Carroll v. Minnesota Valley R. Co., 13 Minn. 30; s. c., 97 Am. Dec. 221; Beach on Contributory Neg. 49, 51, 53; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 80.

Contributory negligence is a bar to any action for injuries received unless such injury was the result of intentional wrong on the part of the defendant. Carroll v. Minnesota Valley R. Co., 13 Minn. 30; s. c., 97 Am. Dec. 221.

constructively ; negligence is never so.¹

2. Inevitable Accident.—There is no liability for an injury inflicted by one person upon another, even though the injured person be free from fault, if the cause of the injury was unusual and one which reasonable and careful human foresight could not have foreseen as such, and which under the circumstances such care and foresight could not have guarded against.² Such an injury, without any want of ordinary care upon the part of the person inflicting it, is considered an inevitable accident. But where the accident and want of ordinary care concur in producing an injury the negligent person is liable for the consequences, if without his negligence the injury would not have been caused by the accident

1. Negligence Is Never Fraud.—Gardner v. Heartt, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 232; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 20; Deering on Neg., § 5; Wilson v. New York etc. R. Co., 11 Gill & J. (Md.) 58; FRAUD, 8 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 635.

It may, however, in some cases, be clear evidence of fraud. Deering on Neg., § 5; Story on Bailments, § 19; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 20; Com. v. Rodes, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 174; Wilson v. New York etc. R. Co., 11 Gill & J. (Md.) 58; Gardner v. Heartt, 17 Den. (N. Y.) 231.

This distinction between negligence and fraud is well presented by BEARDSLEY, J.: "Fraud and negligence are by no means identical in their nature or effect. Fraud is a deceitful practice or wilful device resorted to with intent to deprive another of his right, or in some manner to do him an injury. It is always positive; the mind concurs with the act; what is done, is done designedly and knowingly. But in negligence, whatever may be its grade, there is no purpose to do a wrongful act, or to omit the performance of a duty. There is, however, an absence of proper attention, care or skill. It is strictly nonfeasance, not malfeasance. This is the general idea, and it marks the distinction between negligence and fraud. In the first, there is no positive intention to do a wrongful act; but in the latter, a wrongful act is ever designed and intended. Negligence, in its various degrees, ranges between pure accident and actual fraud, the latter commencing where negligence ends. Negligence is evidence of fraud, but still is not fraud." Gardner v. Heartt, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 232.

2. Cooley on Torts 80; ACCIDENT, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 82;

ACT OF GOD, vol. 1, p. 173; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 41.

"No case or principle can be found, or if found can be maintained, subjecting a person to liability for an act done without fault on his part . . .

All the cases concede that an injury arising from inevitable accident or which in law or reason is the same thing, from an act that ordinary human care and foresight are unable to guard against, is but the misfortune of the sufferer, and lays no foundation for legal responsibility." Harvey v. Dunlop, Hill & Den. Supp. (N. Y.) 193; Holmes v. Mather, L. R., 10 Exch. 261; s. c., 16 Am. Rep. 384; Brown v. Collins, 53 N. H. 442; s. c., 16 Am. Rep. 372; 1 Thomp. on Neg. 61; The Nitro-Glycerine Case, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 524; s. c., 1 Thomp. on Neg. 42; Losee v. Buchanan, 51 N. Y. 476; s. c., 10 Am. Rep. 623; 1 Thomp. on Neg. 47; Sheldon v. Sherman, 42 N. Y. 484; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 569; Bizzell v. Booker, 16 Ark. 308; Brown v. Susquehanna Boom Co., 109 Pa. St. 57 (extraordinary flood); Viterbo v. Friedlander, 120 U. S. 707 (same); Ellet v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 76 Mo. 518; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 183, 196, note (where the subject of extraordinary floods is discussed at length).

A casualty, happening against the will and without the negligence or other default of the party, is as to him an inevitable casualty. Hodgson v. Dexter, 1 Cranch (C. C.) 109. See The Lotty, Olc. Adm. 329.

In an action to recover damages occasioned by the overflow, in a season of great rains, of a ditch that defendant was bound to keep in repair, held, that although defendant was not liable if the overflow was the act of God, yet, alone.¹ So where there is a purely accidental occurrence, producing injury, but without fault on the part of the person to whom it is attributed, there can be no action for negligence sustained, since the injury was evidently not owing to a failure to exercise proper care; the damage is present, but the thing amiss, the injuria, is wanting.²

"Inevitable accident" and "an act of God" are not convertible terms, though they have sometimes been so treated, the former being much the more comprehensive and embracing the latter.³

If defendant should have anticipated the rains and consequent overflow, and could have guarded against the overflow by repairing and digging out the ditch, he was liable. Chidester v. Consolidated Ditch Co., 59 Cal. 197.

1. "The fact that a natural cause contributes to produce an injury which could not have happened without the unlawful act of the defendant, does not make the act so remote as to excuse him." Salisbury v. Herchenroder, 106 Mass. 458; s. c., 8 Am. Rep. 354; 2 Thompson on Neg. 1067. See also ACCIDENT, ACT OF GOD, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law; INEVITABLE ACCIDENT, vol. 10; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 4, p. 41; Chidester v. Consolidated Ditch Co., 59 Cal. 197; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. School Dist. 96 Pa. St. 65; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 166; Ellett v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 76 Mo. 518; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 183; Barnard v. Poor, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 378 (plaintiff's property consumed by a fire negligently lit by defendant on adjoining lot; fire spread by wind); Dickinson v. Boyle, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 78; Woodward v. Aborn, 35 Me. 271; Wharton on Neg., § 86.

See also post, subtit. COMBINED AND CONCURRENT CAUSES.

Where the fall of a railroad bridge is caused by an act of God, a cloud-burst, for instance, a railroad employee cannot hold the company liable unless its negligence, to an extent amounting to a want of ordinary care, contributed to the disaster. Rodgers v. Central Pac. R. Co., 67 Cal. 607.

Therefore, in an action for the falling of a wall, it is proper to charge that if the wall fell by reason of an extraordinary rainstorm, and defendant had used such care in its construction as persons of ordinary prudence would have exercised under the same circumstances, defendant was not liable. Couts v. Neer, (Tex. 1888), 9 S. W. 40.

2. Accidents.—Cooley on Torts (2nd ed.) (80) 92; Weaver v. Ward, 1 Hob. 134; Sheldon v. Sherman, 42 N. Y. 484; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 569; Boynton v. Rees, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 527; American Express Co. v. Smith, 33 Ohio St. 511; Burton v. Davis, 15 La. An. 448; Brown v. Collins, 53 N. H. 442; s. c., 16 Am. Rep. 372; Hanlon v. Ingram, 3 Iowa 81.

Thus where a party in selfdefence fired a pistol at his assailant and accidentally shot a third party, he was not liable for the injury done. Morris v. Platt, 132 Conn. 75; S. P. Paxton v. Boyer, 67 Ill. 132; s. c., 16 Am. Rep. 615.

Where a railroad employee in getting out of the way of a train suddenly started without signal, stepped between the railroad track and a sand bank two feet distant, and while there a quantity of sand fell from the bank, striking him and knocking him against the moving cars, and the wheels of one of the cars ran over his leg and injured him, it was held that, as the immediate and direct cause of the injury was the falling of the bank, and this was not the effect or consequence of the omission or act of the defendant, plaintiff could not recover. Handelun v. Burlington etc. R. Co. (Iowa, 1887), 32 N. W. Rep. 4.

So in accidents from machinery where their liability to happen is proved only by their happening. Richards v. Rough, 53 Mich. 212; Sjorgren v. Hall, 53 Mich. 274.

An accident may be defined as an event happening unexpectedly and without fault; where there is fault there is liability; e. g., where one drives against another by getting on the wrong side of the road in the dark. Leame v. Bray, 3 East 593; Wakeman v. Robinson, 1 Bing. 213 (pulling wrong rein by mistake); Shawhan v. Clarke, 24 La. An. 390; Sullivan v. Scripture, 3 Allen (Mass.) 564.

3. ACCIDENT, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 82; ACT OF GOD, vol. 1, p. 601; INEVITABLE ACCIDENT, vol. 10, p. 601;

An "act of God" is such an inevitable accident as occurs without the intervention of man.¹

3. Ordinary Care Defined.—No act or omission constitutes negligence unless there has been a want of ordinary care upon the part of the person charged with the act or omission. If there has been no want of ordinary care by such person, there has been no negligence, no injuria, even though damage has resulted from the act or omission complained of. Therefore, the failure to use ordinary care is an essential element of negligence, without which it cannot exist.² It is difficult to define the term "ordinary care"; it is a relative term, always dependent on relationship and circumstances. Whether it has been exercised or not can be determined only by the application of a test presently to be stated, and by a consideration of the circumstances of each particular case.³ There is no fixed standard by which care may be measured and then designated as "great," "ordinary" or

Shear. and Red. on Neg., § 16; Pollock on Torts 115, et seq.; Wharton on Neg., § 553; Nugent v. Smith, 1 C. P. Div. 423; Merritt v. Earle, 29 N. Y. 115; s. c., 86 Am. Dec. 292; McArthur v. Sears, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 190; Fergusson v. Brent, 12 Md. 9; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 582.

In some cases, however, the two terms have been considered as synonymous. Fish v. Chapman, 2 Ga. 349; s. c., 46 Am. Dec. 393; Neal v. Saunderson, 2 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 572; s. c., 41 Am. Dec. 609.

1. Chidester v. Consolidated Ditch Co., 59 Cal. 197; McGrew v. Stone, 53 Pa. St. 436.

2. Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Locke, 112 Ind. 404 (tall brakeman case); Vaughn v. Taff etc. R. Co., 5 H. & N. 679, 688 (WILLES, J., "Negligence is the absence of care according to the circumstances"); Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Stinger, 78 Pa. St. 225; Ford v. London etc. R. Co., 2 F. & F. 730, 732; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Arms, 91 U. S. 494; Beven on Neg. 10.

For example: A boarded a train to look for his wife. Before he got off the train started and he was injured. His wife, although without his knowledge, had gotten off, as had all other passengers, and nobody had any special knowledge of his situation. Here there was no failure on the part of the railway company to use ordinary care and therefore the company was not liable for his injury. Griswold v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 64 Wis. 652.

The hose of a fire company lay across the track of a railroad and an engine passing ran over the hose cutting it in two, thereby indirectly causing a house to burn down which would otherwise have been saved. It appeared that the engineer had no knowledge of the hose being on the track and no signal was given him to stop. The railway company was held not liable because there was no failure to exercise ordinary care. Mott v. Hudson River R. Co., 1 Robt. (N. Y.) 585. Contra, if engineer had knowledge of the hose being there and could have stopped. Metallic Compression Casting Co. v. Fitchburg R. Co., 109 Mass. 277.

3. Simpkins v. Columbia etc. R. Co., 20 S. Car. 258; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. Cas. 467; Davis v. Columbia etc. R. Co., 21 S. Car. 93; s. c., 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 440.

A failure on the part of anyone engaged in the pursuit of his own peculiar occupation to observe precautionary rules, established by competent authority to guard against accidents and prevent injuries to others, is, in legal contemplation, a want of ordinary care. Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Kerr, 25 Md. 521.

Ordinary care and negligence are correlative terms, the latter being the absence of the former. Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 438. Ordinary care depends on circumstances and is such care as a person of ordinary prudence would have exercised. Fowler v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 18 W. Va. 579; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 480; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. McCoy (Ky. 1883), 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 277.

Common Prudence, Due Care, etc.—

"slight."¹ In some relations, a slight want of care is a want of ordinary care because of the high duty that is owing.² In other relations, only a great failure of care is a want of ordinary care, because there is only a duty of imperfect obligation owing.³

Ordinary care has sometimes been considered synonymous with "common prudence;" the terms "due care" and "reasonable care" are also often substituted for it, there being no practical difference in their meanings. Richmond etc. R. Co. v. Howard, 79 Ga. 44 (common prudence); Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 9; Wharton on Neg., § 3; Wormell v. Maine Cent. R. Co., 79 Me. 397; 6 c., 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 272.

"Negligence is the absence of due care." Carter v. Columbia etc. R. Co. 19 S. Car. 24; s. c., 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 414.

1. Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 439; Cooley on Torts (2nd ed.) (662) 794; Meredith v. Reed, 26 Ind. 334, 336; Beven on Neg. 16; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 47, et seq.; Pratt v. Wells, Fargo etc., 15 Wall. (U. S.) 524.

"Gross negligence is a relative term. It is doubtless to be understood as meaning a greater want of care than is implied by the term 'ordinary negligence,' but after all it is only the absence of the care that was required under the circumstances." DAVIS, J., in Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Arms, 91 U. S. 494.

"Negligence moreover is not absolute or intrinsic but always relative to some circumstances of time, place or person." Degg v. Midland R. Co., 1 H. & N. 781. Approved in Potter v. Faulkner, 1 B. & S. 800; Wharton on Neg., § 25.

Thus a railroad company operating its trains on city streets must use greater care than in less frequented localities, and any neglect of any precaution proper in the peculiar circumstances of the locality constitutes negligence. Norfolk etc. R. Co. v. Budge, 84 Va. 63.

Sort of Care as Distinguished from Amount of Care.—Mr. Smith draws a curious distinction between the sort of care and the amount of care that is to be exercised. The sort of care, he says, depends upon the duty or position of the party and is a question of law. The amount of care to be taken depends upon circumstances and is a question of fact. Thus, if a person give me a glass jug and a deal box to carry, the sort of care which I have to exercise depends upon my position with respect to that person: for example, Am I paid, or am I not? But the amount of care will differ and be probably greater in respect to the glass jug or deal box. Smith on Law of Negligence *14; Philadelphia R. Co. v. Boyer, 97 Pa. St. 101; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 172.

2. This is the case where the relation of passenger and carrier exists between the negligent party and him who is injured. See Shear. & Red. on Neg., §§ 45, et seq.; CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 738; Sandham v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 38 Iowa 88; Taber v. Delaware etc. R. Co., 71 N. Y. 489; Cooley on Torts (662), et seq.; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Arms, 91 U. S. 494; Maverick v. Eighth Ave. R. Co., 36 N. Y. 378; Sherlock v. Alling, 44 Ind. 184.

Carriers of passengers are required to use the highest degree of prudence and in some cases the utmost human skill and foresight, and a failure to do so constitutes them guilty of a failure to use ordinary care under the circumstances. Coddington v. Brooklyn etc. R. Co., 102 N. Y. 66; s. c., 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 393; Sharp v. Grey, 9 Bing. (Eng.) 457; Ingalls v. Bills, 9 Met. (Mass.) 1; s. c., 43 Am. Dec. 346; Moreland v. Boston etc. R. Co., 141 Mass. 31; Sandham v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 38 Iowa 88; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Fort, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 553; Patterson's R. Acc. Law 231, § 236.

In the law of bailments also this principle is illustrated. Where the bailment is for the exclusive benefit of the bailee, he is brought into such a relation as makes him owe a high and special duty to use care in the use of the property bailed, and a slight neglect to use care constitutes him guilty of a want of ordinary care. See BAILMENTS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 54; CARRIERS OF GOODS, vol. 2, pp. 772-74; Story on Bailments (9th ed.) 23; Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raym. 209; Green v. Hollingsworth, 5 Dana (Ky.) 173.

3. Where a person comes upon the land of another merely by sufferance, or as a trespasser, the land owner owes

While in still other relations, although the duty due is positive, it yet does not involve the idea of great care in its observance, and therefore the failure to exercise care must be something more than a slight failure to exercise care, although it may not involve the idea of a failure to use the highest care possible.¹

This must not be confused with the idea that there are degrees of negligence. For the reason stated above and amply shown elsewhere, there can be no degrees of negligence,² but the standard of care required should and does vary with the different relationships in which parties stand to each other, and the different duties that are created or implied by law as existing between them under different circumstances.³ It follows that when the

to him only a very slight duty at most, and therefore is guilty of a want of proper care only when he has failed to exercise even the slightest care to prevent injuries. See Bush v. Brainard, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 78 (plaintiff's cow killed from her having drank syrup left by defendant on his own land); Lary v. Cleveland etc. R. Co., 78 Ind. 323; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 498 (plaintiff injured by the fall of a ruinous house on defendant's land, and in which he had taken refuge from a storm—no recovery. The want of care which existed in this case was such as might have rendered defendant liable had the relation of host and invited guest existed between them); Zoebis v. Tarbell, 10 Allen (Mass.) 385 (plaintiff entered a room intended for employees only, and on the door of which was painted "no admittance" and was injured—no recovery). See also Severy v. Nickerson, 120 Mass. 306; Hargreaves v. Deacon, 25 Mich. 1; Cahill v. Layton, 57 Wis. 600; McAlpine v. Pavell, 70 N. Y. 126; Larmore v. Crown Point Iron Co., 101 N. Y. 391; Pierce on Railroads 330; Johnson v. Boston etc. Co., 125 Mass. 75; Morissey v. Eastern etc. R. Co., 126 Mass. 377.

The law of bailment will again furnish an additional illustration to the principle in discussion, e. g., where the bailment is for the sole benefit of the bailor, such a relation exists as to make the duty owing by the bailee a very slight one, and only a great want of care will constitute a violation of it. BAILEMENTS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 52; Story on Bailments, § 23.

1. This state exists in a great majority of the cases which arise under the law of negligence. For example, in case of a person run over by a railway train at a crossing; here the railway company did not owe the high duty which it owes to passengers, yet it owed more than the very slight duty which it owes to trespassers. There is a mutual duty owing between the parties. Consequently, the defendant in such case is held liable only when it is shown that he failed to exercise more than a slight degree of care. See Central etc. Co. v. Rockafellow, 17 Ill. 541; Brand v. Schenectady etc. R. Co., 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 368; Pendleton etc. R. Co. v. Shires, 18 Ohio St. 255; Cleveland etc. R. Co. v. Terry, 8 Ohio St. 579; Macon etc. R. Co. v. Davis, 18 Ga. 679; Bradley v. Boston etc. R. Co., 2 Cush. (Mass.) 539; Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Goddard, 25 Ind. 185; Deering on Neg., § 238; CROSSINGS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

The rights and duties of travellers using a highway are mutual, reciprocal and equal; each must use ordinary care to avoid injury. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Still, 19 Ill. 499; Deering on Neg., § 239, and cases cited; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Krick, 47 Ind. 368; Runyon v. Central R. Co., 25 N. J. L. 556; Stevens v. Oswego etc. R. Co., 18 N. Y. 422; Continental Imp. Co. v. Stead, 95 U. S. 161, 165; Leavenworth etc. R. Co. v. Rice, 10 Kan. 426; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Goodman, 62 Pa. St. 329. Compare Warner v. New York etc. R. Co., 44 N. Y. 465; Shaw v. Boston etc. R. Co., 8 Gray (Mass.) 45.

2. Post, subtit. IV, DEGREES OF NEGLIGENCE; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 21-23; Hinton v. Dibbin, 2 Q. B. 661; Steamboat New World v. King, 16 How. (U. S.) 469; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Arms, 91 U. S. 494; Beven on Neg. 16.

3. Fletcher v. Boston etc. R. Co., 1 circumstances require great care it is but ordinary care under the circumstances; when they require but slight care that also is ordinary care, and where they do not require the highest, and yet will not admit the lowest kind of care, the care called for is, as in the other cases, ordinary care.¹ Therefore ordinary care varies with the facts of each particular case, and the same act or omission

Allen (Mass.) 9; Shear. & Red. on Neg., §§ 10, 43; Baldwin v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 63 Iowa 210; s. c., 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 166; Norfolk etc. R. Co. v. Ormsby, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 455; Broom's Leg. Maxims 329; Richardson v. Kier, 34 Cal. 775; Jamison v. Sart Jose etc. R. Co., 55 Cal. 593; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 350.

The fact that the approach of a railroad to a highway crossing is obscured by embankments or otherwise, imposes upon travellers by the highway, as well as upon the railroad company, special care to avoid collisions, therefore the diligence which amounts to proper care in an ordinary case would be negligence in this special one. Haas v. Grand Rapids etc. R. Co., 47 Mich. 401; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 268.

So a driver may be in the exercise of reasonable care although he is lying down upon his load wrapped up in his blankets. Parish v. Eden, 62 Wis. 272.

The rule has been thus stated: "Ordinary care" has relation to the situation of the parties and the business in which they are engaged, and varies according to the exigencies which require vigilance and attention, conforming in amount and degree to the particular circumstances under which it is to be exerted. Fletcher v. Boston etc. R. Co., 1 Allen (Mass.) 9; Cayzer v. Taylor, 10 Gray (Mass.) 274; Central R. Co. v. Moore, 24 N. J. L. 824; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Ogier, 35 Pa. St. 60.

Running of Trains Within Cities.—In running a railroad train within the limits of a town or city, care should always be used by the servants of the company—the degree to be proportioned to the danger to be apprehended of inflicting injury on others. At street crossings a high degree of vigilance should be exercised. The signals required by law for the protection of travellers upon the highway should be given, and the servants of the company in charge of the train should be at their posts, observant of the track, and ready at a moment's notice to avert if possible any apprehended danger. A less degree of vigilance will ordinarily be required between streets than at crossings or when the train is running longitudinally in a street; but some vigilance is required even there, and the degree will necessarily vary with the attendant circumstances. In any case the requisite degree of vigilance may be properly designated by the words "ordinary care," that is, such care as would ordinarily be used by prudent persons performing a like service under similar circumstances. Frick v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 75 Mo. 595; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 280.

In Cities and Towns.—The degree of care and foresight to be used must always be in proportion to the nature and magnitude of the injury that would be likely to result from the occurrence that is to be anticipated and provided against. Morrill on City Neg. 114, § 6; Mayor etc. of New York v. Bailey, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 433.

Therefore, the more populous the thoroughfare, the greater care necessary on the part of the corporation, and for this reason only greater care is requisite in cities than in villages. Morrill on City Neg. 115, § 6; Smid v. New York, 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 126; Pomfrey v. Saratoga Springs, 104 N. Y. 459.

Ordinary Care Proportionate to Probability of Injury.—Ordinary care in every situation is proportionate to the injury that may arise to others; he who engages in what is more than ordinarily dangerous is bound to exercise a higher degree of care than would be required if the danger was only ordinary. Morgan v. Cox, 22 Mo. 373; s. c., 1 Thompson on Neg. 238 (accidental discharge of a gun); Dixon v. Bell, 5 M. & Sel. (Eng.) 198.

In Tally v. Ayres, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 677, this principle was sustained and applied to a case where defendant's gun was accidentally discharged whereby plaintiff's mare was killed. See also 1 Thompson on Neg. 245, et seq., §§ 1-8.

1. Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Arms, 91 U. S. 494; Cooley on Torts (662); Bishop on Non-Contract Law, §§ 439-may be negligent as to one person, not negligent as to another, and negligence for which a third cannot recover because his contributory negligence bars his action; while as to the first person there would have been no contributory negligence although all did the same act.¹ Necessarily this makes the question of ordinary care usually a question of fact in each particular case, to be determined by the jury from the evidence.² But in determining whether there has been a want of ordinary care the jury should be guided by some rule of law laid down by the judge as a test of its existence, and this brings us to a consideration of the

4. Test of Ordinary Care.—When a person in the observance or performance of a duty due to another has neither done nor omitted to do anything which an ordinarily careful and prudent

442; Blythe v. Birmingham etc. Co., 11 Exch. 781; Smith v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 5 C. P. 98, 102; Wilson v. Bret, 11 M. & W. 113. Thus it may not be negligent for a working mason laying a brick wall to drop a brick, for this sort of accident is inseparable from the business; but, if the wall is on the line of a thronged street, his employer would be guilty of negligence should he not adopt safeguards to prevent persons from walking where falling bricks may hit them. Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 440; Jager v. Adams, 123 Mass. 26. So in case of snow and ice thrown from the roof of a house. Althorf v. Wolfe, 22 N. Y. 355.

1. This statement may be made clear by an illustrative case: A comes upon B's land by invitation and is injured by falling over or in an obstruction on such land; here there was a duty owing from B to A and the act of B in having the obstruction whereby A was injured is such a failure to use care as constitutes negligence. Heaven v. Pender, 11 Q. B. Div. 503; Currier v. Boston Music Hall, 135 Mass. 414; Campbell on Neg., §§ 43, 44.

If, however, C, a trespasser, comes on B's land, there being no duty owing by B to keep his premises in such condition as that trespassers should not be injured, he would not be liable for an injury received by C; and thus the same act of B which constituted negligence as to A does not constitute negligence as to C. Larmore v. Crown Point Iron Co., 101 N. Y. 391; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 718; Evansville etc. R. Co. v. Griffin, 100 Ind. 221; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 783. Suppose a third party, D, comes upon the same premises at B's invitation but in passing over them acts very carelessly, running on heedlessly and blindly and is injured by coming in contact with the obstruction—here though B might have been negligent yet D's recovery is barred because of his contributory negligence. Johnson v. Willcox (Pa. 1890), 19 Atl. Rep. 939; The Sir Garnet Wolseley, 41 Fed. Rep. 896; Bedell v. Berkey, 76 Mich. 435; Schoenfield v. Milwaukee City R. Co., 74 Wis. 433.

If still another party, E, a child of tender years, came on B's premises uninvited, but lured by a construction likely to attract its attention and excite its curiosity, and such construction was left unguarded and was dangerous, the child could recover for injuries received because although the same act on B's part was not a want of ordinary care as to adults, it was as to infants. See this fully presented in CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 53; Harriman v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 45 Ohio St. 11; s. c., 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 37.

2. Post, subtit. QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT; Griffin v. Auburn, 58 N. H. 121; Kenney v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 80 Mo. 573; Sloan v. Central Iowa R. Co., 62 Iowa 728; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 145 (brakeman injured by failure to catch hold of brake rod); Pennsylvania Co. v. Frana, 112 Ill. 398; Ohio etc. R. Co. v. Collarn, 73 Ind. 261; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 554; Shear. & Red. on Neg., §§ 25, 35, 53, et seq.; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 442. See also New Jersey R. etc. Co. v. Pollard, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 341; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Coon, 111 Pa. St. 430; Ford v. London etc. R. Co., 2 F. & F. 730, 732.

"There is no absolute rule as to what constitutes negligence, that conduct person in the same relation and under the same conditions and circumstances would not have done or omitted to do, he has not failed to use ordinary care, and is therefore not guilty of negligence even though damage may have resulted from his action or want of action. And conversely, there has been a want of ordinary care, when a person in the observance or performance of a legal duty to another, has done or omitted to do something which an ordinarily careful and prudent person in the same relation and under similar circumstances and conditions would not have done or omitted, such act or omission being the proximate cause of injury to the other party to the relation.¹ The term "same conditions and circumstances" as used above is meant to include all the circumstances of time, place and attendant conditions, and a person cannot be chargeable with a want of ordinary care because in a situation of danger or emergency necessitating instant action he did not take all the precautions which,

which might be so termed in one case being in another properly considered ordinary care; nor in cases where it is concurrent will the same rule apply to adults and to children. It is therefore always a question of fact for the jury under the instructions of the court as to the relative degree of care or the want of it growing out of the circumstances and conduct of the parties. Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Spearen, 47 Pa. St. 300, 305 (AGNEW, J.).

1. Matson v. Maupin & Co., 75 Ala. 312; Richmond etc. R. Co. v. Howard, 79 Ga. 44; Funston v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 61 Iowa 452; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 640; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Hedges, 105 Ind. 398; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 558; Needham v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 85 Ky. 423; Briggs v. Union St. R. Co., 148 Mass. 72; 37 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 204; Jager v. Adams, 123 Mass. 26; Durant v. Palmer, 29 N. J. L. 546; Kay v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 65 Pa. St. 269; Gravelle v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 10 Fed. Rep. 711; Harris v. Union Pac. R. Co., 13 Fed. Rep. 591; G. H. etc. R. Co. v. Smith, 69 Tex. 406; Fuller v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 15 Fed. Rep. 875; Nuller v. Union Pac. R. Co., 17 Fed. Rep. 67; Brown v. Congress etc. R. Co., 49 Mich. 153 ("Such care, precaution and vigilance as the circumstances justly demand and the want of which causes him injury"); 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 383; Fowler v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 18 W. Va. 579; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 480; Norfolk etc. R. Co. v. Ormsly, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 455; Reynolds v. Burlington, 52 Vt.

300; Baltimore R. Co. v. Jones, 95 U. S. 442; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, § 9; Pollock on Torts 36; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, §§ 436, 437.

Ordinary care is that degree of care which a person of ordinary prudence is presumed to use, under the peculiar circumstances, to avoid injury, and should be in proportion to the danger to be avoided, and the fatal consequences involved in his neglect. Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Goddard, 25 Ind. 185.

The case of Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Locke was one of unusual character. The deceased, A, was loading a flat car on a side track on the south side of defendant's main line distant from it 25 feet. Telegraph wires ran obliquely across the track, at the usual height of such wires. On the day of the injury a car of defendant's passed under the wires; the car was of unusual height (12 or 18 inches above the average), and standing on it was a tall brakeman (six feet three and a half inches). One of the wires was sagging slightly, and owing to the unusual height of the brakeman his head came in contact with the wire and he was knocked down and the wire was broken at the insulator. A brake wheel caught the wire and dragged it with the train, and in some unaccountable manner the wire wrapped around the body of deceased, dragged him under the moving train, where he was run over and killed. The court held that this was such an extraordinary combination of circumstances as no man could be expected or required to foresee or to provide against, and therefore the defendant could not be liable; that although it was true that deceased, being on defendant's premises by invitation, was entitled to have a duty owing him by defendant, yet as a matter of law there could be no negligence inferred on the part of defendant from the evidence. Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Locke, 112 Ind. 404.

In case of employees of railway companies a test is laid down in the case of Louisville etc. R. Co. v. McCoy, 81 Ky. 403, that ordinary care by the employees of a railroad company is that degree of care which a majority of men, of prudent and careful habits, would exercise under like circumstances to avoid injury to their own persons from the same risks which others undergo in obedience to orders, or by reason of their hazardous business. It is going too far to require that degree of care which any of such persons would take of "his family," placed under like circumstances.

Test Applied in Other Cases.—In an action for damages for flooding plaintiff's land, through defects in defendant's reservoir, the question is not whether the defendants might not have been more careful and made their work stronger, but whether a discreet and prudent man ordinarily would have so done, had his own interests been at risk. Hoffman v. Tuolumne etc. Co., 10 Cal. 413; Wolf v. St. Louis etc. Co., 10 Cal. 541.

The degree of negligence necessary to authorize a recovery against the hirer of a horse, which died during the bailment, is the omission of that diligence in the use and care of the horse which the generality of mankind use as to their own horses, and the omission of such diligence is called ordinary negligence. Moore v. Cass, 10 Kan. 288.

It is not negligence to fail to guard against an unexpected and thoughtless act of a child. Gallaher v. Crescent City R. Co., 37 La. An. 288.

Errors are frequently made in instructing the jury as to the test to be applied because of a failure to adhere to the rule stated. Thus an instruction that the degree of care requisite is that exercised by an "ordinary man" is erroneous, since a man may be "ordinary" in various senses and yet be either reckless or unusually prudent and careful. Austin etc. R. Co. v. Beatty, 73 Tex. 592.

So also where the judge made an explanation to the jury that ordinary care meant "just such care as one of you similarly employed would have exercised under the circumstances" there was an erroneous statement of the test. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Gower, 85 Tenn. 465.

In an action for an injury received on the highway the charge was that the expression "ordinary care" excluded the idea of extraordinary care and the idea of carelessness; that the plaintiff was bound to exercise a mean degree of care, "that measure of care and attention . . . that persons of ordinary care, men generally, ordinarily prudent men," exercise under similar circumstances; and that, if plaintiff "did what any ordinary man, any man of ordinary care and attention, would have done" he was "exercising such a measure of care as men ordinarily would have exercised," and had satisfied the rule. It was held that the charge failed to convey the true sense and force of the rule, and was therefore erroneous. Reynolds v. Burlington, 53 Vt. 300.

An instruction that the ordinary care to which the employees of a railroad company are bound toward passengers is the care taken by an ordinarily careful man of himself, his family, or his property, is erroneous. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. McCoy, 81 Ky. 403; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 277.

Sex as Affecting Degree of Care Required.—While in order to properly determine the degree of care to be required, it is allowed to take into account all the circumstances, age and sex of the parties included, it cannot be laid down as a rule of law that a less degree of care is required of a woman than of a man. Michigan R. Co. v. Hassenmeyer, 48 Mich. 205 (COOLEY, J.); s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 470; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59; Snow v. Provincetown, 120 Mass. 580; Daniels v. Clegg, 28 Mich. 33; Fox v. Glastenbury, 29 Conn. 204.

In a case, however, where the actor was a woman, an instruction which charged that she was bound to observe the conduct of a woman of common and ordinary prudence, was considered not erroneous. Bloomington v. Perdue, 99 Ill. 329.

Age as Affecting Degree of Care.—The test of ordinary care in case of tender years is properly what might have been ordinarily expected of a child under from a careful and deliberate retrospective view of the situation it appears might have been taken. The question is, what would an ordinarily careful and prudent person have done at the time of the emergency or danger, in the situation as it then presented itself to him for immediate action?¹

5. Negligence May be Either Act or Omission.—As already indicated, a want of ordinary care may be shown either by an act done or by an omission to act. A failure to exercise ordinary care may be the doing what should not be done or the omitting of what should be done.² Diligence, the converse of negligence, may imply a forbearance to act as well as action.³ The doctrine sometimes attempted to be maintained, that damage brought about by an omission merely, and without direct human agency, does not render the defendant liable for such negligent omission, is, therefore, not based upon principle.⁴ If there is a duty well defined, it matters not whether the breach of it is committed by such circumstances. The test as to what a man of ordinary prudence, etc., might have done under similar conditions, while correct, is more difficult of application. This subject is thoroughly treated in a previous article and need only be mentioned here. See CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 42, et seq.; Westbrook v. Mobile etc. R. Co., 66 Miss. 560; Sioux City etc. R. Co. v. Stout, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 657, note.

1. Karr v. Parks, 40 Cal. 188; Moore v. Central R. Co., 47 Iowa 688; Frandsen v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 36 Iowa 372; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 47; Lowery v. Manhattan R. Co., 99 N. Y. 158.

2. Supra, subtit. TEST OF ORDINARY CARE; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 22; Heaven v. Pender, L. R., 11 Q. B. 506; Holland's Jurisprudence 94; Grant v. Mosley, 29 Ala. 302; Harriman v. Pittsburgh R. Co., 45 Ohio St. 11; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 37; Washington v. Baltimore R. Co., 17 W. Va. 190; s. c., 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 794; Wharton on Negligence, § 79; Pollock on Torts 352.

This follows from the definition of a legal duty: "That what the law requires to be done or foreborne to a certain person, etc." Wharton on Negligence, § 24.

"Suppose that there is, to my knowledge, a peculiar danger in the matter, e. g., a concealed pit on the premises of which I neglect to warn the person, whom I know is going there by my permission; it is obviously important whether the pit was dug by my orders, or whether it was there when I myself came to the premises, and I have only neglected to fence it." Cotton v. Wood, 8 C. B., N. S. 568; Sanders on Neg. 50; Wharton on Negligence, §§ 83, 345; Carlton v. Franconia Iron etc. Co., 99 Mass. 216.

Thus, where the negligence consists in leaving on defendant's track, unattended, an engine fired up, with water in the boiler, which exploded and injured plaintiff who was walking on the track at a place where the public had for many years been accustomed to pass, the defendant was held liable for the negligent omission of its servants. Davis v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 58 Wis. 646; s. c., 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 424.

Likewise, where a railroad company negligently omitted to remove a signal torpedo which had been deposited at a certain place where the public had long been accustomed to pass, it was held liable for an injury caused to a person by its explosion. Harriman v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 45 Ohio St. 11; s. c., 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 37.

3. Grant v. Mosely, 29 Ala. 302; Wharton on Negligence, § 24; Id., §§ 79, et seq.

4. Beven on Negligence 4, 12; Lectures on Jurisprudence (Austin), No. 20; Wharton on Neg., §§ 79, et seq.

A distinction between an omission and negligence in commission was taken in Southcote v. Stanley, 1 H. & N. 248; Gallagher v. Humphrey, 10 W. R., Q. B. 664.

misfeasance or nonfeasance; each is equally culpable.¹ The distinction between commission and omission, where there is no legal duty concerned, is entirely theoretic and has no place in this discussion.

6. A Legally Responsible Person.—Unless there is a legally responsible person chargeable with an inadvertent want of ordinary care resulting in damage to another, there is no person who can be required to respond in damages for an injury of such character. In other words, there must be a person who in contemplation of law is legally answerable for the results of a want of ordinary care on his part, before negligence in its proper sense can be established. If a person charged with negligence is wholly incapable of exercising care in the legal meaning of that word, he cannot be held responsible for a want of ordinary care.² It has been said that infants and lunatics are liable for negligence; but this statement is much, broader than the true doctrine and is

1. Dr. Wharton discusses this question at length and finally concludes with the principle involved in the text. Wharton on Neg., §§ 79-84; citing Cotton v. Wood, 8 C. B., N. S. 568; Carleton v. Franconia Iron etc Co., 99 Mass. 216; French v. Vining, 102 Mass. 132.

"An omission, therefore, may be a juridical cause, but it is not so because it is a positive though a negligent wrong." Wharton on Neg., § 83.

2. Wharton on Neg., §§ 87, 88; Cooley on Torts (105); Beven on Neg. 47-49; Dixon v. Bell, 5 M. & S. 198; Latt v. Booth, 3 C. & K. 292.

Dr. Wharton asserts positively that "neither an idiot nor a maniac can be a juridical cause. And the same reasoning applies to persons so young and inexperienced as to be unable to exercise an intelligent choice as to the subject matter." Wharton on Neg., § 88; citing Bartonshill Coal Co. v. Reid, 3 Macq. 266; Grizzle v. Frost, 3 F. & F. 622; Coombs v. New Bedford Cordage Co., 102 Mass. 572. Compare Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 121.

There are two theories of liability proposed: the one by Gross, J., who states the principle to be "that if the injury be done by the act of the party himself at the time, or he be the immediate cause of it, though it happen accidentally or by misfortune, yet he is answerable in trespass." Leame v. Bray, 3 East 593.

This theory would support the view that insane persons may be answerable for torts committed by them; it does not however say that such persons could be guilty of negligence. But a different theory is believed to be the correct one, viz: "No principle can be found or if found can be maintained, subjecting an individual to liability for an act done without fault on his part . . . All cases concede that an injury arising from inevitable accident, or which in law or reason, which is the same thing, from an act that ordinary human care and foresight are unable to guard against, is but the misfortune of the sufferer, and lays no ground for legal responsibility." NELSON, C. J., in Harvey v. Dunlop, Hill & D. Supp. (N. Y.) 193; quoted and approved in Parrot v. Wells, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 524.

Mr. Holmes, in common law, strongly inclines to the latter theory, and condemns the former as one never known to the common law at any time. He points out the test imposed by law as that already set forth (ante), saving from liability such as are wanting in mental faculty, deficiency in which is recognizable by all and implies an absolute inability to safeguard against the consequences of such deficiency. An infant is not required to know at his peril, nor a man of pronounced insanity to act at his peril. Holmes on the Common Law 82, 89; Beven on Neg. 15.

This theory is carried out in Morris v. Platt, 32 Conn. 75; Brown v. Kendall, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 292; Brown v. Collins, 53 N. H. 442; s. c., 16 Am. Rep. 372.

In those cases where intent is immaterial there is abundant authority for saying that insanity constitutes no defence. And sometimes the judges to give effect to the broader diction, that insanity cannot be pleaded in an action for tort, add that because, in tort the intent is not material. Krom v. Schoonmaker, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 647, 650. An illustration is a trespass by an insane person; it is uniformly held to be actionable. The reason whereof has been stated to be because no man shall be excused of a trespass except it may be judged utterly without his fault; as if a man by force take my hand and strike you. Weaver v. Ward, 1 Hobart 134. Now this explanation relegates the case not to the doctrine of immaterial intent, but to that of irresistible compulsion, wherein the act of God, of which insanity is an instance, excuses, so that on this question particular cases and legal doctrine are in flat conflict. Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 507, and authorities cited.

"Negligence may arise either from the nonperformance or malperformance of the duty imposed by law. Of course negligence cannot be attributed to an irresponsible person, as an idiot or a small child." GREEN, J., in Washington v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 17 W. Va. 190; s. c., 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 749, 753.

Unconscious Agents.—For reasons which are obvious unconscious agents cannot be held liable for injurious consequences of their conduct to others; they are clearly unable to exercise any degree of care in their situation. The case of Parrott v. Wells, known as the nitro-glycerine case, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 524, affords the best illustration of this principle. There, the defendants were expressmen engaged in carrying packages between New York and California. They received at New York a box containing nitro-glycerine to be carried to San Francisco. There was nothing in the appearance of the box tending to excite any suspicion of the character of its contents. It was received and carried in the usual course of business, no information being asked or given as to its contents. On arriving at San Francisco the contents seemed to be leaking and resembled sweet oil. The box was thereupon taken for examination, as was the custom when any package appeared to be damaged, to the premises occupied by the defendant which were leased from the plaintiff. While an employee of the defendants, by their direction, was attempting to open the box an explosion occurred, whereby the plaintiff's premises were greatly injured. The defendants had no knowledge of, and no reason to suspect, the dangerous character of the contents. They repaired the injuries to the premises immediately occupied by them, but in an action to recover damages for the injuries to the other portion of the premises, it was held that in such case there was no want of ordinary care on the part of defendant, since, being unconscious agents so far as the dangerous quality of the package was concerned, they could not be held liable for the same degree of care which would have been required had they been aware of its character. The court there reiterated the rule that the measure of care against accidents which one must take in order to avoid responsibility is that which a person of ordinary prudence and caution would use if his own interests were to be affected, and the whole risk were his own. See also Pearce v. Winsor, 2 Cliff. (U. S.) 18; Hoffman v. Tuolumne etc. Co., 10 Cal. 413; Todd v. Cochell, 17 Cal. 97; Harvey v. Dunlop, 1 Hill & D. Supp. (N. Y.) 193 (in which case, MR. JUSTICE NELSON observes that "No case or principle can be found, or if found can be maintained, subjecting an individual to liability for an act done without fault on his part"); Brown v. Kendall, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 295; Wharton on Negligence, §§ 87, 88.

Persons Under Duress.—Persons under actual duress clearly cannot be held liable for a want of proper care, since they are not free agents. They are no more a juridical cause than the spark of fire which is used to fire a field of grain; they are merely conditions of injury. Thus, in the case of Vandenburgh v. Truax, 14 Den. (N. Y.) 464, a person chased a boy with an axe, and the boy in his terror ran into plaintiff's store, where he did considerable injury. It was held that the person chasing the boy was liable for the injury done; that the boy was not, as he acted entirely under duress. Again, where by the defendant's negligence a horse was frightened so that he ran away, bringing its driver into collision with the plaintiff, the defendant was held liable, the driver of the horse being merely a condition of injury, since he acted under duress. Lowery v. Manhattan R. Co., 99 N. Y. 158. See also unsupported either by reason or authority.¹ The true rule is that an infant of such tender years as to be incapable of exercising any degree of care or forethought for his own safety or that

Lee v. Union R. Co., 12 R. I. 383; Shear. & Red. on Negligence, § 37.

The Roman law on this subject is plain: "Et ideo quærimus, si furiosus damnum dederit an legis Aquiliæ actio sit? Et Pegasus negavit; quæ enim in eo culpa sit, cum suæ mentis non sit? Et hoc est verissimum. Cessabit igitur Aquiliæ actio quemadmodum si quadrupes damnum dederit, Aquilia cessat, aut si tegula ceciderit. Sed et si infans damnum dederit, idem erit dicendum. Quod si in pubes id fecerit, Labeo ait, quia furti tenetur teneri et Aquilia eum; et hoc puto verum si sit jam injuriæ capax." Lex Aquiliæ, D, 9, 2, 5, § 2; Beven on Neg. 48.

1. The principle that infants and lunatics are liable for negligence is claimed by some text writers and cases to be supported in the following cases, most of them founded upon the case of Weaver v. Ward, 1 Hobart 134, viz: Haycraft v. Creasy, 2 East 104; Bac. Abr., Trespass, G; Id., Idiot, E; 2 Roll Abr. 547; 1 Hale P. C. 15; 1 Chitty's Pleading 87; Morse v. Crawford, 17 Vt. 499; Cross v. Kent, 32 Md. 581; Ward v. Conatser, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 64; Behrens v. McKensie, 23 Iowa 333. See also other cases in INSANITY, 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 144; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 121; McIntyre v. Sholty, 121 Ill. 660.

A close examination of these authorities will show that few of them may be relied on as showing that an insane person can be held liable for an injury committed by him, on the ground of negligence.

The first case, Weaver v. Ward, 1 Hobart 134, upon which nearly all the above are founded, did not all involve the issue as to a lunatic's liability for negligence, but the court merely observed by way of illustration that such persons were liable in trespass. Accepting, however, the statement of the court as more than a mere dictum, it still is no authority for the idea that insane persons may be held liable for negligence. Where a lunatic burns another person's barn, admitting that he may be made to pay for such damage as was done, it is on the principle of the equitable maxim that if one of two innocent persons must suffer the loss should fall upon him who is most in fault. Negligence is the want of proper care; how can a lunatic or other insane person be chargeable with a want of care? Would it not be something more than strange to attempt to say that a lunatic was guilty of negligence because he failed to exercise that degree of care which an ordinarily careful lunatic would have used?

Shearman and Redfield (Neg., § 121, and authorities cited) deny positively the doctrine stated by Dr. Wharton. "We are unable," they say, "to find any direct authority for holding infants responsible for the want of more care than might reasonably be expected of their age, but as no degree of care could be expected from violent lunatics, who have been nevertheless held civilly liable for their trespasses, there would not seem to be any sound reason for making such a distinction." The authority cited in the case of Krom v. Schroommaker, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 647, which decides that a lunatic may be sued for injury done to another "because the intent with which the act is done is not material." But this case formulates a special rule of damages for the lunatic in which the intent is material. The court there says that, "The damages are graduated by the intent of the person committing the injury; but in respect of the lunatic, as he has properly no will, it follows that the only proper measure of damages in an action against him for a wrong is the mere compensation of the party injured." None of the cases cited by them (i. e., by Shear. & Red.), as to the infant's liability, are the least in point since in all those cases there was a power, though possibly an imperfect power, of willing. See Beven on Neg. 47, 48.

Again these authors (Shear. & Red., § 3) declare that "negligence constituting a cause of civil action, is such an omission, by a responsible person, to use that degree of care, diligence and skill which it was his legal duty to use," etc. What degree of care, diligence and skill is it the legal duty of a lunatic to use? How then can it of others cannot be guilty of negligence.¹ If he has an estate, and his guardians, agents or servants are guilty of negligence in the use of his property, whereby injury is caused, it is probable that their capacity may be imputed to him and he be held responsible in his estate on the principle qui facit per alium facit per se.² But the moment an infant becomes capable of any degree of care, however slight, he is required to use that care of which his age and capacity make him capable, and unless he does exercise care proportioned to his age and capacity he will be chargeable with negligence and become responsible for injuries resulting from a failure on his part to exercise such care as he is capable of.³ In the case of absolute idiots, and lunatics entirely devoid of reason, be maintained (if their definition is correct) that a lunatic is capable of negligence in its legal signification. Moreover they observe (p. 210, vol. 1) that no degree of care can be expected of violent lunatics. See Bishop on Non-Contract Law, for additional criticisms on the holding of these authorities, §§ 505-516.

1. Wharton on Neg., § 88.

All the cases holding infants liable are cases where the infant had arrived at an age where he was possessed of some discretion, and therefore capable of using a certain degree of care. See INFANTS, 10 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 668, 669.

In the case of Washington etc. R. Co. v. Gladmon, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 401, HUNT, J., observes: "Of an infant of tender years less discretion is required, (i. e., than of an adult), and the degree depends upon his age and knowledge. Of a child of three years of age less caution would be required than of one of seven, and of a child of seven less than one of twelve or fifteen." By gradation, then, we should arrive at the principle that when of very tender years no care can be required of them. It is conceded that a child of such tender years as to be incapable of understanding cannot be guilty of contributory negligence. Contributory negligence is, however, nothing more than pure negligence, not dependent on any different rule of law, but merely limiting the general question of negligence to the enquiry as to which of two persons its final impulse should be imputed. It would be strange to insist that such a person could be guilty of negligence and yet incapable of being contributory negligent. Beven on Neg. 137; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am & Eng. Encyc. of Law 42, et seq.; Donohoe v. Wabash etc. R. Co., 83 Mo. 560; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 594; Erie etc. R. Co. v. Schuster, 113 Pa. St. 412; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 471; 2 Thompson on Neg. 1180, § 3; Beach on Contrib. Neg. 120.

2. Negligent Use of Lunatic's Property by Agents.—The lunatic and not his guardian is the owner of his real estate, and he is therefore liable for all injuries caused by a defective condition of it, unless it is exclusively under control of a tenant. Morain v. Devlin, 132 Mass. 87; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 423; Harding v. Larned, 4 Allen (Mass.) 426; Harding v. Weld, 128 Mass. 587.

The lunatic is liable in such cases even though the defective condition of the premises was not caused by his own neglect, but by that of persons acting in his own behalf or under contract with him. Cases supra. See also Looney v. McLean, 129 Mass. 33; Gorham v. Gross, 125 Mass. 232; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 224; Bartlett v. Boston Gas Co., 117 Mass. 533; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 421.

"There is no reason or precedent for holding that a lunatic, having the benefits, is exempt from the responsibilities of real estate." GRAY, J., in Morain v. Devlin, 132 Mass. 87; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 423.

The relative liability of landlord and tenant is of course to be remembered. See post, subtit. PARTIES TO THE ACTION.

What is true of lunatics as to injuries caused from defective condition of their property is also true of infants. See Cooley on Torts (105-107); INFANTS, 10 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 668, 669; McCoon v. Smith, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 147.

3. Bishop on Non-Contract Law, §§ 563, et seq.; Cooley on Torts (103-6); Bishop on Contracts, § 895; Pollock on the same rules apply as in the case of infants so young as to be incapable of any care,¹ but a person only partially idiotic or insane and capable of some degree of rational care and forethought may be held guilty of negligence for inflicting an injury by a failure to exercise the degree of care and forethought of which he is capable.² Thus the mental status and capacity must be constantly considered in the case of infants, idiots and lunatics when charged with negligence, and they should be held responsible or wholly freed from responsibility according to their capacity for exercising some care or their total want of such capacity.³ When a person ceases to be an infant, and is not an idiot or lunatic, he Torts 46, 47; Conklin v. Thompson, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 218 (boy of 14 throwing squib); Fish v. Ferris, 5 Duer (N. Y.) 49 (boy over-driving horse; here the boy being capable of driving a horse was certainly capable of exercising a degree of care); Way v. Powers, 57 Vt. 135; Baker v. Morris, 33 Kan. 580; Huchting v. Engel, 17 Wis. 230 (child of 7 years injuring flowers); School District v. Bragdon, 23 N. H. 507; Peterson v. Haffner, 59 Ind. 130; s. c., 26 Am. Rep. 81, note; Bullock v. Babcock, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 391; Harvey v. Dunlop, Hill & D. Supp. (N. Y.) 193; Barnard v. Haggis, 14 C. B., N. S. 45; Campbell v. Stakes, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 138.

SANFORD, J., in Neal v. Gillett, 23 Conn. 437, 442, where infants of from 13 to 18 years of age were sued for negligently frightening a horse, causing him to run away, observes: "The youngest of these children was 13 years of age, and in the absence of all proof to the contrary, must be presumed to have been emancipated from the dominion of mere childish instincts; and we think it would be mischievous to hold that persons of the age of thirteen years are, on account of their youth alone, absolved from the obligation to exercise their rights with ordinary care. It may not be easy to fix upon the exact age when childish instincts and thoughtlessness shall cease to be an excuse for conduct which in an adult would be considered and treated as a want of ordinary care; but it is sufficient for the determination of this point that these defendants had clearly passed that age." See also Cooley on Torts (105), et seq.

1. Bishop on Non-Contract Law, §§ 505-510; Id., § 516. See also notes preceding. Compare Cooley on Torts (99), and cases cited.

No person is held liable where there is no fault on his part, e. g., where an injury was unavoidable. Brown v. Kendall, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 292; Alderson v. Waistell, 7 C. & K. 358 (in the first case, defendant in parting fighting dogs accidentally struck plaintiff). It would seem to us, therefore, that on similar grounds a lunatic should be held not liable. Our idea follows that of Mr. Sedgwick, who maintains that, "in the case of a compos mentis, although the intent be not decisive, still the act punished is that of a party competent to foresee and guard against the consequences of his conduct. An inevitable accident has always been held an excuse. In the case of a lunatic, it may be urged both that no good policy requires the interposition of the law, and that the act belongs to that class of cases which may well be termed inevitable accident." Sedgwick on Damages 455. See also Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 507.

2. Washington etc. R. Co. v. Gladmon, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 401; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, §§ 505, et seq.; Cross v. Andrews, 2 Cro. Eliz. 622; Pollock on Torts 47; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 42, et seq.

3. Cooley on Torts (105), where it is said that while an infant is liable generally for his torts springing from negligence, the question of actual maturity and capacity is important, not only as it may bear upon the question whether negligence actually existed, but also as it may guide in determining whether the plaintiff in the particular transaction was not himself chargeable with fault. See also Neal v. Gillett, 23 Conn. 437; Dowling v. Allen, 88 Mo. 293; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 43, 44, where numerous authorities are collated.

is presumed by law to be capable of ordinary care and the law will not consider the relative capacity of different individuals who have reached such status, but requires of them all the care that would be exercised by an ordinarily careful and prudent person under given conditions and circumstances.¹ And this rule is applicable to persons who, while voluntarily intoxicated, are guilty of a want of ordinary care. In such cases they are held responsible for the results of such want of ordinary care on the principle that their want of capacity being voluntary they cannot afterward escape liability because of a temporary incapacity to exercise care, resulting from their own wilful misconduct in becoming intoxicated.²

7. Person to Whom Duty Due.—In order to maintain an action for a negligent injury it must appear that there was a legal duty due from the person inflicting the injury to the person on whom

All that is required of such persons is that they exercise the care and prudence proportioned to their capacity. Robinson v. Cone, 22 Vt. 213; s. c., 2 Thompson on Neg. 1129.

1. See Holland's Jurisprudence (4th ed.) 270-278; Pollock on Torts 358.

Thus it cannot be said that a less degree of care is required of a woman than of a man. Michigan etc. R. Co. v. Hasenmeyer, 48 Mich. 205; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 470; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59.

2. Negligence of Persons Drunken.—Bishop on Non-Contract Law, §§ 511-516; 1 Bishop's Crim. Law, §§ 397, 416; Cooley on Torts (114); Cassady v. Magher, 85 Ind. 228 (defendant when sued for driving into carriage of a licensed liquor dealer, claimed in defence that plaintiff sold him intoxicating liquors which incapacitated him from driving properly, but the defence was held not available); Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Sullivan, 63 Ill. 293; Clegghorn v. New York etc. R. Co., 56 N. Y. 44; Sullivan v. Murphy, 2 Miles (Pa.) 298; Barbee v. Reese, 60 Miss. 906; Reed v. Harper, 25 Iowa 87; McKee v. Ingall, 5 Ill. 30. Compare Engleken v. Hilger, 43 Iowa 563; Kearney v. Fitzgerald, 43 Iowa 580.

Drunkenness does not excuse contributory negligence; indeed it tends to show such negligence. Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 513; Alger v. Lowell, 3 Allen (Mass.) 402; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Cragin, 71 Ill. 177; Weltoy v. Indianapolis etc. R. Co., 105 Ind. 55; Hubbard v. Mason City, 60 Iowa 400; Monk v. New Utrecht, 104 N. Y. 552; East Tennessee etc. R. Co. v. Winters, 85 Tenn. 240.

Doctrine of This Section Restated.—

The conclusions arrived at in the foregoing discussion as to the legally responsible person are these:

(1) That lunatics and other persons devoid of reason (including infants too young to understand), since they cannot be required to exercise any care, cannot be guilty of negligence. Whether a person injured by such persons could recover for the pecuniary loss sustained, is a question of dispute, the slight weight of authority being in favor of such recovery; but where there is recovery it is not on the ground of negligence but rather on the ground afforded by the equitable maxim that where one of two innocent persons must suffer, the loss must fall upon him who is most in fault. Negligence is conceded to be a want of care (Beven, Shear. & Red., WILLES, J. and other authorities); how then can it be attempted to charge an insane person with a want of care when it was absolutely an impossibility for him to exercise any care at all?

(2) That persons only partially devoid of reason, such as lunatics with lucid intervals, semi-idiot, mono-maniacs, and children of various ages, being capable of exercising some care, are held chargeable for a failure to exercise that care of which they were capable.

(3) That persons drunken, having brought upon themselves the inability to use care cannot be excused for a failure to exercise care and the standard of ordinary care as to them is not altered because of their condition.

(4) That as between persons not it was inflicted, and that such duty was violated by a want of ordinary care on the part of the defendant.¹ It is not sufficient that there be a general duty to the public which is violated, but in all civil cases the right to enforce such duty must reside in the individual injured because of a duty due him from his injurer, or he cannot recover.² The duty itself arises out of the various relationships of life, and varies in obligation under different circumstances. In one case the duty is high and imperative, in another it is of imperfect obligation. Thus it may be dependent on a mere licence to enter upon land or the bare obligation to avoid inflicting a wilful injury upon a trespasser, while upon the other hand, it may be a duty to care for the safety of a specially invited guest or of a passenger for hire.³ In every case it is a duty implied by law as due from one person to another, and it may be due to an infant or lunatic as well as to a normal person afflicted mentally and above the age of infancy, the law makes no distinction. A man of dull mind is chargeable with the same degree of care as one with a brilliant intellect; the reason being that an attempt to make such distinction would not only be futile but would bring about inextricable confusion.

1. Cooley on Torts (659, 660); Kahl v. Love, 37 N. J. L. 5; 111 Rights, Remedies and Practice (Lawson), § 1149, et seq.; Cole v. McKey, 66 Wis. 500; Baker v. Byrne, 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 438; Flint etc. R. Co. v. Stark, 38 Mich. 714; Eisenberg v. Missouri etc. R. Co., 33 Mo. App. 85; Evansville etc. R. Co. v. Griffin, 100 Ind. 221; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 783; Galveston City Co. v. Hewitt, 67 Tex. 473; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 446, et seq.

2. Cooley on Torts (660); Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 446; Winterbottom v. Lord Derby, L. R., 2 Ex. 322; 1 Thompson on Neg. 341; Kessell v. Butler, 53 N. Y. 612; Bradbee v. Christ's Hospital, 4 Mann. & Gr. 714; 5 Scott N. R. 79; Quincy Canal Co. v. Newcomb, 7 Met. (Mass.) 276; Sohn v. Cambern, 106 Ind. 302; post, subtit. III, 9, DAMAGE AN ESSENTIAL ELEMENT.

3. A private citizen owes no duty to those who come on his premises by licence merely and for their own convenience, or who are trespassers, to keep his premises in such condition that they shall not be injured. In entering on his property uninvited they assume all risks. Eisenberg v. Missouri etc. R. Co., 33 Mo. App. 85; Evansville etc. R. Co. v. Griffin, 100

Ind. 221; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 783; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. State, 62 Md. 479; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 233; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 83; Morgan v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 19 Blatchf. (U. S.) 239; CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 742; Galligan v. Metacommet Mfg. Co., 143 Mass. 527; Hargreaves v. Deacon, 25 Mich. 1; Zoebisich v. Tarbell, 10 Allen (Mass.) 385; s. c., 87 Am. Dec. 660, note; Larmore v. Crown Point Iron Co., 101 N. Y. 391.

Thus a person who goes upon the land of another, without invitation, to secure employment from the owner of the land, is not entitled to indemnity from such owner for an injury happening from the operation of a defective machine on the premises, not obviously dangerous, which he passes in the course of his journey. Although it may be shown that the owner might have ascertained the defect by the exercise of reasonable care, yet he cannot be held liable since he owes no legal duty to a stranger so coming upon his premises, which requires him to keep the machinery in repair. Larmore v. Crown Point Iron Co., 10 N. Y. 391; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 718.

Liability to a Licensee.—Where a person hoping to find a certain surgeon on board a foreign ship went aboard without objection being made, and on making enquiry was directed to a room beyond a certain passage pointed out, he went forward accordingly and was struck by a bag of flour being lowered through a hatch. It was held that being a mere licensee, if not a trespasser, he could not recover of the owner of the vessel for the injuries thus sustained. Metcalf v. Cunard Steamship Co., 147 Mass. 66.

So, where a person entered a railroad station in the evening to take a train and, after finding that the last train had gone, remained therein for his own convenience several minutes longer, during which the station master, the usual closing time having arrived, puts out the lights, he becomes at most a mere licensee, and cannot recover for injuries sustained in leaving the station by reason of the extinguishment of the lights. Heinlein v. Boston R. Co., 147 Mass. 136; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 500.

Plaintiff's intestate, an adult, was crossing defendant's land without right, except that persons with defendant's knowledge were in the habit of constantly crossing it, when he fell into a pool of water, over which a crust had so formed that it resembled dry land, and was drowned. Held, that an action against defendant was not maintainable. Union Stock Yards etc. Co. v. Rourke, 10 Ill. App. 474. See also as to licences, Reardon v. Thompson, 149 Mass. 267; Eisenberg v. Missouri etc. R. Co., 33 Mo. App. 85.

Trespassers.—The plaintiff, while a trespasser, entered an abandoned and decaying freight house, and was injured by a piece of the building being blown against him in a sudden storm. Held, that he could not recover of the company, no duty being due him from them. Lary v. Cleveland etc. R. Co., 78 Ind. 323; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 572; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 398; Trazer v. South and North Ala. R. Co., 81 Ala. 185.

One is under no duty to a mere trespasser to keep his premises safe, though the latter is an infant. Frost v. Eastern R. Co., 64 N. H. 220.

Meaning of licensee as used in this connection is one who is on premises by sufferance; closely allied to a trespasser. Where a person has a legal licence, e. g., one granted upon a stipulated rent per month, as in case of licence to use wharves he is more than a mere licensee as here intended and a higher duty is owing him. In such case, however, the person licensed is rather to be regarded as a tenant. See Allegheny v. Campbell, 107 Pa. St. 530.

Thus, where one merely suffers others to cross his land, without express or implied permission, he is not bound to keep the premises free from pitfalls or obstructions. Evansville etc. R. Co. v. Griffin, 100 Ind. 221; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 783.

Intermeddlers.—Likewise, where a complaint against a railroad company, to recover for personal injury showed that the plaintiff who was casually passing, at the request of an employee of the defendant, got upon a car that was moving slowly upon a switch, and applied the brakes to stop it, and while so engaged other servants of the defendant carelessly caused other cars of the defendant to collide violently with that which the plaintiff was upon, by reason of which the injury occurred, it was held that the plaintiff must be regarded as a mere intermeddler, to whom the defendant owed no duty, either as employee, passenger, or traveller on an intersecting highway, and that the complaint was bad on demurrer. Everhart v. Terre Haute etc. R. Co., 78 Ind. 292; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 599.

As to one who, without right, is walking on a railroad right of way, the company owes no duty to provide a flagman at a street crossing. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Eininger, 114 Ill. 79.

In Case of Persons Invited.—But where the plaintiff comes upon defendant's premises on an invitation from defendant, there is a duty owing to the plaintiff that such premises shall be in such condition as that he shall not be injured by them. Heaven v. Pender, 11 Q. B. Div. 503 (leading case); Evansville etc. R. Co. v. Griffin, 100 Ind. 221; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 783; Campbell on Neg., §§ 43, 44; Lardin v. St. Catherine Dock Co., L. R., 3 C. P. 26; CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 739, 742. See also RAILWAY COMPANIES.

Thus the proprietor of a hall to which the public is invited is bound to use ordinary care and diligence to put and keep the hall in a reasonably safe condition for persons attending in pursuance of such invitation; and if he neglects his duty in this respect, so that the hall is in fact unsafe, his knowledge or ignorance of the defect is immaterial. Currier v. Boston Music Hall, 135 Mass. 414.

If a structure which defendants invite the public to use is defectively or carelessly constructed, whereby a person lawfully upon it is injured, the defendants will be liable in damages notwithstanding they had no knowledge of its defective condition, and it had been erected by a competent person. Lingmore v. Great Western etc. R. Co., 35 L. J., C. P. 135. See also Saunders on Negligence 50; Francis v. Cockrell, L. R., 5 Q. B. 184; s. c., 39 L. J., Q. B. 113.

Invitation Implied.—The invitation need not be expressed but is in many cases to be implied, particularly in case of those who hold themselves out as willing to serve the general public in a certain capacity.

Thus one who occupies a building for business purposes is liable for its reasonably safe condition to all who enter it in the course of the ordinary business transactions there. Welch v. McAllister, 15 Mo. App. 492.

A licence to come upon one's premises in certain cases, especially if in the licensor's interest, may be regarded as an implied invitation, and thereby impose upon him the duty to warn those who come, of any danger in coming of which he knows or ought to know and they do not. Powers v. Harlow, 53 Mich. 507; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 157.

By virtue of the principle just stated a railroad company owes a duty to those who come upon its premises, to meet a friend or see him depart, and is liable for injuries caused by a defect in such premises. Texas etc. R. Co. v. Best, 66 Tex. 116; Hamilton v. Texas etc. R. Co., 64 Tex. 251; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 756; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 336.

Similarly a railroad company is liable for injuries sustained by one who, waiting at the depot in the night to meet a train on which he expects his wife to arrive, falls into a hole on the grounds while in search of a place to urinate, the company having provided no accommodations. McKone v. Michigan etc. R. Co., 51 Mich. 601; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 596; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 29.

One who keeps a public house (i. e., an inn or hotel) extends an implied invitation to all to come on his premises, and is therefore liable for injuries sustained in consequence of the bad condition of such premises. Oxford v. Prior, C. P., 14 Week. Rep. 611; INNS AND INN KEEPERS, 10 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

A coal merchant, furnishing tackle for use by his customers in unloading coal from the barge in which it is delivered, is liable to a servant of the customer for personal injuries sustained by reason of a defect in the tackle.

Hayes v. Philadelphia etc. Iron Co., 150 Mass. 457.

See also wharf owners and their agents, so long as they keep the wharf open and occupied, or rented for the purpose of loading and dispatching vessels, are bound to all whom the proffered facilities bring there to use due care to keep the wharf and approaches in good condition. Campbell v. Portland Sugar Co., 62 Me. 552; s. c., 16 Am. Rep. 503; S. P. Smith v. London etc. Dock Co., L. R., 3 C. P. 326.

If a religious society gives notice of a meeting to be held at its house of worship, and invites the members of other societies to attend, a member of a church so invited, while on the land of the society, is not a mere licensee, and may maintain an action against the society for a personal injury sustained while in the exercise of due care, from the dangerous condition of the defendant's premises. Davis v. Central Congregational Soc., 129 Mass. 367; 37 Am. Rep. 368. Other cases, see White v. France, 2 C. P. Div. 318; Campbell on Neg., §§ 43, 44; Conrad v. Clauve, 93 Ind. 476; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 388 (fair-grounds).

Meaning of Invitation.—"Invitation, in the technical sense of the word as employed in this class of cases, differs from invitation in the ordinary sense—implying the relation between host and guest. In the case of host and guest, it would be thought hard that the hospitality of the former should expose him to the responsibilities implied by business relations. The guest must take the premises as he finds them, with every risk owing to their disrepair; although the host is bound to warn his guest of any concealed danger upon the premises known to himself." Campbell on Law of Neg., § 44; Smithcote v. Stanley, 1 Hurls. & N. (Eng.) 247.

Distinction Between Implied Invitation and a Licence—There is a distinction to be noticed between a mere licence and an implied invitation. In the first case, if there is any duty at all owing, it is very slight; in the second, there is a higher and assured duty. This subject is discussed in Campbell on Neg., §§ 43, 44. The distinction is often difficult to be made. The principle seems to be that an invitation may be implied where there is a common interest or mutual advantage; while only a licence is inferred where the object is mere pleasure, or the benefit of the or a corporation.¹ What the implied duty is must be determined in each particular case from the facts and circumstances, but in every case there must be some person to whom it is due and who has been injured by its nonobservance or no action can be sustained.²

8. The Legal Duty.—There can be no case of the negligent injury of one person by another in the absence of a legal duty due from the person inflicting the injury to the person on whom it is inflicted.³ It must be a duty implied by law, although it party using it. Thus a party at a railroad station is there under an implied invitation, since his presence there is for the mutual benefit of himself and the railroad company. See Powers v. Harlow, 53 Mich. 507; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 154; Campbell on Law of Neg., § 44.

An implied invitation has been inferred in the following cases: Nicholson v. Lancashire etc. R. Co., 34 L. J. Exch. 84; Indermaur v. James, L. R., 1 C. P. 274; 2 C. P. 311; Smith v. London etc. Co., L. R., 3 C. P. 326; Holmes v. N. E. R. Co., L. R., 4 Ex. 254; 6 Ex. 123; Chapman v. Rothwell, 1 El. Bl. & El. 168 (a); Smith v. Steele, L. R., 10 Q. B. 125 (pilot injured by negligence of defendant's crew); Wright v. L. etc. R. Co., L. R., 10 Q. B. 298; Watkins v. G. W. R. Co., C. P. Div. 25 Week. Rep. 905. See also supra, note, INVITATION IMPLIED.

A mere licence has been inferred in these cases, viz: Balch v. Smith, 7 H. & N. 736; s. c., 31 L. J. Ex. 201; Sullivan v. Waters, 14 Irish C. L. R. 460; Gantret v. Edgerton, L. R., 2 C. R. 371; Metcalf v. Cunard Steamship Co., 147 Mass. 66. See also supra, note, LIABILITY TO LICENSEES.

1. See Holland's Jurisprudence (4th ed.) 277-9; Cooley on Torts (660); CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 42; ante, subtit. III, 6, A LEGALLY RESPONSIBLE PERSON.

2. Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 446; Kahl v. Love, 37 N. J. L. 5; Pollock on Torts 325.

3. O'Callaghan v. Cronan, 121 Mass. 114; Cooley on Torts 60; Kerwhacher v. Cleveland etc. R. Co., 3 Ohio St. 188; Wharton on Neg., §§ 3, 24; Ferguson v. Earl of Kinnoul, 9 Cl. & F. 289 (Lord Brougham); Rich v. New York etc. R. Co., 87 N. Y. 382; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 594; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 9; Kahl v. Love, 37 N. J. L. 5; Cooley on Torts 659-660; Elliott v. Hall, L. R., 15 Q. B. Div. 315; Heaven v. Pender, L. R., 11 Q. B. Div. 503; Flint etc. R. Co. v. Stark, 38 Mich. 714; Warner v. Railroad Co., 6 Phila. (Pa.) 537; Miller v. Woodhead, 104 N. Y. 471; Tourtellot v. Rosebrook, 11 Met. (Mass.) 460; Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raymond 909; Mahan v. Brown, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 261.

"Actionable negligence exists only when the party, whose negligence occasions the loss owes a duty, arising from contract or otherwise, to the person sustaining such loss." Kahl v. Love, 37 N. J. L. 5.

To constitute negligence there must be a disregard of some duty or rule of conduct prescribed beforehand or arising so manifestly from the facts as to leave no doubt of its existence. Warner v. Railroad Co., 6 Phila. (Pa.) 537.

A knowledge of his duty is presumed against every man; therefore, when a duty is imposed upon a person by law, he cannot be allowed to prove his ignorance of it. Sherman v. Western etc. Co., 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 150.

In Mayor etc. of Albany v. Cunliff, 2 N. Y. 165, CADY, J., observes: "Suppose that a party on a public road comes to a narrow and deep stream which he cannot cross without a bridge, and he immediately goes to work and makes a bridge, over which he with his horse and wagon passes, and shortly afterward another traveller attempts to pass over with a span of horses and a wagon, but unfortunately the bridge breaks down and both his horses are drowned—has he a remedy against the man who built the bridge? He has not, because the law imposed no duty on him to build it. Therefore, in every action against a corporation for negligence in omitting to repair a bridge, the plaintiff must first show that the corporation owed him a duty as one of the general public to repair the bridge." Peck v. Batavia, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 634.

may arise out of contract.¹ It exists, however, independent of the contract in all cases where an action can be maintained in tort for negligent injuries, even though the injury may have grown out of a breach of contract. The distinction is this: when injuries result from breaches of contract of such character that only an action on the contract can be maintained, the action is not one sounding in tort, but rests entirely on the conventional duty created by the contract, and but for the contract there would be no right of action for such an injury, and consequently no duty not to do the thing causing it.² But when the act or omission causing an injury is in itself a breach of duty, whether a contract exists or not—i. e., a tort—the duty is one implied by law, and when such a wrong is committed by one party to a contract, resulting in injury to the other party thereto, it is said that the injured party may waive the contract and sue in tort upon the breach of the implied duty, the existence of the contract between the parties being mere matter of inducement to show the existence of a relationship out of which the implied duty grew.³ This distinction is well illustrated by cases arising out of the injury of passengers, who are being carried for hire, by the negligence of the carrier. In such cases if the injured passenger sue upon the contract, his recovery is limited to those damages

1. Holland's Jurisprudence (4th ed.) 73; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, §§ 132, 133; Boyden v. Burke, 14 How. (U. S.) 575-583.

No duty is considered in law except a legal duty, and all legal duties exist from implication of law. A contract merely creates this implication. See Wharton on Neg., § 24 (definition of legal duty); Holland's Jurisprudence (4th ed.) 73.

2. Cooley on Torts 2, 3; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, §§ 74, 75, 76; Id., § 79; Clark v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 64 Mo. 440; Ray v. Tubbs, 50 Vt. 688; Cooley on Torts (106), et seq.; Brown v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 54 Wis. 342; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 41; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 444; Hobbs v. London & Southwestern R. Co., L. R., 10 Q. B. 111; Candee v. Western Union Tel. Co., 34 Wis. 479; s. c., 17 Am. Rep. 452; Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Exch. 341; Craker v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 36 Wis. 657; s. c., 17 Am. Rep. 504.

3. Cooley on Torts (2nd ed.) 2, 3; Id. 90; Rich v. New York etc. R. Co., 87 N. Y. 382; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 594; Bell v. Cummings, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 275 (using hired slave for other purpose than as agreed upon in the contract of hiring—such use constituted a tort arising out of a breach of contract);

Lane v. Cameron, 38 Wis. 603 (using hired horse otherwise than agreed upon—tort); Clark v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 64 Mo. 440; Vanleer v. Fain, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 104 (same as Bell v. Cummings, supra); Horsely v. Branch, 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 208; Story on Bailments, § 397; O'Callaghan v. Cronan, 121 Mass. 114; Mahan v. Brown, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 261; Kerwhacker v. Cleveland etc. R. Co., 3 Ohio St. 188; Dean v. McLean, 48 Vt. 412; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 130; Whittaker v. Collins, 34 Minn. 299.

The language of FINCH, J., in Rich v. New York etc. R. Co., 87 N. Y. 382, is very applicable here: "We have been unable to find any accurate and perfect definition of a tort. Between actions plainly ex contractu and ex delicto there exists what has been termed a border land where the lines of distinction are shadowy and obscure, and the tort and the contract become so nearly coincident as to make their practical separation somewhat difficult." In such cases the tort is dependent upon, while it is at the same time independent of, the contract; for if the latter imposes a legal duty upon a person, the neglect of that duty may constitute a tort founded upon contract. See also Cooley on Torts (2nd ed.) 3, note.

proximately caused by the breach of contract alone.¹ But if he sue upon the tort, merely setting up the contract to show the relationship, he recovers for the breach of the implied duty of the carrier, and his damages are fully compensatory for all the injuries that may have followed in natural sequence from the negligence of the carrier.²

A legal duty has been well defined by Dr. Wharton as "that which the law requires to be done or forborne to a determinate person or to the public at large, and' is correlative to a right vested in such determinate person or in the public."³ The obligation involved is not a moral obligation, but it is the obligation imposed on every member of society by law so to conduct himself and use his property as not to injure others: Sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas. The duty is not an absolute one; the

1. There are, in certain relations, duties imposed by law, a failure to perform which is regarded as a tort, though the relations themselves may be formed by contract covering the same ground. The case of common carriers furnishes a conspicuous illustration. The law requires a carrier to carry with impartiality and safety for all those who offer, and if he fails he is charged with a tort. When goods are delivered to be carried there is also a contract, express or by operation of law, that he will carry with impartiality and safety; and if he fails there is a breach of contract. So that for the breach of the general duty imposed by law because of the relation, one form of action may be brought, and for the breach of contract another form of action may be brought. Cooley on Torts (91) (2nd ed.) 106; Courtenay v. Earle, 10 C. B. 83 (JERVIS, Ch. J.); Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Kemp, 61 Md. 619 (passenger may sue in contract or in tort); Nevin v. Pullman Car Co., 106 Ill. 222; Austin v. Great Western R. Co., L. R., 2 I. B. 442; Ames v. Union R. Co., 117 Mass. 541. See also CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 738; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 74; Clark v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 64 Mo. 440. Compare Walsh v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 42 Wis. 23.

In suing upon contract for a breach of duty damages can be recovered only for such consequences as were the direct result of such breach, and were within the contemplation of the parties at the time of the formation of the contract. 1 Suth. on Dam. 74; Warwick v. Hutchinson, 45 N. J. L. 61; Weston

v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 54 Me. 376; DAMAGES, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 13; Walsh v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 42 Wis. 23.

2. Brown v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 54 Wis. 342; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 41; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 444; Craker v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 36 Wis. 657; s. c., 17 Am. Rep. 504; Cooley on Torts 3, et seq.

In actions ex delicto for a breach of duty, whether arising out of contract or not, damages may be recovered not merely for all the direct consequences, but for such indirect results as might reasonably be expected to ensue; i. e., for all the natural consequences of the wrongful act. Weston v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 54 Me. 376; Warwick v. Hutchinson, 45 N. J. L. 61; Greenleaf on Ev., §§ 254-256; Cooper v. Young, 22 Ga. 269; DAMAGES, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 6; Suth. on Dam., § 74, et seq.

3. Definition of Legal Duty.—Wharton on Negligence, § 24, citing Ferguson v. Earl of Kinnoul, 9 Cl. & F. 289; Brown v. Bowman, 11 Cl. & F. 44.

Every right whether moral or legal implies the active or passive furtherance by others of the wishes of the party having the right.

Wherever one is entitled to such furtherance on the part of others, such furtherance on their part is said to be their "duty."

Where such furtherance is merely expected by the public opinion of the society in which they live, it is their "moral duty."

Where it will be enforced by the power of the State to which they are amenable, it is their "legal duty." Holland's Jurisprudence (4th ed.) 73.

law only requires that one exercise ordinary care, according to the circumstances, in order to perform it.¹

This duty, incumbent upon persons in all relations, may be considered as arising from three sources,² namely :

1. A duty may be general and owing to everybody as it may be particular and owing to a single person only, by reason of his peculiar position. In every case the person injured must point out the duty which is supposed to have been neglected and how it arose. Cooley on Torts (2nd ed.) (660) 790, 791.

Ordinary Care.—Wherever an absolute duty is imposed the question ceases to be one of negligence. See Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 9; Pennsylvania etc. Co. v. Graham, 63 Pa. St. 290; Hay v. Cohoes Co., 2 N. Y. 159; Couch v. Steel, 3 El. & B. 400 (failure to keep medicines on board ship as is required by statute). See also Barker v. Byre, 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 438; Richards v. Schleusener, 41 Minn. 49.

"Wherever one person is by circumstances placed in such a position with regard to another that everyone of ordinary sense who did think, would at once recognize that if he did not use ordinary care and skill in his own conduct with regard to those circumstances, he would cause danger of injury to the person or property of the other, a duty arises to use ordinary care and skill to avoid such danger." BRETT, J., in Heaven v. Pender, L. R., 11 I. B. 506; Holland's Jurisprudence, §§ 96, 97.

In Boston Beef Packing Co. v. Stevens, 12 Fed. Rep. 279, the court has to say: "Whoever for his own advantage authorizes his property to be used by another in such a manner as to endanger and injure unnecessarily the property or rights of another, is answerable for the consequences."

Contagious Disease.—In the case of Smith v. Baker, the defendant took his children while they were suffering from whooping cough, a contagious disease, to plaintiff's boarding house to board. The plaintiff's child and the children of the other boarders contracted the disease, whereby she was put to expense and labor in consequence of her child's sickness, and sustained pecuniary loss by reason of boarders being kept away. The defendant was held liable for the damages caused. Here was the existence of a duty on the part of the defendant so to act as not to injure others, and a failure to observe proper care in order to carry out the duty rendered him liable for negligence. Smith v. Baker, 20 Fed. Rep. 709; s. c., 19 Cent. L. J. 173. See also Span v. Ely, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 256; Aaron v. Broiles, 64 Tex. 316; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 764.

No Unreasonable Duty.—The duty which the law requires is no unreasonable one. Thus a railroad company is not liable for damage caused by sparks from its engine if it has made use of all the means known to science to prevent their escape and kept a reasonable watch upon the track, even though it might have been possible to prevent the injury by employing an army of men. Rood v. New York etc. R. Co., 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 80; Vaughn v. Taff Vale R. Co., 5 H. & W. (Eng.) 679.

So where a water supply company had constructed its works upon the best system known, and kept them in good order for many years, at the end of which time a frost of unprecedented severity caused the pipe to burst, it was held that the company was not liable for injuries caused thereby. Blythe v. Birmingham Water Co., 11 Exch. 781. See also Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Trotter, 61 Miss. 417; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 159; Parrott v. Wells, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 524; Bizzle v. Booker, 16 Ark. 308; Taylor v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 9 Bosw. (N. Y.) 369; Louisville City Co. v. Weams, 80 Ky. 420; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 11.

A city ordinance required that locomotives passing through the city should have a lookout in a certain position. Owing to changes in the plan of engines this became impracticable, and it was therefore held that a railroad was, under the circumstances, not chargeable with negligence in not complying with the ordinance. Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Mali, 66 Md. 53; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 628. Compare, however, Neier v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 12 Mo. App. 35.

2. It is laid down by Mr. Smith in his excellent work on negligence thus: "Duties may arise out of express con-

(a) From Implication of Law.—In every undertaking there arises by implication of law certain rights and duties: the duty incumbent upon the party engaging in the undertaking is to so conduct it that no injury will result to others. Thus, a railway corporation, in assuming to provide means of transportation and travel, is under an implied duty to provide such means as shall be safe and shall not cause injury to the public.¹ So, property owners, since they enjoy the benefits accompanying ownership of property, are charged with the duty of seeing that no one is injured by their negligent use or care of it.² And, again, upon tracts between parties, or may be imposed by law. It is not proposed in the present treatise to deal with the breach of those duties, which are expressly or impliedly provided for by the nature or terms of the contract, partly because the field so opened out will be too extensive, and partly because the term negligence is not, strictly speaking, applicable to such breaches of duty; the question in such cases being not whether the act done or omitted is negligent or not, but whether the act done or omitted is what was or was not expressly or impliedly agreed to be done or omitted." Smith on the Law of Negligence *6.

Further on it is said: "Duties divide themselves therefore into three heads: (1) Duties which arise out of rights; (2) Duties which arise out of employment; (3) Duties imposed by statutes.

"(1) Men are put by the law in possession of rights, and the law imposes upon all men in the exercise of any right and duty not to interfere with the equal rights of another, apart from any agreements which they may have made between themselves. If, in the exercise of a right which a man has by law, he unintentionally breaks or omits the duty of not interfering with the equal rights of another, which is imposed by law, and thereby injures another, he is guilty of a tort called negligence.

"(2) So, also, where two persons assume relations to each other of employer and employed, involving the performance of services, there the law implies or imposes the conditions that the performance must be carefully carried out. These are, strictly speaking, contracts, and the law implies certain terms as appertaining to these contracts.

"(3) And lastly, where a statute directs a person to perform a duty, and he omits to perform that duty with care, he is guilty of negligence."

It seems, however, to us that in the second division the class is too restricted to admit all which should properly belong to it. There should properly be included all duties which rest solely upon contract, and which cannot be enforced except by invoking the contract itself. In the third class Mr. Smith observes that if one omits to perform that duty with care, he is guilty of negligence, and the proper view would seem to be that if one omitted to perform the duty, no matter how, he is guilty of a want of ordinary care which constitutes negligence. See Smith on the Law of Negligence *9. See also discussion immediately following, infra.

1. Bennett v. Dutton, 10 N. H. 481; s. c., Thompson Car. of Pas. 2; Hunt v. Missouri etc. Co., 14 Mo. App. 160; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. (U. S.) 468; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 406, et seq.; Cumberland Valley R. Co. v. Hughes, 11 Pa. St. 141; Worster v. Forty-second St. etc. R. Co., 50 N. Y. 203; Thompson on Car. of Pas., 26, et seq.; Id. 197, et seq. See also CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS, Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

2. Mullen v. St. John, 57 N. Y. 567; Giles v. Diamond State Iron Co. (Del. 1887), 8 Atl. Rep. 368; Murray v. McShane, 52 Md. 217; Schell v. Second Nat. Bank, 14 Minn. 43; Chapman v. Rothwell, 1 El. B. & E. 168; Carleton v. Franconia Iron etc. Co., 99 Mass. 216; Firth v. Bawling etc. Co., L. R., 3 C. P. 254; Hotel Association v. Walters, 23 Neb. 280; Albert v. State, 66 Md. 325; Jennings v. VanSchaick, 13 Daly (N. Y.) 438; Graves v. Thomas, 95 Ind. 361; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 727; Bennett v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 102 U. S. 577; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 71. See also REAL PROPERTY; STRUCTURES.

The owner and occupant of premises, who maintains a private passage way opening into his basement, within every person holding himself out to the public as willing to act in a certain capacity, professional or otherwise, and who has induced persons to commit themselves or their property to his care, there is by implication of law a duty to use proper care in his conduct towards them; and, as a consequence of this duty, there is a liability to answer for injuries caused by breach of it.¹

(b) May be Created by Statute.—A special duty concerning the conduct of persons in certain relations may be created by statute, and a failure to observe such statutory duty is sometimes said to be “negligence per se.”² Except where the statute itself pro-

the limits of a public street, and which through his negligence has become dangerous to persons travelling on the street, is liable for injuries occasioned thereby; that the law also imposes a liability on the city does not relieve him. Landrue v. Lund, 38 Minn. 538.

One who, on his own land, so carelessly piles lumber that a child while on the land is injured by its falling, is liable, the lot being unfenced, and having been used as a playground and thoroughfare by children of the neighborhood. Bransom v. Labrot, 81 Ky. 638; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 193.

Even where a building has been made unsafe by the acts of trespassers, which it was within the power of the owner to prevent, the owner is liable for injuries received by one on whom the building fell. Tucker v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. (La. 1890), 7 So. Rep. 124.

1. Bishop v. Weber, 139 Mass. 411; Brown v. Purdy, 54 N. Y. Super. Ct. 109 (physician held liable for failure to exercise ordinary care in treatment of his patient); Ayers v. Russell, 3 N. Y. Supp. 338 (physician held liable for negligence); Bablitt v. Bumpus, 73 Mich. 331 (attorney liable for negligence); Phillips v. Edsall, 127 Ill. 535 (same); Cochrane v. Little, 71 Md. 323 (attorney liable for negligently giving improper advice); Moorman v. Wood, 117 Ind. 144; Fogarty v. Finlay, 10 Cal. 239 (notary liable for negligence in preparing certificate of acknowledgment); Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 600, et seq. See also ATTORNEY, MALPRACTICE, PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, PUBLIC OFFICERS, Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

Thus a caterer was held liable for injuries caused by poisonous food furnished by him at a public entertainment. Since he assumed to act as a caterer and was employed as such, a duty was implied to him by law to perform with due care that which he had undertaken. In his opinion, ALLEN, J., set forth this whole doctrine clearly and at length. Bishop v. Weber, 139 Mass. 411. See also Morton v. Sewall, 106 Mass. 143; s. c., 8 Am. Rep. 298 (case of an apothecary selling poison); Thomas v. Winchester, 6 N. Y. 397 (same as preceding); Fleet v. Hollenkamp, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 219. See also DRUGGISTS, MALPRACTICE, PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, BAILMENTS, etc., Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

2. “Negligence Per Se.”—1 Thompson on Neg., 506, § 8; Wharton on Neg., § 443; Shear. & Red. on Id., § 13; Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Voelker, 129 Ill. 540; 39 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 615; Messenger v. Pate, 42 Iowa 443; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Stebbing, 62 Md. 504; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 36; McRickard v. Flint, 13 Dalv (N. Y.) 541; Billings v. Breinig, 45 Mich. 65; Jetter v. New York etc. R. Co., 2 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 458; Siemers v. Eisen, 54 Cal. 418; Central R. etc. Co. v. Smith, 78 Ga. 694; s. c., 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 1; Reynolds v. Hindman, 32 Iowa 146; Piper v. Chicago etc. R. Co. (Wis. 1890), 46 N. W. Rep. 165.

So where defendant suspended a sign board over the street in violation of an ordinance he was liable for injury caused by its being blown down by a severe wind notwithstanding due care was exercised in constructing and fastening the sign. Salisbury v. Herchenroder, 106 Mass. 458; s. c., 8 Am. Rep. 354.

The rule has also been stated thus: “It is negligence to disregard a positive regulation that boats moving at night shall exhibit lights, even though the practice may be otherwise; and if injury is done, it is for the jury to determine how far it was connected with such negligence.” Billings v. Breinig, 45 Mich. 65.

In Illinois a violation of a statutory requirement is held “gross negligence,” vides that any injury which is done by the party violating its provisions shall be conclusively presumed to have resulted from the violation, there is scarcely reason in treating such failures to observe statutory duties as "negligence per se."¹ The fact that an injury has occurred which may be traced to a failure to observe a statutory duty, makes proof of such failure relevant and strong evidence tending to establish negligence,² and sometimes the though it does not necessarily constitute "wilful negligence." Ohio etc. R. Co. v. Eaves, 42 Ill. 288; Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Hetherington, 83 Ill. 510.

The most frequent instances of a special duty created by statute is seen in statutes or ordinances regulating the speed of trains in certain localities, or the management of horses, or requiring warnings and signals to be given at railway crossings, etc. Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Stebbing, 62 Md. 504; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 36; Correll v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 38 Iowa 120; Hoppe v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 61 Wis. 357; CROSSINGS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

Under Miss. Code (1880), § 1047, fixing the maximum rate of speed at which a train may pass through an incorporated town, the company is liable for injury done when that speed has been exceeded, though at the instant of collision the speed is within the prescribed limit. New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Toulmé, 59 Miss. 284.

In the absence of statutory or municipal regulation as to speed of trains, no rate of speed is negligence per se. Main v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 18 Mo. App. 388; Powell v. Railroad Co., 76 Mo. 80; Wallace v. Railroad Co., 74 Mo. 594.

A railroad company may be chargeable with negligence in running its train through a city at a rate of speed greater than that permitted by a city ordinance, although before the passage of the ordinance the road was built on a grade and curve which rendered it impracticable to comply with the ordinance. Neier v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 12 Mo. App. 35. See also Siemens v. Eisen, 54 Cal. 418 (leaving horse unfastened in street in violation of ordinance); Wright v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 27 Ill. App. 200 (violation of ordinance concerning storing of oil in certain places; such violation required to be shown to be the proximate cause in order to recover); Pennsylvania Co. v. Hensil, 70 Ind. 569; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Boggs, 101 Ind. 522; s. c., 51 Am.

Rep. 761; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 282; McGrath v. New York etc. R. Co., 63 N. Y. 522; CROSSINGS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 921, et seq.

1. To treat such failure as "negligence per se" would be to relieve the plaintiff from all the consequences of his unlawful act where he contributed to the injury and impose an unreasonable liability upon the defendant.

Other Elements of Negligence Must be Shown.—Proof of a violation of a statute is really nothing more than a proof that defendant failed to exercise ordinary care; the elements of duty and of proximate cause have still to be established. See Briggs v. New York Cent. R. Co., 72 N. Y. 26; Knupfle v. Knickerbocker Ice Co., 84 N. Y. 488; Augusta etc. R. Co. v. McElmurry, 24 Ga. 75; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Kerr, 25 Md. 521; Hanlon v. South Boston etc. R. Co., 129 Mass. 31; Billings v. Breinig, 45 Mich. 65; Hayes v. Michigan etc. R. Co., 111 U. S. 228; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 394.

2. Knupfle v. Knickerbocker Ice Co., 84 N. Y. 488; Kelley v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 75 Mo. 138; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 638; Salisbury v. Herchenroder, 106 Mass. 458; Hayes v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 111 U. S. 228; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 394; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 12.

Violation of Statute—Evidence of Want of Due Care.—It is often stated that the violation of a statute is negligence per se, when what is meant is that it is evidence of one of the elements of negligence. See Clark v. Boston etc. R. Co., 64 N. H. 323; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 548; Briggs v. New York Cent. R. Co., 72 N. Y. 26; Augusta etc. R. Co. v. McElmurry, 24 Ga. 75; Hanlon v. South Boston etc. R. Co., 129 Mass. 310; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 18; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Kerr, 25 Md. 521; Knupfle v. Knickerbocker Ice Co., 84 N. Y. 488 (reversing s. c., 23 Hun (N. Y.) 159); Vincett v. Cook, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 318; Atlanta etc. R. Co. v. Wyly, 65 Ga. 120; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 262; Taylor v. Harwood, 1 Taney statute itself provides that in such cases the violation of the statute makes out a prima facie case of negligence where injury follows.¹

And in one State at least the courts have construed such a statute to mean that when a violation of the statute has occurred and injury followed, it will be conclusively presumed that the violation was the proximate cause of the injury,² while proof of its observance is said to relieve from liability for injuries inflicted at the time of its observance.³ Such doctrines are clearly anomalous and unsound, and in some cases a more sensible rule of construction seems to have been adopted even in the State in question.⁴ The true rule is, unless the statute is meant to be highly penal and unjust, that it must always appear from the evidence that the failure to observe the statutory duty was the proximate

Dec. (U. S.) 437; CROSSINGS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 921.

Thus in New York a new trial was ordered where the judge instructed the jury that such violation was "negligence." It was only evidence of negligence (i. e., of a want of care). Knupfle v. Knickerbocker Ice Co., 84 N. Y. 488.

The rule stated by Shear. & Red. (§ 13) is that "the violation of the statute or ordinance should always be deemed presumptive evidence of negligence, which if not excused by other evidence, including all the surrounding circumstances, should be deemed conclusive."

An instruction by the court that due diligence required defendant to comply with a certain statute is properly given, being sustained by the rule stated in the text. Atlanta etc. R. Co. v. Wyly, 65 Ga. 120; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 262.

1. So in Mississippi, Georgia and Tennessee. Code Miss. (1880), § 1059. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Trotter, 60 Miss. 442; Mobile etc. R. Co. v. Dale, 61 Miss. 206, s. c., 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 651; Columbus etc. R. Co. v. Kennedy, 78 Ga. 646; s. c., 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 92; Central R. Co. v. Brinson, 64 Ga. 475; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 343; Tennessee R. Co. v. Walker, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 383; Code Tenn. (1884), §§ 1298-1300; CROSSINGS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 922, note 1.

2. Under sections 1298-1300 of Tenn. Code (1884) a railroad company is held liable for the nonperformance of a statutory duty even though its observance would not have prevented the injury. Tennessee R. Co. v. Walker, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 383; Nashville etc.

R. Co. v. Thomas, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 262; Collins v. East Tennessee etc. R. Co., 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 841; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Connor, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 20; CROSSINGS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 922, note.

And under the same code it is held that contributory negligence of the plaintiff is no bar to the action, but may be considered in mitigation of damages. Cases supra. CROSSINGS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 922, note; Tennessee R. Co. v. Walker, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 383.

3. Tennessee R. Co. v. Walker, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 383; Hill v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 823; Nashville etc. R. Co. v. Thomas, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 262.

The statutes, "if obeyed, these [railway] companies have an absolute impunity not always vouchsafed to them under the common law. Upon the construction of these statutes there has been no variableness or shadow of turning in the adjudicated cases." Opinion of SNEED, J., in Hill v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 823, 828, citing to support the above strange doctrine, Smith v. Nashville etc. R. Co., 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 589; Nashville etc. R. Co. v. Smith, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 174; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Stone, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 468, and other cases.

4. This principle noted and well established in CROSSINGS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 922; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 4, pp. 72-75. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Connor, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 20, 26. See also Lyons v. Child, 61 N. H. 72 (statutory rule requiring travellers to turn to the right does not make a nonobservance of it negligence per se); Pennsylvania cause of the injury that followed.¹ When this does appear, it is but reasonable to treat an inadvertent breach of the statutory duty as negligence,² and an intentional breach of it as wilfulness.³ Apart from these peculiar cases there is really no such thing as "negligence per se." Upon a given state of facts and circumstances, showing an injury directly due to and proximately caused by a failure to observe a statutory duty, it may be held as a matter of law that the breach of the statutory duty was negligent; but this, although often confused therewith, is a very different thing from "negligence per se," so-called.⁴

R. Co. v. Hensil, 70 Ind. 569; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 188; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 79 (failure to discharge statutory duty must be shown to have been the proximate cause of the injury); Hayes v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 111 U. S. 228; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 394; New York etc. R. Co. v. Kellam, 83 Va. 851.

Putting ashes into a wooden barrel in violation of a municipal ordinance is not negligence per se; it is a question of fact whether it is negligent in a particular case. Cook v. Johnson, 58 Mich. 437; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 703.

1. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hensil, 70 Ind. 569; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 188; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 79; Evans etc. Brick Co. v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 17 Mo. App. 624; Billing v. Breinig, 45 Mich. 65; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Stebbins, 62 Md. 504; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 36; Hayes v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 111 U. S. 228; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 394; Flattes v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 35 Iowa 191; Whelan v. New York etc. R. Co., 38 Fed. Rep. 15; Pike v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 39 Fed. Rep. 754; Heddles v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 74 Wis. 239; 39 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 645; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Hanley, 26 Ill. App. 351; Atchison etc. R. Co. v. Walz, 40 Kan. 433; Cordell v. New York etc. R. Co., 70 N. Y. 119; Fletcher v. Atlantic etc. R. Co., 64 Mo. 484. Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 27.

2. Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Hetherington, 83 Ill. 510 (violation of city ordinance does not necessarily make injury wilful). Ante, subtit. III, 1, INADVERTENCE.

3. CROSSINGS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 924, 925; ante, subtit. 1, INADVERTENCE, ETC.; post, subtit. PROXIMATE CAUSE.

4. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Boggs, 101 Ind. 522; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 282; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 561; Pennsylvania Co. v. Hensil, 70 Ind. 569; s. c., 36 Am.

Rep. 188; Hayes v. Mich. Cent. R. Co., 111 U. S. 228, 241; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 394; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 13; Knupfle v. Knickerbocker Ice Co., 84 N. Y. 488; Salisbury v. Herchenroder, 106 Mass. 458; Kelley v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 75 Mo. 138; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 638; CROSSINGS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 923.

"The ordinances of a municipal corporation regulating the speed of trains passing through the city, or the blowing of the whistle on the engine, are only police regulations, and do not have the effect of changing the general law upon the same subject, or change the duties or rights of the parties growing out of the failure to do, or doing what the ordinance commands or prohibits." Whelan v. New York etc. R. Co., 38 Fed. Rep. 15, 17.

The true rule was laid down by WILLES, J., in Daniel v. Metropolitan R. Co., L. R., 3 C. P. 216, 222, and approved by the exchequer chamber, L. R., 3 C. P. 591; and by the house of lords, L. R., 5 H. L. 45. "It is necessary for the plaintiff to establish by evidence circumstances from which it may fairly be inferred that there is a reasonable probability that the accident resulted from the want of some precaution which the defendant might and ought to have resorted to." Approved in Hayes v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 111 U. S. 228; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 394. See also Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469; Williams v. Great Western R. Co., L. R., 9 Exch. 157.

The statutes represent the minimum degree of care to be observed by the defendant. Richardson v. New York Cent. R. Co., 45 N. Y. 846; Barry v. New York Cent. etc. R. Co., 92 N. Y. 289; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 615; Bradley v. Boston etc. C. Co., 2 Cush. (Mass.) 539; CROSSINGS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 925.

(c) From Contract or Agreement.—In cases where there arises no duty by implication of law, there may be one created by act of the parties—i. e., by contract; or a duty already existing may be thus strengthened.¹ The principles of the law of negligence as herein defined and limited are not applicable to breaches of con-

Violation of Statutory Duty Excused When.—The violation of a statutory duty may be excused under certain circumstances, when it appears that the object intended by the statute will best be promoted thereby, or when there is a conflict of statutes with other duties, or where conformity with the statute is impracticable. Wakefield v. Connecticut etc. R. Co., 37 Vt. 330.

Thus where, owing to the peculiar circumstances of the case, sounding of a locomotive whistle is more likely to increase than to diminish the danger to one on the track, the failure to so sound the whistle as required by statute will not constitute negligence. See Galena etc. R. Co. v. Loomis, 13 Ill. 548; Bellefontaine R. Co. v. Hunter, 33 Ind. 362.

The signal adopted and habitually used at a certain elevator to notify the laborers engaged in loading and unloading railroad cars, of the incoming of a train, was a cry by one of the employees of the elevator company, "The cars are coming." The evidence showed that this was a safer signal at that place than the ringing of a bell or sounding of a whistle would have been. In an action brought against the railroad company by a laborer who had been at work at the elevator for some weeks and knew the accustomed signal, to recover damages for an alleged negligent wounding by an incoming train, held, that the failure to ring or whistle was not negligence. Speed v. Atlantic etc. R. Co., 71 Mo. 303; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 77.

Again, defendant when charged with negligence in not sounding a whistle before passing a crossing as required by law, showed in evidence an ordinance prohibiting the sounding of locomotive whistles, etc., in that part of the city. Held, not liable for the failure to sound the whistle, etc. Pennsylvania Co. v. Hensil, 70 Ind. 569; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 188.

Where a city ordinance required that when a locomotive engine was used within the limits of the city a man should be required to ride on the front of the locomotive engine when going forward; and when going backward, on the tender, not more than twelve inches from the bed of the road; and in an action against a railroad company to recover damages for injuries claimed to have been sustained through defendant's negligence in the management of its engine, it was shown that the engine by which the plaintiff was injured was so constructed in accordance with modern improvements in locomotives that it would be unsafe to place a man in the position required by the ordinance, his absence from the tender at the time of the accident would not of itself be an act of negligence. Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Mah, 66 Md. 53; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 628.

1. For example, a party owes no duty to a trespasser on his lands to keep the lands or structures upon them in such condition as that he shall not be injured when coming on them. But if the land owner has contracted with such person to come upon his land and work, a duty arises which makes the land owner liable for injuries received by such person through improper condition of the premises. See Hargreave v. Deacon, 25 Mich. 1; Kohn v. Lovett, 44 Ga. 251 (case of no duty owing to trespassers); Heaven v. Pender, 11 Q. B. Div. 503; Beven on Neg. 313, et seq.; Patterson v. Wallace, 1 Macq. 748; Hough v. Texas etc. R. Co., 100 U. S. 213 (these latter cases showing duty of master to servant). See also MASTER AND SERVANT, 14 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

So if a person enters a coach of a railway company's train as a trespasser, the railroad company owes him at most a very slight duty; but when such party has paid his fare to the conductor, the duty owing to him by the company becomes immediately a strong and special one, by force of the contract entered into by the company's officer accepting the fare. Gardner v. NewHaven etc. Co., 51 Conn. 143; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 170 (carrier company not liable to one not accepted as a passenger); Duff v. Allegheny Valley R. Co., 91 Pa. St. 458 (not liable to a trespasser); Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Michie, 83 Ill. 427.

tract for which an action ex contractu only can be maintained.¹ But they fully apply to all cases arising out of contract wherein the action is ex delicto—that is, upon the wrong itself, and not upon the contract alone.²

9. Damage an Essential Element.—It is obvious that there can be no action sustained on the ground of negligence when no damage has been caused; negligence without damage will no more sustain such an action than will damage without negligence; the two elements must both be present.³ And it is essential that the damage has been suffered by the plaintiff; if, by a breach of duty to the public, the public have suffered, no ground of action is thereby afforded to an individual, unless he himself sustained an injury above that suffered by him in common with the rest of the public.⁴

(same). See CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, as to liability after such person has become a passenger. See note immediately following.

Confusion is apt to arise here. In the examples just cited the plaintiff would almost invariably bring an action of tort, but the duty, a breach of which constitutes the ground of his action, would be created by the contract in each case.

1. Negligence as herein treated is considered only as the basis of an action ex delicto. See ante, subtit. II, ANALYTICAL DESCRIPTION; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 76; Pollock on Torts 432, 433.

Negligence as the basis of an action ex contractu is fully treated in other portions of this work. See BAILMENTS; CARRIERS OF GOODS; CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS; CARRIERS OF STOCK; TELEGRAPH COMPANIES, and similar titles.

Such actions ex delicto, however, may arise from the breach of a duty arising solely out of contract.

2. An action for negligence as herein treated may arise out of contract or not (ante, II, ANALYTICAL DESCRIPTION), but it always sounds in tort. Lake Erie etc. R. Co. v. Acres, 108 Ind. 548; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 112; Cincinnati etc. R. Co. v. Eaton, 94 Ind. 474; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 274; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 179; Lake Erie etc. R. Co. v. Fix, 88 Ind. 381; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 109; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 76; Shear. and Red. on Neg., §§ 4, 7; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 32, note 6.

3. Shear. & Red. on Neg., §§ 4, 23;

Addison on Torts 1; Wharton on Neg., § 25; Broom's Com. (5th ed.) 368; Cooley on Torts (630), et seq.; 1 Thompson on Neg. 340; Harter v. Morris, 18 Ohio St. 492; Illinois etc. R. Co. v. Benton, 69 Ill. 174.

Damnum absque injuria affords no ground of action. See DAMNUM ABSQUE INJURIA, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 68. Neither therefore does injuria sine damno. Cases supra.

Damage and Negligence Must Concur.—Thus, where a passenger, ascending the steps of a car at the invitation of the railway company's agent, is injured by the fall of a servant of the company against him, the fall being caused by his accidentally slipping while standing on the rails of the platforms of two cars, engaged in the performance of his duty, he (the passenger) cannot recover from the company for his injury since, although there was damage, there was no negligence; the risk of such accidents is assumed by the passengers. Skinner v. Atchison etc. R. Co., 39 Fed. Rep. 188.

4. "He and he only can maintain an action for an obstruction of the streets who has sustained some damage peculiar to himself, his trade or calling." KELLY, C. B., in Winterbottom v. Lord Derby, L. R., 2 E. 322; 1 Thompson on Neg. 341; Manley v. St. Helen's Canal Co., 2 H. & N. (Eng.) 840; Kessel v. Butler, 53 N. Y. 612.

For damages resulting to a shopkeeper by reason of the fact that customers are turned away from his shop by boardings used in the erection of a building under a licence from proper authorities, no action lies; but if the building operations are so negligently conducted that bricks, etc., fall through the skylight upon an adjacent building and injure the goods of a shopkeeper therein, he may recover damages. Bradbee v. Christ's Hospital, 4 Mann. & Gr. 714; 5 Scott, N. R. 79; 2 Dow., N. S. 164; Thompson on Neg. 342.

IV. NO DEGREES OF NEGLIGENCE.—While in some courts the classification of negligence as slight, ordinary and gross is maintained, it seems to be generally considered that such a classification is wrong in principle and leads to confusion and mistake.¹ The doctrine of several degrees of negligence arises from a confused idea as to what constitutes ordinary care; in some conditions and relations a high degree of care is required, and failure to observe that care is called "slight negligence," while it should be observed that the high degree required only furnishes the test as to what will constitute ordinary care under the circumstances.

See also Quincy Canal v. Newscomb, 7 Met. (Mass.) 276. The doctrine is well set forth in that case, the court saying: "When one suffers in common with all the public, although from his proximity to the obstructed way, or otherwise from his more frequent use of it, he may suffer to a greater degree than others, still he cannot have an action, because it would cause such multiplicity of suits as to be itself an intolerable evil. But when he sustains a special damage, differing in kind from that which is common to others, as where he falls into a ditch, unlawfully made in a highway, and hurts his horse, or sustains a personal damage, then he may bring his action." This view is sustained by numerous and high authority. Sohn v. Cambern, 106 Ind. 302; Houck v. Wachter, 34 Md. 265; s. c., 6 Am. Rep. 332; Brant v. Plumer, 64 Iowa 33; Winterbottom v. Lord Derby, L. R., 2 Ex. 316; Blanc v. Klumpke, 29 Cal. 156; Moore v. Wabash etc. Canal, 7 Ind. 462; Willard v. Cambridge, 3 Allen (Mass.) 574; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 24; Wilkes v. Hungerford Mfg. Co., 2 Bing. (Eng.) N. Cas. 281; Stetson v. Faxon, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 147; Thayer v. Boston, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 511; Greasy v. Codling, 2 Bing. (Eng.) 263; Baxter v. Winooski Turnpike Co., 22 Vt. 114.

These cases all related to the obstruction of the highway whereby the public were put to great inconvenience. There is an apparent exception in the case of Rose v. Miles, 4 Mann. & Selw. (Eng.) 101. There it appears that the plaintiff was obstructed in navigating a river by the defendant's wrongfully moving a barge across it; it was held that he could maintain his action since he incurred great expense in being compelled to unload his barge and carry his goods overland.

¹ See COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 367, 368; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 4, p. 21; Wharton on Neg., § 44; Id., §§ 65, 66; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 48, et seq. Cooley on Torts (631, 632); New York Cent. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 357; Hinton v. Dibbin, 2 Q. B. 661; Steamboat New World v. King, 16 How. (U. S.) 469; Perkins v. New York Cent. R. Co., 24 N. Y. 196; Deering on Neg., § 11, and cases cited; State v. Boston etc. R. Co., 58 N. H. 410; McPheeters v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 45 Mo. 22; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Arms, 91 U. S. 494.

JUSTICE DAVIS has to say: "Gross negligence is a relative term. It is doubtless to be understood as meaning a greater want of care than is implied by the term 'ordinary negligence,' but after all it only means the absence of the care that was requisite under the circumstances." Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Arms, 91 U. S. 494. As is well said in the work on negligence by Shearman & Redfield (§ 48), "It is a solecism to speak of 'ordinary' negligence, since if the negligence were ordinary [i. e., in accordance with the usual course of practice among all men of average prudence], it would cease to be negligence at all."

In Wilson v. Brett, 11 M. & W. 113. LORD CRANWORTH has said that gross negligence is ordinary negligence with a vituperative epithet attached. And this view is sanctioned in Campbell on Neg., § 11; 1 Smith's L. Cas. 196; Grill v. Gen'l Iron etc. Co., L. R., 1 C. P. 612; Beal v. South Devon R. Co., 3 H. & C. 327; Mariner v. Smith, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.)

The same is true when only a slight or a moderate degree of care is required.¹ The doctrine is, however, maintained by the courts of Illinois, and in a modified form by those of one or two other States. In admiralty it has long existed; it is recognized by some text writers,² and has long been familiar in the law of bailments.³

V. NEGLIGENCE AS DEPENDENT UPON RELATIONSHIP AND DUTY.—

The degree of care required to be exercised in the discharge of any duty depends greatly upon the relationship which the parties sustain to each other. Thus, in the case of bailment for the sole benefit of the bailee, the law imposes upon him a duty to exercise much more care than where it is for the benefit of the bailor.⁴ So in the case of common carriers, it has been a rule of 208; McPheeters v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 45 Mo. 22. Compare Mueller v. Putnam Ins. Co., 45 Mo. 84.

And in steamboat New World v. King, 16 How. (U. S.) 469, CURTIS, J., observes: "It may be doubted if these terms [i. e., slight, ordinary and gross negligence] can be usefully applied in practice. Their meaning is not fixed or capable of being so. One degree may be confounded with another, but it is quite impracticable to distinguish them. Their signification necessarily varies according to circumstances, to whose influences the courts have been obliged to yield, until there are so many real exceptions that the rules themselves can scarcely be said to have a general operation."

This idea of JUSTICE CURTIS as to the inapplicability of the rules relating to the degrees of negligence is sustained by numerous and high authorities. Smith v. New York Cent. R. Co., 24 N. Y. 222; Perkins v. New York Cent. R. Co., 24 N. Y. 195; Hinton v. Dibbin, 2 Q. B. 661; McAdoo v. Richmond etc. R. Co., 105 N. Car. 140; Wilson v. Brett, 11 M. & W. (Eng.) 113; Wyld v. Pickford, 8 M. & W. (Eng.) 443; Storer v. Gowen, 18 Me. 177; Story on Bailments, § 11; Cooley on Torts 631; 6 Touiller's Droit Civil 239; 11 Id. 203; Lane v. Boston etc. R. Co., 112 Mass. 455; 6 Albany Law Jour. 313; 22 Am. Law Reg., N. S. 126, note.

See an exhaustive discussion of this subject in Beven on Neg. 16, et seq., where the origin and growth of the theory of degrees of negligence is reviewed, and the conclusion arrived at is that such a division is at the least useless and unpractical.

In Shearman and Redfield's work on negligence the doctrine of degrees of negligence is criticised and its recognition deprecated, yet it is followed because, they say, more confusion would follow by rejecting it. Shear. & Red. on Neg., §§ 48, 49.

JUSTICE WILLES also observes: "Confusion has arisen from regarding negligence as a positive instead of a negative word. It is really the absence of such care as it was the duty of defendant to use. 'Gross' is a word of description, and not of definition, and it would have been only introducing a source of confusion to use the expression 'gross negligence' instead of the equivalent . . . a want of due care and skill . . . which was again and again used by the Lord Chief Justice in his summing up." Grill v. General Iron etc. Co., L. R., 1 C. P. 612 (1865-66).

1. Ante subtit. III, 3, ORDINARY CARE; post, subtit. V, NEGLIGENCE AS DEPENDENT ON RELATIONSHIP AND DUTY.

2. The doctrine of the courts of Illinois is fully set forth in COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 367. The modification of the doctrine as they exist in other States is also there set forth. Shear. & Red. on Neg., §§ 48, 49; Deering on Neg., § 11; Wharton on Neg., §§ 44, 66.

3. Story on Bailments, § 17; Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raym. 909; s. c., 1 Smith's L. Cas. 82, note; BAILMENTS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 51.

4. Ante, subtit. III, 3, ORDINARY CARE; Story on Bailments, § 23; Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raym. 909; s. c., 1 Smith's L. Cas. 82, note; BAIL- law from the earliest times, that in consideration of the great danger to human life consequent upon their neglect of duty they must exercise the greatest practicable care for the safety of their passengers.¹ In other cases, where no high and special duties are present, an unusual and extraordinary degree of care is not required; the observance of a moderate degree of care being sufficient for the proper protection of all interests involved.² It is from a confusion of these principles that the idea as to three degrees of negligence has arisen. Into the application of these principles to the details of special relations we cannot here enter.³

VI. CAUSAL CONNECTION—PROXIMATE CAUSE.—It is a maxim that the law looks at the proximate and not at the remote cause of an injury.⁴ Out of the application of this maxim grows the liability or nonliability of a defendant charged with the infliction of an injury by his negligence.⁵ Unless the alleged negligence of the defendant was the proximate cause of the injury of which the plaintiff complains, there can be no recovery.⁶ For consequences

MENTS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 54; Levy v. Pike, 25 La. An. 630; First Nat. Bank v. Ocean Bank, 60 N. Y. 278; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 181.

1. Coddington v. Brooklyn etc. R. Co., 102 N. Y. 66; Sharp v. Gray, 9 Bing. 457; Ingalls v. Bills, 9 Met. (Mass.) 1; Moreland v. Boston etc. R. Co., 141 Mass. 31; s. c., CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 738, et seq.; Carroll v. Staten Island etc. R. Co., 58 N. Y. 126; Central R. Co. v. Freeman, 75 Ga. 331.

See particularly Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 51, where the special duty of carriers of passengers is adverted to, and numerous cases collected; and Thompson on Carriers of Passengers, 197, § 1, et seq.

2. Ante, subtit. III, 3, ORDINARY CARE; BAILMENTS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 51; CROSSINGS, vol. 4; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 4, et seq.; Levy v. Pike, 25 La. An. 630.

3. See BAILMENTS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 52, et seq.; CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS, vol. 2; CARRIERS OF GOODS, vol. 2; FELLOW SERVANTS, vol. 7; LANDLORD AND TENANT, vol. 13; MASTER AND SERVANT, vol. 14; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 15; Steamboat New World v. King, 16 How. (U. S.) 469; Smith v. New York etc. R. Co., 24 N. Y. 222; ante, subtit. IV, NO DEGREES OF NEGLIGENCE; ante, subtit. III, 3, ORDINARY CARE.

See also BAILMENTS; CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS; CARRIERS OF GOODS; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS; TELEGRAPH COMPANIES; REAL PROPERTY; FELLOW SERVANTS, and similar titles.

4. In jure causa proxima non remota spectatur is a maxim of universal acceptance in cases arising out of tort. See Broom's Legal Maxims (2nd ed.) 165; Aetna Ins. Co. v. Boone, 95 U. S. 130; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 40, et seq.; Hoag v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 85 Pa. St. 293; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 653; McGrew v. Stone, 53 Pa. St. 436; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Kerr, 62 Pa. St. 353; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 431; Wharton on Neg., § 73.

The maxim means this: "When one is engaged in an act which the circumstances indicate may be dangerous to others, and the event whose occurrence is necessary to make the act injurious, can be readily seen as likely to occur under the circumstances, the defendant is liable if he does not take all the care which prudence would suggest to avoid the injury." McGrew v. Stone, 53 Pa. St. 436.

5. Pollock on Torts 26, et seq.; Cooley on Torts (68, 69-71); Bishop on Non-Contract Law § 455, et seq.; Wharton on Neg., § 97; Shear. & Red. on Neg., §§ 25-40; Campbell on Neg., § 118.

6. See Clifford v. Denver etc. R. Co., 9 Col. 333; Oil City Gas Co. v. Robinson, 99 Pa. St. 1; Harlan v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 65 Mo. 22. See also Shear.

of which his act or omission was only a mere condition or remote cause, the defendant is not liable.¹ In the determination of the question whether an injury was proximately caused by the de-& Red. on Neg., § 25; Wharton on Neg. § 3; Deering on Neg., § 8, and cases cited.

The negligence complained of need not be the only cause or the "most proximate" (We take this expression from Mr. Bishop). Bishop on Rights and Torts, §§ 450, 455; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Kemp, 61 Md. 74; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 220; 48 Am. Rep. 134; Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Buck, 96 Ind. 346; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 234; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 168; Scott v. Hunter, 46 Pa. St. 192.

Direct Cause.—In instructing a jury as to plaintiff's negligence "proximately" contributing to his injury, the court used the word "directly." Held, not such error as to call for reversal. Davis v. Spicer, 27 Mo. App. 279. Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 25; Philadelphia R. Co. v. Stebbing, 62 Md. 504; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 36; Quincy etc. R. Co. v. Wellhoener, 72 Ill. 60; Harlan v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 65 Mo. 22; Holbrook v. Utica etc. R. Co., 12 N. Y. 236; s. c., 64 Am. Dec. 502; Helsey v. Jewett, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 51.

Therefore an instruction to the jury which omits to state this essential element; i. e., that the injury must have been caused by the negligence, is erroneous. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Carroll, 12 Ill. App. 643.

Upon the same principle it is held that the omission of the engineer to give the precautionary signals of the approach of a train, when it in no way contributes to the injury, does not render the company liable. Parker v. Wilmington etc. R. Co., 86 N. Car. 224; Hayes v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 111 U. S. 228; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 394; Evans etc. Brick Co. v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 17 Mo. App. 624. Ante, subtit. III, 8, (b).

The negligence (i. e., failure on the part of the defendant to exercise ordinary care) must be the cause, the proximate cause. Negligence on the part of the defendant followed by an injury to plaintiff affords no ground of action, unless the proper causal connection can be shown to exist between the effect and alleged cause. The negligence must have been the efficient cause of the injury, for as GIBSON, C. J., has said: "The defendant is answerable for the consequences of negligence and not for its abstract existence." Hart v. Allen, 2 Watts (Pa.) 116. And "the negligence must in some way connect itself, or be connected by evidence, with the accident. It must be . . . incuria dans locum injuriæ." Midland R. v. Jackson, L. R., 3 App. 198.

1. Thus in the famous squib case (Scott v. Shepard, 3 Wils. 403; 2 Wm. Bl. 892; 1 Smith's L. Cas. 549), where a lighted squib was thrown first by a wrongdoer, then by the person on whose stand it had fallen, then by a third one, and so on, it was held that the first thrower alone was liable for the injury caused by the squib's finally striking a bystander because the intermediate throwers acting from a sudden compulsion of instinct to save their property were mere conditions of damage. See also Bigelow's Leading Cas. in Tort 608; Wharton on Neg., §§ 85, 303; Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Burrows, 33 Mich. 15; Salisbury v. Herchenroder, 106 Mass. 458; Addison on Torts 6; Cooley on Torts (69); Rockford v. Tripp, 83 Ill. 247.

An injury to a passenger on the highway was occasioned partly by ice with which the road was covered and partly by a defect in the structure of the road; the parties responsible for the defectiveness of the road were liable notwithstanding the fact that the ice contributed to the injury—the ice was a condition of the injury; the negligent construction of the road its cause. Atchison v. King, 9 Kan. 550; Wharton on Neg., § 86.

Defendant's Delay Concurring with Inevitable Accident.—Defendant is not liable where his negligence is no cause at all but merely a condition, even though it may be true that the injury would not have happened had he not been negligent. This is most frequently seen in the case of injuries caused by an inevitable accident occurring at or immediately after the time of the defendant's negligence; as where a train is delayed through defendant's negligence and its passengers are injured by a severe storm which would have been avoided had the train been on time—the storm is the proximate cause and the intervening between defendant's negligence and the damage.

fault of the defendant lies the great difficulty of the law of negligence.¹ The constantly recurring problem is: Did the defendant's act or omission proximately cause the plaintiff's injury, and was such act or omission a want of ordinary care, or was the act or omission of the defendant only a remote cause or mere condition releases defendant from liability. Memphis etc. R. Co. v. Reeves, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 176; McClary v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 3 Neb. 44; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 43; Dubuque Wood etc. Assoc. v. Dubuque, 30 Iowa 176; Daniels v. Ballantine, 23 Ohio St. 532; Denny v. New York etc. R. Co., 13 Gray (Mass.) 48; s. c., 74 Am. Dec.; Morrison v. Davis, 20 Pa. St. 171. Compare, however, Denning v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 48 N. H. 455; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 267; Pruitt v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 62 Mo. 527; Condict v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 54 N. Y. 500; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 40.

The defendant's train became uncoupled through a defective appliance; a brakeman, while engaged in repairing the mishap in the portion of the train remaining stationary, was, by the negligence of the engineer, backed upon by the engine and forward part of the train and killed. Held, that the proximate cause of the accident was the negligence of a fellow servant, the defective appliance, being merely a condition of the injury. Course v. New York etc. R. Co., 2 N. Y. Supp. 312.

1. See Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 25, where this difficulty is adverted to. It often occurs that an injury is brought about as the result of a long chain of happenings, where it becomes exceedingly difficult to trace the effect to its real proximate cause. See, as illustrative cases, Township of West Mahoney v. Watson, 116 Pa. St. 344; Thomas v. Winchester, 6 N. Y. 397; s. c., Bigelow's L. Cases on Tort 602; s. c., 57 Am. Dec. 455; Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Locke, 112 Ind. 404; Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Buck, 96 Ind. 346; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 234; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 168; Billman v. Indianapolis etc. R. Co., 76 Ind. 178; Cincinnati etc. R. Co. v. Eaton, 94 Ind. 478; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 254; Brown v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 54 Wis. 342; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 444; Jeffersonville etc. R. v. Riley, 39 Ind. 568; Scheffer v. Washington City etc. R. Co., 105 U. S. 249; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59; Lewis v. Flint etc. R. Co., 54 Mich. 55; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 263; Ehrgott v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 96

N. Y. 264; West v. Ward, 77 Iowa 323; s. c., 14 Am. St. Rep. 284, and note; Seale v. Gulf C. etc. R. Co., 65 Tex. 274; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 602.

In Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Reaney, 42 Md. 117, 136, the court speaking through ALVEY, J., says: In the application of the maxim, In jure non remota sed proxima spectatur, there is always more or less difficulty, and attempts are frequently made to introduce refinements that would not consist with principles of rational justice. The law is a practical science, and courts do not indulge in refinements and subtleties as to causation that would defeat the end of natural justice. They rather adopt the practical rule, that the efficient and predominating cause in producing a given event or effect, though there may be subordinate and dependent causes in operation, must be looked to in determining the liabilities of the parties concerned."

In Louisiana Mut. Ins. Co. v. Tweed, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 44, JUSTICE MILLER observes: "We have had cited to us a general review of the doctrine of proximate and remote causes as it has arisen and been decided in the courts in a great variety of cases. It would be an unprofitable labor to enter into an examination of these cases. If we could deduce from them the best possible expression of the rule, it would remain after all to decide each case largely upon the special facts belonging to it, and often upon the very nicest discriminations." Harrison v. Berkley, 1 Strobb. L. (S. Car.) 525; s. c., 47 Am. Dec. 578; 2 Thompson on Negligence 1083-4, § 1. See also Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 28; Page v. Bucksport, 64 Me. 53; Stickney v. Maidstone, 30 Vt. 741; 2 Greenleaf on Ev., § 210, and cases cited; Atkinson v. Goodrich Transp. Co., 60 Wis. 141.

The border line at which the natural sequence ceases to exist, and it becomes unnatural, is extremely difficult to define with any exactness and must be left with the jury to determine according to the circumstances of each particular case whether the facts fit the standard of naturalness. Harrison v.

of the injury? What test can be applied to the varying standard of human conduct and natural consequences that will correctly solve this problem in all the cases where it arises? Is there any fixed and unbending rule that in every case will clearly distinguish proximate and remote causes, and discriminate between active, efficient causes, and apparent causes that are really merely conditions and not causes of following injuries? No ultimate test of such character has yet been formulated. It is by analysis and synthesis rather than by definition that the distinction between proximate and remote causes must be made.¹ Negligence, as we have seen,² may be actionable or not actionable. That is, it may proximately inflict an injury, or it may result harmlessly, or be but the remote cause or mere condition of an injury, of which some intervening act or negligence is the efficient and proximate cause.³ It follows that, to constitute actionable negligence, there must be not only a causal connection between the negligence complained of and the injury suffered; but the connection must be by a natural and unbroken sequence—without intervening efficient causes—so that but for the negligence of the defendant the injury would not have occurred; it must not only be a cause, but it must be the proximate; that is, the direct and immediate efficient cause of the injury.⁴ There

Berkley, 1 Strobb. L. (S. Car.) 525; s. c., 47 Am. Dec. 578.

1. The strong tendency therefore is always, in recognition of this perplexing state, to submit the question of proximate cause, wherever there is any doubt, to the jury to be decided as a matter of fact; but a test by which they are to be guided and governed is to be given to them by the court. That test will be presented further on. See Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, 474; Haverly v. State Line etc. R. Co., 26 W. N. C. (Pa.) 321; Cosulich v. Standard Oil Co., 55 N. Y. Super. Ct. 385; Wright v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 27 Ill. App. 200; Kreuziger v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 73 Wis. 158; McCabe v. Manhattan R. Co., 6 N. Y. Supp. 418; Sweeney v. New York Steam. Co., 6 N. Y. Supp. 528; Nelson v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 73 Iowa 576; Pierce on Railroads 441.

The question as to whether defendant's want of care was the proximate cause of the injury is of course not always a matter of doubt; therefore, where the facts are undisputed, it is generally a question for the court. Pierce on Railroads 441; Township of West Mahoney v. Watson, 116 Pa. St. 344; post, subtit. XVI, QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT.

2. Ante, subtit. II, ANALYTICAL DESCRIPTION; Shear. & Red. on Neg., §§ 3, 4; Broom's Com. (5th ed.) 368.

3. Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 4; Broom's Com. (5th ed.) 368.

In this latter authority it is stated that "it may be laid down as a true proposition that although bare negligence, unproductive of damage to another, will not give a right of action, negligence causing damage will do so." See also Bishop on Non-Contract Law, §§ 41, 42; McClary v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 3 Neb. 44 (defendant's train was behind time and was destroyed by a storm so that plaintiff was injured. Held, that defendant was not liable, since the proximate cause of the injury was the storm, his lateness being a mere condition). Similar cases are found in Memphis etc. R. Co. v. Reeves, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 176; Morrison v. Davis, 20 Pa. St. 171; Denny v. New York etc. R. Co., 13 Gray (Mass.) 481; s. c., 74 Am. Dec. 645; Dubuque Wood etc. Assoc. v. Dubuque, 30 Iowa 176; Bodkin v. Western Union Tel. Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 134.

4. The definition of a proximate cause as given by Shearman and Redfield (Neg., § 26) is applicable here. "A proximate cause of any event must be understood to be that which in a natural and continuous sequence unbroken are but three classes of cases in which negligence is the proximate cause of an injury, viz: First. When the injury is such a direct and immediate consequence of the negligence as, under the surrounding circumstances of the case, a person of ordinary care and prudence might and ought to have foreseen as likely to follow from the negligence.¹ Second. When the injury, although it could not have been foreseen in form, as a likely and probable consequence, is a natural one, flowing directly and immediately in unbroken sequence, from the negligence, without any possible intervening and probably efficient cause to which it might have been due in whole or in part.² But, if in a case that would otherwise by any new cause, produces that event, and without which that event would not have occurred." Wharton on Neg., § 3; Oil Creek etc. R. Co. v. Keighorn, 74 Pa. St. 320; Louisiana Mut. Ins. Co. v. Tweed, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 52.

See also, as supporting the general proposition of the text (leading cases only are cited), Rockford v. Tripp, 83 Ill. 247; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 381; Patch v. Covington, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 722; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 186; Tutein v. Hurley, 98 Mass. 211; s. c., 93 Am. Dec. 154; Worcester v. Great Falls Mfg. Co., 41 Me. 159; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 217; Fairbanks v. Kerr, 70 Pa. St. 86; s. c., 10 Am. Rep. 664; Ætna Ins. Co. v. Boon, 95 U. S. 130; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Guthrie, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 432; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 478; Donnell v. Jones, 17 Ala. 689; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 194; Harlan v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 65 Mo. 22; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 26; Cooley on Torts 69; Phillips v. Dickerson, 85 Ill. 11; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 609; Mayne on Damages 15.

Therefore, where it appears on the face of the complaint that the negligence charged was not the proximate cause of the injury, a demurrer to the complaint will not be sustained. Kistner v. Indianapolis, 100 Ind. 210; Scheffer v. Washington City etc. R. Co., 105 U. S. 249; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59.

"In order to make a defendant liable, his negligence must be the causa causans and not merely a causa sine qua non. KELLY, C. B., in Lord Bailiffs etc. v. Trinity House, 39 L. J. Exch. 163. See also Saunders on Neg. 7, § 2.

"Proximate."—The use of the word "proximate" has been objected to as failing to convey the proper meaning intended. But even those so objecting recognize the necessity of its use since it has become so completely identified with negligence by its use in all treatises and cases, and indeed the objection seems entirely unfounded. Ehrgott v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 96 N. Y. 264, 281; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 26.

1. Hoag v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 85 Pa. St. 293, 298; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 653; Am. R. Rep. 405; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, 475; Scheffer v. Washington City etc. R. Co., 105 U. S. 249, 252; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59; Sharp v. Powell, L. R., 7 C. P. 253; Phillips v. Dickerson, 85 Ill. 11; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 609; Pollock on Torts 36, 37; Greenland v. Chaplin, 5 Exch. 248; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 739; 2 Thomp. on Neg., 1084-5, § 2; Cooley on Torts 72, et seq.; Smith v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 5 C. P. 98; Exch., L. R., 6 C. P. 14.

Thus, when horses are frightened in a street, it may be foreseen that they may run away, and that such running away may, and probably will, cause injury; therefore, if a party by a negligent act frightens such horses, and causes them to run away, he becomes liable for the injury that may result, since it is but the natural and probable consequence of his wrong doing. Billman v. Indianapolis R. Co., 76 Ind. 166.

2. Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Buck, 96 Ind. 346; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 234; Marble v. Worcester, 4 Gray (Mass.) 397, 405; Smith v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 6 C. P. 14; Cooley on Torts [69-71]; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Kemp, 61 Md. 74; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 220 (leading case); Heirn v. McCaughan, 32 Miss. 17; Williams v. Vanderbilt, 28 N. Y. 217; Cincinnati etc. R. Co. v. Eaton, 94 Ind. 474; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 254.

In the leading case (Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Kemp, supra) Mrs. K was injured slightly by the negligence of the railroad company. Shortly after, a cancer developed in the spot where she had been injured, and in a few months became serious. Operations were per-come within the last rule, there can be found an independent efficient, probable cause, the law will ascribe the injury to this probable cause rather than to the negligence which was not its likely and probable cause, but only to be held so in the absence of any other.¹ Third. When the negligent person knew, or had means of knowing, that consequences not usually resulting from the negligence of which he was guilty would be likely to flow from and be caused by such negligence by reason of some existing cause or condition that would increase and aggravate the effects of the negligence.² This last rule is, after all, but an extension of the first one, because the possession by the negligent person of knowledge or means of knowledge that the unusual consequences are likely to ensue, makes them the direct and immediate results of his negligence—makes them proximate; that is, such as ought to have been foreseen in the light of the circumstances.³

formed, but it was at last pronounced that her affliction was incurable. The railroad company was held liable for all the damages suffered by plaintiff, the court holding that although the consequences were not such as could have been foreseen or ought to have been anticipated, yet since they flowed directly and immediately from defendant's negligence, they must be considered as the proximate results of such negligence. The case of Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Buck, 96 Ind. 346; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 234, is very similar and reaches similar conclusions.

"When it has once been determined that there is evidence of negligence, the person guilty of it is equally liable for its consequences whether he could have foreseen them or not." CHANNELL, B., in Smith v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 6 C. P. 14; Beven on Neg. 81.

"The question always is, was there an unbroken connection between the wrongful act and the injury—a continuous operation? Did the facts constitute a continuous succession of events, so linked together as to make a natural whole, or was there some new and independent cause intervening between the wrong and the injury . . . When there is no intermediate efficient cause, the original wrong must be considered as reaching to the effect, and proximate to it." Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, 475.

1. Scheffer v. Washington City etc. R. Co., 105 U. S. 249; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59; Louisiana Mut. Ins. Co. v. Tweed, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 44; Hoyt v. Jeffers, 30 Mich. 200; Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Mathersbaugh, 71 Ill. 572; Wharton

on Neg., §§ 154, 155; Patterson's R. Ac. Law, p. 28, par. 29. "This case (Louisiana Mut. Ins. Co. v. Tweed, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 44) went to the verge of sound doctrine in holding the explosive to be the proximate cause of the loss of the Alabama warehouse; but it rested on the ground that no other proximate cause was found." MILLER, J., in Scheffer v. Washington City etc. R. Co., 105 U. S. 249; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59.

"We do not say that even the natural and probable consequences of a wrongful act or omission are in all cases to be chargeable to the misfeasance or non-feasance. They are not when there is a sufficient and independent cause operating between the wrong and the injury. In such a case the resort of the sufferer must be to the originator of the intermediate cause. But when there is no intermediate efficient cause, the original wrong must be considered as reaching to the effect and proximate to it." Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, 475.

2. Pollock on Torts 28; Oil City Gas Co. v. Robinson (Pa. 1881), 42 Am. Rep. 391, note; Shepherd v. Midland R. Co., 25 L. T. R., N. S. 879; Bigelow on Torts 313; Scott v. Hunter, 46 Pa. St. 192; s. c., 84 Am. Dec. 542.

"That which a man actually foresees is to him, at all events, natural and probable." Pollock on Torts, p. 28.

3. "Facts which were known to him, or by the use of appropriate diligence would have been known to a prudent man in his place, come into account as a part of the circumstances . . . A man's responsibility may be increased

The correct rule of law, then, is that in cases of negligence the law stops at the immediate cause and direct consequences of the injury, and it is only in cases where the injury was wilful or malum in se, that it goes back to the wilful act or omission, and presumes that all existing conditions were known by the wrongdoer, and all consequences, however improbable, foreseen and intended, and that he is liable for all.¹ In a number of cases cited to the foregoing paragraph acts malum in se were done, and the courts spoke of them as grossly negligent acts, failing to make the accurate and profound distinction that has been clearly made in a number of recent cases between wilfulness and negligence.² Where this error was made, the courts frequently held the guilty person responsible for all the consequences of his act, mediate and immediate, thus tracing the chain of causation backward to the original wrongful act; but in doing so they treated the wilful wrong as mere negligence, which they term "gross," and tried to show that such decisions conformed to the maxim, "Causa proxima, non remota spectatur." The application of this maxim to such cases is erroneous and injurious; for such decisions have been used as authorities to sustain a recovery in cases of mere negligent injury when the negligence was remote in the chain of causation and the consequences unusual and incapable of having been foreseen by the most prudent person. The true principle is that, where an act is malum in se or wilful, the person guilty of it is liable for all the consequences, however remote, because the act is quasi criminal in its character, and the law conclusively presumes that all the consequences were foreseen and intended. And in many cases the character of the act and the circumstances under which it was done raise a conclusive presumption that it was wilful.³

by his happening to be in possession of some material information beyond what he might be expected to have." Pollock on Torts, p. 356.

1. Carklin v. Thompson, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 221; Loop v. Litchfield, 42 N. Y. 358 (druggist selling medicine wrongly labelled); Broom's Leg. Maxims (7th ed.) 267; Scheffer v. Washington City etc. R. Co., 105 U. S. 249; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59; Pennsylvania Co. v. Whitlock, 99 Ind. 16; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 71; Billman v. Indianapolis R. Co., 76 Ind. 178; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 230; Forney v. Geldmacher, 75 Mo. 113; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 388; Indiana etc. R. Co. v. Birney, 71 Ill. 391; Lewis v. Flint etc. R. Co., 54 Mich. 55; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 263-265; Kistner v. Indianapolis, 100 Ind. 220, 221; Henry v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 76 Mo. 288; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 136; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 762; Marble v. Worcester, 4 Gray (Mass.) 397, 405; Carter v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 98 Ind. 555; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 347; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 360; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 780; Sherman v. Stage Co., 24 Iowa 563; Reynolds v. Clark, 1 Ld. Raym. 1401; s. c., 1 Stra. 635; Weick v. Lauder, 75 Ill. 93; Holmes on Com. Law 92; Bigelow on Torts 312, 313; Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Graham, 95 Ind. 293; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 77.

2. Ante, subtit. III, 1, INADVERTENCE, etc.; Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Graham, 95 Ind. 298; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 77; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 719; Pennsylvania Co. v. Smith, 98 Ind. 42; Ivens v. Cincinnati etc. R. Co., 103 Ind. 27; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 106 Ind. 73; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Bryan, 107 Ind. 51.

3. Bigelow on Torts 313; Reg. v. Hicklin, L. R., 3 Q. B. D. 360; 1 Bishop's Crim. Law (7th ed.), §§ 244, 314, 345, 328, 334, 335, 343; 2 Id., §§ 637, 639, 693; 2 Bish. Cr. Procedure (2nd ed.), §

Cases where acts or omissions, wilful or malum in se, have been treated as negligent, and a mistaken attempt made to bring them within the maxim above quoted, are numerous.¹ But other cases seem to recognize the principle that it was because the original act was malum in se that there was a liability for all the consequences, remote as well as proximate.² And it is in such cases that negligence on the part of the plaintiff which is a proximate cause of injury is held not to bar his right of recovery.³ A cause of confusion in these doctrines just discussed is found in cases, of which there are a few in the books, where there was a long chain of apparent causes, only one of which, and that the first in order of time, was efficient and proximate, and where the original act or omission constituting such cause was also malum in se, or capable of being presumed in law to have been wilful.⁴ In still other cases, what seems a remote cause is held proximate, because on examining the chain of causation no other proximate cause 801; 2 Bish. Cr. Law, §§ 680, 681, 688, 922, 1279; Bish. on Non-Contract Law, §§ 16, 501.

"So far mischief was originally intended; not any particular mischief, but mischief indiscriminate and wanton. Whatever mischief, therefore, follows, he is the author of it; egreditur personam, as the phrase in criminal cases. And though criminal cases are no rules for civil ones, yet in trespass I think there is an analogy." DE GREY, J., in Scott v. Shepherd, 2 W. Bl. 892; 1 Sm. Lea. Cas. (7th ed.) 872.

1. Jefferson etc. R. Co. v. Riley, 39 Ind. 568; Drake v. Kiely, 93 Pa. St. 495; Indianapolis etc. R. Co. v. McBrown, 46 Ind. 232, 233; Clark v. Chambers, 7 Cent. L. J. 11. It is unnecessary to cite all the cases of this character. The books are full of them, and many of them have already been referred to.

2. Bloom v. Franklin L. Ins. Co., 97 Ind. 478; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 469; Billman v. Indianapolis etc. R. Co., 76 Ind. 166, 178; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 230; Binford v. Johnson, 82 Ind. 426; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 508; Forney v. Geldmacher, 75 Mo. 113; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 388; Weick v. Lauder, 75 Ill. 93; Claxton v. Lexington etc. R. Co., 13 Bush (Ky.) 636.

3. Carter v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 98 Ind. 555; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 347; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 360; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 780; Cook v. Central R. Co. etc., 67 Ala. 533.

4. Foremost among cases of this character is the famous "squib case." Scott v. Shepherd, 3 Wils. 403; 2 Wm. Bl. 892; 1 Smith's L. Cas. (7th ed.) 755.

Others are Ricker v. Freeman, 50 N. H. 420; s. c., 9 Am. Rep. 267; Thomas v. Winchester (drug dealer case), 6 N. Y. 397, 405; Henry v. Dennis, 93 Ind. 452; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 379; Hughes v. McDonough, 43 N. J. L. 459; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 653.

The best illustration of the principle maintained in the text is that afforded by the case of Scheffer v. Washington City etc. R. Co., 105 U. S. 249; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59 (suicide case), i. e., that if the original act had been wilful or malum in se, it would have been proper to hold defendant liable; and this very thing was done in the Riley case (Jeffersonville etc. R. Co. v. Riley, 39 Ind. 568), where a brakeman threw a burning brand from the train towards the spot where passengers were accustomed to get on and alight from the train, because the act of W, the brakeman, in throwing the burning stick, was of such a character that it was conclusively presumed that all the consequences were foreseen and intended. Upon no other ground can the decision be sustained, although this reason may not have been the one given by the court.

The case of Forney v. Geldmacher, 75 Mo. 113; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 388, is also a conspicuous example of this doctrine; defendant's original act having been wilful, he was held liable even for remote consequences. And in an Illinois case a similar state of facts was the basis of a decision similar to the Missouri case. Rockford v. Tripp, 83 Ill. 247; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 381. So also in the old case of Durham v. Musselman, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 96; s. c., 18 Am.

appears, supposed intervening causes being found merely conditions or occasions and not efficient causes.¹ In this class of cases conditions and occasions are often, but erroneously, insisted on as proximate causes.²

1. Proximate Cause Defined.—In the light of this discussion a proximate cause may be defined as that cause which in natural and continuous sequence, unbroken by any efficient, intervening cause, produced the result complained of, and without which that result would not have occurred.³ And it is laid down in many cases, and by leading text writers, that “in order to warrant a finding that negligence, or an act not amounting to wanton wrong, is the proximate cause of an injury, it must appear that the injury was the natural and probable consequence of the negligence or wrongful act, and that it was such as might or ought to have been foreseen in the light of the attending circumstances.”⁴ But this latter rule, although one often applied,

Dec. 133, where this principle was at least partially recognized. See also Henry v. Dennis, 93 Ind. 453; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 381.

1. Louisiana Mut. Ins. Co. v. Tweed, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 65; Ehrgott v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 96 N. Y. 264; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 622; Sauter v. New York Cent. R. Co., 66 N. Y. 50; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 18; Griggs v. Fleckenstein, 14 Minn. 81; Brown v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 54 Wis. 342; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 444; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 41; Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Buck, 96 Ind. 346; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 234; Beven on Neg. 82.

2. Sherman v. Stage Co., 24 Iowa 563; Story on Bailments, §§ 241, 242.

3. This is substantially the same as that given by Shearman and Redfield in their excellent work on negligence (§ 26) except that, instead of saying with them, “. . . unbroken by any new cause,” etc., we consider it more correct to say, “unbroken by any efficient intervening cause,” etc. See also Wharton on Neg., § 97; Oil Creek etc. R. Co. v. Keighorn, 74 Pa. St. 320; Louisiana Mut. Ins. Co. v. Tweed, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 44; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469; Scheffer v. Washington City etc. R. Co., 105 U. S. 249; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59; Hoag v. Lake Shore R. Co., 85 Pa. St. 293, 298; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 653; Pollock on Torts 36, 37; and numerous cases cited throughout this discussion. And see especially the discussion of this question in Beven on Negligence, pp. 80, 81, 90.

On this subject MR. BISHOP has to say: “Nor yet is it possible there should be any such enunciation of this doctrine as will furnish alone the practical guide needed for every sort of case. But with proximate accuracy we may define the immediate cause, which is adequate to charge the party putting it forth, to be any wrong sufficient in magnitude for the law to take cognizance of it, wherefrom, operating either alone or in conjunction with anything else, the injury comes as a first, final, or intermediate consequence. And the inadequate, remote cause, which is not sufficient to charge the party, we may define to be one which has so far expended itself, that its influence in producing the injury is too minute for the law's notice; or a cause which some independent force merely took advantage of to accomplish something not the probable or natural effect thereof. Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 41.

4. Notice the language of the United States supreme court in the leading case of Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Kellogg (94 U. S. 469, 475): “It is admitted that the rule is difficult of application, but it is generally held that, in order to warrant a finding that negligence, or an act not amounting to wanton wrong, is the proximate cause of an injury, it must appear that the injury was the natural and probable consequence of the negligence or wrongful act and that it ought to have been foreseen in the light of the attending circumstances.”

So in another leading case, Hoag v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co. (85 Pa. St. 293, 298; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 653; Am. R. Rep. 405), the court in passing upon the question of proximate cause observes: “A man's responsibility for his negligence and that of his servants must end somewhere. There is a possibility of carrying an admittedly correct principle too far . . . The true rule is that the injury must be the natural and probable consequence of the [defendant's] negligence—such a consequence, as, under the surrounding circumstances of the case, might and ought to have been foreseen by the wrongdoer as likely to flow from his act. This is not a limitation of the maxim causa proxima, non remota spectatur; it only affects its application." See also Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hope, 80 Pa. St. 373; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 100; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Kerr, 62 Pa. St. 353; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 431.

In 2 Thompson on Neg. 1085, § 2, in criticising a definition which defined a proximate cause thus, "He who is chargeable with the first wrongful act or neglect which occasions, through a connected series of causes and effects, an injury to another, without his fault, is responsible for the injury, provided there is no intermediate responsible cause" (Goshen Turnpike Co. v. Sears, 7 Conn. 86, 94)—the learned author observes that the definition is faulty "in that it omits the element that the result for which the actor is responsible must be one that he might reasonably have foreseen."

Shearman and Redfield (Neg., § 739) say that the defendant is liable only for such damages as were proximately caused by his default, the extent of which is defined "as being such as a prudent and experienced man, fully acquainted with all the circumstances which in fact existed, whether they could have been ascertained by reasonable diligence or not, would, at the time of the negligent act, have thought reasonably possible to follow, if they had been suggested to his mind."

In Phillips v. Dickerson, 85 Ill. 11; s. c., 28 Am. Rep. 607, 609, the court concludes its opinion: "The injury in question, not being one which the defendant could reasonably be expected to anticipate as likely to flow from his conduct, we cannot regard it as the natural consequence thereof for which defendant is legally responsible." The court there also quotes and approves the doctrine in Mayne on Damages 15; viz, that the injury must be the natural and probable consequence of defendant's negligence.

In Pollock on Torts (36, 37), after a clear statement of the general principles as to proximate cause, the author states: "This being the standard it follows that if in a particular case the harm complained of is not such as a reasonable man in the defendant's place should have foreseen as likely to happen, there is no wrong and no liability."

And this principle as uniformly laid down by the foregoing authorities is supported by a long array of cases of high authority. Greenland v. Chaplin, 5 Exch. 248; Clark v. Chambers, 3 Q. B. Div. 327; Sharp v. Powell, L. R., 7 Ch. 253; Illidge v. Goodwin, 5 Carr. & P. 190; Borradaile v. Brunton, 8 Taunt. 535; Ward v. Weeks, 7 Bing. 211 (consequences must be natural as well as proximate); Kelly v. Partington, 5 B. & Ad. 645 (same principle); Harrison v. Berkley, 1 Strobb. L. (S. Car.) 525; s. c., 47 Am. Dec. 578; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Taylor, 104 Pa. St. 306; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 580; Scheffer v. Washington City etc. R. Co., 105 U. S. 249, 252; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59 (where leading case of Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Kellogg was cited and approved); McDonald v. Snelling, 14 Allen (Mass.) 290 (cited and approved in Scheffer v. Washington City etc. R. Co.); s. c., 92 Am. Dec. 768, 771; Morrison v. Davis, 20 Pa. St. 171, 175; Campbell v. Stillwater, 32 Minn. 308; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 567-569, note (in the note numerous authorities are collected sustaining the principle in question); Lane v. Atlantic Works, 111 Mass. 136; Hill v. Winsor, 118 Mass. 251; Atchison v. Goodrich Transp. Co., 60 Wis. 141; Toledo etc. R. Co. v. Muthersbaugh, 71 Ill. 572; Tutein v. Hurley, 98 Mass. 211; Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Locke, 112 Ind. 404 (tall brakeman on tall car); McClary v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 3 Neb. 44; Township of West Mahoney v. Watson, 112 Pa. St. 574; Cooley on Torts 69-71; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 43; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Guthrie, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 432; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 478; Glover v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 3 Q. B. 25. Each of these cases sustains directly, and not merely by insinuation, the principle announced.

Also MCKINSTRY, J., in Henry v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 50 Cal. 183, has to say: "A long series of judicial decisions has defined proximate or immediate and direct damages to be ordinary and natural results of the negligence, such as are usual, and therefore as might have been expected." 2 is no test in cases where no intervening efficient cause is found between the original wrongful act and the injurious consequence complained of, and in which such consequences, although not probable, have actually followed in unbroken sequence from the original wrong doing.¹ Consequences which follow in unbroken sequence, without an intervening efficient cause, from the original Thomp. on Neg. 1083, note; Rigby v. Hewitt, 5 Exch. 240; Doggett v. Richmond etc. R. Co., 78 N. Car. 305; Lake v. Mulliken, 62 Me. 240; Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Barker, 4 Colo. 344. See also Patterson's R. Acc. Law, 11 et seq., § 14; Chicago v. Starr, 42 Ill. 174; s. c., 89 Am. Dec. 422 (this case cited and approved in Bellefontaine etc. R. Co. v. Snyder, 18 Ohio St. 399; s. c., 98 Am. Dec. 181); McGrew v. Stone, 53 Pa. St. 436; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 21.

The case supra (Chicago v. Starr, 42 Ill. 174; s. c., 89 Am. Dec. 422) was where a child had been killed by a counter, which had been allowed to remain on the sidewalk, falling on him in an unexpected manner. The court said: "While the counter was an obstruction, it was a very slight one. . . . During the two or three weeks it remained there it probably never occurred to anyone who saw it that human life or limb would be jeopardized by its presence there . . . The most prudent and cautious persons would never have anticipated such an accident . . . The question is, what would have been the course of a prudent person prior to the accident?" Therefore it was held that the child's administrator could not recover damages from the city.

1. To every effect there must be a proximate cause, and therefore, when it appears that defendant's negligence might have caused the injury and an unbroken natural sequence of cause and effect runs back to the negligence as the cause, no efficient intervening cause appearing, the negligence is held the proximate cause of the injury.

This rule has been approved in Mississippi and Wisconsin cases, where it is said: "That the maxim causa proxima, etc., includes not only liability for all natural and probable injuries having origin in the wrongful act or omission, but such injuries as are likely in ordinary circumstances to ensue from the act or omission in question; and it has been ruled in England that it is not necessary to a defendant's liability, after you have established negligence, to show in addition thereto that the consequences of the negligence could have been foreseen." SHERWOOD, J., in Miller v. St. Louis etc. R., 90 Mo. 389; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 254, 257, citing Kellogg v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 26 Wis. 223; Smith v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 6 C. P. 21; Higgins v. Dewey, 107 Mass. 494; Wharton on Neg., § 20; Smith on Law of Neg. *16.

"The wrong of the appellant put in motion the destructive agency, and the result is directly attributable to that wrong. In this instance cause and effect are interlinked. There is no break. The chain is perfect and complete." ELLIOTT, J., in Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Nitsche (Ind. 1890), 45 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 532.

"When it has once been determined that there is evidence of negligence, the person guilty of it is equally liable for its consequences whether he could have foreseen them or not." Smith v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 6 C. P. 14; L. R., 5 C. P. 98; Beven on Neg. 80, 81.

"It is insisted that the act of the defendant was only the remote cause of the injury. When the cow was thrown by the engine, it struck the ground, bounced and fell against plaintiff. The bounce and fall of the cow was the immediate cause, but it was merely incidental, and was not an independent agency, which had no connection with the act of the defendant. The direct cause was put in operation by the force of the engine, which continued until the injury; and injuries directly produced by instrumentalities thus put in operation and continued are proximate consequences of the primary act, though they may not have been contemplated or foreseen. The relation of cause and effect between the primary cause and the injury is established by the connection and succession of the intervening circumstances. If the cow was thrown from the track by the negligence of defendant, the injury cannot be regarded as a purely accidental occurrence for which no action lies." Ala-wrong, are natural;¹ and for such consequences the original wrongdoer must be held responsible, even though he could not have foreseen the particular results, provided that by the exercise of ordinary care he might have foreseen that some injury would result from his negligence.² No other proximate cause being found the original wrong is held proximate,³ and no wrong-doer ought to be allowed to apportion or qualify his own wrong; and as a loss (or injury) has actually happened while his own wrongful act was in force and operation, he ought not to be permitted to set up as a defence that there was a more immediate cause of loss, if that cause was put in operation by his own wrongful act.⁴ But of course, if the original act of the defendant, although it was the proximate cause of an injury in this latter sense, was not negligent, the fact that it was the proximate cause of such injury will not warrant a recovery.⁵ And it cannot be held negligent, unless the defendant by the use of ordinary care under the circumstances, could have foreseen that it might result in some injury to some person.⁶ The bama etc. R. Co. v. Chapman, 80 Ala. 615; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 394. See also Louisiana Mut. Ins. Co. v. Tweed, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 44; Ehr Gott v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 96 N. Y. 264; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 622; Cincinnati R. Co. v. Eaton, 94 Ind. 474; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 254; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 179; Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Buck, 96 Ind. 346; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 226; Sauter v. New York Cent. etc. R. Co., 66 N. Y. 50; Brown v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 54 Wis. 342; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 444; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 41.

The case of Delaware etc. R. Co. v. Salmon, 38 N. J. L. 5; s. c., 39 N. J. L. 299, discusses this whole question and presents an admirable review of the authorities.

1. See CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 42, where a great number of cases are collected to prove that natural consequences are always proximate. See also Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Kemp, 61 Md. 74; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 220; Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Buck, 96 Ind. 346; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 234; 49 Am. Rep. 168; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469; Webster's Int. Dict., Natural.

2. Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Kemp, 61 Md. 74, 619; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 220; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 134; Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Buck, 96 Ind. 346; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 234; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 168; Liming v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. (Iowa 1890), 47 N. W. Rep. 67; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469; 1 Suth. Dam. 47; Lowery v. Manhattan R. Co., 99 N. Y. 158; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 276; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Krimming, 87 Ind. 351; Hill v. Winsor, 118 Mass. 251; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 457.

"Where there is evidence of negligence, the person guilty of it is equally liable for its consequences, whether he could have foreseen them or not." Beven on Neg. 83, 90; Smith v. London & S. W. R. Co., L. R., 5 C. P. 98; L. R., 6 C. P. 14.

3. Louisiana Mut. Ins. Co. v. Tweed, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 44; Ehr Gott v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 96 N. Y. 264; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 622; Brown v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 54 Wis. 342; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 444; Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Buck, 96 Ind. 346; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 226.

4. Beauchamp v. Saginaw Min. Co., 50 Mich. 163, 172; Liming v. Illinois etc. R. Co. (Iowa 1890), 47 N. W. Rep. 67; Doris v. Garrett, 6 Bing. 716; Lilley v. Doubleday, 7 Q. B. Div. 511; Beven on Neg. 76.

5. It is evident that there can be no recovery for an injury where there is no fault on the part of the party causing the injury. See, ante, the various DEFINITIONS OF ACTIONABLE NEGLIGENCE. See also Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 15 (no actionable negligence where there is no breach of duty); Brown v. Kendall, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 292 (defendant accidentally wounded plaintiff in attempting to separate fighting dogs); Morris v. Platt, 32 Conn. 75; Bizzel v. Booker, 16 Ark. 308; ACCIDENT, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 83, et seq.

6. Pollock on Torts 36, 37; Shear. & fallacy in the usual rule consists in the attempt to apply the test of ordinary care as a test of proximate cause.¹ A defendant may have proximately caused an injury without having been guilty of any want of ordinary care, in which event he is not chargeable with negligence, and therefore is not liable for the injury inflicted by him; and in such case the injury must be held to be the result of an inevitable accident.²

VII. COMBINED AND CONCURRENT CAUSES.—It is no defence in an action for a negligent injury that the negligence of a third person, Red. on Neg., § 10; ante, subtit. III, 3, ORDINARY CARE; Beauchamp v. Saginaw Min. Co., 50 Mich. 163.

For example, where defendant used a common article for dyeing clothes, not known at the time to be injurious, a purchaser of the cloth injured by handling it cannot recover. Since no one could be expected to foresee such a result it was no want of ordinary care to fail to provide against it. Gould v. Slater Woolen Co., 147 Mass. 315.

1. Beven on Neg. 80, 81; Smith v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 5 C. P. 98; L. R., 6 C. P. 14; 39 L. J., C. P. 68; Patterson's R. Acc. Law 13, et seq.; Pollock on Torts 36, 37.

This mistake will be seen by a close examination of the reasoning pursued in many cases; for example, in MR. POLLOCK'S exposition upon this immediate point, i. e., the test of proximate cause, it is said, after stating the definition of negligence: "Now, a reasonable man can be guided only by a reasonable estimate of probabilities. If men went about to guard themselves against every risk to themselves or others, which might by ingenious conjunction be conceived as possible, human affairs could not be carried on at all. A reasonable man, then, to whose ideal behavior we are to look as a standard of duty, will neither neglect what he can forecast as probable nor waste his anxiety on events that are barely possible. He will order his precaution by the measure of what appears likely in the known course of things." Pollock on Torts 36, 37.

In the case of Greenland v. Chapman, so much relied on, it is laid down that "a person is expected to anticipate and guard against all reasonable consequences, but that he is not expected to anticipate and guard against that which no reasonable man would expect to occur." Greenland v. Chapman, 5 Exch. 248. In the case of Chicago v. Starr, 42 Ill. 174; s. c., 89 Am. Dec. 422, where a child was killed by a counter falling on him in a very unusual manner, the counter having been left on the sidewalk, the court observed: "During the two or three weeks that it remained there, it probably never occurred to anyone who saw it that human life or limb would be jeopardized by its presence there . . . The most prudent and cautious person would never anticipate such an accident . . . The question is, What would have been the course of a prudent person prior to the accident?" It will be seen, therefore, that, in the three authorities just cited, which are greatly relied on, the idea that negligence is the proximate cause only of such damage as might and ought to have been foreseen, arises from an attempt to apply as a test of proximate cause what is really only the test of ordinary care. The confusion of these two tests leads to mistake, and has in many cases produced an erroneous exposition of the doctrine of proximate cause.

MR. SMITH sets forth the distinction between the two tests very clearly: "The word 'proximately' is to be distinguished from the word 'culpably.' An act, to be culpable, that is, to be a breach of legal duty, must, as we have seen, be such as a reasonably careful man would foresee would be productive of injury, and the person is not liable for an injury which he could not foresee; but a breach of duty to be proximately producing injury must be such that whether defendant could foresee the injury to be probable or not, the breach of duty is in fact the probable cause of the injury." Smith on Law of Negligence *16. See also Blythe v. Birmingham Water Works, 11 Exch. 781.

2. Brown v. Kendall, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 292 (dog and cane case); Morris v. Platt, 32 Conn. 75; s. c., INEVITABLE ACCIDENT, 10 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

or an inevitable accident, or an inanimate thing, contributed to cause the injury of the plaintiff, if the negligence of the defendant was an efficient cause of the injury.¹ In such cases the fact that some other cause operates with the negligence of the defendant in producing the injury does not relieve the defendant from liability.² His original wrong, concurring with some other cause, and both operating proximately at the same time in the production of the injury, he is liable to respond in damages

1. 2 Thomp. on Neg. 1085, § 3; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, §§ 39, 450-452; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 31, et seq.; Eaton v. Boston etc. R. Co., 11 Allen (Mass.) 500; s. c., 87 Am. Dec. 730; McDonald v. Snelling, 14 Allen (Mass.) 292; Ætna Ins. Co. v. Boon, 95 U. S. 117; Carterville v. Cook, 129 Ill. 152; s. c., 16 Am. St. Rep. 248; Atkinson v. Goodrich Transp. Co., 60 Wis. 141; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 352; Lake v. Milliken, 62 Me. 240; s. c., 16 Am. Rep. 456; Small v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 55 Iowa 582; Johnson v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 31 Minn. 57; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 460; Galveston v. Posnainsky, 62 Tex. 118; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 517, 518; Campbell v. Stillwater, 32 Minn. 308; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 567.

Negligence of Surgeon Following Injury by Defendant.—Where a party has been injured by the negligence of the defendant and uses ordinary care in endeavoring to be healed and in his selection of his surgeons, but owing to the negligence of the latter the injury is increased, the defendant (i. e., the original wrongdoer) will be held responsible even for the increase of the injury. Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Bluhm, 109 Ill. 20; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 87; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 601, note; Loeser v. Humphrey, 41 Ohio St. 378; Lyons v. Erie etc. R. Co., 57 N. Y. 489; Rice v. Des Moines, 40 Iowa 638; Collins v. Council Bluffs, 32 Iowa 324; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 200; Stover v. Inhabitants of Bluehill, 51 Me. 439; Eastman v. Sanborn, 3 Allen (Mass.) 594; Lawrence v. Housatonic etc. R. Co., 29 Conn. 390; Schmidt v. Mitchell, 84 Ill. 195; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 18.

The fact that plaintiff was himself a physician and surgeon does not alter the rule as to the degree of care he is required to exercise. Boynton v. Somersworth, 58 N. H. 321.

2. Combined and Concurrent Causes.—In case of injury caused by accident and defendant's negligence concurring, the defendant is liable if without his negligence the injury would not have been caused by the accident alone. And this same rule applies in all cases where the negligence of the party defendant is one of two or more concurrent causes. Eaton v. Boston etc. R. Co., 11 Allen (Mass.) 500; s. c., 87 Am. Dec. 730; ante, subtit. INEVITABLE ACCIDENT; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 41, and cases cited; ACCIDENT, vol. 1, 82; ACT OF GOD, vol. 1, 178; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. School Dist., 96 Pa. St. 65; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 106; Ellett v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 76 Mo. 518; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 183; 2 Thomp. on Neg. 1085, § 3; Carterville v. Cook, 129 Ill. 152; s. c., 16 Am. St. Rep. 248.

"Where an injury is the combined result of the negligence of the defendant and an accident (i. e., a cause), for which neither the plaintiff nor defendant is responsible, the defendant must pay damages, unless the injury would have happened if he had not been negligent." 2 Thomp. on Neg. 1085, § 3; Palmer v. Inhabitants of Andover, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 600; Austin v. New Jersey Steamboat Co., 43 N. Y. 75; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 663 ("a party cannot avail himself of the defence of 'inevitable accident,' who by his own negligence gets into a position which renders the accident inevitable"); Hey v. Philadelphia, 81 Pa. St. 44; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 733; Pitcomb v. Fitchburg R. Co., 12 Allen (Mass.) 254; Clark v. Barrington, 41 N. H. 44; Kelsey v. Glover, 15 Vt. 708; Morse v. Richmond, 41 Vt. 435; Woodward v. Aborn, 35 Me. 271; Macauley v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 67 N. Y. 602; Hull v. Kansas City, 54 Mo. 598; Aurora v. Pulfer, 56 Ill. 270.

Plaintiff was about to enter a street car, having mounted the platform, when the driver suddenly whipped up to avoid a collision with a runaway team. The sudden jolt threw plaintiff to the ground and he was run over and injured by the runaway team. In an action against the railway company, it was whether the other cause was a guilty or an innocent one.¹ In

held, that, admitting the railway company to have been guilty of negligence, it could not be held liable since it was not the proximate cause of the injury. The action of the defendant was not a concurrent cause, but a mere condition of the injury. South Side etc. R. Co. v. Trich, 117 Pa. St. 390; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 549.

Plaintiff's injury resulted from being pushed or jostled off a sidewalk which was more than six feet from the ground, and not protected by railing or guard. It was held that he might recover of the city, since his injury resulted from its failure to provide proper walks; and the fact that some third party was guilty of negligence in pushing him off does not relieve the city from liability. Carterville v. Cook, 129 Ill. 152; s. c., 16 Am. St. Rep. 248.

Does Not Apply in Case of Contributory Negligence.—But where the two concurring causes are the defendant's negligence and plaintiff's negligence, this rule does not apply. In that case, the rule is that defendant is not liable unless his negligence would alone have produced the injury. CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 17, § 4.

Thus, in a certain case, P fastened his horse with a stout rope by the side of a public street; a steam whistle upon the top of U's factory, about 15 rods distant, was blown, as a notice to the operatives, producing a sound shrill and calculated to frighten ordinary horses; the horse pulled violently at his rope, which gave way, and he was killed. It was found that if the whistle had not been sounded, the horse would not have pulled; and that if the horse had been free from the habit of pulling, he would not have been killed. Held, that the death of the horse could not be regarded as caused by the negligence of U, and that he was not liable. Parker v. Union Woollen Co., 42 Conn. 399.

Exception.—But this rule laid down at the head of this note must be taken in connection with the rule already fixed—that a person is liable only when his act is the proximate cause of the injury—therefore, where although the two causes seem to concur, yet the injury is clearly the proximate result of a cause other than defendant's negligence, he is not liable. Ante, subtit. PROXIMATE CAUSE.

Thus, a train wrongfully obstructed a street crossing. Animals were thus prevented from crossing, and while they stood waiting on the other track, another train came along and injured them. It was held that the obstruction was not the proximate cause of the injury. Brown v. Wabash etc. R. Co., 20 Mo. App. 222.

The illegal obstruction of a highway by a freight train standing across it is not the proximate cause of the injury which a driver, who is waiting to get across the track, may suffer from having his horses frightened by a passing train while he is detained there. Selleck v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 58 Mich. 195; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 338.

So, where goods are injured or destroyed by a cause for which defendant is not liable, but such goods would not have been so injured if defendant had not been negligent, so that he failed to carry them away when he should, it is generally held, that defendant is not liable for such damage. Here, although his negligence concurs with the other cause, yet the second cause is the proximate cause and his negligence a remote one; therefore, he is not liable. See Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 40, where the cases are all collected. See also ante, subtit. PROXIMATE CAUSE; Denny v. New York Cent. R. Co., 13 Gray (Mass.) 481; McClary v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 3 Neb. 44; Dubuque Wood etc. Assoc. v. Dubuque, 30 Iowa 176; Morrison v. Davis, 20 Pa. St. 171; Memphis etc. R. Co. v. Reeves, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 176; Daniels v. Ballantine, 23 Ohio St. 532. Compare, however, Condict v. Grand Trunk etc. R. Co., 54 N. Y. 500, and cases cited; Michaels v. New York etc. R. Co., 30 N. Y. 564; Denning v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 48 N. H. 455; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 267; Pruitt v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 62 Mo. 527.

1. 2 Thomp. on Neg. 1084, § 3; ACCIDENT, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 82, 83; INEVITABLE ACCIDENT, vol. 10, 601, 602; Goshen etc. Turnpike Co. v. Sears, 7 Conn. 86, 94; Clark v. Barrington, 41 N. H. 44; Atchison v. King, 9 Kan. 550; Aurora v. Pulfer, 56 Ill. 270; Ricker v. Freeman, 50 N. H. 420; Eaton v. Boston etc. R. Co., 11 Allen (Mass.) 500; s. c., 87 Am. Dec. 730; Simmons v. New Bedford etc. Steamboat Co., 97 Mass. 368; Transfer Co. v. Kelly, 36 Ohio St. 92; Mann v.

cases of this character the negligence of two independent persons may concurrently result in injury to a third, in which event the injured party may maintain his action against either or both of the negligent parties.¹ And so the action may be maintained when a predisposition to disease concurs with the negligence of the defendant in producing the injury,² but the disease under such circumstances is rather a condition than a cause.³ And where an existing disease is simply aggravated by the negligence of a defendant the recovery must be limited to compensation for Weiland, 81½ Pa. St. 256; Otten v. Cohen, 1 N. Y. Supp. 430.

"It is no defence for a person against whom negligence, which caused the injury, is proved, to prove that without fault on his part the same damages would have resulted from the act of another." Slater v. Mersereau, 64 N. Y. 138, citing Webster v. Hudson River R. Co., 38 N. Y. 260; Van Steenburg v. Tobias, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 562.

1. Carterville v. Cook, 129 Ill. 152; s. c., 16 Am. St. Rep. 248, 250, note (in the note a great number of cases is collected); Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Cummings, 106 U. S. 700; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 254; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, §§ 39, 450; Slater v. Mersereau, 64 N. Y. 138.

E. g., two independent contractors, were negligent in performing their respective portions of a certain work whereby plaintiff's goods were injured; it could not be ascertained as to the exact degree in which the negligence each contributed to the injury. In all such cases the plaintiff may recover of either or of both of the wrongdoers. The reason of the rule lies in the fact that it is impossible to separate the effects produced by the two concurring causes, and it is unreasonable that plaintiff should be refused redress because he was injured by two or more wrongdoers instead of one. The law considers each of the defendant actors as causing the whole injury. Slater v. Mersereau, 64 N. Y. 138; 2 Thompson on Neg. 1088, § 5; Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Shacklet, 105 Ill. 364; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 166; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 791; Cooley on Torts 824; North etc. R. Co. v. Mahoney, 57 Pa. St. 187; Cleveland etc. R. Co. v. Terry, 8 Ohio St. 570; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Spencer, 98 Ind. 186; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 478.

But here again confusion must be avoided whereby a remote cause might be held liable. Thus in the "squib case" many persons participated in the injury, but only the original actor was the real cause. Scott v. Shepherd, 3 Wils. 403; s. c., 1 Smith's L. Cas. 417; Sharpe v. Powell, L. R., 7 C. P. 253.

The principle is as old as the law that in case of joint tortfeasors either or all must be liable, since it is unjust to throw upon plaintiff the burden of showing the separate damage caused by each. If this were true, a party might by uniting others with him commit any degree of wrong and remain free from liability. Cooley on Torts (2nd ed.) [133], 153; Miller v. Fenton, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 18; Turner v. Hitchcock, 20 Iowa 310; Woodbridge v. Conner, 49 Me. 353; Brown v. Perkins, 1 Allen (Mass.) 89; Barden v. Felch, 109 Mass. 154; Page v. Freeman, 19 Mo. 421; Wright v. Lathrop, 2 Ohio 33; Du Bose v. Marx, 52 Ala. 506; Power v. Baker, 27 Fed. Rep. 396. See also, post, subtit. PARTIES TO ACTION FOR NEGLIGENCE.

2. McNamara v. Clintonville, 62 Wis. 207; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 722; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Kemp, 61 Md. 74; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 220; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 134 (plaintiff had predisposition to cancer); Com. v. Warner, 4 McLean (U. S.) 464; Com. v. Fox, 7 Gray (Mass.) 585; Kitteringham v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 62 Iowa 285; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 14; Heirn v. McCaughan, 32 Miss. 17; Mobile etc. R. Co. v. McArthur, 43 Miss. 180; Stewart v. Ripon, 38 Wis. 584; McAllister v. State, 17 Ala. 434; Jewell v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 55 N. H. 84. Compare Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Barker, 4 Colo. 344. This last case, however, has been repudiated in many cases, and never accepted anywhere.

3. McNamara v. Clintonville, 62 Wis. 207; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 722; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Kemp, 61 Md. 74; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 220; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 134.

the aggravation, and cannot extend to damages for the existence of the disease itself;¹ while on the other hand the disease cannot be treated as an intervening efficient cause that will make defendant's negligence remote in the chain of causation.² This brings us to the consideration of

VIII. INTERVENING EFFICIENT CAUSES.—An intervening efficient cause is a new and independent force which breaks the causal connection between the original wrong and the injury and itself becomes the direct and immediate—that is, the proximate cause of an injury.³ A mere condition or occasion cannot be considered such a cause—indeed, it is not a cause at all.⁴ There may be, as we have just seen, concurrent causes, both of which are proximate, or perhaps more correctly, there may be concurrent causes, both of which in combination are the proximate cause of

1. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Falvey, 104 Ind. 409; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 522; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Snyder, 117 Ind. 435; 37 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Jones, 108 Ind. 551; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 170; Allison v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 42 Iowa 274; Northern etc. R. Co. v. State, 29 Md. 420; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 31.

2. McNamara v. Clintonville, 62 Wis. 207; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 722; Heirn v. McCaughan, 32 Miss. 17; Williams v. Vanderbilt, 28 N. Y. 217; Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Buck, 96 Ind. 346; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 234.

3. Bishop on Non-Contract Law, §§ 42, 835, 836, Pennsylvania Co. v. Whitlock, 99 Ind. 16; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 71; Fairbanks v. Kerr, 70 Pa. St. 86; s. c., 10 Am. Rep. 664. See also Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 31, et seq.; Scheffer v. Washington City etc. R. Co., 105 U. S. 249; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59; Read v. Nichols, 118 N. Y. 224 (wind an intervening cause, just as in Pa. Co. v. Whitlock, supra); Beall v. Township of Athens, 81 Mich. 536; cases in note following.

Thus, in the case of Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Kelsey (Ala. 1890), 7 So. Rep. 648, the plaintiff shipped a stallion in a freight car of the defendant, and to insure ventilation left the door open and nailed strips of plank across the opening. The horse kicked off the strips, escaped uninjured and wandered off some distance, then strayed upon the track and was killed. It was held that the plaintiff's negligence in allowing the horse to escape was not the proximate cause of the injury, the negligence of the railroad company being an independent intervening cause fully breaking the connection between the original wrong doing and the injury complained of.

4. Dr. Wharton draws well the distinction between conditions and causes. See Wharton on Neg., §§ 85, 86. See also Moore v. Abbot, 32 Me. 46; Moulton v. Sanford, 51 Me. 127; Atchison v. King, 9 Kan. 550 (negligent construction of road was the cause; the snow and ice there a condition); Murdock v. Inhabitants of Warwick, 4 Gray (Mass.) 178; Beven on Neg. 53, 72, 73; Lane v. Atlantic Works, 111 Mass. 140; Lake v. Milliken, 62 Me. 240; Marble v. Worcester, 4 Gray (Mass.) 395; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, §§ 453, 463, 527, 528.

Thus, where a driver left his horse standing unhitched and unattended in the street, he is liable for the injuries caused by the running away of the horse, although the runaway might not have occurred but for the malicious act of a stranger in frightening the animal, and even though the driver did his best to stop the animal after it had started. McCahill v. Kipp, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 413; Lynch v. Murdin, 1 Ad. & El., N. S. (1 Q. B.) 29; Illidge v. Goodwin, 5 Carr. & P. (Eng.) 192. Similar cases arose. Powell v. Deveny, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 300; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 738.

Squib Case.—The well known squib case is also illustrative of this. There the defendant threw a lighted squib into a crowded market place, and it fell upon the stand of a person having wares exposed for sale. The owner of the wares instantly, in order to save his goods, tossed it away and it fell on a second party, who did likewise, and after repeated similar throwings it fell the injury,¹ and then, upon familiar principles, the negligent author of one of such causes may be held responsible for the consequences of the causes in combination.² But, on the other hand, when an injury may have come from either one of two causes, either of which may have been the sole proximate cause, it devolves on the plaintiff to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the cause for which the defendant was liable was culpable and the proximate cause.³ An intervening efficient cause sufficient to break the causal connection between the original wrong complained of and the injury may be either culpable or not culpable; accidental or intentional, animate or inanimate.⁴ The test is: Was it a new and independent force, acting in and of itself in causing the injury and superseding the original wrong complained of so as to make it remote in the chain of causation; although it may have remotely contributed to the injury as an occasion or condition thereof.⁵

on plaintiff and injured him. Here were many intervening causes yet none broke the continuity of the sequence, since they were all such as a man of ordinary foresight might have anticipated. Scott v. Sheppard, 1 Wm. Bl. 892; s. c., 1 Smith's L. C. 417, commented upon in Cooley on Torts 71.

Hence it matters not how many causes have intervened, if the defendant's act is still the efficient cause, he is liable for the injury. McMahon v. Davidson, 12 Minn. 357; Nagel v. Missouri etc. R. Co., 75 Mo. 653.

1. Ante, subtit. COMBINED AND CONCURRENT CAUSES; 2 Thompson on Neg. 1085, § 3; Palmer v. Andover, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 600; Austin v. New Jersey etc. Steamboat Co., 43 N. Y. 75; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 663; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. School Dist., 96 Pa. St. 65; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 106; Ellett v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 76 Mo. 518; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 183; Slater v. Mersereau, 64 N. Y. 138 (leading case); Carterville v. Cook, 129 Ill. 152; 16 Am. St. Rep. 248, and note; Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Shacklet, 105 Ill. 364; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 166; 44 Am. Rep. 791; Union etc. R. Co. v. Shacklet, 119 Ill. 232; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 193; Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Cummings, 106 U. S. 700; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 254; Webster v. Hudson River R. Co., 38 N. Y. 260; Learned v. Castle, 78 Cal. 454; Flaherty v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 39 Minn. 328; 12 Am. St. Rep. 654; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Spencer, 98 Ind. 186; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 478.

2. Slater v. Mersereau, 64 N. Y. 138; Ricker v. Freeman, 50 N. H. 420; s. c.,

9 Am. Rep. 267; Lane v. Atlantic Works, 107 Mass. 104; Welck v. Larder, 75 Ill. 93; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 39.

Where two causes of an injury exist, without both of which the accident would not have occurred, and both are due to negligence, one party guilty of negligence cannot render the excuse that he is not liable to plaintiff for damages caused thereby because a third party was also in fault. Township of Burrell v. Uncapher, 117 Pa. St. 353.

3. Patterson's R. Acc. Law 435; Searles v. New York Cent. R. Co., 101 N. Y. 661, 662; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 358.

4. Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 453; Wharton on Neg., §§ 114, 155; Pennsylvania Co. v. Whitlock, 99 Ind. 16; Scheffer v. Washington City R. Co., 105 U. S. 249; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59; McClary v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 3 Neb. 44; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Guthrie, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 432; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 478; West Mahaney Township v. Watson, 116 Pa. St. 344; 2 Am. St. Rep. 604; Kitteringham v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 62 Iowa 285; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 14; Otten v. Cohen, 1 N. Y. Supp. 430 (intervening cause an infant under age of discretion).

5. Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469; Louisiana Mut. Ins. Co. v. Tweed, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 44. In this latter case JUSTICE MILLER observes: "One of the most valuable criteria furnished us by these authorities (i. e., cause cited by counsel) is to ascertain whether any new cause has intervened between the fact accomplished and the

IX. CAUSAL CONNECTION—REMOTE CAUSE.—From the foregoing sections the distinction between remote and proximate causes may be clearly seen, and it is sufficient here to define a remote cause in the language of Mr. Bishop, as, "one which has so far expended itself that its influence in producing the injury is too minute for the law's notice; or a cause which some independent force merely took advantage of to accomplish something not the probable or natural affect thereof."¹ Hence negligence cannot ordinarily be said to be the proximate cause of an injury when the negligence of another independent human agency has intervened and directly inflicted the injury.² But there are circumalleged cause. If a new force or power has intervened, of itself, sufficient to stand as the cause of the misfortune, the other must be considered as too remote." Lewis v. Flint etc. R. Co., 54 Mich. 55; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 263; Seale v. Gulf City etc. R. Co., 65 Tex. 274; 57 Am. Rep. 602; Scheffer v. Washington City R. Co., 105 U. S. 249; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, §§ 41-48.

The cause of an injury is in contemplation of law that which immediately produces it as its natural consequence; and therefore if a party be guilty of an act of negligence which would naturally produce an injury to another, but before such injury actually results, a third person does some act which is the immediate cause of the injury, such third person is alone responsible therefor, and the original party is not responsible even though the injury would not have occurred but for his negligence. Washington v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 17 W. Va. 190; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 749.

1. Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 41.

The policy of the law in refusing to trace effects back to remote causes is plain. We may trace consequences back to the proximate cause with some degree of certainty, but in going beyond that we enter a field of conjecture and confound the almost certain impossibility of tracing the successive steps backward correctly. Cooley on Torts 69. A pertinent example of a case where the cause was declared remote from having so far expended itself as to become too minute for the law's notice is seen in the case of Scheffer v. Washington etc. R. Co.

For example, where by the negligence of a railway company a passenger sustained an injury resulting in insanity, and eight months afterward he committed suicide, the company could not be made responsible for his death, because the effect was too remote from the alleged cause. Said JUSTICE MILLER: "The argument is not sound which seeks to trace this immediate cause of the death, i. e., the suicide, through the previous stages of mental aberration, physical suffering and eight months' disease . . . to the original accident on the road. Such a course of possible, or even logical, argument would lead back to that great first cause least understood in which the train of all causation ends." Scheffer v. Washington City etc. R. Co., 105 U. S. 249, 252; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59.

In another case a train was forty-five minutes late; there came a gust of wind which threw it from the track and injured a passenger. The railroad was not liable, because the train's being late was not the proximate cause, but only a remote cause which an independent force took advantage of. McClary v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 3 Neb. 44; Bodkin v. Western Union Tel. Co., 31 Fed. Rep. 134; Bishop on Non-Contract Law, § 43.

Other instances of cases in which the cause was too remote abound. A few may be cited: Fairbanks v. Kerr, 70 Pa. St. 86; Seale v. Gulf City etc. R. Co., 65 Tex. 274; Glover v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 3 Q. B. 25; Lowery v. Western Union Tel. Co., 60 N. Y. 198; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Staley, 41 Ohio St. 118; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 381; Louisville, etc. R. Co. v. Guthrie, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 432; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 478; White v. Conly, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 51; Selleck v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 58 Mich. 195; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 338.

2. Beven on Neg. 53; Washington v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 17 W. Va. 190;

stances under which one negligent person ought to foresee the negligence of another, and in such cases the negligence of the person who might have foreseen the negligence of the other is held proximate and not remote.¹ But mere conditions and occasions that intervene between the original negligence and the injury, although these may be nearest to it in point of time, are remote in the chain of causation.²

X. CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.—This division of the subject has been already fully treated in a previous article.³

XI. COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE.—The doctrine of comparative negligence originated in the courts of Illinois, and has been accepted with various modifications by the courts of three or four other States. It also applies to some extent in Admiralty.⁴

XII. IMPUTABLE NEGLIGENCE.—There can be no such thing as imputable negligence, except in cases where that privity which exists in law between master and servant and principal and agent is found.⁵ In order for the negligence of one person to be properly imputable to another, the one to whom it is imputed must 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 749; Hofnagle v. New York etc. R. Co., 55 N. Y. 608; Vicars v. Wilcox, 8 East 1; Cuff v. Newark etc. R. Co., 35 N. J. L. 32; Ashley v. Harrison, 1 Esp. 48.

Where defendant sold gunpowder to a child but the child gave all the powder to its parents, who afterwards allowed the child to take some of it, by the explosion of which he was injured, the defendant was held not liable, since the act of the parents in negligently allowing the child to have the powder was such an intervening act as to break the causal connection between defendant's original act and the injury caused. Carter v. Towne, 98 Mass. 567; s. c., 96 Am. Dec. 682.

In the case of Cuff v. Newark etc. R. Co., 35 N. J. L. 32, it is said: "In other cases the intervention of an independent act of a third person between the wrong complained of and the injury sustained, which was the immediate cause of the injury, is properly made a test of that remoteness of damages which forbids a recovery."

1. Wharton on Neg., § 154; Delaware etc. R. Co. v. Salmon, 39 N. J. L. 299; Carterville v. Cook, 129 Ill. 152; 16 Am. St. Rep. 248, and note.

2. The causes that are merely incidental, or instruments of a superior and controlling agency are not the proximate and controlling ones although they may be nearer in time or place to the result. Ætna Ins. Co. v. Boon, 95 U. S. 130; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 26.

For example, while the immediate cause of an accident may have been the breaking of a chain, an act, the unnecessary doing of which would probably cause the chain to break, may be regarded as the proximate cause of the accident. King v. Ohio etc. R. Co., 25 Fed. Rep. 799; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 34; Clark v. Chambers, L. R., 3 Q. B. 327; 47 L. J. 427; 38 L. J. 454 (practically overruling Maugan v. Atterton, L. R., 1 Exch. 239; Lynch v. Murdin, 1 Q. B. 29; Beven on Neg. 88, 89; Illidge v. Goodwin, 5 Carr. & P. 190 (horse and cart left in street unattended; third person negligently caused the horse to run; defendant having left the horse unattended was held liable since he might have anticipated just such a result); Carter v. Towne, 98 Mass. 567; s. c., 96 Am. Dec. 682.

3. See CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 15, et seq. See also Beach on Contributory Neg.; Shear. & Red. on Neg., §§ 61-107; Wharton on Neg., § 300, et seq.

4. COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 367, et seq.

5. CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 67-82, § 38; MASTER AND SERVANT, vol. 14, 804, et seq. See also PARENT AND CHILD; Hartfield v. Roper, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 615; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 273 (leading case, but long since overruled); Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 74; Little v. Hackett, 116 U. S. 652; The Bernina (sub nom. Mills v. Armstrong), stand in such a relation of privity to the negligent person that the maxim qui facit per alium facit per se is directly applicable.¹ It follows that all the cases in which the negligence of one person has been imputed to another in the absence of just this relation of privity are wrongly decided, and such is the effect of overwhelming recent cases.²

XIII. PRESUMPTIONS AS TO NEGLIGENCE.—As a rule negligence is not presumed.³ But there are cases where the maxim res ipsa

13 App. Cas. 1; 57 L. J. P. 65; 58 L. T. 423.

1. The subject of imputable negligence, where contributory negligence is imputed, is exhaustively discussed in CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 82-89, and it suffices to refer to that article.

As to imputable negligence, where the negligence imputed is pure negligence, that has also been thoroughly treated in MASTER AND SERVANT, 14 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 804, et seq.

2. The leading case on this point is Thorogood v. Bryan, which is now repudiated everywhere. See this discussed in CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 82-89.

3. Negligence Not Presumed.—The presumption of proper performance of duty which arises in favor of every man, being of universal application, applies in cases of alleged negligence. Mynning v. Detroit etc. R. Co., 59 Mich. 257; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 317; Brown v. Congress etc. R. Co., 49 Mich. 153; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 383 (fall from street car platform); Delaware etc. R. Co. v. Napheys, 90 Pa. St. 135; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 52; Carter v. Columbia etc. R. Co., 19 S. Car. 20; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 414; Jackson v. Kansas City R. Co., 31 Kan. 761; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 178; Buesching v. St. Louis Gas Light Co., 6 Mo. App. 85; Heath v. Whitebreast etc. Co., 65 Iowa 737; Kelsey v. Jewett, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 51; Federal St. etc. R. Co. v. Gibson, 96 Pa. St. 83; Toomey v. Brighton etc. R. Co., 3 C. B., N. S. 146, 150; Button v. Frink, 51 Conn. 342; 2 Thompson on Neg. 1227, § 3; Cooley on Torts (2nd ed.) [664] 797; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Freeman, 73 Tex. 311; Parrott v. Wells, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 524 (nitro-glycerine case).

"It is a rule of the law of evidence, of the first importance, that where the evidence is equally consistent with either the existence or nonexistence of the defendant, it is not competent to the judge to leave the matter to the jury. There must be some affirmative proof of negligence." WILLIAMS, J., in Cotton v. Wood, 8 C. B., N. S. 568. See also views of MARTIN, B., in Briggs v. Oliver, 4 Hurl. & Colt. 403; s. c., 35 L. J. (Exch.) 163.

A blind man, wishing to go through a certain door on defendant's premises, mistook the door intended and fell down an open hatchway. It was held that he must affirmatively establish defendant's negligence. Oysterbank v. Gardner, 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 263.

A horse ran away on a highway whereby plaintiff was injured. In order to recover it was held that negligence must be affirmatively proven. Bulton v. Frink, 51 Conn. 342; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 24.

The law will not presume that a plaintiff has been negligent, but when his own evidence tends to create the presumption, the burden is on him to rebut it. Missouri etc. R. Co. v. Foreman, 73 Tex. 311.

Fact of Damage Does Not Raise Presumption of Negligence.—East Tennessee etc. R. Co. v. Stewart, 13 Lea (Tenn.) 432; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 614; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Stebbing, 62 Md. 504; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 36; Case v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 64 Iowa 762; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 142; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Allen, 78 Ala. 494; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 514; Blanchette v. Border City Mfg. Co., 143 Mass. 21; Barnard v. Philadelphia etc. R. Co., 60 Md. 555; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 484; Higgs v. Maynard, 12 Jur., N. S. 707; s. c., Harr. & Ruth, 581; 14 Week. Rep. 610; Huff v. Austin, 46 Ohio St. 386; Holbrook v. Utica etc. R. Co., 12 N. Y. 236; s. c., 64 Am. Dec. 502, note; 2 Thompson on Neg. 1227, § 3. See also this question discussed in Wharton on Ev., § 359; post, RES IPSA LOQUITUR.

For example, in one case the body of a person, not an employee of the rail-loquitur is directly applicable, and from the thing done or omitted negligence or care is presumed.¹ So by statute in some States it road, was found mangled under freight cars that were being switched on to a side track. From finger prints upon the car it looked as if the person had slipped, but no one saw the accident. Held, that there was no evidence upon which to hold the railroad company liable. State v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 58 Md. 221.

A very similar case was where the plaintiff's intestate, an employee of the defendant, was found bruised and dead in a hole which had been cut in the floor of defendant's mill, and in which was water about six feet deep. Upon all the evidence (stated in the opinion), it is held that there are no facts from which the question of the negligence of the deceased can be determined. How he came into the whole and was killed is left wholly to conjecture. So far as appears it was an unaccountable accident and calamity. A nonsuit was, therefore, properly granted. Sorenson v. Menasha Paper etc. Co., 56 Wis. 338.

The true rule is well stated in Cleveland etc. R. Co. v. Crawford, 24 Ohio St. 631; s. c., 15 Am. Rep. 633: "There is no presumption of negligence as against either party except such as arises from the facts proved. Indeed, the presumption of law is that neither party was guilty of negligence, and such presumption must prevail until overcome by proof." See also Mentzer v. Armour, 18 Fed. Rep. 373; Smith v. Memphis etc. R. Co., 18 Fed. Rep. 304.

1. Res Ipsa Loquitur.—This is a favorite phrase in the law concerning presumptions of negligence, and is intended to mean that while negligence is not generally to be presumed from the fact of damage, yet the circumstances under which the injury occurred may be such as to create the presumption. 2 Thompson on Neg. 1227-1235, § 3; Cooley on Torts 796, et seq.; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 59; Wharton on Neg., §§ 421, 422; Addison on Torts 17, 366; Bigelow on Torts 596; Kearney v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 6 Q. B. 759; Holbrook v. Utica etc. R. Co., 12 N. Y. 236; s. c., 64 Am. Dec. 502, note.

In the case of Scott v. London etc. Docks Co., 3 Hurl. & Colt. 596, the doctrine was thus laid down: "There must be some reasonable evidence of negligence. But where the thing is shown to be under the management of the defendant or his servants, and the accident is such as in the ordinary course of things does not happen if those who have the management use proper care, it affords reasonable evidence, in the absence of explanation, that the accident arose from want of care." See also Priggs v. Oliver, 4 Hurl. & Colt. 403; s. c., 35 L. J. (Exch.) 163.

As was well said by POLLOCK, C. B., in Byrne v. Boadle, 2 Hurl. & Colt. 722, "A barrel cannot roll out of a warehouse window without some negligence." And "it is not a matter of common occurrence for bricks to come loose and of themselves to fall from the fabric to which they belong." Cockburn, C. J., in Kearney v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 5 Q. B. 411; 6 Q. B. 759.

Illustrations of the application of this maxim might be multiplied. Thus, negligence may be inferred from the fact of the explosion of a steam boiler on a vessel, even where the owners of the vessel are under no contract obligation to the person injured by the explosion. Rose v. Stephens & Condit Transp. Co., 20 Blatchf. (U. S.) 411; s. c., 11 Fed. Rep. 438; The Reliance, 4 Woods (U. S.) 420; s. c., 2 Fed. Rep. 249; Posey v. Scoville, 10 Fed. Rep. 140.

But this presumption may be overcome by proof of the application of every test recognized as necessary by experts. It need not be shown that every test known to experts was applied. Robinson v. New York Cent. etc. R. Co., 20 Blatchf. (U. S.) 338.

The fact that the wall of a cistern which was being constructed by a city fell by its own weight, or by the pressure of gravel and earth behind it, placed there by the city, raises a presumption of negligence. Mulcairns v. Janesville, 67 Wis. 24.

In an action against a railroad corporation for personal injuries sustained by the plaintiff, while a passenger in the defendant's car, by the fall of a shade of a lamp affixed to the upper part of the car, the only evidence that the fall was occasioned by the defendant's negligence was the fact of the fall while the lamp was not lighted—held, that, in the absence of evidence of any other cause of the accident, the jury were authorized to infer that the fall was caused by the insufficiency of the fixture. White v. Boston etc. R. Co., 144 Mass. 404; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 615.

Where a passenger on a street railway car is injured by a sudden jerk of the car, in transit, there is a presumption of negligence on the part of the carrier. Dougherty v. Missouri R. Co., 81 Mo. 325; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 497; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 239.

Prima facie, the fact that a bridge gives way when a train is passing over it shows negligence. Bedford etc. R. Co. v. Rainbolt, 99 Ind. 551; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 466.

An accident may be of such a character as of itself to show negligence; as, for instance, where, in removing a cargo of ore from a vessel in a large bucket, the bucket tips over. Cummings v. National Furnace Co., 60 Wis. 603.

And where a railroad accident, caused by the cars leaving the track, occurs the presumption of negligence arises by virtue of this maxim. Seybolt v. New York etc. R. Co., 95 N. Y. 562; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 162.

Where a person is in the proper exercise of a right and is injured by the action of another, the maxim applies, and the presumption arises that the injurer was guilty of negligence. Thus, in the famous case of Lowery v. Manhattan R. Co., 99 N. Y. 158, a traveller in the highway is injured by a hot cinder falling from defendant's locomotive, negligence on the part of defendant was to be presumed since plaintiff was interfered with in the proper exercise of a natural right. See also Wiedmer v. New York Elevated R. Co., 41 Hun (N. Y.) 284.

A very similar case was Kinney v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 5 Q. B. 411. There the plaintiff was passing along the highway under a bridge which it was the duty of the defendants to maintain and keep in repair. A brick becoming loose in some way fell and injured plaintiff. It was considered that the falling of the brick was prima facie evidence of negligence on the part of the defendants.

Again, where plaintiff is passing along a street and an adjoining building falls down and injures him, it being the duty of the owner of the building to prevent such falling, and since buildings do not fall of themselves ordinarily, the clear presumption to every fair mind is that the building was either negligently built or that it was not properly kept up. Mullen v. St. John, 57 N. Y. 567; Vincent v. Cook, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 318.

And where experience has demonstrated that a certain business may be carried on and certain machinery used without causing damage, if reasonable care is exercised, then the fact of damage may be sufficient under such circumstances to show negligence according to the maxim stated. Mulcairns v. Janesville, 67 Wis. 24; Piggott v. Eastern etc. R. Co., 3 C. B. 229; Cooley on Torts (2nd ed.) [592] 703, [662] 794.

Thus the fact that a car, within a short distance, was twice derailed, shows prima facie negligence. Texas etc. R. Co. v. Suggs, 62 Tex. 323.

Fires from Railroad Engines.—This last principle is most often applied in case of damage by fire caused by sparks from steam engines. The rule is established that where property is damaged by fire having escaped from a passing engine, the fact of damage under the circumstances is prima facie evidence of defendant's negligence, even where there is no statute concerning such cases. Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Reese, 85 Ala. 497; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 342, 345, note; Galveston etc. R. Co. v. Horne, 69 Tex. 643; s. c., 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 238, 242, note; Tilley v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 49 Ark. 535; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 324; Spaulding v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 30 Wis. 110; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 550; Clevelands v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 42 Vt. 449. Compare Ruffner v. Cincinnati etc. R. Co., 34 Ohio St. 96.

The cases on this point are all collected and classified in FIRES BY RAILWAYS, 8 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 10, 11, which see. See also RAILWAY COMPANIES. The later cases may be found in notes to Galveston etc. R. Co. v. Horne, 69 Tex. 643; 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 242.

Engines Burning Wood.—Where it is shown that the use of wood for fuel in an engine materially increases the danger of setting fire to adjacent premises, an instruction that such use of wood is negligence is not error. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Ostrander, 110 Ind. 266; s. c., 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 346, 348, note.

Presumption Must Arise from Fact.—A presumption from a presumption is contrary to law; the law permits inferences from other facts, but never from presumptions; therefore in all cases where a presumption is claimed to arise it must arise from an established is provided that in certain cases proof of injury shall raise a presumption of negligence which it devolves upon the defendant to rebut.¹ And, as we have already seen, the violation of a statutory fact. See Douglass v. Mitchell, 35 Pa. St. 443; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Henrice, 92 Pa. St. 434; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 699; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 544; Sorenson v. Menasha Paper etc. Co., 56 Wis. 338; Manning v. John Hancock Mut. L. Ins. Co., 100 U. S. 693; Cleveland etc. R. Co. v. Wynant, 114 Ind. 525; 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 328.

1. Presumption Created by Statute.—In Mississippi and Georgia, and to a limited extent in other States, it is provided by statute that upon proof of injury by a railway company the presumption shall be that the company was guilty of negligence, and that the fact of such injury shall constitute prima facie evidence of defendant's want of care. In Mississippi (Code of Miss. 1880, § 1059), it is provided that "in actions against railroad companies for damage done to persons or property, proof of injury inflicted by the running of the cars or locomotives of such company shall be prima facie evidence of want of reasonable skill and care." This has been held not to apply to suits arising ex contractu, as by shippers or passengers. Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Trotter, 60 Miss. 442.

The presumption is not overcome by simply proving that the whistle was heard blowing at the time of the accident. Mobile etc. R. Co. v. Dale, 61 Miss. 206; s. c., 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 651. Compare Jones v. Bond, 40 Fed. Rep. 281.

And the fact that a precedent wrong on the part of the injured person produced the conditions which resulted in the injury does not prevent the application of the statute. Vicksburg etc. R. Co. v. Phillips, 64 Miss. 693; s. c., 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 587.

In Georgia it is provided by section 3033 of the code that the presumption of a railway company's negligence shall arise in case of any injury to persons or property. Columbus etc. R. Co. v. Kennedy, 78 Ga. 646; s. c., 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 92; Central R. Co. v. Brinson, 64 Ga. 475; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 343; Vickers v. Atlanta etc. R. Co., 64 Ga. 306; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 337; East Tennessee etc. R. Co. v. Hartley, 73 Ga. 5; Brunswick etc. R. Co. v. Hoover, 74 Ga. 426.

And in Columbus etc. R. Co. v. Ken- nedy, 78 Ga. 646; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 92, this statutory presumption was held strengthened by the presumption of fact arising from a failure of company to produce material witnesses.

This statutory presumption is not rebutted by proof that a locomotive engineer blew the whistle through a spirit of revenge towards a traveller, to frighten his horse. Georgia R. Co. v. Newsome, 60 Ga. 492.

It will be noticed that in Mississippi and Georgia the presumption against the railway company arises in all cases of injury by such company. In other States the presumption arises only in case of injury to property by fire.

In Minnesota, by Gen. Stat. 1878, ch. 34, § 60, the presumption of negligence is against the defendant where injury to property is caused by fire thrown out from the engine. Karsen v. Milwaukee etc. R. Co., 29 Minn. 12; s. c., 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 501; Sibirud v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 29 Minn. 58; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 499; Johnson v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 31 Minn. 57; s. c., 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 460. See also FIRES BY RAILWAYS, 8 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 10, et seq.

The statute provides in words, "All railroad companies . . . operating . . . steam engines over roads in this State shall be liable to any party aggrieved for all damages caused by fire . . . thrown from such engine, without the owner or owners of the property so damaged being required to show defects in their engines or negligence on the part of their employees; but the fact of such fire being scattered or thrown shall be construed . . . as prima facie evidence of such negligence or defect." Gen. Stat. (1878), ch. 34, § 60.

In Iowa by the code (§ 1289), when damage has been occasioned by a fire set in operating a railroad, the presumption is that the railroad company is guilty of negligence, and an allegation of negligence in a petition to recover damage therefor is therefore redundant. See Engle v. Chicago etc. R. Co. (Iowa, 1888), 37 N. W. Rep. 6; Smith v. Hummeston etc. R. Co. (Iowa, 1889), 43 N. W. Rep. 545.

It is held that this statute makes the fact of an injury so occurring only duty is in itself evidence of negligence,¹ and sometimes raises a presumption of negligence which the defendant must overcome by proof.² Although in such cases it should always appear to create liability that the violation of the statute was the proximate cause of injury,³ except when the statute is penal in its character, and provides that when it is violated and an injury happens during the violation, which such violation might have caused, it shall be conclusively presumed to have been the cause.⁴ Presumptions in cases of contributory negligence have been treated elsewhere.⁵

prima facie evidence of negligence, which may be rebutted by proof of due care. Small v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 50 Iowa 338; Slosson v. Burlington etc. R. Co., 51 Iowa 294.

In Other States.—A statute similar to, if not exactly like, that in Minnesota is found in Illinois, Missouri, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Nevada, Maryland and Utah, applying to fires started by locomotives. See Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Clampit, 63 Ill. 95; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Campbell, 86 Ill. 443; Annapolis etc. R. Co. v. Gantt, 39 Md. 115; Baltimore etc. R. Co. v. Shipley, 39 Md. 251; Anderson v. Wasatch etc. R. Co., 2 Utah 518; Fitch v. Pacific R. Co., 45 Mo. 325; Bedford v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 46 Mo. 456; Spaulding v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 30 Wis. 110; Burlington etc. R. Co. v. Westover, 4 Neb. 268; Lougbough v. Virginia City etc. R. Co., 9 Nev. 271; 1 Thomp. on Neg. 153, (3).

In Tennessee it is held that the provision of the Tenn. Code, §§ 1166, 1169, that when it is established that stock has been killed or injured by a railroad company, the onus is upon the company of showing that the injury was the result of unavoidable accident, is simply the announcement of a common law principle. Horne v. Memphis etc. R. Co., 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 72; East Tennessee etc. R. Co. v. Pratt, 85 Tenn. 9.

But this may well be questioned. See 1 Thomp. on Neg. 153, § 8, (3).

In England and in Federal Courts.—It is provided by statute in England that in case of fires by locomotives, injury by such fires shall constitute prima facie evidence of negligence. See 1 Thompson on Neg. 155, (3).

In the United States it is provided (§ 13, act of July 7th, 1838; 5 U. S. Stat. at Large 306) that "in all suits and actions against proprietors of steamboats, for injuries arising to person or property from the bursting of the boiler of any steamboat, or the collapse of a flue, or other injurious escape of steam, the fact of such bursting, collapse, or injurious escape of steam, shall be taken as full prima facie evidence, sufficient to charge the defendant, or those in his employment, with negligence, until he shall show that no negligence has been committed by him or those in his employment." See also Bradley v. Northern Transp. etc. Co., 15 Ohio St. 553.

1. Ante, subtit. III, § 8, (b), CREATED BY STATUTE; 2 Thomp. on Neg. 904; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 13; Faber v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 29 Minn. 465; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 277; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Stebbing, 62 Md. 504; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 36.

2. Shear. & Red. on Neg., §§ 11, 13, 27; 2 Thompson on Neg. 1231, § 5; Cooley on Torts [664] (2nd ed.) 798; Knupfle v. Knickerbocker Ice Co., 84 N. Y. 488; Worcester v. Proprietors of Canal Bridge, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 541; Karle v. Kansas City etc. R. Co., 55 Mo. 476.

3. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hensil, 70 Ind. 569; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 188; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 79; Billing v. Breinig, 45 Mich. 65; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Stebbing, 62 Md. 504; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 36; Hayes v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 111 U. S. 228, 240; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 394; Quincy etc. R. Co. v. Wellhoener, 72 Ill. 60.

4. It is believed that the construction of a statute holding that proof of a violation of the statute at the time of the injury is conclusive evidence of defendant's liability, is found only in Tennessee R. Co. v. Walker, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 383; Nashville etc. R. Co. v. Thomas, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 262; Collins v. East Tenn. etc. R. Co., 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 841; CROSSINGS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 922, note.

5. CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4

XIV. BURDEN OF PROOF.—Apart from the discussion of presumptions regarding negligence, the doctrines in relation to the burden of proof are not difficult.¹

In the absence of any presumption of defendant's negligence the plaintiff must prove by a fair preponderance of the evidence facts which establish the negligence of the defendant as the proximate cause of his injury,² and having done this he is entitled to

Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 76, et seq.

1. See BURDEN OF PROOF, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law; OPEN AND CLOSE, vol. 17. See also 2 Thompson on Neg. 1232-35; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 57, et seq.

Burden Upon Plaintiff Usually.—See authorities in note immediately supra. See also Wharton on Ev., § 359, and cases cited; Brown v. Congress etc. R. Co., 49 Mich. 153; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 383; Oysterbank v. Gardner, 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 263; Button v. Frink, 51 Conn. 342; Hershberger v. Lynch (Pa. 1887), 11 Atl. Rep. 642; Mymning v. Detroit etc. R. Co., 67 Mich. 67; Deikman v. Morgan etc. Steamship Co., 40 La. An. 787; McCully v. Clarke, 40 Pa. St. 399; s. c., 80 Am. Dec. 584.

Remains Throughout the Trial.—The burden of sustaining the affirmative of the issue remains with plaintiff throughout the trial, generally, and the jury must be satisfied from the whole case that the allegation is established. Heine-man v. Heard, 62 N. Y. 448; Dowell v. Guthrie, 99 Mo. 653.

2. Plaintiff Must Establish His Case by a Preponderance of Evidence.—Seybolt v. New York etc. R. Co., 95 N. Y. 562; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 75; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 162; Crandall v. Goodrich Transp. Co., 16 Fed. Rep. 75; Allen v. Willard, 57 Pa. St. 374; McCaig v. Erie R. Co., 8 Hun (N. Y.) 599; Searles v. Manhattan R. Co., 101 N. Y. 661; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 358; Holbrook v. Utica etc. R. Co., 12 N. Y. 236; s. c., 64 Am. Dec. 502.

Therefore, an instruction that, if all the evidence satisfied the jury that there had been negligence on the part of the defendants, although they might not be able to satisfy themselves in what the negligence consisted, they would be authorized to find a verdict for the plaintiff, is erroneous. If there appear to the jury no reasonable ground upon which to impute negligence to defendant, they should return a verdict in his favor. McCaig v. Erie R. Co., 8

Hun (N. Y.) 599; Searles v. Manhattan R. Co., 101 N. Y. 661; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 358; Crandall v. Goodrich Transp. Co., 16 Fed. Rep. 75.

When the plaintiff has shown such a situation as could not have been produced except by the operation of abnormal causes, he has sufficiently established his case, and the burden then rests upon defendant to prove that the injury was caused without his fault. Seybolt v. New York etc. R. Co., 95 N. Y. 562; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 75; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 162; Caldwell v. New Jersey Steamboat Co., 47 N. Y. 291; Edgerton v. New York etc. R. Co., 39 N. Y. 227.

In the case of Daniel v. Metropolitan R. Co., L. R., 3 C. P. 216, 591; 5 H. L. 45. WILLES, J., observes: "It is necessary for the plaintiff to establish by evidence circumstances from which it may fairly be inferred that there is a reasonable probability that the accident resulted from the want of some precaution which defendant might and ought to have resorted to; and I go further and say that the plaintiff should also show with reasonable certainty what particular precaution should have been taken." And this opinion has been approved in several cases. Hayes v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 111 U. S. 228, 241; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 394; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Stibbing, 62 Md. 504; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 36; Williams v. Great Western R. Co., L. R., 9 Exch. 157.

In short, the fact shown must be more consistent with the negligence of the defendant than with the absence of it. Toomey v. Brighton etc. R. Co., 3 C. B., N. S. 146, 150.

Where the facts proved make it probable that defendant violated his duty, it is for the jury to say whether he did or no. To maintain otherwise would be to deny the value of circumstantial evidence. Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 58.

Not Bound to Establish It Beyond a Reasonable Doubt.—Plaintiff is not bound, however, to establish his case beyond a reasonable doubt, or so as to exclude every other possible theory. Whitney v. Clifford, 57 Wis. 156; Seybolt v. New York etc. R. Co., 95 N. Y. 562; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 75; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 162; Welch v. Jugenheimer, 56 Iowa 11; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 77; Ellis v. Buzzell, 60 Me. 209; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 204; Elliot v. Van Buren, 33 Mich. 49; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 668; Cooley on Torts (2nd ed.) [288] 243.

Therefore, an instruction that every material fact alleged by the plaintiff must appear from the evidence "to the satisfaction of the jury," is erroneous; they need only be satisfied with a preponderance of the evidence. Stratton v. Central City Horse R. Co., 95 Ill. 25; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 115.

The universal rule of civil cases in this regard applies to the cases under consideration here, and the rule is not changed because of the fact that the act upon which the action for negligence is based is one which will render the actor liable to a criminal indictment.

Thus, in the case of Barton v. Thompson, 46 Iowa 30; s. c., 26 Am. Rep. 131, it was asserted that in a civil action for damages for an act which was also indictable as a crime, the same degree of proof is required to establish the cause of action as would be required to warrant a conviction upon an indictment for the same offence. But in a later case in the same court (Welch v. Jugenheimer, 56 Iowa 11; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 77) the case of Barton v. Thompson (supra) was distinctly declared to be wrongly decided and was, therefore, overruled, and the principle stated above was established. The court, in this case, reviewed at length all the authorities upon the subject, and the opinion constitutes a valuable dissertation upon this principle of the law.

The doctrine stated is also sustained by the cases following: Kane v. Hibernia Ins. Co., 39 N. J. L. 697; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 239; Ellis v. Buzzell, 60 Me. 209; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 204; Elliot v. Van Buren, 33 Mich. 49; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 668; Blaeser v. Milwaukee Ins. Co., 37 Wis. 31; s. c., 19 Am. Rep. 747; Bradish v. Bliss, 35 Vt. 326; Munson v. Atwood, 30 Conn. 102; Jones v. Graves, 26 Ohio St. 2; 20 Am. Rep. 752; Ætna Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 11 Bush (Ky.) 587; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 223; Young v. Edwards, 72 Pa. St. 267; Hoffman v. Western M. & F. Ins. Co., 1 La. An. 216; Schmidt v. New York etc. Mut. F. Ins.

Co., 1 Gray (Mass.) 529; Bissel v. Wert, 35 Ind. 54; 2 Whart. on Ev., § 1246; Cooley on Torts 208; Proffatt on Jury Trial, § 335.

The doctrine opposed to this, and supported by Barton v. Thompson, was first set forth in Thurtell v. Beaumont, 1 Bing. (8 E. C. L. 531) 339. This case is cited and approved in 2 Greenleaf on Ev., § 408; Taylor on Ev. 97; Bishop on Mar. & Div., § 644. A few cases have also approved it, viz: Thayer v. Boyle, 30 Me. 475; Butman v. Hobbs, 35 Me. 228; McConnell v. Delaware etc. Mut. Ins. Co., 18 Ill. 228; Price v. Security Ins. Co., 29 Wis. 270.

But as seen from the authorities cited previously, the doctrine can no longer be maintained. Indeed, of the original case it has been said: "The decision on this point in Thurtell v. Beaumont was made on application for a rule and without much consideration. It has never received approbation in the English courts, although . . . repeated occasions have arisen for its adoption and application." DEFEW, J., in Kane v. Hibernia Ins. Co., 39 N. J. L. 697; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 239.

Amount of Proof—Must Establish Every Element.—By reference to the first sections of this article it will be noted that negligence is defined as consisting of certain elements, each one essential to constitute an act a ground for actionable negligence. As to the amount of proof which the plaintiff must adduce, the rule may be stated that he must establish the existence of every element.

Plaintiff must establish, (1) Want of ordinary care on part of defendant; (2) Defendant's duty to him (plaintiff) to use such care; (3) Damage to himself; (4) That the failure to observe ordinary care was the cause, the proximate cause, of such damage.

Thus, where there was evidence of want of care and other elements, the plaintiff lost his case in failing to show that the act was the proximate cause of his injury. Pennsylvania Co. v. Hensil, 70 Ind. 569; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 188; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 79; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Boyer, 97 Pa. St. 91; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 172; Crandall v. Goodrich Transp. Co., 16 Fed. Rep. 75.

So, mere evidence that the chain used by a ferry boat to prevent the premature egress of passengers had been removed, but not by the servant in charge, is not sufficient to prove negligence on the part of the ferry company Joy v. Winnisimmet Co., 114 Mass. 63-recover except in those jurisdictions which hold that he must also take the burden of negating contributory negligence on his own part.¹ Even in such jurisdictions, however, it is sufficient, if having alleged in his declaration or complaint that he was without fault himself he is able to establish the negligence of defendant by evidence which at the same time shows no default on his own part and prima facie proves him to have been in the exercise of due care.² Questions relating to the burden of proof in cases of contributory negligence have been fully treated elsewhere.³ When the plaintiff has introduced evidence of negligence sufficient as a matter of law to charge defendant with liability, or has shown such a state of facts as creates a presumption of negligence, the burden of proof shifts to defendant.⁴

XV. EVIDENCE OF NEGLIGENCE—GENERAL RULES.—To state the numberless decisions which have been made as to the relevancy

Where the evidence discloses that goods were injured by two different causes, for only one of which defendant is responsible, the burden of proof is on the plaintiff to show the damage occasioned by the latter cause. Priest v. Nichols, 116 Mass. 401.

But the plaintiff is not required to show the precise cause; if he shows that the injury is attributable to one or another of several causes, for each of which defendant is responsible, he is entitled to recover. Bevier v. Delaware etc. Canal Co., 13 Hun (N. Y.) 254.

Such an instance frequently arises where fire is caused from the sparks from several engines. Plaintiff need not show what particular engine emitted the sparks. Sheldon v. Hudson River etc. R. Co., 14 N. Y. 218; s. c., 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 226; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 155.

Where a presumption against the defendant exists plaintiff need only establish those elements to which no presumption attaches. Thus, a violation of an ordinance or statute constitutes evidence of a want of ordinary care, and where such is the case, proof of the element of want of ordinary care may be omitted. See, ante, subtit. CREATED BY STATUTE. See also Briggs v. New York Cent. R. Co., 72 N. Y. 26; Augusta etc. R. Co. v. McElmurry, 24 Ga. 75; Pennsylvania Co. v. Hensil, 70 Ind. 569; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 188; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 79.

Thus in some jurisdictions the mere happening of an injury raises a presumption against a carrier of passengers of want of care; yet an action for such injury will not be sustained by evidence of carelessness or negligence which does not conduce to the injury itself. Tennery v. Pippinger, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 543.

1. Burden of negating contributory negligence on his own part is cast upon the plaintiff in a number of jurisdictions. Cincinnati etc. R. Co. v. Butler, 103 Ind. 31; s. c., 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 262; Hinckley v. Cape Cod R. Co., 120 Mass. 257; State v. Maine Cent. R. Co., 76 Me. 357; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 622; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 312; Vicksburg v. Hennessy, 54 Miss. 391; Moore v. Mayor etc. of Shreveport, 3 La. An. 645; Button v. Frink, 51 Conn. 342; Greenleaf v. Illinois etc. R. Co., 29 Iowa 14; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 181; Missouri Furnace Co. v. Abend, 107 Ill. 44; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 425. See many other cases cited in CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 91. Compare Hough v. Texas etc. R. Co., 100 U. S. 213, and numerous other cases cited in 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, note 5, p. 91.

2. Cleveland etc. R. Co. v. Crawford, 24 Ohio St. 631; s. c., 15 Am. Rep. 633; Adams v. Young, 44 Ohio St. 80; s. c., 58 Am. Rep. 789; Pierce on Railroads 320; Cooley on Torts 673.

3. CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 91, 92. See also Shear. & Red. on Neg., §§ 107, 110.

4. Burden of Proof Shifts.—Pennsylvania Canal Co. v. Bentley, 66 Pa. St. 30; 2 Thompson on Neg. 1235, § 8; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Foreman, 73 Tex. 311; Bischoff v. Schulz, 5 N. Y. Super. 757; Giles v. Diamond State Iron Co. (Del. 1887), 8 Atl. Rep. 368; or admissibility of certain evidence in negligence cases would be an almost impossible task; the general rules governing the admission of evidence in civil cases apply as well to the subject under consideration as elsewhere.¹ Ordinarily it is not allowable in an action for negligence to introduce evidence of other disconnected, though similar, acts of negligence by the same party;² therefore, where the negligence of an employee on a particular occasion is in question, it is irrelevant to prove that he had been Shear. & Red. on Neg., §§ 57, 58. Compare Atkinson v. Goodrich Transp. Co., 69 Wis. 5.

By "such a state of facts as creates," etc., as used in the text, is meant this: An individual is run over and seriously injured by a train running through the city at a rate much faster than is allowed by statute. Proof of this too-fast speed and of damage to himself is sufficient in law to establish plaintiff's claim, and therefore the burden is shifted to defendant to show his want of negligence. See, ante, subtit. CREATED BY STATUTE. See also Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 58.

1. See 1 Wharton on Ev., §§ 40-44; 1 Greenleaf on Ev., § 49, note c, p. 72, of 14th ed.

2. Evidence of Similar Disconnected Acts Inadmissible.—1 Wharton on Ev., §§ 29-40; First Nat. Bank v. Ocean Nat. Bank, 60 N. Y. 279 (baileebanker); Gahagan v. Boston etc. R. Co., 1 Allen (Mass.) 187; s. c., 79 Am. Dec. 724 (injury by R. Co. on highway); Baltimore Elevator Co. v. Neal, 65 Md. 438; Wentworth v. Smith, 44 N. H. 419 (negligent, postmaster); Louisville R. Co. v. Fox, 11 Bush (Ky.) 493.

Compare Parkinson v. Nashua etc. R. Co., 61 N. H. 416, where it is held that it is competent to show that the party charged with negligence had performed or omitted the same act in the same way before, as tending to show that he did or omitted the act at the time in question. Also Wentworth v. Smith, 44 N. H. 419; Ford v. Parker, 4 Ohio St. 576; State v. Railroad, 52 N. H. 528.

And even where the "negligent habit" of a railroad corporation is to be shown as bearing on the question of its negligence in a particular instance, the evidence in support of the "habit" should be limited to near the time of the act. Davidson v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 34 Minn. 51; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 352.

Character of the precise act or omission of defendant and not his character for care, etc., determines whether there has been actionable negligence on his part. McDonald v. Savoy, 110 Mass. 50; Robinson v. Fitchburg etc. R. Co., 7 Gray (Mass.) 92.

Careless Driving—Previous Habits—Skill.—In an action for injuries caused by defendant's careless driving, it is not competent, on cross-examination of the plaintiff, to ask him as to his own habits of running horses on the highway, or of being intoxicated while driving, if it is not claimed that he was indulging either of the habits at the time of the injury. Hill v. Snyder, 44 Mich. 318.

Where an injury is caused by the alleged negligence of the driver, it is competent to introduce evidence of the driver's want of skill before and after the accident. Sanderson v. Frazier, 8 Colo. 79; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 544. Compare Dunham v. Rackliffe, 71 Me. 345 (reputation of driver).

Where reckless driving of defendant's team is alleged, the disposition of the team as to racing may be shown. Schaefer v. Osterbrink, 67 Wis. 495.

In the case of Robinson v. Fitchburg etc. R. Co., 7 Gray (Mass.) 92, the court has to say: "Evidence of specific acts of negligence and carelessness on the part of the engineer in running the train on other occasions than the one in question was clearly incompetent. It would not only lead to collateral enquiries, and so distract and mislead the jury from the true issue before them, but it had no legal or logical tendency to prove the point in issue. Because a man was careless or negligent of his duty in one or two specific instances, it does not follow that he was so at another time and under different circumstances. Collins v. Inhabitants of Dorchester, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 396. The plaintiff did not offer to prove the general character of the engineer for care and skill in business. Such testimony would have certainly been less objecnegligent on other previous occasions.¹ But this, like all other rules, is subject to a seeming exception; thus, in order to show culpable negligence on the part of a railroad company in the employment of its servants it may be shown that such employees have been guilty of specific acts of carelessness, unskilfulness and incompetency, and that such acts were known to the officers of the company prior to the employment of such agents, or that such agents or employees had been retained in service after notice of such acts.² Evidence that after the occurrence of the injury the defendant repaired the place where the injury occurred, or discharged a negligent servant, is inadmissible, since to admit such evidence would be to place a premium upon the continuance of negligence.³

It is no proof of the exercise of proper care by the defendant, on the particular occasion, that other persons had passed over or by the same place safely, and evidence to establish such fact is tionable though not perhaps competent."

1. 1 Wharton on Ev., § 40; Gahagan v. Boston etc. R. Co., 1 Allen (Mass.) 187; s. c., 79 Am. Dec. 724 (injury by R. Co. on highway); Robinson v. Fitchburg etc. R. Co., 7 Gray (Mass.) 92. Compare Peterson v. Adamson, 67 Iowa 739 (skill of defendant's agent attacked).

This rule is but reasonable, since defendant cannot be allowed to show his previous general carefulness as an excuse for his conduct at the time in question. Tenney v. Tuttle, 1 Allen (Mass.) 185.

Where the question is as to the negligence of an engineer at the time of a collision of two trains, evidence of general incapacity of the engineer, or of his being subject to fits, is immaterial. The question is as to his conduct upon this special occasion. Central R. etc. Co. v. Roach, 64 Ga. 635; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 79.

So also evidence of the general reputation of the servant as a reckless driver, or that he had been careless on other occasions, is inadmissible. Jacobs v. Duke, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 271; Dunham v. Rackliffe, 71 Me. 345.

2. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Ruby, 38 Ind. 318; s. c., 10 Am. Rep. 111; Delphi v. Lowery, 74 Ind. 525; Vicksburg etc. R. Co. v. Patton, 31 Miss. 156; s. c., 66 Am. Dec. 552, 574, note (cattle run over by engine; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Collins, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 114.

This doctrine is impliedly maintained in the case of Baltimore etc. Elevator Co. v. Neal, 65 Md. 438.

In the case of Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Ruby (38 Ind. 294; s. c., 10 Am. Rep. 111), the court observes: "We entertain no doubt that the evidence (i. e., evidence of previous particular acts of carelessness on part of the servant) was admissible for the purpose of proving that the company had retained in its service and employment David Kieser, after it knew or ought to have known that he was careless and negligent. It was held by the court of appeals of the State of Kentucky in the recent case of Louisville etc. Co. v. Collins, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 114, that a railroad corporation is to be regarded as constructively present in all acts performed by its general agents within the scope of their authority—i. e., within the range of their ordinary employment."

3. Repairing Place After Injury.—Where the negligence consisted in not providing safeguards at a point of danger, evidence that such guards were placed there after the accident is inadmissible. Nalley v. Hartford etc. Co., 51 Conn. 524; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 47 (leading case).

So, where the injury was caused by the breaking of an elevator chain, it is not competent to show that immediately after the accident the broken chain was replaced by a larger and stronger one. Delaney v. Hilton, 50 N. Y. Super. 341; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 649.

And this principle of the text is sustained in other cases. Henkel v. Murr, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 28 (new oilcloth on stairway after the injury); Martin v. Towle, 59 N. H. 31; Tyler v. Todd, 36 Conn. 220; Dougan v. Champlain

Transp. Co., 56 N. Y. 1; Wooley v. Grand St. etc. R. Co., 83 N. Y. 121; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 398; Sewell v. Cohoes, 75 N. Y. 45; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 418; Hudson v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 59 Iowa 581; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 692, 694, note; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 464; Cramer v. Burlington, 45 Iowa 627; Morrell v. Peck, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 37; Terre Haute etc. R. Co. v. Clem, 123 Ind. 15; 42 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 229; Ely v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 77 Mo. 34; Dale v. Delaware etc. R. Co., 73 N. Y. 471, 472; 1 Wharton on Ev., § 40; Pierce on Railroads 294; Morse v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 30 Minn. 465; s. c., 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 168-170; Baird v. Daily, 68 N. Y. 551; s. c., 15 Am. Rep. 488; Evansville etc. R. Co. v. Crist, 116 Ind. 446; Evansville etc. R. Co. v. Carvener, 113 Ind. 51; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 134.

"A person may have exercised all the care the law required and yet in the light of his new experience, after an unexpected accident has occurred, and as a measure of extreme caution, he may adopt additional safeguards. The more careful a person, the more regard he has for the lives of others, the more likely he would be to do so, and it would seem unjust that he could not do so without being liable to have such acts construed as an admission of prior negligence. We think that such a rule puts an unfair interpretation upon human conduct, and virtually holds out an inducement for continued negligence . . . The fact that the accident has happened and some person has been injured immediately puts a party on a higher plane of diligence and duty from which he acts with a view of preventing the possibility of a similar accident, which should operate to commend rather than condemn the person so acting." Loomis, J., in Nalley v. Hartford etc. Co., 51 Conn. 524; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 47.

But there are cases in which it is held that such evidence is admissible as an admission that the defendant was negligent in not having made the repairs sooner. In Pennsylvania this doctrine is still maintained. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Henderson, 51 Pa. St. 315; West Chester etc. R. Co. v. McEliwee, 67 Pa. St. 311; McKee v. Bidwell, 74 Pa. St. 218. In Minnesota the admission of such evidence was once held proper. O'Leary v. Mankato, 21 Minn. 65; Phelps v. Mankato, 23 Minn. 276; Kelly v. Southern Minn. R. Co., 28

Minn. 98; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 264. But in a later case these cases have all been overruled. See Morse v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 30 Minn. 465; s. c., 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 168.

In the case of St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Weaver, 35 Kan. 412; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 176; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 341, an alleged negligent injury was caused by the alleged incapacity of a waterway. The waterway was subsequently enlarged and evidence of this subsequent enlargement was held admissible to show an admission that the way was originally too small. This is the leading case opposing the doctrine of the text; a large number of cases are collected both in the opinion of the court and in the reporter's note; but all of these cases are either from the Pennsylvania, New York, or Kansas courts and as we have seen the New York courts have repudiated the doctrine maintained in the Pennsylvania cases.

In Readman v. Conway, 126 Mass. 374, evidence of subsequent repairs was admitted, the court observing that "These acts of the defendants were in the nature of admissions that it was their duty to keep the platform in repair." This it will be observed by no means supports the Kansas case. The evidence here was admitted not as an admission of a previous want of care but as proof of a duty owing from the company in regard to such platform.

Evidence of Repairs Admissible to Show Duty.—In the case just cited, Readman v. Conway, 126 Mass. 374 is found an illustration of this principle. That the defendants repaired the place was an admission that it was their duty to keep it in repair.

A similar case is that of Sewell v. Cohoes, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 626, where the question was whether the city had authority over the locus in quo and a resolution of the city council passed subsequently to the accident was offered as evidence. It was held that such evidence was properly admissible, the court saying. "Was it not proper to repel such inference (i. e., that the city had no authority) by showing the exercise of the necessary power with success, after the accident? Does it not tend to show the existence of the necessary power before the act? and does it not show the existence of power and authority over the street and bridge creating a responsibility in respect thereto?" The case of Dougan v.

therefore inadmissible.¹ Likewise evidence by the plaintiff to prove that other persons had been injured at the same place and in the same manner that he was cannot be admitted.² But the latter of these two rules just stated has been criticised by many and rejected by other authorities, seemingly with much reason, so that the tendency now is to admit evidence by the plaintiff of Champlain Transp. Co., 56 N. Y. 1, was distinguished.

Evidence of Discharge of Negligent Servant.—That evidence of the discharge of a negligent servant after the injury is committed is inadmissible, see 1 Wharton on Ev., § 40; § 1139; Couch v. Watson Coal Co., 46 Iowa 17; Campbell v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 45 Iowa 76.

Such evidence cannot even be used as an admission of such servant's negligence. Authorities, supra.

1. Branch v. Libbey, 78 Me. 321; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 810 (obstruction in highway); Hudson v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 59 Iowa 581; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 692, 694, note; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 464; Aldrich v. Inhabitants of Pelham, 1 Gray (Mass.) 511; Temperance Hall Assoc. v. Giles, 33 N. J. L. 260 (falling in of a hall floor); Shoonmaker v. Inhabitants of Wilbraham, 110 Mass. 134; Hubbard v. Concord, 35 N. H. 52, s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 520.

In an action for injuries caused by the alleged negligent construction and management of an elevator, whereby it fell, evidence that no accident had ever before happened to the elevator, during its use for more than four years, cannot be admitted. Hodges v. Bearse, 129 Ill. 87.

The reason for this doctrine is well presented in Aldrich v. Inhabitants of Pelham, 1 Gray (Mass.) 511, where SHAW, C. J., has to say: "If it were competent for the defendants to prove that other persons, with carriages and vehicles of a certain width, had passed there without collision, it would be competent for the plaintiff to rebut it by proving that other persons with equal care, and with carriages of equal width, had met with accidents by collision. Each of these circumstances would present a distinct issue, with all its attendant circumstances, and involve consequences repugnant to well known rules of law." See also Collins v. Inhabitants of Dorchester, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 396, and C. J. SHAW's views endorsed and applied in Temperance Hall Assoc. v. Giles, 33 N. J. L. 260.

In a particular case this rule has been modified where the question was as to the proximate cause. Thus, where the plaintiff was injured by his horses becoming unmanageable and backing off the inclined plane leading to the defendant's elevator—held, no error to introduce evidence showing that no similar accident had happened for five years, though sixty or seventy teams had been unloaded there daily. Field v. Davis, 27 Kan. 400.

2. It is considered that such testimony is testimony as to a collateral fact which furnished no legal presumption as to the principal facts in dispute. Collins v. Inhabitants of Dorchester, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 397; Aldrich v. Inhabitants of Pelham, 1 Gray (Mass.) 510; Sherman v. Kortright, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 267; Hubbard v. Concord, 35 N. H. 52; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 520, note; Standish v. Washburn, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 237; Kidder v. Inhabitants of Dunstable, 11 Gray (Mass.) 342; Piollet v. Simmers, 106 Pa. St. 95; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 496.

Thus, in an action against a railway company for injuries sustained from falling over the railing of the stairs of defendant's elevated station, it is error to admit evidence of similar accidents occurring after the one in question. Johnson v. Manhattan R. Co., 52 Hun (N. Y.) 111. See also 2 Starkey on Ev. 381; 1 Greenleaf on Ev., §§ 52, 448; 1 Thomp. on Neg. 801; Wharton on Ev., § 359.

The principle, however, is by no means universally accepted, indeed the tendency is directly to the contrary; we have, however, followed the opinions of the text writers. See discussion, post.

In Indiana the doctrine is in a peculiar state. See Cleveland etc. R. Co. v. Wynant, 114 Ind. 525; 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 328; Pittsburgh etc. R. Co. v. Ruby, 38 Ind. 294; Cleveland etc. R. Co. v. Newell, 104 Ind. 264; Delphi v. Lowery, 74 Ind. 520; Fort Wayne v. Coombs, 107 Ind. 75; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Wright, 115 Ind. 378; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 370.

In the first case the doctrine was laid the fact of other persons having suffered similar injuries at the same place.¹ And though evidence of similar disconnected acts of negligence by the defendant is usually irrelevant, yet such evidence may be admitted when it was defendant's duty to be cognizant of them, and they would have advised him of danger to be apprehended; for when a party is dealing with a dangerous agency it becomes material to know whether he ought to down that where it is necessary to affect those charged with the duty of keeping highways, bridges or other structures in a safe condition, or of keeping only competent persons in their service, with notice of defects or unfitness, or where the question is as to the safety or availability of a machine or contrivance designed for a particular purpose, or for practical use, evidence is admissible to show how the thing served when put to the use for which it was designed, in the one case, or that occurrences of a character to make the defect or incompetency notorious had taken place in the other. The cases above are all cited as sustaining the doctrine as laid down. But in other cases (it is said in the same case, i. e., Cleveland R. Co. v. Wynant) the rule is different. Evidence of other similar occurrences on other occasions is not admissible for the purpose of raising a presumption that the particular accident in question happened, or that the place was defective or dangerous, or that the situation was of such a character that the occurrences resulting in the injury complained of might well have taken place. The facts are the only legitimate evidence of the injury and of the manner and cause of the occurrence. Citing to support this, Ramsey v. Rushville Road Co., 81 Ind. 394; Maguire v. Middlesex R. Co., 115 Mass. 239; Hawks v. Charlemont, 110 Mass. 110, and cases cited at heading of this note (5); also Patt. R. Acc. Law 420. Therefore on the trial of an action against a railroad company to recover for injuries caused by plaintiff's horse shying at a box-car in the highway, it cannot be shown that other horses shied after a similar fashion at other times. Cleveland etc. R. Co. v. Wynant, 114 Ind. 525; 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 328.

1. Evidence of Similar Injuries at Same Place.—Thus, in an action for injuries sustained by the upsetting of plaintiff's sleigh, by striking against a street railroad switch, evidence of other accidents happening at the same place held admissible. Wooley v. Grand Street etc. R. Co., 83 N. Y. 121; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 398.

So in an action for injuries sustained from the negligence of a railroad company in obstructing a highway with snow thrown from the track, evidence of the difficulties experienced by other travellers at the place is admissible. Phelps v. Winona etc. R. Co., 37 Minn. 485; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 56.

In an action to recover for injuries occasioned by the upsetting of the defendant's coach, evidence of former accidents occurring under the same driver is admissible to prove a bad condition of the road, or a want of familiarity with it, but not as proof of his negligence at the time of the accident. Higley v. Gilmer, 3 Mont. 90.

Such evidence was admitted in the following cases: Lewis v. Eastern R. Co., 60 N. H. 187; Crocker v. McGregor, 76 Me. 282 (horse frightened by noise of mill near highway. The evidence was admitted in these two cases to show that the object or sound was dangerous to public travel, being more likely to produce the effect complained of than not); Darling v. Westmoreland, 52 N. H. 401; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 55 (this case contains an elaborate review of authorities; plaintiff permitted to show that other horses had been frightened at the same pile of lumber); Kent v. Lincoln, 32 Vt. 591 (to show that carriages like plaintiff's, driven as his was, were injured on same road); Quinlan v. Utica, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 217; affirmed, 74 N. Y. 603 (to show that sidewalk tested by actual use was in unsafe condition since several other people fell on it before plaintiff); District of Columbia v. Armes, 107 U. S. 519 (same as case immediately preceding); Chicago v. Powers, 42 Ill. 169 (plaintiff stepped off approach to a bridge owing to its being improperly lighted; evidence admitted to show similar accidents to other persons); Augusta v. Hifers, 61 Ga. 48; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 95; House v. Metcalf, 27 Conn. 631; Calkins v. Hartford, 33 Conn. 57; Hill v. Portland etc.

have known the extent of the danger.¹ The rules just stated as to the exclusion of certain evidence are based upon the well established rule of the law of evidence which excludes evidence tending to raise too great a multitude of issues, thereby confusing the jury, and forbids the admission of testimony to a collateral fact which furnishes no legal presumption as to the principal fact in dispute.²

When the speed of a train is in question, evidence of the speed at which the same train ran at the same place on other days is admissible;³ no rate of speed of a train constitutes negligence per se, but proof of a certain rate of speed may in certain cases

R. Co., 55 Me. 439; Delphi v. Lowery, 74 Ind. 520; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 98; Pittsburgh R. Co. v. Ruby, 38 Ind. 294; Clapp v. Minneapolis etc. R. Co., 36 Minn. 6 (evidence that engines had previously run off the track at the same place, both before and after the time in question, when it is shown that at the time the accident in question occurred the switch was in substantially the same condition as respects the particular defects complained of). See also 1 Thompson on Neg. 801.

1. 1 Wharton on Ev., § 41; Cleveland R. Co. v. Wynant, 114 Ind. 525; 35 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 328; St. Louis etc. R. Co. v. Weaver, 35 Kan. 412; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 176, note; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 341, ante; Randall v. Northwestern Tel. Co., 54 Wis. 140. Thus, in an action against a railway company for an injury caused by the car running off the track, evidence is admissible to show that the same line of cars ran off the track on the same road; since such runnings off ought to have advised defendant of the bad condition of the track. Mobile R. Co. v. Ashcraft, 48 Ala. 15; Texas etc. R. Co. v. Suggs, 62 Tex. 323; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 475. See also Simson v. London etc. Co., L. R., 8 C. P. 390 (case of horse kicking while hitched to omnibus). Similarly, the fact that a particular chimney in a mill has been in the habit of emitting sparks which have set fire to materials in the neighborhood, is admissible in a suit for damage caused by a particular fire. Hoyt v. Jeffers, 30 Mich. 181; Hinds v. Barton, 25 N. Y. 544.

Fires by Railways—The doctrine in case of fires caused by railway engines is an excellent example of the application of this rule. If plaintiff can show that a certain engine has in a series of former occasions emitted sparks so as to fire property along the road, such proof would be admissible to show that defendant's engine was not properly equipped and that he ought to have known it. See 1 Whart. on Ev., §§ 421 and 43, where the subject is discussed at length. See also FIRES BY RAILWAYS, 8 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law; RAILROAD COMPANIES.

2. 1 Whart. on Ev., §§ 29, 40; Collins v. Inhabitants of Dorchester, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 397; Aldrich v. Inhabitants of Pelham, 1 Gray (Mass.) 510.

3. State v. Railroad Co., 52 N. H. 528; State v. Hoyt, 46 Conn. 330; Hall v. Brown, 58 N. H. 93; 1 Whart. on Ev., § 41; Shaber v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 28 Minn. 103.

Speed of Train.—That evidence of the rate of speed at which a train is running at a crossing may be considered by the jury as an element in determining the question of negligence, see Martin v. New York Cent. etc. R. Co., 27 Hun (N. Y.) 532; Palmer v. Platt, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 534; Shaber v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 28 Minn. 103; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 185; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Pedigo, 108 Ind. 481; 27 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 310 (fall of a railroad bridge); Nutter v. Boston etc. R. Co., 60 N. H. 483.

On the question, in a negligence case, as to whether defendant's train went too fast within city limits, a city ordinance regulating the speed of trains is admissible as well as the company's rules on the subject. Nor need the ordinance have been specially pleaded. Riley v. Wabash etc. R. Co., 18 Mo. App. 385; Robertson v. Wabash etc. Co., 84 Mo. 119.

So also evidence of defendant's running time over the whole road is admissible to show the rate of speed. Nutter v. Boston etc. R. Co., 60 N. H. 483.

be evidence of the want of due care.¹ Evidence of the fact that a certain character of locomotive had been abandoned by railroads generally may be admitted to prove defendant's knowledge of the dangerous character of such engine.² When it is desired to show negligence in the keeping up of a road bed, evidence cannot be admitted to show the condition of the structure at some time long before or after the injury occurred;³ the evidence must be confined to the condition at or about the time of the accident.⁴ Absence of intent to commit the injury being an essential element of negligence, evidence of actual intent is entirely irrelevant in an action for negligence.⁵

1. Evidence of Usage.—As a general rule an act of negligence can never be excused by evidence that it was done in conformity with a custom or usage long established among those of a similar occupation;⁶ though it is said to be admissible in certain cases to prove what constitutes a want of ordinary care, particularly in case of actions against common carriers.⁷

2. Opinion Evidence.—The opinion of an ordinary witness that Estimates by witnesses living near the road and habitually observing the trains are admissible. Ib.

1. Patterson's R. Acc. Law, p. 276, § 267; Cleveland etc. R. Co. v. Newell, 75 Ind. 542; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 483; White v. Milwaukee City R. Co., 61 Wis. 536; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 213.

2. Crane v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 87 Mo. 588; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 440; 1 Wharton on Ev., § 41.

3. A fireman was killed by the derailment of the train after a storm. There was evidence, although conflicting, tending to show negligence on the part of the railroad company in maintaining its road bed, a culvert, etc. Held, that evidence of the condition of the road-bed one, two and three years after the accident was improperly admitted, it being too remote in point of time; and that an instruction which, in effect, assumed defendant's negligence was erroneous. Stoher v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 91 Mo. 509; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 229.

Where one was charged with negligence in not sufficiently lighting the hall and passage-way to his place of business, and in leaving open the doors to his elevator-way, it was held that evidence, embracing a period of two years, tending to show at different times the condition of the hall and entrance-way as to light—whether more or less, or none—the position of the elevator gates and doors, of what had happened to others at different times, and their escape from peril, was not admissible. Parker v. Portland Publishing Co., 69 Me. 173; Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Eubanks, 48 Ark. 460; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 176.

4. Little Rock etc. R. Co. v. Eubanks, 48 Ark. 460; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 176.

5. Pennsylvania etc. R. Co. v. Smyth, 98 Ind. 42; Indiana etc. R. Co. v. Burdge, 94 Ind. 46; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 19. Ante, subtit. III, 1, INADVERTENCE, etc.

6. Evidence of Usage.—Hill v. Portland etc. R. Co., 55 Me. 438; s. c., 92 Am. Dec. 601, 606, note; Hibler v. McCartney, 31 Ala. 501; Hinckley v. Inhabitants of Barnstable, 109 Mass. 126; Lawrence v. Hudson, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 671 (driver getting off his seat and giving reins to little negro who usually accompanied him); Deering on Neg., § 9, and cases cited; Cleveland v. New Jersey Steamboat Co., 5 Hun (N. Y.) 523; Sewalls Falls Bridge Co. v. Fisk, 23 N. H. 171.

7. Maxwell v. Eason, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 514; Stimson v. Jackson, 58 N. H. 138; Deering on Neg., § 9, and cases. See this subject discussed in CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 891; USAGES AND CUSTOMS; Clarke's Brown on Usages and Customs, § 107, et seq.; Governor v. Withers, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 24; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 99, note; Born v. Belfast, 40 Ala. 184; s. c., 88 Am. Dec. 761.

certain acts do or do not amount to negligence is inadmissible;¹ it violates that rule of evidence which excludes the opinion of an ordinary witness on a question which it is for the jury to decide on the facts.²

XVI. QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT.—By reference to the analytical description at the beginning of this article it will be noticed that actionable negligence arises essentially from (1) a legal duty; (2) a breach of duty by failure to observe due care; and (3) such breach proximately causing damage. Negligence is therefore usually a mixed question of law and fact.³ The ques-

1. The rule is taken from Lawson on Expert and Opinion Evidence, 507; Montgomery v. Scott, 34 Wis. 339; Benedict v. Fond du Lac, 44 Wis. 495; Veerhusen v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 53 Wis. 689; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 583; Bliss v. Inhabitants of Wilbraham, 8 Allen (Mass.) 564. Thus the opinion of a witness as to whether a certain excavation in the highway was dangerous is incompetent. Stillwater Turnpike Co. v. Coover, 26 Ohio St. 520.

A street car company was sued for negligently running over a child who was attempting to get on the platform. Driver was not in his place. Opinion of a witness that the absence of the driver would induce children to jump on the car inadmissible. Largan v. Cent. R. Co., 40 Cal. 272. Other cases, see Simmons v. New Bedford etc. Steamboat Co., 97 Mass. 361; Teall v. Barton, 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 137; Tuttle v. Lawrence, 119 Mass. 276; Eastham v. Riedell, 125 Mass. 585; Winters v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 39 Mo. 468; Hoener v. Koch, 84 Ill. 408; Monroe v. Lattin, 25 Kan. 35; Leighton v. Sargent, 31 N. H. 119; Morris v. East Haven, 41 Conn. 252; Carpenter v. Eastern Transp. Co., 71 N. Y. 574; Lawson on Expert and Opinion Evidence, 507, et seq., whence the above instances are taken. Compare Moreland v. Mitchell Co., 40 Iowa 394; Clinton v. Howard, 42 Conn. 295.

Plaintiff was injured by a defective street crossing; opinions of witnesses that the crossing was dangerous inadmissible. Parsons v. Lindsay, 26 Kan. 426; Village of Fairbury v. Rogers, 98 Ill. 555.

A child was injured by being run over in a street while walking home alone; opinion of her schoolteacher that the child was capable of exercising care in crossing street inadmissible. Lynch v. Smith, 104 Mass. 53.

Opinion of an ordinary witness as to whether a bridge was safe inadmissible. Kelly v. Fond du Lac, 31 Wis. 179.

Injury by locomotive at a crossing—opinion of a county commissioner that no flagman was needed at the crossing inadmissible. Shaw v. Boston etc. R. Co., 8 Gray (Mass.) 45.

Opinion of driver of coach, whether it was negligent in another driver to leave the coach box, entrusting the reins to the small boy who usually accompanied him, inadmissible. Lawrence v. Hudson, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 672.

2. In Crane v. Northfield, 33 Vt. 124, the question was as to the sufficiency of a bridge if the dirt had not been washed away from the boards by rain. Opinion of an ordinary witness was held inadmissible, the court observing: "This was the very question the jury were to try and decide, and there does not appear to us that there could be any difficulty in having the condition of the culvert so described to the jury by the witness that they would be just as capable of exercising their judgment and forming a correct opinion as the witness himself." See also Oleson v. Tolford, 37 Wis. 327; Stillwater Turnpike Co. v. Coover, 26 Ohio St. 520; Barnes v. Newton, 46 Iowa 567; Lawson on Expert and Opinion Evidence, 507, et seq.

3. Mixed Question of Law and Fact.—Nolan v. New York etc. R. Co., 53 Conn. 461; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 342; Purvis v. Coleman, 1 Bosw. (N. Y.) 321; Catawissa etc. R. Co. v. Armstrong, 52 Pa. St. 282; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 52; ante, subtit. II, ANALYTICAL DESCRIPTION.

Therefore, the unqualified statement is rather broad that "negligence is a question of fact, to be determined upon the circumstances." Fiske v. Forsyth Dyeing etc. Co., 57 Conn. 118.

That negligence is a question of law and fact means nothing more than that it is a question for the jury, under the instructions of the court. Baltimore

tion as to whether a legal duty existed to the party injured is one of law, and therefore for the court to pass upon;¹ whether there has been a breach of that duty, and whether it proximately caused damage to plaintiff, are questions which depend upon circumstances, and therefore are usually to be determined by the jury.² Upon these principles every question arising as to the province of the court or jury may generally be determined; but no absolute rule can be stated which will apply under the many combinations of circumstances which arise in the law of negligence, and the strong tendency is to submit all cases, in which there is room for doubt, to the jury.³ Yet, though the province etc. R. Co. v. State, 36 Md. 366; Detroit etc. R. Co. v. Van Steinburg, 17 Mich. 118.

The question of negligence is a mixed question of law and fact. Where the court requires of a defendant some act which the law did not require, it is an error of law and can be reviewed. Where the court finds that the defendant failed to do some required act, it is a finding of fact and cannot be reviewed. Nolan v. New York etc. R. Co., 53 Conn. 461; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 342.

1. Sutton v. New York etc. R. Co., 66 N. Y. 243; Tarwater v. Hannibal R. Co., 42 Mo. 193; Nolan v. New York etc. R. Co., 53 Conn. 461; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 342; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. McLallen, 84 Ill. 109; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 52, 3; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Fronk, 67 Md. 339.

In Sutton v. New York etc. R. Co., 66 N. Y. 243, the question was whether it was the duty of the railroad company to have the brake "on" while the cars were standing in their yard. It was considered a question for the court, not the jury.

Similarly, in an action by a brakeman against the railroad company employing him, it appeared that, had the company used a certain safety switch, the accident would not have happened. Held, that the court erred in leaving it to the jury to say whether the company should have used this switch. Coppins v. New York Cent. etc. R. Co., 43 Hun (N. Y.) 26.

But even this principle is not always applicable. Thus it is said that as a matter of law it cannot be ruled that it is the duty of the conductor of a passenger train to assist passengers to alight. Whether, in a given case, his failure to do so is negligence imputable to the company, is a question of fact for the jury. Simms v. South Caro- lina R. Co., 27 S. Car. 268; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 571. See also Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Robinson, 106 Ill. 142; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 396.

2. McCully v. Clarke, 40 Pa. St. 399; s. c., 80 Am. Dec. 584 (the opinion in this case is an admirable presentation of this portion of the subject, and is well worthy of study); Osborne v. Detroit, 32 Fed. Rep. 36; Pearce v. Humphreys, 34 Fed. Rep. 282; Yeaw v. Williams, 15 R. I. 20; Lilly v. New York etc. R. Co., 107 N. Y. 566; Tabler v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 93 Mo. 79; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 185; Bolinger v. St. Paul etc. R. Co., 36 Minn. 418; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 408; Gulf etc. R. Co. v. Gasscamp, 69 Tex. 545; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 6; Ferren v. Old Colony etc. R. Co., 143 Mass. 197; Jamison v. Illinois C. etc. R. Co., 63 Miss. 33; Crabell v. Wapello Coal Co., 68 Iowa 751. The authorities on this point are almost innumerable.

Proximate Cause.—"It is undoubtedly true, as a general proposition, that the question of proximate cause is one for the jury; yet it has been repeatedly held that where there are no disputed facts the court must determine it." West Mahoney v. Watson, 112 Pa. St. 574; s. c. (on second appeal), 116 Pa. St. 344.

3. An examination of the digest under the heading negligence will exhibit the truth of this opinion. See also Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 55, where it is considered that such a course is advisable, since, if the jury err, it at least does not affect the rights of any future litigant, while one wrong decision of the court may throw a whole department of law into confusion and injuriously affect many hundreds before it is corrected.

As is said by MR. COOLEY, in his work on torts, many cases might be clear if they were not complicated with of the jury is broad, few cases ought to be submitted to them to decide according to their ideas alone. The general rules applicable to the case ought always to be stated as a matter of law by the court to guide them, while they are to determine whether or not the case comes within the rules.¹

1. Province of the Jury.—The general rule is well known that questions of fact are to be submitted to the jury;² and this includes not only cases where the facts are in dispute, but also where the question is as to the inference to be drawn from such facts after they have been determined.³ It will be readily observed that few cases will arise in which there is no question as to the facts involved; the element of ordinary care must from its very character always require the decision of a jury, except where there is a violation of statutory duty, or where the facts are undisputed and but one inference can reasonably be drawn from them.⁴ And the same is equally true as to the determination of the question of proximate cause,⁵ so that the following rules may be stated as applicable to every case. The issue of negligence should go to the jury:

questions of contributory negligence. Such are the cases of a disregard of a law expressly devised to prevent the like injuries . . . In the great majority of cases, however, the question of negligence on any given state of facts must be one of fact. Cooley on Torts (2nd ed.) [670] 804. See also CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 94.

1. Pennsylvania Co. v. Conlan, 101 Ill. 93; Deering on Neg., § 403; Wharton on Neg., § 420; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 11.

2. This was the first great object of jury trial—to determine disputed facts. See CHARGE TO JURY, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 121; INSTRUCTIONS, 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 240, et seq.

3. Inference from Conceded Facts.—Lincoln v. Gillilan, 18 Neb. 114; Johnson v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 18 Neb. 690; Hathaway v. East Tennessee etc. R. Co., 29 Fed. Rep. 489; Ohio etc. R. Co. v. Collarn, 73 Ind. 261; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 554.

4. Question of Ordinary Care One for the Jury.—That whether in a certain act or action the defendant exercised ordinary care under the circumstances is always one for the jury where there is any evidence produced. This principle is sustained by an innumerable number of decisions; to attempt to cite them all would be useless; only a few are here presented. Griffin v. Auburn, 58 N. H. 121; East Tennessee etc. R. Co. v.

Bayliss, 74 Ala. 150; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 480; Atkinson v. Goodrich Transp. Co., 60 Wis. 141; Kenney v. Hannibal etc. R. Co., 80 Mo. 573; White v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 31 Kan. 280; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 473; Texas etc. R. Co. v. Levi, 59 Tex. 674; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 464; Sloan v. Cent. Iowa R. Co., 62 Iowa 728; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 145 (brakeman injured by failing to catch hold of brakeroad); Pennsylvania Co. v. Frana, 112 Ill. 398; Schmidt v. Sinnott, 103 Ill. 160.

Even though the facts are undisputed, it is for the jury and not for the judge to determine whether proper care was given, or whether they establish negligence. Ohio etc. R. Co. v. Collarn, 73 Ind. 261; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 554; Vinton v. Schwab, 32 Vt. 612.

5. Proximate Cause—Question for Jury.—The question as to whether the plaintiff's negligence is the proximate cause of the injury to plaintiff owing to its character, and the test to be applied as previously stated, are for the jury. Ante, subtit. CAUSAL CONNECTION; PROXIMATE CAUSE; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 55; Webb v. Rome etc. R. Co., 49 N. Y. 420; Hoyt v. Jeffers, 30 Mich. 181; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Pennel, 110 Ill. 435; Henry v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 50 Cal. 176; Poeppers v. Missouri etc. R. Co., 67 Mo. 715; Smith v. London etc. R. Co., L. R., 5 C. P. 98; West Mahoney v. Watson, 112 Pa. St. 574;

1. When the facts which, if true, would constitute evidence of negligence, are controverted.

2. When such facts are not disputed, but there may be a fair difference of opinion as to whether the inference of negligence should be drawn.

3. When the facts are in dispute, and the inferences to be drawn therefrom are doubtful.¹

2. Province of the Court.—While in almost every case that arises there exists some element which makes the question one for the jury, such is not true invariably. When there is no evidence of negligence,² or so little that no reasonable man could from it find the fact of negligence, it is error to submit the matter to the jury, but a nonsuit should be ordered by the court.³ So where the facts in the case are undisputed or conclusively established, and there is no reasonable chance for drawing different conclusions from them, the question becomes one of law for the

s. c., 116 Pa. St. 344; Haverly v. State Line etc. R. Co., 26 W. N. C. (Pa.) 321; Cosulich v. Standard Oil Co., 55 N. Y. Super. Ct. 384; Wright v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 27 Ill. App. 200; Southside etc. R. Co. v. Trich, 117 Pa. St. 390; Schroth v. Prescott, 68 Wis. 678; Kreuziger v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 73 Wis. 158; Lake v. Milliken, 62 Me. 240; s. c., 16 Am. Rep. 456; Fairbanks v. Kerr, 70 Pa. St. 90; s. c., 10 Am. Rep. 664.

But where the facts are undisputed, it is a question for the court usually. Pike v. Grand Trunk etc. R. Co., 39 Fed. Rep. 255.

1. Hathaway v. East Tennessee etc. R. Co., 29 Fed. Rep. 489.

Jury to Decide Whenever There Is a Conflict of Evidence.—Where the question of negligence is not wholly free from doubt, or the evidence is conflicting, the jury, not the court, must decide the case. Orange etc. R. Co. v. Ward, 47 N. J. L. 560; Leavitt v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 64 Wis. 228; Mezum v. Pittsburgh etc. R. Co., 30 W. Va. 228; Ferry v. Manhattan R. Co., 54 N. Y. Super. Ct. 325; Drevis v. Woods, 71 Wis. 329; Baldwin v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 72 Iowa 45; O'Hare v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 95 Mo. 662; Crabell v. Wapello Coal Co., 68 Iowa 751; Tyler v. New York etc. R. Co., 137 Mass. 238; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 296; Stoker v. Minneapolis, 32 Minn. 478; Texas etc. R. Co. v. Levi, 59 Tex. 674; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 464.

2. This is a well settled rule of law. See INSTRUCTIONS, 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 243; Boland v. Missouri R. Co., 36 Mo. 484, 491; Thompson's Charging Jury 44; Brower v. Edson, 47 Mich. 91; Barton v. St. Louis etc. R. Co., 52 Mo. 353; New Jersey Express Co. v. Nichols, 33 N. J. L. 434; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Righter, 42 N. J. L. 180; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 220; Hoth v. Peters, 55 Wis. 405; Hoyt v. Hudson, 41 Wis. 105; New York etc. R. Co. v. Shinner, 19 Pa. St. 298.

3. "Negligence is ordinarily a question for the jury, but only when the facts would authorize the jury to infer it." ANDREWS, J., in Sutton v. New York etc. R. Co., 66 N. Y. 243.

The principle as to very little evidence is established in Frazier v. Lloyd, 23 W. N. C. (Pa.) 178; Ryder v. Wombwell, L. R., 4 Exch. 32, 39; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Schertle, 97 Pa. St. 450; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 158.

Scintilla of Evidence.—The doctrine that a mere scintilla of evidence is sufficient to send the case to the jury is now virtually discarded in American courts, and wholly so in the English courts. See a full discussion of this whole matter in INSTRUCTIONS, 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 243. See also Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 56; Schuykill etc. Imp. Co. v. Munson, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 442, 448; Smith v. Sioux City etc. R. Co., 15 Neb. 583; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 561; Hathaway v. East Tennessee etc. R. Co., 29 Fed. Rep. 491; Parks v. Rose, 11 How. (U. S.) 373; Pleasant v. Fant, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 116, 121.

Where the doctrine happens to prevail, however, the court cannot take the matter from the jury when there is any evidence tending to prove the issue. Robinson v. Louisville etc. R. Co., 2 court.¹ In every case there is a preliminary question for the court as to whether there is any evidence upon which a jury could properly find a verdict for the party producing it, and upon whom the burden of proof is imposed. If the evidence is such that the court would consider it proper to set aside a ver-

Lea (Tenn.) 594; INSTRUCTIONS, 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 243, et seq.; Dick v. Indianapolis etc. R. Co., 38 Ohio St. 389; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 101; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 56; Mercier v. Mercier, 43 Ga. 323.

1. Hathaway v. East Tennessee etc. R. Co., 29 Fed. Rep. 489; Abbett v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 30 Minn. 482; Sutton v. New York etc. R. Co., 66 N. Y. 243; Chicago etc. R. Co. v. O'Connor, 119 Ill. 586; O'Neill v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 505; Keller v. New York etc. R. Co., 24 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 177; s. c., 79 N. Y. 72; Beven on Neg. 11; Reading etc. R. Co. v. Ritchie, 102 Pa. St. 425; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 267; Dahl v. Milwaukee City etc. R. Co., 62 Wis. 652; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 121; Ernst v. Hudson River R. Co., 35 N. Y. 9; Bernhardt v. Rensselaer etc. R. Co., 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 165; Moore v. Westervelt, 21 N. Y. 103; Detroit etc. R. Co. v. Van Steinburg, 17 Mich. 99.

This principle is true, whether the evidence is such as to establish or disprove plaintiff's case. See Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 56; Williams v. O'Keefe, 24 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 16.

For where there is no dispute as to the facts, or the inferences to be drawn from them, the only point is whether the law attaches the legal consequences of negligence; if it does, it is for the court to say. Beven on Neg. 11. Thus the court may properly order the jury to find for the defendant, a railroad company, where plaintiff's evidence shows that his intestate, killed by a train, disregarded its signal, and recklessly went upon a crossing in front of the approaching train. Fox v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 85 Mo. 679.

Likewise where the plaintiff's case in an action against a railroad company shows that plaintiff's intestate, a brakeman, was killed on top of a box car by a bridge which he had passed daily for three months, and that the company had not erected danger signal cords, a nonsuit is properly ordered. Hooper v. Columbia etc. R. Co., 21 S. Car. 541; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 691; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 433.

The question of negligence, however, is not always a matter of law, where there is no conflict of testimony as to the particular facts. If it still rests upon discretion, experience and judgment to determine whether the acts complained of are inconsistent with ordinary care and prudence, it is for the jury. Vinton v. Schwab, 32 Vt. 612; Ohio etc. R. Co. v. Collarn, 73 Ind. 261; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 554.

The rule is stated by Shear. & Red. on Neg. (§ 56), that "when the facts are clearly settled, and the course which common prudence dictated can be clearly discerned, the court should decide the question as a matter of law." Citing Beisiegel v. New York Cent. R. Co., 40 N. Y. 9; Stublely v. N. W. R. Co., L. R., 1 Exch. 13; Crafter v. Metropolitan R. Co., L. R., 1 C. P. 300.

Where, by the plaintiff's own evidence, it appears that his negligence contributed to the injury, he is properly nonsuited. This principle applied to a particular state of facts in Brown v. Wood (Pa. 1888), 16 Atl. Rep. 42.

For example, in an action against a carrier for compelling plaintiff to leave its train some distance from the depot, and to walk along a track having an open culvert, into which plaintiff fell, receiving the injuries complained of, where there is some evidence tending to show that plaintiff fell into the culvert while attempting to help a companion out, it is error to refuse to submit such question to the jury. Kreuziger v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 83 Wis. 158.

"It has never been held that when the facts of the case have been ascertained, the court may not apply the law to the facts. This is done daily upon special verdicts and reserved points." PAXSON, J., in Hoag v. Lake Shore etc. R. Co., 85 Pa. St. 293; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 653; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Kerr, 62 Pa. St. 353; 1 Am. Rep. 431.

MR. COOLEY states the rule thus: "If the case is such that reasonable men, unaffected by bias or prejudice, would be agreed concerning the presence or absence of due care, the judge would be quite justified in saying that the law deduced the conclusion accordingly. If the facts are not ambiguous, and there

dict based upon it, the case should not be submitted to the jury, but a nonsuit should be ordered.¹

XVII. PARTIES TO THE ACTION—1. Plaintiff.—The party injured is always a proper party plaintiff. But the plaintiff is not necessarily the party directly injured. Thus where a child is injured, it, as plaintiff, may recover damages for the injury, and the parent may be plaintiff in another action for damages caused from the loss of the child's services. The same is true of a master and his servant.² Similarly, where the common law remains in force, the is no room for two honest and apparently reasonable conclusions, then the judge should not be compelled to submit the question to the jury as one in dispute. On the contrary he should say to them, 'In the judgment of the law this conduct was negligent,' or, as the case might be, 'There is nothing in the evidence here which tends to show a want of due care.' In either case he draws the conclusion of negligence or the want of it as one of law." Cooley on Torts (2nd ed.) 804.

1. Pleasants v. Fant, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 116, 120. In that case the court, speaking through JUSTICE MILLER, observes: "In the discharge of his duty it is in the province of the court, either before or after verdict, to decide whether the plaintiff has given evidence sufficient to support or justify a verdict in his favor; not whether, on all the evidence, the preponderating weight is in his favor. That is for the jury; but conceding to all the evidence the greatest probative force to which, according to the law of evidence, it is justly entitled, is it sufficient to justify a verdict? If it does not, then it is the duty of the court, after a verdict, to set it aside." But it is not necessary (it was further said) to wait until after verdict to pass upon the evidence; it should be done before, by means of instructions. See also Beaulieu v. Portland Co., 48 Me. 291; Cagger v. Lansing, 64 N. Y. 417; Bagley v. Cleveland Rolling Mill, 21 Fed. Rep. 159; Abbott's Trial Brief, p. 117; INSTRUCTIONS, 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 250, et seq.; Filer v. New York Cent. R. Co., 49 N. Y. 47.

It may be stated as a proper test to consider whether the verdict of the jury on the point, if in favor of the moving party, would have to be set aside as contrary to the weight of evidence. Cagger v. Lansing, 64 N. Y. 417; Bagley v. Cleveland Rolling Mill Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 159; Pleasants v. Fant, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 116, 120; Smith v. O'Connor, 48 Pa. St. 218; Filer v. New York Cent. R. Co., 49 N. Y. 47.

Where, in an action for personal injuries, the court does not feel justified in sustaining a verdict for the plaintiff, it should direct a verdict for the defendant, even though there be evidence which would raise a possibility that plaintiff was entitled to recover. Sullivan v. Chrysolyte Min. Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 892.

2. The recovery by a parent of the value of his child's services, lost by reason of the injury, is based upon the relation of master and servant, so that what is true of one relation in this respect is true of the other. 2 Thompson on Neg. 1242, § 16; Karr v. Parks, 44 Cal. 46; Oakland R. Co. v. Fielding, 48 Pa. St. 320.

Therefore, where the relation of master and servant does not exist, e. g., when the child is so young that his services are worthless, or where the parent has relinquished his right to his services, there can be no recovery by the parent, or rather, he cannot be a proper party plaintiff. Hall v. Hollander, 4 B. & Cr. (Eng.) 660; s. c., 7 Dow. & Ry. 133; Grinnell v. Well, 8 Scott N. R. 741.

But it seems to be allowed now that the parent recover damages for the prospective value of the child's services when it is too young to be of any service when injured. Drew v. Sixth Ave. R. Co., 26 N. Y. 49; Franklin v. Southeastern R. Co., 3 Hurls. & N. 211; 2 Thompson on Neg. 1242, § 6.

In the case of Abeles v. Bransfield, 19 Kan. 16, it was held that by the commencement and prosecution of an action by the parent as next friend of his child, it is conclusively presumed that the parent has relinquished to the infant all compensation for loss of time and expenses incurred by reason of an injury, and in such an action the infant may recover damages therefor.

Injuries Causing Death.—It is generally said that at common law no action husband may sue for damages sustained by him in the loss of the services and society of his wife, where she is injured by a third party,¹ while husband and wife must join in the action for dam-for the death of a human being could be sustained. Such actions were not absolutely forbidden, but were prevented by two common law principles viz: (1) The death of the person injured produced an abatement of the right of action, which would prevent the representatives of the deceased from bringing it. (2) The civil remedy for felonious death was necessarily suspended until the criminal punishment had been enforced, and, as this deprived the wrongdoer both of life and property, there was little opportunity for such a suit in such case by those who had suffered from his act. But both these rules taken together fail to show any reason why relatives of a deceased person could not maintain an action for damage suffered where the death was not felonious. This is the view presented in Hammond's Blackstone 194-7. See also Cross v. Guthery, 2 Root (Conn.) 90; Ford v. Monroe, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 210; 1 Cent. L. J. 590, 614, 622; 2 Cent. L. J. 13, 47, 128, 165; Reeves on Domestic Rel. (4th ed.) 486; DILLON, J., in Sullivan v. Union Pac. R. Co., 3 Dill. (U. S.) 334. But whether the action existed at common law or not is of small importance now. In England an act was first passed, known as Lord Campbell's act, giving a right of action in such cases against the injurer (9 and 10 Victoria, ch. 92). This act has been imitated in almost every State of the Union. The statutes of the various States differ somewhat in their minute particulars, but are principally the same in their principal provisions.

It would seem that in the absence of an express provision in the statute otherwise, that the action would lie whether the death were instantaneous or delayed. Brown v. Buffalo etc. R. Co., 22 N. Y. 91; Murphy v. New York etc. R. Co., 30 Conn. 184; Hammond's Blackstone 197.

But in Massachusetts the action is held not to lie where the death is instantaneous. Kearney v. Boston etc. R. Co., 9 Cush. (Mass.) 108. However, any perceptible interval is held sufficient. Bancroft v. Boston etc. R. Co., 11 Allen (Mass.) 34.

See this subject treated in DEATH, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 125-130;

Beven on Neg. 162, et seq.; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 124, et seq.; Deering on Neg., § 387; Hammond's Blackstone 194-197.

1. Loss of Wife's Services.—The damages to be recovered for loss of wife's services are entirely distinct from those recovered for actual injury to wife. In an action for loss of such services, nothing can be recovered except the value of the loss of her services to her husband, or for the expense of her cure. Brooks v. Schwerin, 54 N. Y. 343; Smith v. St. Joseph, 55 Mo. 456; Fuller v. Naugatuck R. Co., 21 Conn. 557; Barnes v. Martin, 15 Wis. 240; Lewis v. Babcock, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 443; Heirn v. McCaughan, 32 Miss. 17; Barnes v. Hurd, 11 Mass. 59; 2 Thompson on Neg. 1241; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 115. See also HUSBAND AND WIFE, 9 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 832, 833.

Where defendant from day to day secretly sold to plaintiff's wife large quantities of laudanum to be used as a beverage, knowing the use to be made of it, and her (the wife's) health was greatly injured, so that plaintiff was deprived of her services and society, he was allowed to recover damages for such loss. Hoard v. Peck, 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 202.

If a voluntary separation has taken place between husband and wife, which by agreement is to be permanent, the husband can have no cause of action for injuries sustained by her; for, having parted with her by his full consent, he could not maintain an action for the loss of her services. Fry v. Derstler, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 278. See also Peru v. French, 55 Ill. 317.

In Iowa it is allowed by statute that the husband may recover for expenses incurred while the wife was suffering from the effects of the injury; the wife cannot recover therefor unless she had expended her own money in payment of such expenses. Tuttle v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 42 Iowa 518.

Where a wife labors for another, her services no longer belong to her husband but to herself, and if she is injured she may recover for their loss so far as she is disabled. Brooks v. Schwerin, 54 N. Y. 343.

ages for the injury to the wife personally.¹

The case of an insurance company is an exception to the general rule, since although indirectly injured by the injury to the plaintiff they cannot maintain an action against the injurer. The injury would not have obliged them to suffer any damage if they had not voluntarily undertaken to do so.²

When a special duty is imposed upon any person by law, and through the violation of it some one is injured, the rule that the injured party is the proper plaintiff applies, even though the duty was owing rather to the public than to any individual.³

In case of an injury to property the injured party may be either the owner, tenant or reversioner, according to the circumstances of the case and the nature of the injury. One who has a fixed reversionary interest under lease may bring an action for

1. Damages for Injury to Wife.—2 Thompson on Neg. 1240, § 15; Shear & Red. on Neg., § 115; Hyde v. Scysser, Cro. Jac. 538; 3 Black. Com. 140; Brockbank v. Whitehaven, 7 Hurls. & N. 834; Whitcomb v. Barre, 37 Vt. 148; Laughlin v. Eaton, 54 Me. 156; Matteson v. New York Cent. R. Co., 35 N. Y. 487; Hopkins v. Atlantic etc. R. Co., 36 N. H. 9; Brooks v. Schwerin, 54 N. Y. 343; Thomas v. Winchester, 6 N. Y. 397; 1 Chitty on Plead. (1828) 62.

Statutory Alterations.—The old principles of the common law, relative to suits by married women, have been changed in very many States and no rule can be laid down for all; the statutes must be consulted. See Harwood v. Lowell, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 310 (injury by defect in sidewalk); Chidsey v. Canton, 17 Conn. 475; Kavanaugh v. Janesville, 24 Wis. 618; Whitcomb v. Barre, 37 Vt. 148; Brooks v. Schwerin, 54 N. Y. 343; Neumeister v. Dubuque, 47 Iowa 465. See also HUSBAND AND WIFE, 9 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 832.

2. Shear. & Red. on Neg., §§ 115, 124; Connecticut L. Ins. Co. v. New Haven R. Co., 25 Conn. 265; s. c., 65 Am. Dec. 571; Rockingham Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Bosher, 39 Me. 253; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 618. See also Althorf v. Wolfe, 22 N. Y. 355; Antony v. Slaide, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 290 (contractor injured pecuniarily by one of his paupers being beaten); Longmeid v. Holliday, 6 Eng. L. & Eq. 563; Peoria etc. Ins. Co. v. Frost, 37 Ill. 335; Hall v. Nashville etc. R. Co., 13 Wall. (U. S.) 372.

In the leading case (Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. New Haven etc. R. Co., supra), the court say: "The single question is whether a plaintiff can successfully claim a legal injury to himself from another because the latter has injured a third person in such a manner that the plaintiff's contract liabilities are thereby affected. An individual slanders a merchant, and thereby ruins his business. Is the wrongdoer liable to all the persons who, in consequence of their relations by contract to the bankrupt, can be clearly shown to have been damaged by the bankruptcy? . . . To open the door of legal redress to wrongs received through the mere voluntary factitious relation of a contractor with the immediate subject of the enquiry would be to encourage collusion and extravagant contracts between men by which the death of either, through the involuntary default of others, might be made a source of splendid profits to the other, and would also invite a system of litigation, more portentous than our jurisprudence has yet known."

3. Adsit v. Brady, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 630 (action against city officer); Clayburgh v. Chicago, 25 Ill. 440; s. c., 79 Am. Dec. 346 (action for negligence in failing to perform a duty imposed by law); City Council of Montgomery v. Gilmer, 33 Ala. 116; s. c., 70 Am. Dec. 562 (negligence by city in care of sewers); Rowe v. Portsmouth, 56 N. H. 291; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 464 (same as preceding); Wendell v. Mayor etc. of Troy, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 329; s. c., 4 Abb. Ct. App. 563; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 118. Compare Hill v. Boston, 122 Mass. 344; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 332; Fuchs v. Schmidt, 8 Daly (N. Y.) 317; Heintze v. New York, 50 N. Y. Super. Ct. 295.

damages caused by an injury to such property as will depreciate its value when it comes into his hands;¹ nor is it any bar to his recovery that the injury is one which may possibly cease before he comes into possession, if it is in its nature permanent and liable to continue unless hindered.² The owner of a reversionary interest in personal property has the same right of action for injuries done to it as in case of real property.³

A person who employs another to do a lawful act is presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to employ him to do it in a lawful and proper manner, and therefore the employer is not responsible for injuries occasioned by the negligent mode in which the act is done, unless he sustains as to the employee the relation of master to servant; but if the thing contracted to be done, of itself and without negligence on the part of the contractor, causes injury, or if the thing to be done be an unlawful act, the person having it done will be held liable.⁴

2. Defendant.—In actions for negligence, the defendant proper is always the actor in the proximate cause of the injury; that is, he must be the actor personally or through some one for whose acts he is responsible.⁵ Where a breach of duty is committed by

1. Reversioners.—Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 119; Jesser v. Gifford, 4 Burr. 2141; Tomlinson v. Brown, 1 Sayer 215; Tucker v. Newman, 11 Ad. & El. (Eng.) 40; Raine v. Alderson, 4 Bing. N. C. 702; 6 Scott 691.

Equitable Owner.—One in possession of land under a contract to purchase is considered the equitable owner and may recover damages for injuries caused by negligently setting fire to the woods and fences on it. Rood v. New York etc. R. Co., 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 80; Hays v. Miller, 6 Hun (N. Y.) 320.

2. Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 119.

Under this principle, the building of an adjoining house, so that the rain drips upon the reversioner's land, is a permanent injury. Tucker v. Newman, 11 Ad. & El. 40. So also an excavation causing a falling in of the soil. Raine v. Alderson, 4 Bing. N. C. 702; 6 Scott 691.

In an action by a reversioner for the obstruction of ancient lights, it was objected that the obstruction might be removed, either by the voluntary act of the defendant, or by process of law, before the reversioner came into possession. But the objection was overruled. Jesser v. Gifford, 4 Burr. 2141; Tomlinson v. Brown, 1 Sayer 215; S. P. Shadwell v. Hutchinson, 4 Carr. & P. 333; 1 Moo. & M. 350 (TENTERDEN, C. J.).

3. Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 119; Hawkins v. Phythian, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 515.

4. Butler v. Hunter, 31 L. J. Exch. 214; Ready v. London etc. R. Co., 4 Exch. 244; Wright v. Holbrook, 53 N. H. 120 (SARGENT, J., there discusses the question at length); s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 12; Hilliard v. Richardson, 3 Gray (Mass.) 349; Cuff v. Newark etc. R. Co., 35 N. J. L. 17; Daggett v. Robins, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 418. See also this whole subject well presented in MASTER AND SERVANT, 14 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 891.

5. This follows as of course from the rule that defendant's act must have been the proximate cause of the injury. See, ante, PROXIMATE CAUSE, PARTIES TO ACTION, Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law; MASTER AND SERVANT, 14 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

Master and Servant Jointly Liable for Negligence of Servant.—It is laid down by Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 122, that "where a master is liable for the tortious negligence of his servant, the latter is jointly liable with him," citing Phelps v. Wait, 30 N. Y. 78; Michael v. Alestree, 2 Lev. (Eng.) 172; Steel v. Lester, L. R., 3 C. P. 121.

This is also supported by the cases of Wright v. Wilcox, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 343; Montfort v. Hughes, 3 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 591; Suydam v. Moore, 8 Barb.

more than one person, each contributing to the injury as a joint tort-feasor, the plaintiff has his election to make either or all of them defendant.¹ And it is not always essential in order to make them liable as joint tort-feasors, that they should have acted in concert; acting independently and causing together a (N. Y.) 358; Hewitt v. Swift, 10 Am. Law Reg. 505; Wright v. Compton, 53 Ind. 337. But such action can only be joint where the injury is due to negligence; if the injury is wilful, there is no joint liability of the two. The term "tortious negligence" used above is to be noted. See Wright v. Wilcox, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 343; Garvey v. Dung, 30 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 315; Vanderbilt v. Richmond Turnpike Co., 2 N. Y. 479; Isaacs v. Third Ave. etc. R. Co., 47 N. Y. 122; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 418; Fraser v. Freeman, 43 N. Y. 566.

The case of Schaefer v. Osterbrink, 67 Wis. 495, was an action against a father and son jointly to recover damages for the negligence of the son who was a minor living with his father, in carelessly driving his father's sleigh and team past plaintiff's sleigh on the highway so as to frighten the plaintiff's team and injure his minor son. Evidence was permitted to be introduced that the son was in the habit of driving the team for his father to church and elsewhere; and that the team had acted in a similar way a few days before.

The case of Campbell v. Portland Sugar Co. (62 Me. 552; s. c., 16 Am. Rep. 503) is an interesting one as regards the liability of agents. A portion of a wharf was leased to A and B by the agents of the owners of the wharf, the agents being bound to repair. A person going to the portion of the wharf mentioned in order to take a vessel, was obliged, by obstructions on other parts of the wharf, to take a certain route through a shed, and, owing to a defect in the wharf, was injured. It was held that the owners and agents were liable for the injury, but that the liability was not joint. A verdict against both was allowed to stand against the agents upon the discontinuance of the suit as against the owners. See also Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 122; Phelps v. Wait, 30 N. Y. 78; Steel v. Lester, L. R., 3 C. P. 121.

1. Guille v. Swan, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 381; Hawkeworth v. Thompson, 99 Mass. 77; Williams v. Sheldon, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 654; Slater v. Merse- reau, 64 N. Y. 138; 2 Thompson on Neg. 1088, § 5; Wabash etc. R. Co. v. Shacklet, 105 Ill. 364; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 166; Thompkins v. Clay etc. R. Co., 66 Cal. 163; Little Schuylkill Nav. Co. v. Richards, 57 Pa. St. 148; Kain v. Smith, 80 N. Y. 458, 468; Lyman v. Hampshire, 140 Mass. 311; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 122; Union etc. Co. v. Shacklet, 119 Ill. 232.

Thus, all persons who are concerned, directly or indirectly, in the firing off of fireworks in a public street are responsible for the injuries done to an innocent person. Jenne v. Sutton, 43 N. J. L. 257; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 578.

So, where A lent his wagon to B and C, who each furnished a horse, and then at their invitation A rode with them, it was held that they were all three jointly liable for the negligence of B in driving too fast. Bishop v. Ely, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 294; Davey v. Chamberlain, 4 Esp. 229.

A switchman, who is in the employ of two railway companies at a point where they use a common track, and who contribute to pay his wages, may, on being injured while thus employed, by a defect in the road, sue either or both of the companies. Vary v. Baltimore etc. R. Co., 42 Iowa 246.

But it is not always true that where two persons are associated and acting together they are equally liable; both must have been negligent. Thus A and B, employees of the fire patrol, went with a horse and wagon to remove some tarpaulins, used by the company at a fire, from the fourth story of a building. A was the driver and remained with his horse on the street while B went into the building and threw the tarpaulins out of the window. A warned pedestrians passing on the pavement of the danger. One of the tarpaulins struck a pedestrian as he was passing and so injured him that he died. In an action to recover damages for this negligence, brought by his wife and child against A and B, the court rightly granted a compulsory nonsuit as to A. Boyd v. Philadelphia Ins. Patrol, 113 Pa. St. 269.

single injury, they are liable jointly and severally.¹ The same is true where a duty is owing by several and there is a breach of it by one only.² But persons who act severally and independently, each causing a separate and distinct injury, are not jointly liable, although the injuries may have been precisely similar in character and inflicted at the same time.³

In the case of landlords and tenants, the question arises as to who is to be made defendant in an action for an injury caused by an improper condition of the property. It seems to be the proper rule that the landlord is liable for the negligent construction, and the tenant for the negligent use of the premises.⁴ If a dangerous or injurious structure is erected on the premises when

1. Thus, where by the combined negligence of two railway corporations a collision occurs whereby a party is injured, both corporations are liable to a joint action for damages against them. Colegrove v. New York etc. R. Co., 20 N. Y. 492; s. c., 75 Am. Dec. 418; Slater v. Mersereau, 64 N. Y. 147; Arctic F. Ins. Co. v. Austin, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 197; Boyd v. Watt, 27 Ohio St. 268; Lyman v. Hampshire, 140 Mass. 311.

A separate and joint liability arises in such cases, and the person injured may at his option sue one or all. Chipman v. Palmer, 9 Hun (N. Y.) 619; s. c., 77 N. Y. 54; Pollett v. Long, 56 N. Y. 205; Lull v. Fox etc. Imp. Co., 19 Wis. 102; Masterson v. New York etc. R. Co., 84 N. Y. 256; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 408. Compare Brouk v. New York etc. R. Co., 3 Daly (N. Y.) 454.

2. Two municipal corporations owning a bridge uniting their territories are liable jointly and severally for an injury caused by the negligent construction or management of it. Peckham v. Burlington, 1 Brayt. (Vt.) 134; Weiserberg v. Winneconne, 56 Wis. 667; Lyman v. Hampshire, 140 Mass. 311; Brown v. Fairhaven, 47 Vt. 386. Consult Walsh v. Trustees etc. of Brooklyn Bridge, 96 N. Y. 427.

Likewise the two owners of a party wall are jointly and severally liable for injuries sustained in consequence of its falling through want of proper care. Klauder v. McGrath, 35 Pa. St. 128; s. c., 78 Am. Dec. 329.

Two persons were jointly superintending a work which was so negligently done that it caused injury to the plaintiff. Both were held jointly liable; it made no difference that one rendered his services to the other gratuitously, or that the acts of the other were done on his own land. Hawkesworth v. Thompson, 98 Mass. 77.

3. Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 123; Williams v. Sheldon, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 654.

This was the principle asserted in the common law by reason of which a person, whose property was injured by animals belonging to several of his neighbors, could not make such owners jointly liable. See ANIMALS, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law; Van Steenburgh v. Tobias, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 562.

Where two persons are engaged in the accomplishment of a common purpose, and through the sole negligence of only one an injury is caused, the person actually causing the injury is alone liable. Boyd v. Philadelphia Ins. Patrol, 113 Pa. St. 269.

Persons who occupy the same building, but are separate renters of different portions of such building, are not jointly liable for their negligent use of the premises. They are only so when their right is joint. Moore v. Goedel, 7 Bosw. (N. Y.) 591; Eakin v. Brown, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 36.

4. Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 120; Eakin v. Brown, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 44; Irvine v. Wood, 51 N. Y. 224; Swords v. Edgar, 59 N. Y. 34; Allen v. Smith, 76 Me. 335 (tenant liable for negligent use). See also LANDLORD AND TENANT, 12 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 890.

The owners of a steamboat engaged in carrying passengers, but who have not the possession, control or management of it themselves, or by their agents, servants or employees, cannot be held responsible for the negligence or mismanagement of others who have the exclusive possession, control and management. Gulzoni v. Tyler, 64 Cal. 334.

he lets them to the tenant, the landlord is, of course, liable;¹ but he cannot be made answerable for such a structure erected by the tenant, unless he renews the lease for the premises after knowledge of it.² Nor is the landlord liable, in the absence of a

The case of Ingwersen v. Rankin, 47 N. J. L. 18; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 109, established that (1) He who creates a nuisance on his own premises cannot escape liability for its continuance by demising the premises whereon the nuisance is; (2) Such liability will exist although the tenant by the demise stipulates to keep the premises in repair; (3) A landlord whose tenant during the term has created a nuisance on the demised premises will not be liable therefor so long as he has no right of entry or power to abate; but when the term expires, or the landlord may enter and abate the nuisance, he will become liable for its continuance, and that liability cannot be evaded by a renewal of the lease, though with covenants to repair and without the landlord's having taken actual possession.

Quære.—Whether knowledge of the existence of the nuisance is necessary to establish the landlord's liability in such cases.

Party in Possession of Premises, Liable.—The manufacturer of an elevator which had been in use two or three days sent an employee, at the purchaser's request, to see what was the matter with it. After taking the car to an upper floor the latter said to one of the purchasers, "Let us load it up," and the purchaser accordingly directed a servant to assist in the loading. The elevator fell while being loaded, and the servant was hurt. Held, that he had a right of action against the manufacturer, who was in possession by his employee. Necker v. Harvey, 49 Mich. 517; Keeley v. O'Conner, 106 Pa. St. 321 (A owning premises, B leasing second floor, B's servant injured by fire in building—A not liable); Marshall v. Heard, 59 Tex. 266.

1. Roswell v. Pryor, 12 Mod. 635; 1 Ld. Raym. 713; Congreve v. Smith, 18 N. Y. 79, 84; Clifford v. Dam, 81 N. Y. 52; Swords v. Edgar, 59 N. Y. 34; Davenport v. Ruckman, 37 N. Y. 568; Anderson v. Dickie, 26 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 105; Knauss v. Brua, 107 Pa. St. 85 (privy well and sewer out of repair when tenant entered premises; landlord liable); Khron v. Brock, 144 Mass. 516; Albert v. State, 66 Md. 325 (wharf—same as preceding case); Marshall v. Heard, 59 Tex. 266.

And his liability continues, although he is prevented from removing the construction afterwards by reason of having demised the premises; or because the construction is on the land of another. Fish v. Dodge, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 312; Thompson v. Gibson, 7 Mees. & W. 456; Roswell v. Prior, 12 Mod. 635; s. c., 1 Ld. Raym. 713.

In Cunningham v. Bay State Shoe etc. Co., 93 N. Y. 481, the defendant had a contract with the county of K for the services of the convicts in the penitentiary of that county, to be rendered within its walls, in shops furnished by the county. The shops and convicts were under the control of the prison authorities. In a shop building furnished under the contract was an elevator used by the defendant in carrying on its business. Plaintiff, who was in the employ of persons engaged repairing the building under a contract with the county, fell down the elevator hole, which was not covered or guarded, and was injured. In an action to recover damages, held that defendant was not liable.

2. Thus in case of a tenancy from year to year the landlord chose to renew the tenancy after the tenant had created the nuisance, the landlord is liable for injuries caused by it. Rex v. Pedly, 1 Ad. & El. 827; Gaudy v. Jubber, 5 Best. & S. 78, 485; Jessen v. Sweigert, 66 Cal. 182 (landlord responsible for injury from an insecure awning which he had "suffered" to be put up); Owings v. Jones, 9 Md. 108; Woram v. Noble, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 398. Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 120; Edwards v. New York etc. R. Co., 98 N. Y. 245; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 659 (dangerous construction on premises of which landlord was ignorant; tenant was liable); Wolf v. Kilpatrick, 101 N. Y. 146; s. c., 54 Am. Rep. 674 (same as preceding). Compare Clifford v. Dam, 81 N. Y. 52; Anderson v. Dickie, 1 Robt. (N. Y.) 238; Dygert v. Schenck, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 445; Congreve v. Morgan, 18 N. Y. 84; Davenport v. Ruckman, 37 N. Y. 568; Swords v. Edgar, 59 N. Y. 28.

covenant,¹ for the consequences of a natural decay in the premises;² and if injury occurs, after he has alienated the property, from a dangerous structure erected by him before alienation, he is not liable, the new owner alone being responsible.³ Where a structure is erected by the owner and used by the tenant of the premises (for example, a coal hole in the sidewalk), and a person is injured by this being negligently left open, the injured party may maintain an action against either the owner or the tenant.⁴ As to whether and when infants and lunatics are such responsible persons as can be made defendants in an action for negligence, there is much conflict of authority.⁵ Joint owners of real property are liable severally and jointly for injuries occasioned by its negligent use and management by either.⁶

1. Payne v. Rogers, 2 H. Blacks. 350; Peoria v. Simpson, 110 Ill. 294; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 683; Campbell v. Portland Sugar Co., 62 Me. 552; s. c., 16 Am. Rep. 503; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 120.

It has been said that where the tenant has not notified the landlord to repair, the latter is not liable, upon his covenant to repair, for injuries sustained by a stranger in consequence of a want of repair, while the latter is upon the premises by invitation of the tenant. Pleon v. Staff, 9 Mo. App. 309. But it is doubtful if this maintains the proper principle.

2. Cheetham v. Hampson, 4 T. Rep. 318 (cattle straying on premises and injured); Couplan v. Hardingham, 3 Camp. 398; Daniells v. Potter, 4 Carr. & P. 266; Staple v. Spring, 10 Mass. 74; Peoria v. Simpson, 110 Ill. 294; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 683; Odell v. Solomon, 99 N. Y. 635 (tenant had covenanted to repair and was therefore liable).

It is the duty of a farm tenant by force of law to make all needed current repairs on the fences; and if they are not kept in lawful condition, it is his fault, and not the landlord's; and an action cannot be maintained against the landlord by an adjoining land owner, whose colt escaped through an insufficient division fence and strayed on to the railroad track, and was there injured. And this is so although the fence was in the same condition at the time of the accident as when the tenant went into possession. Blood v. Spaulding, 57 Vt. 422.

3. Blunt v. Aikin, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 522; Cheetham v. Hampson, 4 T. Rep. 318; OWNER, 17 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law. Compare Davenport v. Ruckman, 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 20.

4. Irvin v. Fowler, 5 Robt. (N. Y.) 482; Calder v. Smalley, 66 Iowa 219 (landlord's liability affirmed); Irvine v. Wood, 51 N. Y. 224 (tenant's liability affirmed); Davenport v. Ruckman, 37 N. Y. 568; Leslie v. Pound, 4 Taunt. 469. Compare Keokuk v. Keokuk, 53 Iowa 352.

In Irvin v. Fowler, 5 Robt. (N. Y.) 482, the jury were charged ". . . the sidewalk must be kept as safe as if the thing had not been there. It is at their peril to keep it so; and it is upon that ground that the defendants (landlord and tenant) are liable; the tenants as using it in putting in coal, the landlord as having received rent for the use of it."

Where the tenant surrendered the premises to the landlord for a brief period, to enable him to make repairs, the tenant was not liable because he was not in possession, and the landlord was liable without reference to his liability as owner, for the reason that he was in possession. Leslie v. Pound, 4 Taunt. 649.

5. Dr. Wharton asserts that they cannot be a judicial cause and are therefore not liable. Wharton on Neg., § 88. Shear. & Red. are equally positive the other way. Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 121, and cases cited.

This subject has already been discussed supra, LEGALLY RESPONSIBLE PERSON.

6. Parties jointly interested in the carriage causing the damage are liable notwithstanding a private arrangement between them that one should manage for one distance of the road and the other for another. Woland v. Elkins, 1 Stark. 272; Fremont v. Coupland, 2 Bing. 170; Moreton v. Hardern, 4 B. & C. 223.

XVIII. MEASURE OF DAMAGES.—The rule as to the measure of damages caused by the actionable negligence of the defendant is quite different from that which applies in actions on contracts, being more comprehensive.¹ The rule purely stated is, that every wrongdoer must make reparation for such damages as are caused by his wrong-doing, and this whole division of the subject of negligence is but an explanation of this rule.² The measure

So where A and B each furnished a horse and B a carriage, all three were liable for an injury caused by the negligent management of the team. Bishop v. Ely, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 294; Davey v. Chamberlin, 4 Esp. 229.

But the owner of a carriage who hires of a stable keeper a pair of horses to draw it for the day is not liable for the injury occasioned by the negligent driving of a person provided by the owner of the horses as a driver. Inarman v. Burnitt, 6 M. & W. 499; Laugher v. Pointer, 5 B. & C. 547. Contra, however, if he assent to the act. McLaughlin v. Pryor, 4 M. & G. 48.

1. Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 739; Ehrgott v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 96 N. Y. 264; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 622.

In case of a breach of contract damages are allowed only for such consequences as are the direct result of the breach, and were within the contemplation of the parties at the time of the formation of the contract. DAMAGES, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 13; 1 Suth. on Dam. 74; Warwick v. Hutchinson, 45 N. J. L. 61; Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Exch. 41.

In case of torts not malicious (which include injuries by negligence), damages may be recovered not merely for the direct consequences, but for such indirect results as might reasonably be expected to ensue by a person of ordinary intelligence; or, in other words, for all the natural consequences of the wrongful act. DAMAGES, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 6; Weston v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 54 Me. 376; Warwick v. Hutchinson, 45 N. J. L. 61; 2 Greenleaf on Ev., §§ 254-256; Cooper v. Young, 22 Ga. 269.

An excellent illustration of this difference between an action for tort and for a negligent breach of contract is afforded by the case of Walsh v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 42 Wis. 23. There the plaintiff, with several other residents of M, desiring to attend religious services at W on a certain Sunday, through their agent individually contracted with defendant to convey them from M to W and back on the said Sunday by a special train, which was to leave W on its return to M at 5:30 P. M. The party was carried to W, but defendant did not have the cars ready to bring them back at the appointed time, and did not furnish such cars until 1:30 P. M. next day. It appeared that the carrier was not bound to run his trains on Sunday, nor had he held himself out as ready and willing to carry passengers on that day. In consideration of these circumstances it was held that no action could be sustained against the defendant for a breach of his general duty as carrier, since upon the day in question he was under no obligation to carry any person upon his road. It was held, also, that since the action was on the contract, the court below was in error in refusing to charge that the plaintiff could not recover for disappointment of mind, sense of wrong or injury to his feelings, and in charging that if defendant's conduct was wilful and oppressive, the jury might award full compensatory, though not punitive, damages. In such case the damages to be recovered were such only as might reasonably have been in contemplation of the parties at the time of the contract. Compare Brown v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 54 Wis. 354; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 444.

2. Ehrgott v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 96 N. Y. 264; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 622; DAMAGES, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 13-18.

The rule is better stated that a wrongdoer is responsible for the natural and proximate consequences of his misconduct, and what are such consequences must generally be left for the determination of the jury. Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469.

The same rule is laid down by THOMPSON on Neg. 2-1084, "Whoever does a wrongful act is answerable for all the consequences that may ensue in of damages varies according to the relation of the parties, the character of the injuries received, and the circumstances under which the injuries occur. The exact amount is always a question for the jury, under instructions from the court, as to what considerations are to govern them in their estimate of the sum.¹ Let it be observed that since the lack of intent is an essential element of negligence, there can be no such thing as wilful, wanton or malicious negligence, and therefore vindictive, punitive or exemplary damages cannot be recovered. *Damages in negligence cases are always compensatory merely.*² There are, it is true, many cases which say that there is a "gross negligence," for which the jury may properly give exemplary damages; but these cases contradict that idea of actionable negligence which is the basis of this article and all true reasoning on the subject.³ These cases the ordinary and natural course of events, though such consequences be immediately and directly brought about by intervening causes if such intervening causes were set in motion by the original wrongdoer."

It is sometimes said that a party charged with a tort, or with breach of contract, is liable for such damages as may reasonably be supposed to have been in contemplation of both parties at the time, or with such damage as may reasonably be expected to result, under ordinary circumstances, from the misconduct, or with such damages as ought to have been foreseen or expected in the light of the attending circumstances, or in the ordinary course of things. But these various modes of stating the rule are all apt to be misleading and in most cases are absolutely worthless as guides to the jury. Ehrgott v. Mayor etc. of N. Y., 96 N. Y. 264; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 622; Leonard v. New York etc. Tel. Co., 41 N. Y. 544; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 446.

1. DAMAGES, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 11; INSTRUCTIONS, vol. 11.

Where the court charged "that there was no certain rule by which to estimate the damages for the personal injury to the plaintiff and that the jury will fix them at such sum as they think right and proper under the evidence," it was considered by the appellate court that the instruction should have been more precise, and that, as the injury was not wilful there was no room for vindictive damages. Heil v. Glanding, 42 Pa. St. 493; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Case, 9 Bush (Ky.) 728; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 758.

2. See, ante, § 3, INADVERTENCE AND ELEMENT. See also 2 Thompson on

Neg. 1255, § 42; Shear. & Red. on Neg., § 749. Neither of these two authorities exactly sustain the text, but a careful study of the subject of negligence must demonstrate that the conclusion above is correct.

But in DAMAGES, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 21, the authorities and statements there fully sustain the principle in the text.

And the doctrine of exemplary damages is opposed by the English and federal courts and by very many of the State tribunals. See Grill v. General Iron etc. Co., L. R., 1 C. P. 600; Beall v. South Dam etc. R. Co., 3 Hurst & C. 337; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Arms, 91 U. S. 489; Philadelphia etc. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. (U. S.) 468; Wallace v. New York, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 440; Moody v. McDonald, 4 Cal. 297; Yerian v. Linkletter, 80 Cal. 135; Pittsburgh R. Co. v. Taylor, 104 Pa. St. 306; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 580; Morford v. Woodworth, 7 Ind. 83; Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Finney, 10 Wis. 388; Craker v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 36 Wis. 657; Cleghorn v. New York etc. R. Co., 56 N. Y. 44; Hamilton v. Third Ave. etc. R. Co., 53 N. Y. 25; Hogan v. Providence etc. R. Co., 3 R. I. 88; Ackerson v. Erie R. Co., 32 N. J. L. 254; New Orleans etc. R. Co. v. Statham, 42 Miss. 607; Du Laurans v. First Division etc. R. Co., 15 Minn. 49; Great Western etc. R. Co. v. Miller, 19 Mich. 305-315. See also EXEMPLARY DAMAGES, 7 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

3. Ante, subtit. III, 1, INADVERTENCE. This source of error is indicated by DAVIS, J., in Milwaukee etc. R. Co. v. Arms, 91 U. S. 489: "Redress commensurate with such injuries should be afforded. In ascertaining its extent assert as a ground of their holding that the failure to use proper care may be of such a character as to imply bad faith; or such a reckless disregard of duties as to justify the allowance of exemplary or punitive damages.¹ The number and importance of the cases so holding demand a notice of the doctrine, but it is nevertheless to be deprecated as being in controversion of principle.²

NEGOTIABLE—NEGOTIATING—NEGOTIATION.

The rules as to the exact measure of damages in cases of injuries arising from the tortious or negligent act of the defendant have been set forth in a previous article, and need not be repeated here.³

NEGOTIABLE; NEGOTIATING; NEGOTIATION—(See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS).—To negotiate means to conduct business; and particularly to discuss terms of a bargain; to endeavor to effect a contract.⁴

the jury may consider all the facts which relate to the wrongful act of the defendant, and its consequences to the plaintiff; but they are not at liberty to go further unless it was done wilfully or was the result of that reckless indifference to the rights of others which is equivalent to an intentional violation of them. The tort is aggravated by the evil motive, and on this rests the rule of exemplary damages. It is insisted, however, that where there is gross negligence the jury may properly give exemplary damages. There are many cases to this effect, but the difficulty is they do not define the term with any accuracy." See also Beven on Neg. 44, 45; DAMAGES, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

1. Varrillat v. New Orleans etc. R. Co., 10 La. An. 88; Cochran v. Miller, 13 Iowa 128; Frink v. Coe, 4 Greene (Iowa) 555; Sawyer v. Sauer, 10 Kan. 466; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Johnson, 72 Tex. 95; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Mitchell, 72 Tex. 171; EXEMPLARY DAMAGES, 7 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law; Shear. & Red. on Neg., §§ 748, et seq.

In Alabama, the courts adopting the dictum of LORD DUNNAN, that it is impossible to trace the boundary line between wilful mischief and "gross negligence," allow exemplary damages for the latter. South & North Ala. R. Co. v. McLendon, 63 Ala. 266. See Chicago etc. R. Co. v. Scurr, 59 Miss. 456; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 341; Patterson v. South & North Ala. R. Co. (Ala. 1890), 7 So. Rep. 437; Louisville etc. R. Co. v. Hall, 87 Ala. 708; 39 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 298.

But a great majority of the cases which are cited as authorizing exemplary damages are not cases of negligence at all but of wilful tort. So that it may be said that both reason and the great weight of authority oppose the doctrine of exemplary damages in actions for negligence. In Missouri it is provided by statute that the damages in certain cases shall be double the actual damage done. The statute is held constitutional. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 557.

2. An examination of the previous portion of this article on the subtitle of INADVERTENCE, and a study of the main principle which governs the measure of damages and determines whether they are to be only compensatory, or more, will demonstrate the error that has been made in such cases. An injury caused by what those cases call "negligence so gross as to indicate wilfulness, or such a reckless disregard of the rights of others, etc., and which justifies the allowance of exemplary damages," is nothing more nor less than a wilful tort and ought to be so treated. To allow a person to sue on the ground of negligence which requires less proof, and recover damages which only wilful tort will justify, is surely a perversion of justice. See cases cited, supra.

3. DAMAGES, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 40, et seq.; DEATH, vol. 5, 128.

4. Abb. Law Dict. To negotiate means, among other things, "to transfer, to sell, to pass, to procure by mutual intercourse and agreement with another, to arrange for, to settle by dealing and management." Webster's Dict. followed in Yerkes v. National Bank,

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS.—Negotiable instruments are instruments on which a right of action passes by an assignment by mere endorsement.¹ In its enlarged signification, the term “negotiable” applies to any written security transferable by endorsement or delivery, so as to vest in the transferee the legal title and enable him to maintain an action on the security in his own name.² The term is used frequently to signify simply that the instrument is assignable. Used in its commercial sense, the meaning of the term is still more restricted. Usually, the test of the negotiability of an instrument is found in the use of the words “order” or “bearer.” It may be stated as a rule of law that these words, or their equivalent, are essential to invest the instrument with the attribute of negotiability.³

69 N. Y. 386. See Inhabitants of Palmer v. Ferry, 6 Gray (Mass.) 423; Coles v. Shepard, 30 Minn. 448.

A Bill or Note.—“Negotiate.” To “negotiate” a bill can only mean to transfer it for value. It is a solecism to say that a bill has been negotiated by a payee who has never parted with its ownership and possession. Blakiston v. Dudley, 5 Duer (N. Y.) 373. See also Baring v. Lyman, 1 Story (U. S.) 416.

A power of attorney “to negotiate, make sale, dispose of, assign and transfer” a promissory note does not authorize its being pledged. Had the word “negotiate” stood alone, it might have included a pledge. Jonmenjoy Coondoo v. Watson, 53 L. J. P. C. 80; 9 App. Cas. 561. And if a power to “endorse” be included in the enabling words, that would authorize a pledge. Bank of Bengal v. Macleod, 5 Moo. Ind. App. 1.

“Negotiating,” as used in § 5136 U. S. Rev. St., is used in its ordinary and appropriate transitive sense to indicate, not an act of purchase but one of transfer, whereby the negotiated paper is passed from the holder or owner and put into circulation. First Nat. Bank v. Pierson, 24 Minn. 141. But see Merchants’ Nat. Bank v. Hanson, 33 Minn. 41; overruling First Nat. Bank v. Pierson, and National Bank v. Mathews, 98 U. S. 621; National Bank v. Whitney, 103 U. S. 99.

Negotiation.—The word “negotiation,” as used by writers upon mercantile law, means the act by which a bill of exchange or promissory note is put into circulation, by being passed by one of the original parties to another person. Walker v. Ocean Bank, 19 Ind. 250. The term “negotiation,” when applied to a bill or note, includes every mode of transfer, whether of sale or discount, by endorsement or delivery. Whitworth v. Adams, 5 Rand. (Va.) 333. See index, NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS. See Mahoney v. San Francisco, 53 Cal. 385.

1. Stormonth’s Dict.

2. Odell v. Gray, 15 Mo. 337. A negotiable thing, says HANNA, J., in Walker v. Ocean Bank, 19 Ind. 247, is a thing which may be transferred by a sale and endorsement or delivery.

3. Noland v. Ringgold, 3 Harr. & J. (Md.) 216; Huntington v. Harvey, 4 Conn. 124; Backus v. Danforth, 10 Conn. 297; Lyon v. Summers, 7 Conn. 399; Bank of Sherman v. Apperson, 4 Fed. Rep. 25; Smurr v. Forman, 1 Ohio 272; Parker v. Riddle, 11 Ohio 102; Hackney v. Jones, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 612; Albright v. Griffin, 78 Ind. 182; Sinclair v. Johnson, 85 Ind. 527; United States v. White, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 59.

It is said that the word “assigns” is sufficient. Story on Bills, § 60; Story on Promissory Notes, § 44; in Porter v. Janesville, 3 Fed. Rep. 617, it was held that a municipal bond payable to a certain railroad company, “or its assigns,” rendered the instrument negotiable, as though the words “or order” had been used. In Raymond v. Middleton, 29 Pa. St. 529, the court said that, though the words “order” or “bearer” were convenient and expressive, clearly they were not the only words which would communicate the quality of negotiability; in this case, however, the words used were so unusual as not to import negotiability.

In Dutchess County Ins. Co. v. Hachfield, 1 Hun (N. Y.) 675, a coupon bond payable to a payee in blank, “his executors, administrators and assigns,” was held negotiable; but in Noxon v. Smith, 127 Mass. 485, a note payable to the trustees of a church, “or their collector,”

It is not proposed in this definition to do more than to group the various classes of instruments which, under the rulings of the courts, are negotiable or non-negotiable, as the case may be, the law as applied to these different classes of instruments being stated under their respective titles.

Bills of exchange and promissory notes are the instruments concerning which questions of negotiability are raised most frequently.¹ Checks cannot be classed among negotiable instruments,² nor certified checks.³ A certificate of deposit, which is a receipt for money deposited, with a promise to hold or to pay, as may be agreed, may or may not be negotiable, and when negotiable may be said to partake in effect of the attributes of a promissory note.⁴ A mere bank deposit book is not negotiable.⁵

Orders drawn by one person upon another for the benefit of a third person, payable in goods or payable in money from a specified fund, are not negotiable instruments.⁶

Due bills, which are acknowledgments of indebtedness with no express promise of payment, are made by statute negotiable instruments in some States. In the absence of a statute, or of words indicating a promise of payment, a mere due bill or I O U is not, according to the weight of authority, regarded as a promissory note.⁷

was held not negotiable. In an English case, Re Blakely Ordnance Co., L. R., 3 Ch. 154, a corporation bond payable to A and B, "their executors, administrators and assigns, or to the bearer hereof," was adjudged assignable, free from equities, in equity only; and in Re Natal Investment Co., L. R., 3 Ch. 355, a corporation bond payable to A, "or his executors, administrators or transferees, or to the holder for the time being," was adjudged non-negotiable. In Putnam v. Crymes, 1 McMull. L. (S. Car.) 9, a note payable to "holder" was held negotiable, this word being equivalent to "bearer."

There are numerous statutes also both in the States of the Union and in foreign countries, requiring the insertion of these words, or their equivalent, to make instruments negotiable.

1. See BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND PROMISSORY NOTES, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 313.

2. See CHECKS, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 211.

3. See CHECKS, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 211.

4. See BANKS AND BANKING, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 89.

5. Witte v. Vincenot, 43 Cal. 325; Howard v. Windham Co. Sav. Bank, 40 Vt. 597.

6. See ORDERS.

7. It is not in England. Byles on Bills, 29; Fesenmayer v. Adcock, 16 Mees. & W. 449; Melanotte v. Teasdale, 13 Mees. & W. 216; Smith v. Smith, 1 F. & F. 539; Gould v. Combs, 1 C. B. 543; Fisher v. Leslie, 1 Esp. 425; Israel v. Israel, 1 Campb. 499; Childers v. Boulnois, Dowl. & Ry. 15; Beeching v. Westbrook, 8 Mees. & W. 412. See also to the same effect, Carson v. Lucas, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 213; Garland v. Scott, 15 La. An. 143; Currier v. Lockwood, 40 Conn. 349; Brenzer v. Wightman, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 264. Compare, however, Sackett v. Spencer, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 180; Russell v. Whipple, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 536; Huyck v. Meador, 24 Ark. 191; Wardwell v. Sterne, 22 La. An. 28. And see Hopson v. Brunwankel, 24 Tex. 607; Cummings v. Freeman, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 143; Finney v. Shirley, 7 Mo. 42; McGowen v. West, 7 Mo. 569; Brady v. Chandler, 31 Mo. 28; Bacon v. Bicknell, 17 Wis. 523; Jacquin v. Warren, 40 Ill. 459; Spearing v. Zacharie, 26 La. An. 496; McDonald v. Yeager, 42 Ind. 388.

In a very recent case, Alexander v. Thompson (Minn.), 44 N.W. Rep. 534, the court say, that "In some States a due bill is held to be a promissory note; in others it is held to be so if it contains

Letters of credit, which may be defined as open letters of request, whereby one person (usually a merchant or banker) requests another to advance money or to give credit to a third person named in the letter, and promises to repay the amount or to accept bills of exchange drawn on himself for the amount,¹ are not negotiable instruments.²

Bills of lading are not negotiable instruments in the same sense as promissory notes or bills of exchange, though in several States the question is affected by statutes, enacted with the view to making bills of lading negotiable or quasi negotiable;³ nor warehouse receipts, though here again the question has been affected in some States by statutes.⁴

Receivers' certificates may be called quasi-negotiable instruments. The judicial order authorizing their issue provides generally that they be made payable to order or bearer, and the property in them is transferable by endorsement and delivery, as in the case of commercial paper; but, though the cases are not many in which the courts have had occasion to discuss the question of the negotiability of these instruments, it may be gathered from the cases that an endorsee, claiming to hold them freed from original equities, must show that in their issue the requirements of the order authorizing their issue were strictly observed.⁵

The effect of a seal on the question of negotiability has been words denoting a promise to pay, or an intent that it shall be negotiable. But the better authority, as well as that most consistent with principle, is that a mere acknowledgment of indebtedness is not of itself a contract." It was held, therefore, that a purchaser of the due bill in suit could not invoke the principle of estoppel against the maker.

In Roman v. Serna, 40 Tex. 306, it was held that an instrument reciting that "the bearer leaves $100 in my hands, which sum I hold subject to his order," was not a negotiable instrument but a non-negotiable letter of credit. Generally, in the absence of a statute, a receipt for personal property, payable at a certain time, is not a negotiable instrument. There are statutes making promises to pay personal property, and acknowledgments of such property negotiable instruments, as, for instance, in Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, and Idaho.

1. Story on Bills, § 459.

2. See LETTER OF CREDIT, 13 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 237.

3. See BILL OF LADING, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 223.

4. In Wisconsin (Rev. Statutes, §§ 1676-7), warehouse receipts are negotiable, unless otherwise expressed. The Missouri and Minnesota statutes make warehouse receipts negotiable by endorsement and delivery. See WAREHOUSE AND WAREHOUSEMAN.

5. In Stanton v. Alabama etc. R. Co., 2 Wood (U. S.) 506, where receivers hypothecated certificates at an enormous rate of interest and received less than half of their par value, it was held that they should be deemed good in the hands of the transferees for the amount actually advanced upon them, with interest according to the terms of the order of the court authorizing their issue.

In Bank of Montreal v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 48 Iowa 518, a receiver issued certificates payable to bearer under a contract for the purchase of rails. The certificates recited the order of court. The rails, however, were never delivered. It was held that an innocent transferee of the certificates could not recover upon them.

In Turner v. Peoria etc. R. Co., 95 Ill. 134, the court denied to these instruments the attribute of negotiability; and so in Union Trust Co. v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 7 Fed. Rep. 513, where the transferee, claiming as an innocent holder, had purchased the certificates for 40 per cent. of their par value. See treated elsewhere.¹ It may be stated briefly that the statute of Queen Anne, to which promissory notes owe their negotiability, did not extend to instruments under seal, and that formerly sealed bills and bonds, whether issued by corporations or individuals, were held to be non-negotiable.² Afterwards it was thought that the corporate seal was equivalent to a signature, and that a sealed corporate instrument might be treated as a simple contract and not as a specialty.³ At the present day, however, no question is made as to the power of a corporation to execute a note or contract without the corporate seal.⁴ And now, in the absence of a statute, corporation bonds executed under seal and negotiable in form are negotiable instruments, possessing the attribute of negotiable bills and notes, and the qualities generally of commercial paper.⁵

Railroad bonds made payable, as they usually are, to the trustee named in the mortgage given to secure them, or to the bearer, are in effect merely bills or notes and are negotiable. That they are called bonds does not imply necessarily that they are sealed, even if this would affect their quality of negotiability.⁶ Debenture bonds in the form in common use in England may be said to possess, when made payable to bearer or order, the attribute of negotiability.⁷

also RAILROAD SECURITIES; RECEIVERS.

1. See BILLS AND NOTES, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 313.

2. Byles on Bills, 5; Story on Bills, § 62; Glyn v. Baker, 13 East 509.

3. Aggs v. Nicholson, 1 H. & N. 165.

4. Byles on Bills, 71; Story on Promissory Notes, § 74; Mechanics' Bank v. Bank of Columbia, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 326.

5. Colson v. Arnot, 57 N. Y. 253; Evertson v. National Bank, 66 N. Y. 14; Carr v. Le Fevre, 27 Pa. St. 413; Hotchkiss v. National Bank, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 354; In re Tallahassee Mfg. Co., 64 Ala. 567; Morris Canal & Banking Co. v. Fisher, 9 N. J. L. 699.

6. In White v. Vermont etc. R. Co., 21 How. (U. S.) 575, the court says that "the usage and practice of the companies themselves and of the capitalists and business men of the country dealing in them, as well as the repeated decisions or recognition of the principle by courts and judges of the highest respectability, have settled the question." In Moran v. Miami Co., 2 Black (U. S.) 722, railroad bonds are spoken of as "commercial securities." See also, as supporting the text statement, Chapin v. Vermont etc. R. Co., 8 Gray (Mass.) 575; Brainerd v. New York etc. R. Co., 25 N. Y. 406; Birdsall v. Russell, 29 N. Y. 228; Langston v. South Carolina R. Co., 2 S. Car. 248; Murray v. Lardner, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 110; State v. Cobb, 64 Ala. 127; Jones on Railroad Securities, § 197. To the contrary is Jackson v. York etc. R. Co. (1858), 48 Me. 147; but this case, decided by a divided court, stands nearly or quite alone.

See RAILROAD SECURITIES.

7. Re Imperial Land Co., 11 Eq. 478, Re Blakely Ordnance Co., L. R., 3 Ch. 159; Re General Estates Co., L. R., 3 Ch. 758. The English decisions have been conflicting on this point, however. Until recently, such bonds were regarded as prima facie non-negotiable. Atheneum Life Ins. Soc. v. Pooley, 3 De G. & J. 294; Re Natal Investment Co., L. R., 3 Ch. 555; Re Rhos Hall Co., 17 W. R. 343.

In Crouch v. Credit Foncier, L. R., 8 Q. B. 474, it was said that a condition endorsed upon debenture bonds, that at stated times a portion of the bonds should be drawn and paid off, destroyed their negotiability, though in terms they were made payable to bearer. It was held further that it was not competent for corporations to attach the incident of negotiability to such instruments, contrary to the general law, and that the custom to treat them as negotiable

Municipal bonds in the customary form, with interest coupons attached, and payable to bearer or to a named person or order, are, when put upon the market, treated as commercial securities, and possess the qualities and incidents of negotiable promissory notes,¹ and it makes no difference that they bear the corporate seal;² nor will such bonds be deemed unnegotiable on the ground that their payment is made conditional on the construction of the railroad to aid which they are issued, where the language used imports not a condition, but a recital merely of the reasons influencing the contract.³

The question of the negotiability of municipal bonds, as well as the question of their validity, depends upon the constitutional and legislative authority for their issue, and on the compliance with the requirements of law in their execution by the public officers charged therewith; though, as to execution, the necessary legislative authority existing, the doctrine of estoppel is sometimes invoked to complicate the question of the liability of the municipality to an innocent transferee for value. Other classes of municipal securities are orders, warrants, and certificates of indebted-could not have that effect. But see Goodwin v. Roberts, L. R., 10 Exch. 337, where the court said that while the judgment in the previous case might well be supported, on the ground of a want of substantial proof and general usage, it would seem that the law would be otherwise had proof of general usage been established.

See DEBENTURES, 5 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 141.

1. Moran v. Miami Co., 2 Black (U. S.) 722; Mercer Co. v. Hackett, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 83; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 176; Meyer v. Muscatine, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 384; Thomson v. Lee Co., 3 Wall. (U. S.) 327; Lexington v. Butler, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 282; Ackley School Dist. v. Hall, 113 U. S. 135.

2. Mercer Co. v. Hackett, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 83, where the court said: "This species of bonds is a modern invention, intended to pass by manual delivery, and to have the qualities of negotiable paper; and their value depends mainly upon this character. Being issued by States and corporations, they are necessarily under seal. But there is nothing immoral or contrary to good policy in making them negotiable, if the necessities of commerce require that they should be so. A mere technical dogma of the courts or the common law cannot prohibit the commercial world from inventing or using any species of security not known in the last century. Usage of trade and commerce are acknowledge by courts as part of the common law, although they may have been unknown to Bracton or Blackstone. And this malleability, to suit the necessities and usages of the mercantile and commercial world, is one of the most valuable characteristics of the common law. When a corporation covenants to pay to bearer and gives a bond with negotiable qualities, and by this means obtains funds for the accomplishment of the useful enterprises of the day, it cannot be allowed to evade the payment by parading some obsolete judicial decision that a bond, for some technical reason, cannot be made payable to bearer.

That these securities are treated as negotiable by the commercial usages of the whole civilized world, and have received the sanctions of judicial recognition, not only in this court (see White v. Vermont R. Co., 21 How. (U. S.) 575) but of nearly every State in the Union, is well known and admitted."

The court then adverts to Diamond v. Lawrence Co., 37 Pa. St. 353, as the single decision to the contrary. It is pretty clear from the language used by the Pennsylvania supreme court in the subsequent case of Kerr v. Corry, 105 Pa. St. 282, that the doctrine of Diamond v. Lawrence Co. has been practically repudiated in that State.

3. Humboldt Township v. Long, 92 U. S. 642. See MUNICIPAL SECURITIES, 15 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 1204.

ness. These ordinarily are not negotiable.¹ Another class of quasi-municipal securities is county warrants. These are not negotiable in the sense of the law merchant.²

Coupons which promise payment to bearer are in legal effect promissory notes by the law merchant, and possess the attributes of negotiable paper.³

Government bonds payable to bearer, or otherwise negotiable in form, are negotiable instruments, and transferable as such. This has been held in the case of United States treasury notes,⁴ State bonds,⁵ coupons detached from government bonds,⁶ State endorsed negotiable railroad bonds,⁷ a Prussian bond,⁸ exchequer bills.⁹

Government or corporate scrip certificates issued on the negotiation of a loan, and promising to the bearer, after the payment of installments, a bond for the amount paid, with interest, are, by the English law and by the custom of all the stock markets of Europe, negotiable instruments, passing by delivery only to a bona fide holder for value.¹⁰

A stock certificate is not a negotiable instrument;¹¹ nor a dividend warrant.¹² A lottery ticket has been held not to be a negotiable instrument.¹³

NEGRO.¹⁴—See MULATTO; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 3 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 727, et seq.

1. Though if a warrant is made expressly negotiable in form, it may be negotiable. Kelley v. Mayor etc. of Brooklyn, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 265; Crawford Co. v. Wilson, 7 Ark. 214. See also Sweet v. Carver Co., 16 Minn. 107; Dalrymple v. Whitingham, 26 Vt. 355; Klein v. Smith Co., 54 Miss. 254; Mayor etc. of Nashville v. Ray, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 478. See MUNICIPAL SECURITIES, 15 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, where the law as applied to the various classes of municipal securities is fully treated.

2. Parish warrants have been held negotiable in Louisiana. Guilfont v. Ascension Parish, 28 La. An. 413; and county warrants in Illinois. Garvin v. Wiswell, 83 Ill. 215; and formerly in Pennsylvania. Craig v. Richmond, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 33. But see COUNTIES, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 343, for a full exposition of the law of this subject.

3. See COUPONS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 430.

4. Vermilye v. Adams Express Co., 21 Wall. (U. S.) 138; Dinsmore v. Duncan, 57 N. Y. 573; Seybel v. National Currency Bank, 54 N. Y. 288; Frazier v. D'Invilliers, 2 Pa. St. 200; Murray v. Lardner, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 118.

5. DeLafield v. Illinois, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 177; Finnegan v. Lee, 18 How. Pr. (N.

Y.) 186; Railroad Companies v. Schutte, 103 U. S. 118.

6. See COUPONS, 4 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 430.

7. State v. Cobb, 64 Ala. 128.

8. Gorgier v. Mievillie, 3 B. & C. 45.

9. Wookey v. Pole, 4 Barn. & A. 1.

10. Goodwin v. Robarts, 1 App. Cas. 476; Rumball v. Metropolitan Bank, L. R., 2 Q. B. D. 194.

11. Mechanics' Bank v. New York etc. R. Co., 13 N. Y. 599.

12. Partridge v. Bank of England, 9 Q. B. 396.

13. Jones v. Carter, 8 Q. B. 134.

14. 1 Bishop on Mar. & Div., § 306. A negro is a person having in his veins one-sixteenth or more of African blood. State v. Chaver, 5 Jones L. (N. Car.

11. The term "negro" is identical in signification with the term "colored person," and is "a person with one-fourth or more of negro blood." Jones v. Com., 80 Va. 544.

The word negro means a black man, one descended from the African race, and does not commonly include a mulatto. Felix v. State, 18 Ala. 720.

Negro does not include a person who has less, though only a drop less, than one-fourth of African blood. McPherson v. Com., 28 Gratt. (Va.) 939.

NEIGHBORHOOD—NEPHEW—NIECE.

NEIGHBORHOOD.—"A man's neighborhood is not necessarily confined to the particular locality in which he resides, but is co-extensive with the extent of territory occupied by those with whom he associates and frequently comes in contact with; one man's 'neighborhood' may be a small hamlet, while the 'neighborhood' of another may be a county or State."¹

NEPHEW ; NIECE.—These words mean the immediate descendants, male and female, of the brothers and sisters of the person named.²

In Alabama Code.—Clause 5, § 2, of Code defines the terms "negro" and "mulatto," when and as used in the Code, and makes the former include the latter, and the latter to mean "a person of mixed blood, descended on the part of father or mother from negro ancestors, to the third generation, inclusive, though one ancestor of each generation may have been a white person. Linton v. State, 88 Ala. 216.

In North Carolina all who are descended from negro ancestors to the fourth generation, inclusive, though one ancestor of each generation may have been white. 1 Bish. on Mar. & Div., § 308; State v. Watters, 3 Ired. (N. Car.) 455; State v. Melton, Busb. L. (N. Car.) 49.

1. Peters v. Bourneaw, 22 Ill. App. 179. See also State v. Henderson, 29 W. Va. 147.

"Etymologically and by common understanding the phrase 'in the vicinity' means 'in the neighborhood,' and 'neighborhood' as applied to 'place' signifies 'nearness' as opposed to 'remoteness.' Whether a place is in the vicinity or in the neighborhood of another place depends upon no arbitrary rule of distance or topography. Langley v. Barnstead, 63 N. H. 246; Territory v. Lan-non (Mont.), 22 Pac. Rep. 496.

Where a general usage was shown for the merchants in a neighborhood to charge interest after six months, BRONSON, Ch. J., said: "I understand the word 'neighborhood,' as used in the case, to mean the same town or place where the plaintiffs carried on business, and not a different town or place." Esterley v. Cole, 3 N. Y. 505.

In discussing the meaning of "neighborhood" in a statute the court said, in Coyle v. Chicago etc. R. Co., 27 Mo. App. 584: "Webster defines neighborhood, in this connection, as 'a place near,' 'vicinity,' 'adjoining district,' syn. 'vicinity,' 'proximity.' Neighborhood is Anglo-Saxon, and vicinity is Latin; hence they differ in degree or strength.

Vicinity does not denote so close a connection as neighborhood. A neighborhood is a more immediate vicinity. The houses immediately adjoining a square are in the neighborhood of that square; those which are somewhat farther removed are in the vicinity of the square."

In Statute.—(As used in the Iowa Revision, § 3362, requiring for an appraisal of land at judicial sale two householders "of the neighborhood.") One residing thirty-five miles from the land is not prima facie "of the neighborhood;" the sparsely settled condition of the county in the vicinity must be shown affirmatively to establish his competency to serve. Woods v. Cochrane, 38 Iowa 484.

Neighboring.—A covenant prohibiting anything that may be an annoyance, etc., to the "neighboring or adjoining" property is not restricted, so as only to prevent annoyance to the occupiers of property belonging to the covenantee. Tod-Heatley v. Benham, 40 Ch. D. 80.

2. Cromer v. Pinckney, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 466. And. L. Dict.; Abb. L. Dict.; Bouv. L. Dict.; Green's App., 42 Pa. St. 25; Wells v. Wells, L. R., 18 Eq. 504.

A residuary legacy to testator's nephews and nieces, providing that "in case any one or more of the children of my deceased brothers and sisters mentioned in this clause of my will shall die or have died before me, leaving lawful issue surviving at the time of my death, then and in that case such issue of my deceased nephew or niece shall receive the share which his or her ancestor would have received," gives to the issue of a nephew or niece who had died before the making of the will the share which the parent would have taken if living. Hayward v. Barker, 113 N. Y. 366.

A devise of lands to testator's nephew, as trustee for one B, "to her use during her natural life; after her decease to the use of the lawful begotten heirs of her body, each one to share and share alike; . . . in case of the death of B and all her children, all the property willed to her to revert to my nephew," gives the land to the nephew upon the death of B, after the decease of all her children, although one of them leaves children who survived B. Lockman v. Hobbs, 98 N. Car. 541.

Definition.

NEPHEW—NIECE.

Definition.

The words, "all the children of my brother," though used as if to designate the class, mean the nephews and nieces enumerated in another part of the will, and will not let in children born after the testator's death. Chapeau's Estate, 1 Tuck. (N. Y.) 420.

Grandnephews, Grandnieces.—The term "nephews and nieces" may be shown, by circumstances, to include grandnephews and grandnieces, and even a great-grandniece. But the term, in its ordinary and primary sense, does not include grandnephews and grandnieces. Cromer v. Pinckney, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 466; In re Hunt's Estate, 23 N. E. R. (N. Y.) 120.

A greatnephew or greatniece is not included in a testamentary gift to "nephews and nieces." Shelley v. Bryer, Jac. 207; Falkner v. Butler, 1 Amb. 514; Crook v. Whitley, 7 De G. M. & G. 490. Nor a great-grandnephew in a gift to "grandnephews." Waring v. Lee, 8 Bea. 247. But these extended meanings may be gathered from a context—Weeds v. Bristow, L. R., 2 Eq. 333—though not easily. Thompson v. Robinson, 27 Bea. 486. See Wms. Exrs. 108; 2 Jarm. 152.

The will of H, after various legacies to certain of his nephews and nieces, and to three persons who were described as children of a deceased niece, gave his residuary estate to his "nephews and nieces" therein before-named, excepting certain ones named, "in such proportionate shares as the legacies hereinbefore given and bequeathed to them respectively shall bear to each other." Held, that the term "nephews and nieces" did not include the children of the deceased niece, and that they were not entitled to a share in the residue. Re Woodward, 117 N. Y. 522; s. c., 27 N. Y. St. Rep. 830. Grandnephews and grandnieces held to be included under the term "nephews and nieces" in a will. Shepard v. Shepard, 57 Conn. 24.

By a devise to "nephews and nieces of every description mentioned in the will" of the residue of the testator's estate, the "children" of nephews and nieces, and denominated as such in the will, shall not take; nor shall a niece by marriage. Lewis v. Fisher, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 196.

The terms "nephew" and "niece" apply as well to grandnephews and grandnieces, testatrix having so used them in other connections. Shepard v. Shepard, 17 Atl. Rep. 173.

My Nephew.—Parol evidence is admissible to show which of testator's nephews was intended under a bequest to "my nephew." Phelan v. Slattery, 19 L. R. I. 177. See PAROL EVIDENCE.

A testator appointed as executor to his will his "nephew, A B." At the time of the execution of the will there was living a son of the brother of the testator of that name, with whom the testator was not on terms of intimacy; and there was also a person of the same name who had lived with him for many years, and had latterly managed his business. Held, that the word "nephew" being applicable in an ordinary and popular sense as well as in a strict and primary sense, an ambiguity was raised, and the court might receive evidence of the circumstances in which the testator was placed when he executed his will, and of the sense in which he was accustomed to use the word, in order to ascertain the person indicated. Grant v. Grant, L. R., 2 P. & D. 8.

Illegitimate Niece.—A residuary bequest to "all my nephews and nieces," held (there being legitimate nieces) not to include an illegitimate niece who, in a previous part of the will, had been spoken of as testator's "niece." Re Brown, 58 L. J. Ch. 420; Re Hall, 35 Ch. D. 551.

Of the Half-Blood.—A nephew is the child of a person's brother or sister, whether such brother or sister be of the whole or only of the half-blood. Grieves v. Rawley, 10 Hare 63; Shull v. Johnson, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 202. See also Bouv. L. Dict.

Testator's Wife's "Nephews and Nieces."—If a testator has no nephews and nieces of his own, and no possibility of any, his wife's nephews and nieces would take under a bequest to his "nephews and nieces." Sherratt v. Mountford, 8 Ch. 928, 21 W. R. 818; Hogg v. Cook, 32 Beav. 641; Adney v. Greatrex, 17 W. R. 637; 20 L. T. 647. And so of a bequest to nephews and nieces "on both sides." Frogley v. Phillips, 30 Beav. 168; 3 De G. F. & J. 466; 3 L. T. 718. See Smith v. Lidiard, 3 K. & J. 252.

A testatrix by will made a residuary bequest to "all my nephews and nieces." Held, that only her own nephews and nieces were included, and not those of her husband. Green's App., 42 Pa. St. 25.

NET, NEAT, OR NETT.—After deductions made; clear of charges; free from expenses.¹

"The only difficulty in the case arises from the decision of the exchequer chamber in Grant v. Grant, L. R., 5 C. P. 727. But that case only decided that the primary meaning of the word 'nephew' included not only the child of the testator's own brother, but also the child of his wife's brother. That is a question not of law but of the English dictionary; and, according to my view of the English language, the ordinary meanings of the words "nephews and nieces" is a man's own nephews and nieces; that is, by consanguinity and not affinity, and therefore I am of opinion (as I must decide between the judgments of the two courts) that the decision of the court of appeal in chancery is to be preferred." Per JESSEL, M. R. Wells v. Wells, 18 Eq. 504; s. c., 10 Moakes 818. See also Merrill v. Morton, 17 Ch. D. 382; In re Blower's Trusts, L. R., 6 Ch. 355; Sherratt v. Mountford, L. R., 8 Ch. 928.

Wife of Nephew.—A devise to "my nephews and nieces living at my decease" does not include the wives and widows of the nephews of the testatrix. Goddard v. Amory, 147 Mass. 71; Lewis v. Fisher, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 196.

1. Abb. L. Dict. "The lexical definition of net is 'clear of all charges and deductions.'—Webster. 'That which remains after the deduction of all charges or outlay, as net profit.'—Worcester." St. John v. Erie R. Co., 89 U. S. 136; Bispham's Estate, 24 W. N. C. (Pa.) 79. See also Stephens v. Soule, 83 Cal. 439.

"Net Balance" "means, in commercial usage, the balance of the proceeds after deducting the expenses incident to the sale." Evans v. Waln, 71 Pa. St. 74.

A direction by a testator, after making provision for the payment of certain amounts to his children out of the income of his residuary estate until the youngest attained majority, that when the youngest child becomes of age the executors divide "the net balance of income which may come into their hands" among the children, refers not only to income received thereafter, but to accumulations prior to the youngest child's majority. Stiver's Estate, 5 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 113.

"Net Cash."—A direction to sell goods "at such a price as will realize" so much "net cash," does not mean that the goods are necessarily to be sold for ready money; though possibly, in the absence of a trade custom, that might be the construction if the direction were simply to sell for so much "net cash." Boden v. French, 10 C. B. 886.

Net earnings, as used in a contract giving preferred stockholders in a railroad company a priority in payment out of the net earnings of the road, means what remained of the earnings of the road after deducting expenses incurred by the company in conducting its operations in good faith free from dictation by the preferred stockholders. St. John v. Erie R. Co., 22 Wall. (U. S.) 146.

"Net Earnings."—This phrase has been before the courts in a number of instances. In a general way it may be said that the net earnings of a railway company are the surplus of the transportation earnings above operating expenses. This was the definition in St. John v. Erie R. Co., 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 271; s. c., 22 Wall. (U. S.) 148; Bates v. Androscoggin etc. R. Co., 49 Me. 491; Sioux City etc. R. Co. v. United States, 110 U. S. 205; s. c., 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 480; Note to Belfast etc. R. Co. v. Belfast, 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 475.

"As a general proposition, 'net earnings' are the excess of the gross earnings over the expenditures defrayed in producing them, aside from, and exclusive of, the expenditure of capital laid out in constructing and equipping the works themselves." Union Pac. R. Co. v. United States, 99 U. S. 420; Barry v. Missouri etc. R. Co., 27 Fed. Rep. 1; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 384. See also Hazelton v. Belfast etc. R. Co., 4 N. E. Rep. 708; United States v. Kansas Pac. R. Co., 99 U. S. 455-460.

"Net Earnings or Income," as used in the act of 1864, § 2, taxing corporations, does not include dividends. Jones etc. Mfg. Co. v. Com., 69 Pa. St. 237. And see St. John v. Erie R. Co., 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 271.

Net Income.—There is no fair distinction between "income" and "net income." Net is a term used by merchants to designate the quantity, amount or value of an article or commodity, after all tare and charges are deducted. The income of an estate means nothing more than the profit it will yield after deducting the charges of management, or the rent which may be obtained for the use of it. The rents and profits of an estate, the income or the net income of it, are all equivalent expressions. Andrews v. Boyd, 65 Me. 199; Earl v. Rowe, 38 Me. 420.

"By 'net income,' therefore, we understand the amount of money remaining to the corporation on making up their annual account, after deducting from all receipts for passage and freight, and other revenue, if any, the necessary expenses of repairs and management, and also the amount of annual or semi-annual interest on the debt of the commonwealth which the corporation are required by their obligation to the commonwealth to pay in their behalf. Opinion of the Judges, 5 Metc. (Mass.) 599.

Net Proceeds.—Under an agreement by a manufacturer, to allow another a "third of the net proceeds of what might be made therefrom," held, that before dividing the profits, the value of the labor and materials was to be deducted. Dunlap v. O'Dena, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 272.

A commission payable to an agent on "net proceeds," is only payable on the actual sum which reaches the pocket of the principal, after deducting all charges, expenses, and bad debts. Caine v. Horsfall, 1 Ex. 519. See Bower v. Jones, 8 Bing. 65.

Net proceeds mean the actual net sum that comes to the party. Gorst v. Timothy, 2 C. & R. (N. P.) 350.

Net Profits.—See also PROFITS. The term does not mean what is made over the losses, expenses and interest on the amount invested. It includes the gain that accrues on the investment, after deducting simply the losses and expenses of the business. If but 2 or 3 per cent. is realized on the amount put in, the business may be a poor one, but still there would be net profits, even if the legal rate of interest were 10 per cent., or greater. Hence a partner who is, by the copartnership articles, to receive a certain share of the net profits, has no claim to interest on his contribution of capital. Tutt v. Sand, 50 Ga. 339, 350. See also Sanford v. Barney, 19 N. Y. St. R. 16, 18.

"Net profits" of a company. See Lambert v. Neuchatel Asphalte Co., 51 L. J. Ch. 882. Net profits is the sum divisible after discharging, or making provision for, every outgoing properly chargeable against the period, whether a year or less, for which the profits are to be calculated. Per KERWICH, J. Glasier v. Rolls, L. R., 42 Ch. D. 453; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 193. See Fuller v. Miller, 105 Mass. 105; Repton v. Hodgson, 7 Q. B. 84; s. c., 53 E. C. L. 82.

The neat profits must mean after all charges and expenses deducted. Owston v. Ogle, 13 East 534.

The transfer of a partner's share in the "net profits" of a firm does not include his claim against the firm for personal expenses incurred for the benefit of the partnership. Stewart v. Stebbins, 30 Miss. 66.

The words "net profits" define themselves. They mean what shall remain as the clear gains of any business venture, after deducting the capital invested in the business, the expenses incurred in by its conduct, and the losses sustained in its prosecution. Park v. Grant Locomotive Works, 40 N. J. Eq. 114; Hunter v. Roberts (Mich.), 47 N. W. Rep. 134.

Where in articles of association it was provided that "in cases of dispute as to the amount of net profits, the decision of the company in general meeting shall be final," the court declined to interfere on the question of the meaning of "net profits." Lambert v. Neuchatel Asphalte Co., 51 L. J. R., Ch. 882.

Net Rent.—"When a party stipulates to receive a 'net rent,' that means a rent clear of all deductions to which it would otherwise be liable; the covenant to pay land tax and sewer rates must, therefore, be a usual covenant in a lease reserving a certain net rent." Per TENTERDEN, C. J. Bennett v. Wormack, 7 B. & C. 628; 3 C. & P. 96. The principle of that case would seem to extend to all landlord's taxes, except property tax, where net rent is stipulated for. See also Barrett v. Bedford, 8 T. R. 602. Similarly a direction to trustees to permit A to receive "net rents and profits" vests the legal estate in the trustees, for they must take the gross rents and, after paying the charges thereon, hand over the net rents. Barker v. Greenwood, 4 M. & W. 421.

"Net rental" simply means the profit rent—i. e., the difference between the gross rent paid by under-tenants and

NE UNQUES EXECUTOR.—Never executor; a plea denying that a plaintiff is a lawful executor.¹

NEUTRAL; NEUTRALITY.—See note 2.

NE VARIETUR.—That it be not changed. This phrase is sometimes written by a notary upon a bill or note for the purpose of identification. The negotiability of the instrument is not thereby affected.³

NEW.—"The term 'new,' in its ordinary acceptation, when applied to the same subject or object, is the opposite of old."⁴ the head rents and annual fines. Re Barnewall, Ir. Rep., 1 Eq. 308.

"Net rent," as the subject of a poor-rate, held to mean "only that part of the rent which goes into the pocket of the landlord, and which is the rent paid by the tenant after deducting taxes and charges of collection." Rex v. Tomlinson, 9 B. & C. 163.

Net Value—Net Annual Value—See VALUE.

1. Anderson's L. Dict.

2. See BELLIGERENTS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 165; INTERNATIONAL LAW, 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 466; PRIZE.

3. Abb. L. Dict.; Fleckner v. Bank of United States, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 338; Brabston v. Gibson, 9 How. (U. S.) 263, 278.

4. Lessee of Pollard v. Kibbe, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 364.

"New Assets."—As a general rule no property can be considered "new assets" within the provisions of R. S., ch. 87, § 13 (Maine), which excepts assets coming into the hands of an administrator after the expiration of two years from the provision of the statute of limitations, which has been in the hands and under the control of the administrator, or has been inventoried, or which is the product of such property, although it may have assumed or been converted into a new form. Littlefield v. Eaton, 74 Me. 521; Robinson v. Hodge, 117 Mass. 224; Sturtevant v. Sturtevant, 4 Allen (Mass.) 124; Veazie v. Manett, 16 Allen (Mass.) 372; Bradford v. Forbes, 9 Allen (Mass.) 368; Alden v. Stebbins, 99 Mass. 616; Chenery v. Webster, 8 Allen (Mass.) 77.

New Building.—See BUILDING, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 603.

Where a small building erected against the wall of a yard belonging to a house is taken down and re-erected in another part of the yard, the old materials being reused, and portions of the old wall of the yard being used as two sides of the re-erection—such a re-erection is a "new building" within § 34, Local Government act, 1858 (21 & 22, V., ch. 98), and of by-laws made thereunder. Hobbs v. Dance, L. R., 9 C. P. 30. But where the proprietor of a house, yard, coach-house and stable pulled down the coach-house and stable and erected a building partly upon their site and partly upon the yard, with rooms over—the ground-floor opening into the yard and also into a back street, but the access to the rooms over the ground-floor was by a covered way from the old house—the object of the new works being to increase the accommodation of the old house, which had been converted into a hotel—this was held not to be a "new building" within the meaning of the act just cited. Shiel v. Sunderland, 6 H. & N. 796.

Under § 157, subs. 2, P. H. act, 1875, a movable structure used as a butcher's shop was held a "new building." Richardson v. Brown, 49 J. P. 661.

As to what is a "new building" seems chiefly a question of fact. James v. Wyrill, 48 J. P. 725. See also Meadows v. Taylor, L. R., 27 Q. B. D. 717; Barlow v. Kensington, L. R., 27 Ch. D. 381.

A fulling-mill, which was repaired, a new shed erected alongside of it, and new machinery placed in it to turn it into a grist-mill, is not such a new building as will subject it to a mechanic's lien for the work done or materials furnished. The question as to whether a building is an old one repaired or a new one erected is a question of law for the court. Miller v. Hershey, Pearson (Pa.) 282; s. c., 59 Pa. St. 64.

"New machinery," as used in the act, Tex., Dec. 15th, 1863, which provides that any person who shall erect . . . new and efficient machinery "for certain manufactures shall be entitled to a bounty on land, obviously meant machinery

NEW PROMISE.—See BANKRUPTCY, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 67; INSOLVENCY, vol. 11, p. 167; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, p. 749.

NEWSPAPERS.—(See ADVERTISEMENTS, 1 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 306; LIBEL AND SLANDER, vol. 13, p. 292; COPYRIGHT, vol. 4, p. 147).

I. Definition, 490.

II. In General, 490.

III. Official, 492.

IV. Newspapers as Evidence, 494.

V. What Constitutes Publication
(See NOTICE), 495.

VI. Newspaper Contempts of Court, 495.

I. DEFINITION.—A newspaper, as ordinarily understood, is a publication which contains, among other things, what is called the general news, the current news, or the news of the day; not a publication which does not contain such news, and is not intended for general circulation.¹

II. IN GENERAL.—A newspaper may be religious, commercial, legal, scientific, or political.²

in condition as when first manufactured, not worn or defaced by use in any degree. The word was evidently used in opposition to the words 'old' or 'second-hand.' Maxwell v. Bastrop Mfg. Co. (Tex.), 14 S. W. Rep. 36.

New Promise.—See LIMITATIONS TO ACTIONS, 13 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 748.

"New pound," within the sense of the Connecticut statute, which provides that when the selectmen of a town shall establish a "new pound," they shall appoint a poundkeeper for it, to hold office until the next annual meeting, does not embrace a pound which is merely a substitute for an old one. Bosworth v. Trowbridge, 45 Conn. 161.

1. And. L. Dict.; Beecher v. Stevens, 25 Minn. 147. A newspaper is a publication containing a narrative of recent events and occurrences, published regularly at short intervals from time to time. Atty. Gen. v. Bradbury, 7 Exch. 113. In commercial usage, it is a publication in numbers, consisting commonly of single sheets and published at short intervals, conveying intelligence of passing events. 4 Op. Atty. Gen. 11; 4 Op. Atty. Gen. 407.

The word "public" need not be used in describing a newspaper. Bailey v. Myrick, 50 Me. 171.

The advertising sheets of a newspaper, though entirely separate from the main part thereof, are still part of the newspaper. Taylor v. Reid, 103 Ill. 349.

As to whether a newspaper is a periodical, see Cox v. Land & Water Journal

Co., L. R., 9 Eq. 324. Contra, Walter v. Howe, 17 C. D. 708.

2. Hull v. King, 38 Minn. 349; Kellogg v. Carrico, 47 Mo. 157; Kerr v. Hitt, 75 Ill. 51; Hernandez v. Drake, 81 Ill. 37.

As to whether a paper devoted mainly to distributing legal notices among the legal profession is a newspaper within the statutes providing for the publication of legal notices in newspapers, there is some difference of opinion. That such publications are not "newspapers" was held in Re Application for Charter, 11 Pa. St. 200; that they are, in Kellogg v. Carrico, 47 Mo. 157; Benkenorf v. Vincenz, 52 Mo. 441; Kerr v. Hitt, 75 Ill. 51, 53; Railton v. Lander, 26 Ill. App. 655.

A paper issued weekly, containing principally religious news, and especially reading of interest to persons of a particular religious denomination, but containing a column each week devoted to the general news of the day, embracing every sort of news of interest to the general reader, is a "newspaper" within the meaning of Minn. Gen. St. 1878, ch. 81, § 5, in which notice of sale on mortgage may be published. Hull v. King, 38 Minn. 349.

A weekly law publication, "The Northwestern Reporter," was held, in Beecher v. Stephens, 25 Minn. 126, not to be a "newspaper" within a statute requiring a publication of summons to be "made in a newspaper."

The Newspaper Libel and Registration act, 1881 (44 & 45 V., ch. 60, § 1).

A daily newspaper is one published at least six days in each week.¹ The place of publication is where the paper is first issued—that is, given to the public for circulation, and not the place where the paper may be sent for distribution.² A newspaper is published at the time when its copies, in part or whole, are out of the publisher's control.³ Newspapers are packets within the prohibition against the private conveyance of letters and packets,⁴ and are second-class mail matter.⁵ Equity will protect a publisher in the use of the name of his paper as a trade mark.⁶ contains for its purposes (and, semble, it may be of general utility) the following definition: "The word 'newspaper' shall mean any paper containing public news, intelligence, or occurrences, or any remarks or observations therein, printed for sale, and published in England or Ireland periodically or in parts or numbers at intervals not exceeding 26 days between the publication of any two such papers, parts or numbers." This definition is a partial adoption of the definition in Sch. A, 6 & 7 W. IV, ch. 76. See Atty. Gen. v. Bradbury, Ex. 97. By the Copyright act of 1842 (5 & 6 V., ch. 45), § 2, a "book" is to be construed to mean "every volume, part or division of a volume, pamphlet, sheet of letter-press, sheet of music, map, chart, or plan separately published." Does this include a newspaper? Cox v. Land & Water Journal Co. L. R., 9 Eq. 324; Walter v. Howe, 17 Ch. D. 708; Cate v. Devon etc. Newspaper Co., 40 Ch. D. 500. "Punch" is such a "book." Bradbury v. Holton, L. R., 8 Ex. 1.

In Louisiana it has been held that newspaper publishers are 'manufacturers,' and therefore exempt from licence laws. State v. Dupre, Alb. Law J. 122.

The subscription list of a newspaper is an incident to the newspaper, and passes with the sale of the printing materials. 2 Watts (Pa.) 111.

Where the owner of a newspaper, in negotiating a sale of the same, misrepresented the amount of business and profits of the establishment, it was held that they were material considerations in inducing the purchase, and representations such that the buyer had a right to rely upon for matters concerning which they were made, being peculiarly within the knowledge of the seller. Harvey v. Smith, 17 Ind. 272.

1. A statute prescribing publication of advertisements in some daily newspaper, is satisfied by a publication in a paper issued every day of the week except one, whether the omitted one is Sunday or one of the week days. Richardson v. Tobin, 45 Cal. 30.

A newspaper printed and published six days consecutively each week, one of which is Sunday, is a daily newspaper within the intent and meaning of ch. 47, Minn. Gen. Laws, 1889. Tribune Pub. Co. v. Duluth (Minn.), 47 N. W. Rep. 309.

2. Le Roy v. Jamison, 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 369; Haskell v. Bartlett, 34 Cal. 281.

Where the paper is set up in one place and the press work done in another, the former is the place of publication. State v. Hoboken, 44 N. J. L. 131.

A paper, even though composed partly of a "patent insider" set up in another place, still is published in the place where issued. Palmer v. McCormick, 30 Fed. Rep. 82; Hart v. Smith, 44 Wis. 213.

The place of publication is that indicated upon the face of the newspaper, although it is printed and part of its issue mailed at another town or city. Ricketts v. Hyde Park, 85 Ill. 110.

3. Pratt v. Tinkcom, 21 Minn. 142.

4. United States Mail etc., 4 Hughes 530.

5. R. S. (U. S.), § 3893; 1 Supp. R. S., p. 456. See Ex parte Jackson, 97 U. S. 727, where FIELD, J., reviews the discussion had in the United States senate in 1836, as to the power of congress to exclude publications from the mail, the question arising in view of the circulation of "incendiary publications" in the Southern States.

6. Matsell v. Flanagan, 2 Abb. Pr., N. S. 459. But where it appears that the names of the two papers are so far different that, considering the dissimilarity of type and general appearance, one is not liable to be mistaken for the other, no injunction can be granted. Stephens v. De Conto, 4 Abb. Pr., N. S. 47.

The general rules of law in regard to agency, contracts, etc., apply to the publishers of newspapers; but special applications of these principles will be found in the notes.¹

III. OFFICIAL NEWSPAPERS.—Official newspapers are those designated by State or municipal legislative bodies, or agents empowered by them, in which the public acts, resolves, advertisements, and notices are required to be published.² The designation of official papers and compensation for notices printed in them are regulated by statute in the various States, but cases arising under them are collected in the note.³

1. The proprietors of a newspaper who, by advertisement, solicit voluntary news correspondence and promise to pay for it, admit, by the act of publishing a voluntary communication sent to them, to be paid for if used, and purporting to sum up special canvassing and estimates by the writer in regard to an approaching election, that it is of the character solicited, and are liable for its value. Babcock v. Raymond, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 61.

Where a publisher refused to sell papers to one who had bought out the newspaper "route" of a carrier who had always been supplied at a fixed price, selling the paper for a higher price at his own risk, although the publisher did substitute the name of the purchaser for the name of the old carrier on his list of carriers, it was held that the publisher was bound by no implied contract, in the absence of express contract or usage equivalent, to continue to furnish papers. Hathaway v. Bennett, 10 N. Y. 108.

Defendant, by its general manager, contracted with plaintiff for the publication in its paper of certain matter by a given date—the matter to be furnished and the details of the publication to be looked after by defendant's passenger agent. The agent failed to furnish the matter until after the date named in the contract for its publication. As soon as the matter was furnished plaintiff published it, in accordance with the contract, except as to time. Held, that the plaintiff had a right to assume that the delay of the agent was authorized by defendant.

Sending a business advertisement to a newspaper for publication without direction as to the number of insertions, implies a request to publish it in each issue till it is ordered stopped, except in the case of advertisements that imply a limitation, such as notice of sale on a given day. Ahern v. Standard L. Ins. Co., 2 Sweeny 441.

A contract for the publication of an advertisement in a newspaper to be issued and sold on Sunday is void, for it contemplates and provides for "servile labor" and "sales," such as are prohibited by 1 R. S. N. Y. 676, §§ 70, 71. Smith v. Wilcox, 24 N. Y. 353, affirming 25 Barb. 341. These contracts were legalized by 2 L. (N. Y. 1871), p. 1533, ch. 702.

2. Maine St., 1883, art. 1, § 6; N. Y. Stat., 1 R. S., 7th ed., p. 450. See statutes in other States.

3. Designation.—Under the New York act of 1854, providing for the designation of a State paper, and permitting certain State officers "to enter into contract" with the publishers of a daily newspaper for the publication of legal notices, the power thus committed to such officers was held a continuing one, and not exhausted by a single exercise of it. Weed v. Tucker, 19 N. Y. 422.

The power conferred upon the judges by New York laws, 1874, ch. 656, to designate a newspaper in the city of New York for the publication of all court calendars, legal notices, etc., is not exhausted by a single designation. The conditions under which the power to make a new designation shall be exercised, and the cause or emergency justifying or requiring it are within the control of the judges themselves. Daily Register Printing & Pub. Co. v. New York, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 542.

Hankins v. Mayor etc. of New York, 64 N. Y. 18. By N. Y. laws, 1870, ch. 383, certain papers may be designated by the mayor and comptroller to publish the proceedings of the common council, and a mandamus will lie to compel the comptroller to pay for such publication. People v. Green, 44 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 201; 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 390.

The court cannot compel by mandamus the common council of the city of Troy to designate certain papers as official newspapers, even though they have the largest circulation and the time for designation laid down in the city charter has expired. People v. Common Council of Troy, 78 N. Y. 20.

Where, in a municipal charter, special provision different from the ordinary course of city advertising is made for a particular class of advertisements, and a particular officer is designated to cause them to be published, and provision is made for the expense, they are withdrawn from the general power of the common council over city advertising. Francis v. Troy, 74 N. Y. 338.

A designation by the proper authorities under a discretionary power is an "employment" of the paper by the common council in the absence of any evidence that the service was declined by the paper. Matter of Phillips, 60 N. Y. 16. But in matter of Anderson, 60 N. Y. 457, it was held that the designation must have been communicated to the common council before the paper could be considered in the employment of the corporation. Under laws N. Y., 1886, ch. 515, providing that the boards of supervisors in the several counties shall designate newspapers "to publish the laws," a designation of papers "to do the public printing" is sufficient. People v. Board of Supvs., 10 N. Y. St. 88.

A statute providing for the publication, in a newspaper of general circulation, of proclamations, ordinances, etc., of a city, and fixing the maximum price that the mayor or common council shall pay therefor, but without authorizing any officer or officers to make express contracts therefor, does not require imperatively that such publication shall be contracted for. The publication having been made, it is not a defence to an action against the city for the price that the councilman who brought the notices to the newspaper was a stockholder in the newspaper corporation. Call Publishing Co. v. Lincoln (Neb.), 45 N. W. Rep. 245.

In Beale v. Supervisors, 13 Wis. 500, it was held that ch. 22, § 3, of the laws of 1859, authorized the treasurer to publish the delinquent tax lists in a county newspaper of his selection, and that the publisher with whom he contracted might recover of the county fees for the service, notwithstanding that the county supervisors had contracted with other parties to do the whole of the county printing.

In Kellogg v. Oshkosh, 14 Wis. 678, it was held that in Wisconsin a common council might designate a German newspaper as its official paper.

In State v. Dixon County (Neb.), 37 N. W. Rep. 936, it was held, that under Comp. St., ch. 77, § 100, the power to designate the newspaper in which the county treasurer shall give notice of the sale of real property on which the taxes levied for the previous year shall remain unpaid, is with the county board, if the publication can be made at an expense not exceeding one-third of the legal rate for advertising notices, and that there being no law making it the duty of a county board to let by contract to the lowest bidder the printing and publishing of the delinquent tax list, or of the proceedings of such boards, a mandamus would not issue to compel such action by them.

Under the New Jersey act of March 19, 1872, the newspaper designated to publish the proceedings of the common council must, at the time of the passage of the act, have been published at least nine months, and have been designated to publish the State laws. State v. Mayor etc. of Hoboken, 38 N. J. L. 110.

A city council has no power to contract for the publication in a newspaper of its general proceedings at the cost of the city. Stidger v. Red Oak, 64 Iowa 465.

Where the board of supervisors, under Iowa laws of 1856, ch. 118, caused the laws to be published in a newspaper, it was held that they had not power, at their January session of the following year, to order publication again in another paper subsequently established. Welch v. Board of Supervisors etc., 23 Iowa 199.

In Hoxie v. Shaw (Iowa), 39 N. W. 673, it was held that the act of the 20th Gen. Assembly of Iowa, ch. 197, directed the county board to make the selection of two newspapers to publish its proceedings at its January session, and that if the selection could not be made at that time, owing to the absence of a supervisor, the board might act at a subsequent session.

Under Missouri Rev. St., § 3500, an order of publication must be made in a paper approved by the judge or clerk making the order. Otis v. Epperson, 88 Mo. 131.

Gould, Dig. Ark., ch. 68, § 57, requiring a notice of the sale of land under an execution to be printed in a paper published in the county where the land was situated, was so far repealed by the act of July 14th, 1868, requiring the no-

IV. NEWSPAPERS AS EVIDENCE.—They may be admissible in evidence to impute knowledge of a fact,¹ as the dissolution of partnership;² or, when verified, to prove prices current;³ but not tice to be published in a newspaper designated by the governor that a sale where the notice was published in a paper designated by the governor but printed outside the county was held good. Dennis v. Tomlinson, 49 Ark. 568.

Whether the clerk of the district court has or has not power to designate, in a citation, the particular paper in which it shall be published, such designation is mere surplusage. Wyser v. Calhoun, 11 Tex. 323.

It has been held that where the method of designating papers to publish the session laws was irregular under the statute, the proceedings were not vitiated. Wright v. Forrestal, 65 Wis. 341; People v. Supervisors of Kings Co., 23 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 89, affirming 3 Keyes (N. Y.) 630. But see People v. Supervisors of Seneca Co., 18 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 461, decided several years previous, which, though holding the opposite view, was not mentioned in the later case. But in designating the paper to publish delinquent tax list, the statute must be strictly followed. Russell v. Gilson etc. R. Co., 36 Minn. 366.

The "paper having the largest circulation" includes the entire circulation, wherever it may be. People v. Brennan, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 651.

"The Enterprise" sufficiently designates the "Glencoe Enterprise" in the absence of any other paper of the same name. Knight v. Alexander, 38 Minn. 384. See also Soule v. Chase, 1 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.), N. S. 48. But where there are two papers of the same name, one being "daily" and the other "weekly," to give their common name would designate neither. Russell v. Gilson, 36 Minn. 366.

Compensation.—Where a city charter provides that printing shall be paid for by the folio, a contract to pay a gross sum will not be sustained. State v. Mayor etc. of Hoboken, 38 N. J. L. 110. Publisher of paper, after receiving notice of the price that would be paid, can receive nothing over that. McArthur v. Troy, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 55. Compensation may be recovered for publishing laws outside the statutory period. Metcalf v. New York City, 1 N. Y. Supp. 873.

In Alabama, although the laws are published in the daily and weekly editions of the same paper, no extra compensation is allowed for publication in the weekly. Montgomery Advertiser Co. v. Burke, 82 Ala. 381.

Under the Kansas tax law, the printer can recover no compensation for publishing notices of tax sales unless within fourteen days after the last publication he hands in his affidavit of publication. Fox v. Cross, 39 Kan. 350; Blanchard v. Hatcher, 40 Kan. 350; Jackson v. Challiss, 41 Kan. 247.

In Alabama the printer's fee must be ascertained by the judge of probate before being paid. Burke v. Blau, 79 Ala. 97.

1. Whart. on Evidence, § 672.

The newspaper itself is the best evidence of an article published in it. Bond v. Central Bank of Georgia, 2 Ga. 92.

A copy of a newspaper, containing an advertisement of the usual time of arrival of a certain stage coach, is admissible in evidence of the advertised time of such arrival, and of the knowledge of such time by one who usually reads the paper. Com. v. Robinson, 1 Gray (Mass.) 555.

2. Against those never having dealt with a firm, notice of its dissolution printed in a newspaper is admissible. Simmonds v. Strong, 24 Vt. 642; Roberts v. Spencer, 123 Mass. 397; Bristol v. Sprague, 3 Wend. 423; Vernon v. Manhattan Co., 22 Wend. 183; Newsom v. Coles, 2 Camp. 617; Hart v. Alexander, 7 C. & P. 753. Against those having had old and familiar dealings with the firm, they may be received as cumulative evidence of notoriety of dissolution, after first proving the fact of dissolution by deed or otherwise. Hart v. Alexander, 7 C. & P. 753. But mere notoriety cannot prove dissolution as against a party not shown to have been reached by such notoriety. Pitcher v. Barrows, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 361; Dickinson v. Dickinson, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 321.

3. Sisson v. Cleveland etc. R. Co., 14 Mich. 489; Cluquot's Champagne, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 114; Peter v. Thickstun, 51 Mich. 589. But see Harris v. Ely, Seld. Notes, No. 1, 35.

generally for other purposes.¹ Knowledge derived from a newspaper is provable inferentially, as from familiarity with the paper.²

A government gazette is admitted as evidence of the public acts of government, or matters of State, but is no evidence of private titles or private interests, or to prove a fact of a private nature.³

V. WHAT CONSTITUTES PUBLICATION.—See NOTICE.

VI. NEWSPAPER CONTEMPTS OF COURT—(See also CONTEMPT, 3 Am.

But additional evidence should be given, showing that the prices current are drawn from reliable sources. Whelan v. Lynch, 60 N. Y. 469. But see Terry v. McNeil, 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 241; Whitney v. Thacher, 117 Mass. 523; Sisson v. Cleveland etc. R. Co., 14 Mich. 489; Payson v. Everett, 12 Minn. 216; Chaffee v. United States, 18 Wall. (U.S.) 541.

Where it was proved that the defendant had corrected the price current in a newspaper, files of the paper were properly admitted in evidence against him to prove the market value of grain. Henkle v. Smith, 21 Ill. 238.

1. 1 Whart. on Evidence, § 674a; Ring v. Huntington, 1 Hill (S. Car.) 162.

A newspaper account of accident not admissible in an action against railroad company, without proof that it was an original memorandum, or that it contained statements made by the parties at the time. Downs v. N. Y. Cent. R. Co., 47 N. Y. 83.

A comparison of two newspapers in regard to type, devices, etc., is allowed to show that they were both printed by the same person, where one of them is imperfectly proved. McCorkle v. Binns, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 440.

Where, in an action to foreclose a mortgage, the tenant offered to read from a newspaper the notice of foreclosure, and, an objection being made, read the same from the records of the registry. He was afterwards allowed, in his argument to the jury, to read from the newspaper. Atkinson v. Snow, 33 Me. 579.

A newspaper containing an announcement of the death of an individual is not admissible in evidence, in the courts of the State of New York, to prove the fact of such person's death. Fosgate v. Herkimer Mfg. Co., 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 287.

Nor are floating newspaper references sufficient notice of the insolvency of the maker of a note to charge a party with notice taking such note for value before maturity. Goetz v. Kansas City Bank, 119 U. S. 551.

The publications known as "bank-note detectors" are not admissible to prove the worthlessness of bank bills. Payson v. Everett, 12 Minn. 216.

Advertisements.—Advertisements that can be traced to a particular party as author are evidence against him, but not otherwise. Somerville v. Hunt, 3 Har. & M. 113; Freno v. Freno, 1 Weekly Notes of Cases, 165; Henkle v. Smith, 21 Ill. 238; Stringer v. Davis, 35 Cal. 25; Mann v. Russell, 11 Ill. 586; Lee v. Flemingsburg, 7 Dana (Ky.) 28; Dennis v. Van Vay, 28 N. J. L. 158; Berry v. Mathewes, 7 Ga. 457.

Advertisements in a newspaper are improper evidence to go to a jury, except to prove a notice under some statute, or for publishing a libel, or the like. Sweet v. Avaunt, 2 Bay (S. Car.) 492.

Where the advertisement was shown to have been copied from a manuscript, the printed advertisement is only admissible where the absence of the manuscript is accounted for. Sweigart v. Lowmarter, 14 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 200.

2. To bring home to a party knowledge of a newspaper notice it is not enough to show that the newspaper was circulated in the neighborhood of his residence. Norwich Nav. Co. v. Theobald, N. & M. 153; Kellogg v. French, 15 Gray (Mass.) 354. It was enough to show that it was taken by the party to be charged with notice, or that he attended a reading room where it was taken, or was in other ways familiar with it. Godfrey v. Macaulay, Pea. R. 155n; Jenkins v. Blizzard, 1 Stark. R. 419; Hart v. Alexander, 2 M. & W. 484; Leeson v. Holt, 1 Stark. R. 186. Or that the newspaper is one with which it is his duty to be familiar, as underwriters with Lloyds' Shipping Register. Mackintosh v. Marshall, 11 M. & N. 116.

3. Brundred v. Del Hayo, 20 N. J. L. 328; Lurton v. Gilham, 2 Ill. 577.

& Eng. Encyc. of Law 777; LIBEL AND SLANDER, 13 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 292; LIBERTY OF THE PRESS, 13 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 510).—The subject of constructive contempt of court by newspaper publications of judicial proceedings has given rise to considerable discussion, and, in the United States, to some conflict of authority. With the general subject of constructive contempts as a class this article is not concerned, but only with such contempts in their relation to newspapers. In Great Britain the law is well settled, and the authority of the superior courts, at least, to punish summarily as a contempt publications tending constructively to affect pending proceedings, or to bring the judges into disrepute, is not denied.¹

In an early American case,² the power was asserted more broadly than by all the subsequent cases. Here the publication tended, though perhaps slightly and indirectly, toward a criticism of the motives likely to influence the judges of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania in a pending cause. Here it was argued that the spirit of American institutions, and the freedom of speech and of the press supposed to be guaranteed thereby, did not justify the court in following the English precedents; but the argument did not prevail. A few years afterward, however, a statute of Pennsylvania deprived the courts of the power to punish for constructive contempts, and it does not appear that the statute has since been attacked for unconstitutionality.

A leading and interesting case, denying to the courts the right to exercise this power as fully as in the case aforesaid and in Great Britain, was decided in Mississippi in 1844.³ Here a newspaper commented adversely upon the action of a judge in admitting to bail one charged with a homicide. The decision was rendered on habeas corpus, and was not the decision of the full court, but that of a single judge, before whom the writ was returnable. The review of the question, in the light of principle and of the authorities, was learned and exhaustive, and it was thought that the constitution of the State guaranteed to the newspaper the right of criticism as fully as exercised by it.⁴

Other courts, in refusing to follow the learned Mississippi judge, have adverted to the fact that the newspaper criticism related to

1. Re Cheltenham etc. R. Co., L. R., 8 Eq. 580; Daw v. Eley, L. R., 7 Eq. 49; Rex v. Gilham, Moody & M. 165; Little v. Thomson, 2 Beav. 129; Re Crawford, 13 Jur. 955; Reg. v. Onslow, L. R., 9 Q. B. 219; Reg. v. Skipworth, L. R., 9 Q. B. 219; Reg. v. O'Dogherty, 5 Cox (C. C.) 348; Rex v. Clement, 4 Barn. & Ald. 218. See, for a review of the English authorities before the American Revolution, Re Cheeseman, 49 N. J. L. 115.

2. Res Publica v. Oswald, 1 Dall.

319. And see Passmore's Case, 3 Yeates (Pa.) 441.

3. Ex parte Hickey, 4 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 751.

4. See, however, Ex parte Adams, 25 Miss. 83; Watson v. Williams, 36 Miss. 331, in each of which cases language is used which, while not criticizing the opinion in Ex parte Hickey, supra, is open to the construction of claiming for the courts a broader power in relation to constructive contempts than was there recognized.

an act which had been done, viz., admitting to bail, and that therefore a distinction might be taken between such a publication and one criticising a matter actually pending.¹ The Illinois cases have not been quite harmonious with one another. An early case² held that newspaper articles commenting upon the conduct of a juror, who was the editor also of a rival political paper, and reflecting contemptuously upon the judge, published during the pendency of a trial for murder, did not authorize an attachment for contempt. In a more recent case,³ a majority of the court held that the publication of an article, indirectly charging the use of money to procure a decision favorable to the defendant in a case pending before the supreme court on error, was a contempt, for which an editor and publisher should be fined. Here stress was laid upon the fact that the case in relation to which the article was published was then pending before the court undecided, and that the article was calculated to, and was designed to, influence the members of the court in deciding the case.

After the decision of this case the provision of the Illinois statute on the subject of contempts was repealed. In the next and latest case on the subject,⁴ the court declined, irrespective of any question of statutory power, and resting its decision on the common-law power to punish for contempt, to accede to all that was said in the majority opinion in the case last cited, and refused to hold guilty of a constructive contempt the publisher of a newspaper wherein had been printed an article reflecting upon the action of the grand jury, which had found indictments against the publisher. Here, again, the court laid stress on the fact that the indictment had been found. In West Virginia, in 1884, the subject again came up, and the supreme court of appeals, after reviewing the authorities in great detail, upheld the power of the court to quite as full an extent as in the early cases first above cited.⁵ The latest judicial exposition of the subject is that of the Supreme Court of Colorado, in 1889;⁶ and here again the power of the court was asserted. In this case the publication in question commented in severe and objectionable language upon the action of a judge of an inferior court in releasing a prisoner on bail.

The court declared that the statute did not deprive the court of its inherent power to punish for contempt, and pronounced this question stare decisis in that State.⁷

In a recent Oregon case⁸ the objectionable publication was so general in its character, being in fact a sweeping criticism on the administration of justice generally in Southern Oregon, that it was adjudged not to constitute a contempt in any pending matter in such sense as to require judicial notice to be taken of it.

1. See Storey v. People, 79 Ill. 45.

2. Stewart v. People, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 402.

3. People v. Wilson, 64 Ill. 195.

4. Storey v. People, 79 Ill. 45.

5. State v. Frew, 24 W. Va. 416.

6. Cooper v. People, 22 Pac. Rep. 790.

7. On the authority of Hughes v. People, 5 Col. 445.

8. State v. Kaiser (Oreg), 23 Pac. Rep. 964.

There is an Indiana case,¹ where it was adjudged that a newspaper article describing the action of court and counsel during the absence of a prisoner, who, though on his way to the court house, did not reach it until after the issue of a bench warrant and the adjournment of the court, in a manner calculating to make the whole thing appear ridiculous, did not justify judicial action as for contempt.

In New Jersey, after a disagreement of the jury on a criminal trial, a newspaper article cast discredit on the grand jury, the sheriff, and the judge, and it was held that the publisher was properly adjudged guilty of contempt.²

In New Hampshire, the publication of a newspaper article animadverting in opprobrious terms on the character of a pending criminal prosecution was held a contempt, punishable summarily.³

In Ohio, a newspaper publication which in effect charged the judge, who called a grand jury to find an indictment, with proceeding with a special partisan purpose, and with packing the grand jury, was held punishable summarily.⁴ In Iowa, publications which were adjudged not to constitute a contempt reflected upon the conduct of the judge in relation to cases disposed of before the publication.⁵ In Florida, the court said: "In the absence of any statutory limitation or restriction, the power of the several courts over the matter of contempts is omnipotent;" and "it is the great bulwark established by the common law for the protection of courts of justice and for the maintenance of their dignity, authority, and efficacy, and neither in England nor in the United States has this unrestricted power been seriously questioned."⁶

In Connecticut it was said: "The statute is not to be regarded as conferring the power to punish for contempts, but merely as regulating an existing power. The power is inherent in all courts;" and again: "But, independently of the statute, we think the power is inherent in all courts. A court of justice must have, of necessity, the power to preserve its own dignity and protect itself."⁷

In Arkansas, the power was upheld to as full an extent as in any of the cases.⁸

In North Carolina, the supreme court asserted the right to punish summarily for contempt an attorney at its bar for a publication of an article in a newspaper reflecting on the court, and published when the court was not in session, and said: "A court has power

1. Cheadle v. State, 110 Ind. 301.

2. Re Cheeseman, 49 N. J. L. 115. The reasoning of the court in this case is founded largely on the English authorities anterior to the American Revolution.

3. Re Sturoc, 48 N. H. 425.

4. Myers v. State, 22 N. E. Rep. 42.

5. Dunham v. State, 6 Iowa 246; State v. Anderson, 40 Iowa 207.

6. Ex parte Edwards, 11 Fla. 174.

7. Middlebrook v. State, 42 Conn. 257. To the same effect, see Re Cooper, 32 Vt. 257; State v. Woodfin, 5 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 199.

8. State v. Morrell, 16 Ark. 385.

to require the members of its bar to purge themselves from a charge of contempt incurred by their publishing over their names, in a newspaper, libellous matter directly tending to impair the respect due to its members."¹

The power of the federal courts has been curtailed by the act of March 2nd, 1831 (Rev. St., § 725), still in force. This act provides that the power of the courts of the United States to punish contempts "shall not be construed to extend to any cases except the misbehavior of any person in their presence, or so near thereto as to obstruct the administration of justice, the misbehavior of any of the officers of said courts in their official transactions, and the disobedience or resistance by any such officer, or by any party, juror, witness, or other person, to any lawful writ, process, order, rule, decree, or command of the said courts." The reason for this statute is said to have been found in the arbitrary action of JUDGE PECK in relation to such a contempt. He was impeached and barely escaped conviction.²

It would seem, therefore, to be the legitimate deduction from the opinions of the State courts, and from the principle of the matter, that, according to the great weight of authority, the power to deal summarily with constructive newspaper contempts, consisting of the publication of comments on matters pending judicially, and calculated to influence the due course of the proceedings therein, is vested in the superior courts, except so far as statutes or constitutions have curtailed it, and that it is not wholly clear that courts will recognize always the power of legislatures to deprive them of what is so frequently spoken of as an inherent function of their being.³

1. Ex parte Moore, 63 N. Car. 397.

2. See, as to the construction and bearing of this statute, United States v. Anonymous, 21 Fed. Rep. 761, in which case also is to be found an exhaustive discussion, by HAMMOND, J., of the general subject of constructive contempts, supported by many citations.

Other States have similar statutes, Tennessee, for example (Code, § 4106). In Ex parte Robinson, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 505, FIELD, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, suggests a doubt as to the application of the federal statute to the supreme court. It has been questioned, though the point does not appear to have come in issue directly, whether the legislature has the power to curtail the jurisdiction of the courts in this respect. See State v. Morrell, 16 Ark. 385; Cooper v. People, 22 Pac. Rep. 790; State v. Frew, 24 W. Va. 416.

3. The text-writers are not in accord on this subject. Mr. Bishop (2 Crim. Law, §§ 257-262) is disposed to concede the power to as full an extent as claimed in any of the cases, while Mr. Wharton (Pl. & Pr., §§ 957-961) takes the ground that a contempt of this character cannot be punished summarily.

See also, as tending to shed light upon this question, Ex parte Hardy, 68 Ala. 303; State v. Woolley, 11 Bush (Ky.) 95; Whittem v. State, 36 Ind. 196; State v. Galloway, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 326; Hummel's Case, 9 Watts (Pa.) 431; 42 Cal. 412; Wheeling v. B. & O. R. Co., 13 Gratt. (Va.) 40; Deskin's Case, 4 Leigh (Va.) 685; Lindsay v. Comrs., 2 Bay (S. Car.) 61; State v. Sauvinet, 24 La. An. 119; Ex parte Schenck, 65 N. Car. 353; Weaver v. Hamilton, 2 Jones Law 343; In re Daves, 81 N. Car. 72; In re Walker, 82 N. Car. 95; Cromartie v. Comrs., 85 N. Car. 211; Batchelder v. Moore, 42 Cal. 412; Rutherford v. Holmes, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 317; Morrison v. Moat, 4 Edwards Ch. (N. Y.) 25; Spalding v. People, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 301; Yates v. Lansing, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 417; People v. Yates, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 337.

NEW TRIAL — (See also INSTRUCTIONS, 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 236; JUDGE, vol. 12, p. 2; JURY and JURY TRIAL, vol. 12, p. 318; MOTIONS, vol. 15, p. 887; TRIAL; VERDICT).

- I. Definition, 501.
 1. New Trial, 501.
 2. Venire De Novo, 502.
- II. General Principles Governing the Right to a New Trial; Grounds for a New Trial; Errors of Court, 503.
- III. Discretion of Trial Court in Granting or Refusing New Trial, 516.
- IV. Misconduct as Reason for New Trial, 519.
 1. Misconduct Defined, 519.
 2. Misconduct of the Court, 520.
 - (a) Generally, 520.
 - (b) Remarks to Counsel, 522.
 - (c) Remarks to Jury; Coercion of Jury, 522.
 3. Misconduct of Counsel, 524.
 - (a) Improper Remarks to Jury, 524.
 - (b) Misconduct in Conduct of the Trial, 528.
 4. Misconduct of Litigants, 529.
 5. Misconduct of Jurors, 530.
 6. Misconduct of Court Officials, 530.
 - (a) Misconduct of the Sheriff, 530.
 - (b) Misconduct of the Prosecutor, 531.
 7. Misconduct of Bystanders, 531.
- V. Mistake and Surprise, 532.
 1. Surprise Defined, 532.
 2. General Principles, 532.
 3. Various Kinds of Surprise, 536.
 - (a) Notice of Trial, 536.
 - (b) Absence from Trial, 536.
 - (1) Absence of Parties, 536.
 - (2) Absence of Counsel, 538.
 - (3) Absence of Witnesses, 540.
 - (c) Surprise as to Evidence, 542.
 - (1) General Principles, 542.
 - (2) Unexpected Evidence of Friendly Witness, 545.
 - (3) Unexpected Evidence of Hostile Witness, 546.
 - (4) Loss of Documents and Records, 547.
 - (5) Rejection of Expected Evidence, 548.
 - (6) Suppression of Evidence by Adversary, 549.
 - (d) Surprise Arising from Mistake, 549.
 - (1) Mistake of Parties, 549.
 - (2) Mistake of Counsel, 550.
